The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consolation with Sudan states that, as of February 5, 2020, Sudan maintained the following measures subject to IMF jurisdiction under Article VIII, Sections 2 (a) and 3: (1) An exchange restriction arising from the government’s limitations on the availability of foreign exchange and the allocation of foreign exchange to certain priority items; (2) an MCP and exchange restriction arising from the establishment of an official exchange rate (the Central Bank of Sudan (CBOS) rate) for use in all government exchange transactions which in practice differs by more than 2% from the rate used by commercial banks; (3) an MCP and exchange restriction arising from large spreads between the CBOS rate and the parallel market exchange rate because of the CBOS’ limitation on the availability of foreign exchange which channels current international transactions to the parallel market; and (4) an exchange restriction and an MCP arising from the imposition by the government of a cash margin requirement for most imports. (Country Report No. 20/72)

Exchange rate structure

- Unitary
- Dual
- Multiple Yes. The exchange rate structure is classified as multiple as a result of MCPs that arise because of the: (1) establishment of an official exchange rate (the CBOS rate) for use in all government exchange transactions which in practice differs by more than 2% from the rate used by commercial banks; (2) large spreads between the CBOS rate and the parallel market exchange rate because of the CBOS’ limitation on the availability of foreign exchange which channels current international transactions to the parallel market; and (3) imposition by the government of a cash margin requirement for most imports.
Effective February 21, 2021, the CBOS announced the unification of the official exchange rate (excluding the customs valuation exchange rate) with the market rate at the prevailing market rate. The CBOS calculates the indicative exchange rate every day based on commercial banks purchases of foreign currencies, calculated as the weighted average of the previous day’s trading excluding CBOS sales/purchases from the government. In addition, commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus may determine their rate in a ±5% band around the CBOS indicative rate with an allowed maximum profit margin of 0.75%. Previously, the CBOS determined the exchange rate of the US dollar against the Sudanese guinea and published it daily through its website. For other convertible currencies, exchange rates were applied in US dollar terms, according to the CBOS’ daily announcement on its website. Banks and exchange companies had to apply the exchange rate announced by the CB to all transactions. They were allowed a maximum profit margin of 0.5% on selling over the buying rate for the currency in question.

Effective June 22, 2021, the CBOS announced the unification of the customs exchange rate.

Effective March 8, 2022, the exchange is freely determined by commercial banks and exchange bureaus on a daily basis. The exchange rate adopted by the CBOS in all transactions (government and private sectors) is the weighted average of commercial banks and exchange bureaus daily exchange rate. Since the adoption of floating exchange rate policy, the gap between the official rate and the parallel market rate is estimated to be 0.3% on average.

Stabilized arrangement

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is classified as free floating. A free floating rate used by commercial banks is determined in the interbank market, in which participants deal directly with each other. The main objective of the policy is exchange rate stability. To maintain the stability of exchange rate, the CBOS intervenes occasionally in foreign exchange market by offering foreign currency whenever needed. The CBOS does not disclose information on its interventions to the public.

Because the exchange rate depreciated from April 2021 and then stabilized from July 2021, with one realignment in February 2022, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified twice: (1) to other managed from stabilized, effective April 27, 2021, and (2) to stabilized from other managed, effective July 12, 2021.

Official exchange rate Yes. Effective March 8, 2022, the reference exchange rate adopted by the CBOS in all transactions (government and private sectors) is the weighted average of commercial banks and exchange bureaus daily exchange rate. Commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus may determine their rate freely without any restrictions, with maximum profit margin of 0.75% for commercial banks and 1% for exchange bureaus.

Previously, effective February 21, 2021, the CBOS announced the unification of the official exchange rate (excluding the customs valuation exchange rate) with the market rate at the prevailing market rate. In addition, commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus could determine their rate in a ±5% band around the CBOS indicative rate with an allowed maximum profit margin of 0.75%.

Previously, the method for determining the official rate was a target gap between the official rate and parallel market rate. The CBOS determined the exchange rate of the US dollar against the Sudanese guinea and published it daily through its website. For other convertible currencies, exchange rates were applied in US dollar terms, according to the CBOS’ daily announcement on its website. Banks and exchange companies had to apply the exchange rate announced by the CB to all transactions. The monetary policy framework is primarily a nominal exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis the US dollar. The operational target is the reserve money. The CBOS aims to control broad money as a monetary target and intervenes directly in the market by lending to banks in the event of a liquidity shortage.

As a temporary arrangement, each client is permitted only one foreign currency check not exceeding US$100,000 in the clearinghouse.

Exchange bureaus operate under a license from the CBOS, which organizes and monitors them. As of December 31, 2021, there were about 13 licensed bureaus. Exchange bureaus may not buy foreign exchange from the CBOS. The operations of foreign exchange bureaus are limited to the purchase and sale of banknotes. They may maintain accounts abroad with their correspondents, but may not make foreign exchange transactions directly with the CBOS. Effective February 21, 2021, the CBOS announced the unification of the official exchange rate (excluding the customs valuation exchange rate) with the market rate at the prevailing market rate. In addition, commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus could determine...

Changes during 2021 and 2022

Exchange Arrangement

Exchange rate structure

Multiple 02/21/2021 The Central Bank of Sudan (CBOS) announced the unification of the official exchange rate (excluding the customs valuation exchange rate) with the market rate at the prevailing market rate. The CBOS calculates the indicative exchange rate every day based on commercial banks purchases of foreign currencies, calculated as the weighted average of the previous day’s trading excluding CBOS sales/purchases from the government. In addition, commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus may determine their rate in a ±5% band around the CBOS indicative rate with an allowed maximum profit margin of 0.75%. Previously, the CBOS determined the exchange rate of the US dollar against the Sudanese guinea and published it daily through its website. For other convertible currencies, exchange rates were applied in US dollar terms, according to the CBOS’ daily announcement on its website. Banks and exchange companies had to apply the exchange rate announced by the CB to all transactions. They were allowed a maximum profit margin of 0.5% on selling over the buying rate for the currency in question.

06/22/2021 The Central Bank of Sudan announced the unification of the customs exchange rate.

03/08/2022 The exchange is freely determined by commercial banks and exchange bureaus on a daily basis. The exchange rate adopted by the Central Bank of Sudan in all transactions (government and private sectors) is the weighted average of commercial banks and exchange bureaus daily exchange rate.

The CBOS determined the exchange rate of the US dollar against the Sudanese guinea and published it daily through its website. For other convertible currencies, exchange rates were applied in US dollar terms, according to the CBOS’ daily announcement on its website. Banks and exchange companies had to apply the exchange rate announced by the CB to all transactions. They were allowed a maximum profit margin of 0.5% on selling over the buying rate for the currency in question.

03/08/2022 The reference exchange rate adopted by the Central Bank of Sudan in all transactions (government and private sectors) is the weighted average of commercial banks and exchange bureaus daily exchange rate.

03/08/2022  Commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus may determine their rate freely without any restrictions, with maximum profit margin of 0.75% for commercial banks and 1% for exchange bureaus. Previously, commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus could determine their rate in a ±5% band around the Central Bank of Sudan indicative rate with an allowed maximum profit margin of 0.75%.

Floating
Yes.
The de jure exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating. In accordance with the Resolution of June 3, 2021, No. 6778/21, the Centrale Bank van Suriname (Central Bank of Suriname – CBvS) adopted a floating (flexible) exchange rate system on June 7, 2021. Under this exchange rate system, the CBvS refrains from foreign exchange interventions, except in cases of disorderly market conditions. Disorderly market conditions are defined as an intraday depreciation of the USD/SRD exchange rate in excess of 2%. Since June 2021, the exchange rate increased its flexibility. Accordingly, the de facto exchange arrangement was reclassified from stabilized to floating, effective June 7, 2021.

Free floating

Official exchange rate Yes. Effective June 7, 2021, the CBvS records USD and EUR exchange rates established on the basis of the supply and demand mechanism on the foreign exchange market, where banks and currency exchange houses trade foreign currency in a transparent and orderly manner. This means that the CBvS, on the basis of all reported transaction volumes and the price quotations of banks and currency exchange houses, calculates weighted average USD and EUR exchange rates three times a day and publishes these exchange rates accordingly. These exchange rates apply to the valuation of goods and services expressed in foreign currency and overseas government foreign exchange transfers.

Previously, the commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus could not freely determine exchange rates. The CBvS set the indicative exchange rate for the US dollar for the following working day. Effective March 1, 2021, until further notice, the CBvS set a bandwidth for the selling rate of the US dollar at a minimum selling rate of SRD 14.290 per USD and a maximum selling rate of SRD 16.300 per USD (previously, the CBvS set the buying and selling rate for the US dollar at SRD 14.018 per USD and SRD 14.290 per USD). The exchange rates for other currencies than the US dollar were being derived from this indicative exchange rate, using the international cross-currency rates relative to the US dollar. The indicative exchange rates applied to transactions committed by the bank and served for the valuation of goods whose value was denominated in foreign currency. The published daily indicative exchange rate provided guidance to the foreign exchange market.

Monetary aggregate target Yes. The CBvS has adopted a reserve money targeting regime geared toward price stability. The change of the exchange regime is an integral part of the implementation of this monetary policy framework, in which not the exchange rate but reserve money is applied as the policy target for controlling inflation. Effective July 14, 2021, the CBvS conducts open market operations through auctioning of CBvS term deposits followed by the issuance of Central Bank Certificates to meet its reserve money target, which in turn will have an impact on inflation.

Reserve requirements

Yes. Authorized banks’ external transactions are limited, in principle, to those on behalf of their customers.

External borrowing is not allowed without FEC permission.

Banks do not need approval to open correspondent accounts abroad.

Authorized banks are allowed to invest in short-term financial assets at correspondent banks abroad.

Banks may only provide foreign exchange loans to residents with genuine foreign exchange income.

There are no restrictions for residents to purchase locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange.

The reserve ratio for foreign currency deposits is determined independently of those for Surinamese dollar balances. The reserve ratio for domestic currency deposits is 39%. However, the effective reserve ratio for domestic currency deposits is somewhat lower. The gap between the nominal and effective ratio is explained by the following exemptions:

1. Housing loans: commercial banks are permitted to on-lend up to 10% of their Surinamese dollar reserve base for housing loans and had effectively used around 4% of the reserve base as of end-July 2022;
2. T-bills purchase: in July 2014, the banks were allowed a one-off purchase of T-bills, which amount equals around 1% of the reserve base of end-July 2022;
3. COVID-19 support: as of May 20, 2020, banks were allowed to utilize 7.5% of the reserve base to provide credit to households and corporates that are affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Effective May 20, 2022, this facility ended; and
4. Budget support: as of June 29, 2020, banks were allowed to utilize up to 6.5% of their reserve base to lend to the government to finance government expenditures in June and July 2020. In September 2021, and April and May 2022, part of this budget support was repaid by the government. The outstanding amount of this budget support is 1% of the reserve base as of July 31, 2022. Effective July 14, 2021, an averaging provision of the required reserves for domestic currency was introduced. The reserve ratio for foreign currency deposits currently stands at 50%.

These exchange rates apply to the valuation of goods and services expressed in foreign currency and overseas government foreign exchange transfers. Previously, the commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus could not freely determine exchange rates from April 15, 2020.

Floating

Free floating Yes. The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are free floating. The exchange rate of the krona is determined on the basis of supply and demand in the foreign exchange market. Foreign exchange interventions are allowed under extraordinary circumstances (for example, participation in concerted interventions with other CBs). The Sveriges Riksbank (SR) has not intervened in the foreign exchange market since June 14, 2001.

Official exchange rate Yes. The krona exchange rate is determined in a CB-concerted teleconference managed by the ECB every banking day at 2:15 p.m. Central European Time. This ECB reference exchange rate is used, among other purposes, for commercial contracts. The use of the exchange rate is not mandatory in commercial contracts.

Central Bank

Yes. As of 1999, the SR Act states that the objective of the Riksbank’s operations is to maintain price stability. The Riksbank has specified this as 2% annual change in the CPI with fixed mortgage interest rates (CPIF).

Monetary Policy Committee

Central Bank Board

Yes. The Riksbank is led by an Executive Board consisting of six members. The Board holds five scheduled monetary policy meetings every year. Formerly, there were six regularly scheduled meetings per year. At these meetings, the Executive Board establishes its majority view of what is considered a well-balanced monetary policy. If there is no majority for a decision, the governor of the Riksbank has the casting vote. There is no separate monetary policy committee. The Executive Board of the Riksbank decides on the direction and magnitude of various tools used for monetary policy purposes.

Point target

Yes. According to the SR Act, the objective of monetary policy is to maintain price stability. The Riksbank has interpreted this objective to mean a low, stable rate of inflation. More precisely, the Riksbank’s objective is to keep inflation (CPIF) around 2% a year. The Riksbank uses a variation band around the inflation target (1%–3%), which is not an inflation target band, but rather a way to highlight the normal variation of inflation around the 2% target.

<td>The Riksbank’s inflation target variable is the consumer price index with a fixed mortgage interest rates (CPIF). The CPIF is calculated using the same data and in the same way as the CPI, excluding the effect of changes to mortgage rates. The weights in the consumption basket are the same in CPI and CPIF; however, the mortgage index is kept fixed in CPIF. The reason for changing the target variable from the CPI to the CPIF in 2017 was that the former has had drawbacks as guidance for monetary policy. One such drawback was that changes to the repo rate affect household mortgage rates, which then has an effect on the CPI, as households’ living costs also change.</td>

If there is a liquidity deficit in the banking system, the SR supplies funds at this interest rate by buying securities through weekly repos or lending against eligible collateral. In the event of a liquidity surplus, the SR issues Riksbank certificates to withdraw funds remunerated at the repo rate. The banking system as a whole has a large liquidity surplus at present.</td>

<td>The Riksbank has modified its operational framework for the implementation of monetary policy to make it simpler and more flexible. The changes imply that the Riksbank has introduced a narrow symmetrical interest rate corridor of 0.10 percentage points around the Riksbank’s repo rate. To steer the overnight rate, so that it lies close to the Riksbank’s policy rate, the Riksbank offers its monetary policy counterparties to borrow unlimited amounts of SEK against eligible collateral at an interest rate 0.10 percentage points above the Riksbank’s repo rate and to deposit unlimited amounts of SEK at an interest rate 0.10 percentage points below the Riksbank’s repo rate. As of October 9, 2019, the Riksbank ceased to conduct daily fine-tuning transactions. The deposit rate is 0.10 percentage points below the Riksbank’s repo rate (since October 9, 2019). The interest rate on the Riksbank’s lending facility is 0.10 percentage points above the repo rate. In addition to the standing facilities, the Riksbank also uses market operations with its monetary policy counterparties to steer the overnight rate. In recent years, the Riksbank has chosen to implement its expansionary monetary policy partly by purchasing securities. As a consequence, the banking system has a large liquidity surplus toward the Riksbank. To drain liquidity from the banking system, the Riksbank issues Riksbank certificates with one-week maturity once a week, normally on Tuesdays, at an interest equal to</td>

If the banking system were to have a liquidity deficit instead, the Riksbank could provide liquidity through monetary policy repos to the repo rate or lend against eligible collateral at the repo rate. Also in the wake of COVID-19, the Riksbank has ensured that more liquidity remain in the overnight market by limiting the issuance of Riksbank certificates.

Press releases state how the individual members had voted and provided the main motivation for any reservations entered. The minutes of the Executive Board’s monetary policy meetings are published approximately ten days after the respective meeting. The minutes are attributed, so it is possible to see who has put forward which argument, as well as how individual members voted. Decisions on the repo rate are normally made five times a year, and on each occasion, a Monetary Policy Report is also published. This contains analyses of the factors that determine inflation and forecasts for the repo rate, inflation, and the development of the real economy over the coming years – in other words, the most important factors on which the monetary policy decisions are based.

The foreign exchange market operates largely based on a handful of electronic platforms/brokerage system.

The foreign exchange market operates based on electronic brokerage systems, but there is also a market-making agreement whereby the Riksbank’s counterparties in foreign exchange transactions agree to make markets in EURSEK and USDSEK.

The SR is allowed to conduct foreign exchange swaps.

The SR and certain government agencies participate in the forward exchange rate market. However, such transactions are not conducted for the purposes of influencing the krona exchange rate. The SR occasionally participates in the foreign exchange derivatives market (in kronor) in connection with payment of the Swedish contribution to the EU.

The implementation of the Solvency II Directive has resulted in that Swedish insurance companies, as a main rule, are no longer bound by explicit restrictions on the currency and location of the assets covering technical provisions. The localization of the assets of Swedish insurance companies must be made in a manner which ensures their availability. Moreover, the assets must be invested in a manner appropriate to the nature and duration of the insurance/reinsurance liabilities. Those assets must be invested in the best interest of all policyholders and beneficiaries taking into account any disclosed policy objective. Moreover, the assets must be invested in a manner which seeks to avoid excessive reliance on a certain asset, issuer or group of companies, geographical area, and risk accumulation in the portfolio in its entirety. For the part of the businesses of Swedish insurance companies which constitute occupational pension businesses, and Swedish pension funds, there are certain restrictions on the location of the assets covering technical provisions. As a rule, these assets must be located within the EEA or, if the risk is outside the EEA, in Sweden. These assets may be in other jurisdictions if the preferential claim of the policyholders of these assets is not adversely affected. The geographical restrictions do not apply to conditional bonuses or unit-linked insurance for which the policyholder holds the risk. Assets used to cover debt must be invested in a manner which limits the risk for currency exchange losses, but no explicit restrictions on the currency of the assets.

For Swedish credit institutions, there are no limits on net open foreign exchange positions, but if the sum of an institution’s overall net foreign exchange and net gold positions, calculated as set out in CRR Article 352 (Regulation (EU) No. 575/2013), including for foreign exchange and gold positions for which own funds requirements are calculated using an internal model, exceeds 2% of its total own funds, the institution must calculate an own funds requirement for foreign exchange risk. This requirement is the sum of its overall net foreign exchange and net gold positions in the reporting currency multiplied by 8%.

Switzerland’s Federal Act on the Implementation of International Sanctions (Embargo Act, EmbA; CC 946.231) is the legal basis for coercive measures (asset freezes, transfer prohibitions) to implement sanctions by the UN, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), or Switzerland’s major trading partners, aiming to restore compliance with international public law, and in particular the respect for human rights. Such measures are adopted in the form of ordinances of the Federal Council (the Swiss government). In implementation of UNSC resolutions and/or in accordance with EU regulations, Switzerland maintains certain restrictions on current international payments and transfers with respect to Belarus, Burundi, the Central African Republic, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, the Islamic Republic of Iran, Iraq, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, Lebanon, Libya, Mali, Myanmar, Nicaragua, Somalia, South Sudan, Sudan, Syria, Russia/Ukraine, Venezuela, Yemen, Zimbabwe, and individuals and entities associated with Osama bin Laden, Al-Qaida, or the Taliban.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The exchange rate of the Swiss franc is determined by market forces in the foreign exchange market. However, the Swiss National Bank (SNB) is willing to be active in the foreign exchange market as necessary to ensure appropriate monetary conditions. If there were to be an excessive appreciation of the Swiss franc, the SNB would be prepared to purchase foreign currency. If the Swiss franc were to weaken, however, the SNB would also consider selling foreign currency. The SNB publishes its foreign exchange interventions on a quarterly basis. All settlements are made at free-market rates.

The Swiss franc appreciated in the second half of 2021. A broad weakening of the euro, uncertainty about the global inflation outlook and concerns about the spread of new coronavirus variants contributed to the appreciation especially in Q4/2021. According to the published information on foreign exchange transactions, the SNB intervened with slightly above CHF 20bn since mid-2021. While the CHF was relatively stable in the first half of 2022, it appreciated again since mid-June. A weakening of the euro as well as the SNB’s decision to raise the SNB policy rate by half a percentage point to −0.25% to counter increased inflationary pressure (as of June 17, 2022) contributed to the appreciation of the Swiss franc.

The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a crawl-like arrangement. The de facto methodology for classification of exchange rate regimes is based on a backward-looking statistical approach that relies on past exchange rate movement and historical data. Therefore, this classification does not imply a corresponding policy commitment on the part of the country authorities nor does it imply statements or views on future or intended policies. The SNB publishes information regarding its foreign exchange transactions quarterly.

There is no official or reference exchange rate.

Other monetary framework Yes. The monetary policy framework is based on an explicit definition of price stability – an annual CPI inflation rate of less than 2% – as a long-term anchor. Policy decisions are guided by a conditional inflation forecast over a three-year horizon. For taking and communicating monetary policy decisions, the SNB uses the SNB policy rate. The SNB seeks to keep secured short-term Swiss franc money market rates, of which the Swiss Average Rate Overnight...
(SARON) is the most representative, close to the policy rate. A key communication device is the conditional inflation forecast chart, which is based on the assumption that the SNB policy rate set when the forecast is published will remain constant over the three-year forecast period.

Import taxes and/or tariffs
- Yes. In general, customs duties are levied based on the gross weight of goods. On industrial goods, import tariffs are generally very low (average 0.20% ad valorem equivalent). On agricultural goods, they average 5.9% ad valorem equivalent. The tariff rates on agricultural goods that are imported above quota may range up to several hundred percent (in ad valorem terms). In the framework of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) Uruguay Round, all quantitative restrictions and measures with equivalent effects concerning agricultural products have been converted to tariffs. To maintain the market access opportunities prevailing during 1986–1988, 28 tariff rate quotas were set for specific agricultural and livestock goods (fruits, vegetables, meats, wines, etc.).

  While the general investment principles (Asset Liability Management orientation, safety, profitability, diversification, liquidity) of the FINMA Circular No. 2016/5 apply to all insurance companies, the specific guidelines refer to those insurance companies who need to hold tied assets according to the law. These are of qualitative as well as of quantitative nature. Quantitative limits such as counterparty exposure limit (5%) or foreign currency exposure limit (20%) intend to mitigate various risks, for example, concentration risk or currency mismatch risk. The FINMA Circular No. 2016/5 also sets out asset-class-specific guidelines and investment restrictions (mentioned in the sections above), which are in line with the stipulated general investment principle.

| Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents | Yes.  |
| Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad | Yes.  |

Besides the asset-type-specific limits (for example, 30% for equity), securities issued by nonresidents need to be securitized and traded on a market so that a market price can be identified or the legal framework applicable to the investment must recognize FINMA’s insolvency procedures.

| Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally | No.  |
| Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition | Yes.  |

To ensure the enforceability of the invested assets in case of bankruptcy, the investments held abroad can only be assigned to the tied assets, if the legal framework applicable to the investment recognizes FINMA’s insolvency procedures and the seniority of the claim to the tied assets in accordance with Swiss law so that no special enforcement or other interventions by an authority or third party become necessary.

According to the FINMA Circular No. 2016/05, “Investment Guidelines – Insurance Companies” generally allows a foreign custody abroad as long as the aforementioned preconditions are fulfilled.

| Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held locally | No.  |
| Pension funds | Yes.  |

According to the Asset Liability Management principles of the FINMA Circular No. 2016/5, liabilities arising from insurance contracts should match with the assets of the relevant currencies. Assets in currencies other than the reference currency should not exceed 20% of the required amount of the tied assets. This limit takes into consideration the effects of hedging.

Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices: Yes.

The IMF staff report for the Request for Disbursement under the Rapid Credit Facility with Tajikistan states that, as of April 29, 2020, the Republic of Tajikistan maintained one exchange restriction and two multiple currency practices subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) and Section 3 of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement. Foreign exchange shortages, evidenced by market participants’ reports of undue delays in obtaining foreign exchange and external payment arrears, persist in the commercial foreign exchange market as a result of the setting of exchange rates by commercial banks used in foreign exchange transactions, because of informal guidance by the National Bank of Tajikistan (NBT), which do not reflect market conditions. As a consequence of this, not all demand for bona fide foreign exchange for current international transactions is satisfied, giving rise to an exchange restriction. One multiple currency practice arises because of the absence of a mechanism to prevent a potential deviation of more than 2% between: (1) the prevailing market exchange rate and (2) the official exchange rate, which is required to be used for converting domestic currency (somoni) to foreign currency, and vice versa, between accounts of individuals and legal entities opened within the same commercial bank. The second multiple currency practice arises because of the absence of a mechanism to prevent a potential deviation of more than 2% between: (1) the somoni–Russian ruble exchange rate (calculated as a cross-rate using the official exchange rate of the US dollar to somoni), which is required to be used for mandatory ruble surrender transactions and (with a maximum variation of 0.5%) for the purchase/sale in the interbank market of rubles derived from the mandatory surrender, and (2) the market exchange rate banks may use for purchase/sale of Russian rubles derived from other sources. (Country Report No. 20/151)

Exchange measures imposed for security reasons: Yes.

Because of security considerations, the NBT sent lending institutions Letter No. 27.03-274/3494 of October 9, 2015, which is of an advisory nature, recommending that all lending institutions exercise particular care when engaging in banking relations and performing transactions with the following banks, which have been included on the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) Specially Designated Nationals List: ZAO (Closed Joint-Stock Company) Kont – liquidated, ZAO Kafolatbank – in the liquidation stage (NBT Executive Board Resolution No. 160 of October 27, 2021) and a branch of Tijorat Bank of the Islamic Republic of Iran.

In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51)

Other security restrictions: Yes.

Exchange restrictions have been imposed in accordance with UNSC resolutions.
Certain measures have been taken to freeze financial assets or other property of individuals and organizations included on the lists of persons involved in terrorism (consolidated (UNSC lists), international, and national lists).

The official exchange rate of the US dollar is calculated on the basis of the weighted average exchange rates in transactions involving the purchase and sale of the US dollar for somoni in the interbank and intrabank foreign exchange markets as of 4:00 p.m. of the current day. The NBT has the right to adjust the calculated base weighted average exchange rate within a range of ±1.5%.

A decision to make an adjustment is made by the NBT working group on exchange rate policy.

The official exchange rates of other foreign currencies are calculated according to the rules for determining cross-rates using the ratio of the official exchange rate of the US dollar against the somoni and the exchange rates of the US dollar against other foreign currencies as established by their CBs or in international foreign exchange markets on that day.

The official exchange rate is used for accounting purposes and for recording foreign exchange funds in somoni on the balance sheets of economic entities, for recalculation into somoni of mandatory state payments expressed in foreign currency, for calculating main macroeconomic indicators, and for analyzing the results of foreign economic activity.

In accordance with NBT Executive Board Resolution No. 127 of September 29, 2017, the exchange rate in somoni for the purchase and sale of foreign currency for clients of the NBT is set by the NBT by agreement between the parties, taking into consideration the following conditions:

– the exchange rate in somoni for the purchase of foreign currency must be no higher than the official exchange rate in effect on the day the transaction is performed;
– the sale of foreign currency for somoni to the MOF must be performed at the official exchange rate in effect on the day the transaction is performed;
– the sale of foreign currency for somoni to other public enterprises and organizations serviced by the Main Central Treasury Administration of the MOF must be performed at the official exchange rate in effect on the day the transaction is performed, plus a margin of 1.5%.

The authorized banks independently set the exchange rate based on the domestic foreign exchange market situation, foreign exchange supply and demand, and the official bid by the clients.

Monetary aggregate target Yes.

The Republic of Tajikistan’s Monetary Policy Strategy for 2021–2025 states that the mechanism of monetary policy of the NBT is officially implemented under the reserve money targeting regime and its regulation is carried out to ensure stable money supply growth in the economy and also to maintain a stable level of demand and inflation.

The NBT is carrying out a number of reforms to make a gradual transition from a reserve money targeting regime to a new framework for the implementation of monetary policy – inflation targeting.
Accordingly, at this time the NBT performs monitoring of reserve money as an operational objective of the monetary targeting regime, as well as the short-term interest rate in the interbank credit market. The main focus of monetary and exchange policy is on the development of institutional reforms, instruments, and on increasing their impact on short-term interest rates in the money market, the level of aggregate demand and inflation, and its aim is to create a favorable climate and reliable foundation for making a gradual transition from a reserve money framework (quantity) to a new inflation-targeting framework (quality) for the implementation of monetary policy.

Monetary policy targets are defined in the Republic of Tajikistan’s Projected Monetary Policy Guidelines for 2022 and the Medium Term. This document is reviewed by the NBT Executive Board and approved by the Republic of Tajikistan Parliament. To identify the maintenance of price stability as a top priority, a quantitative medium-term inflation target of 6.0% (±2 percentage points) is published on the NBT’s official website. The inflation target in Tajikistan is defined in the form of the inflation rate at the end of the year. During the transition from reserve money to short-term interbank operations, a corridor for fluctuations in interbank operations was set at the refinancing rate ±3 percentage points. The upper limit of the corridor is overnight credits (refinancing rate +3 percentage points), and the lower limit of the corridor is overnight deposits (refinancing rate −3 percentage points). The target corridor band for reserve money is set at ±5% of the established target.

The NBT is accountable to the Lower Chamber of the Supreme Assembly (Parliament) of the Republic of Tajikistan. The NBT submits to the Parliament the NBT’s annual report and auditor’s report as well as the Monetary Policy Projections of the Republic of Tajikistan and a report on their implementation.

Floating | Yes. |

The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as floating. Under the inflation-targeting monetary policy framework, the value of the baht is allowed to be determined by market forces, reflecting demand and supply in the foreign exchange market. In the case that the resulting movements in THB are deemed excessive and unjustified by fundamentals, foreign exchange intervention can be undertaken to avoid disorderly market conditions. The data on interventions are not publicly available. However, the weekly and monthly data on gross international reserve are published on the CB’s website, where international reserve assets comprise monetary gold, SDRs, reserve position in the fund, and foreign currency assets.

In 2021, the baht depreciated mainly from both the tightening of global financial conditions as recovery in advanced economies gained more traction and a slow recovery of Thai economy.

In 2022, the baht has depreciated in line with regional currencies as the US dollar has soared to multi-decade highs from risk-off sentiment on Russia-Ukraine conflict. The Fed’s aggressive rate hikes in response to surging inflation, and a growing concern about global recession risk.

The Bank of Thailand (BOT) also uses the baht–US dollar reference exchange rate to mark to market its foreign exchange reserves.

<td>Nonresidents are free to enter into forward foreign exchange contracts with authorized banks to hedge their underlying trade or investment in Thailand. On top of this, effective January 5, 2021, registered nonresident corporates under Nonresident Qualified Company (NRQC) scheme can engage with onshore financial institutions by managing currency risks related to Thai baht more freely without having to provide proof of underlying for each transaction. In addition, NRQCs may manage Thai baht liquidity more flexibly without being subject to the end-of-day outstanding limit of B 200 million imposed on nonresident bath account. The scope for transaction is expanded to include anticipatory foreign exchange hedging and balance sheet hedging. Non-resident companies eligible for NRQCs are those who have trade and investment in Thailand only (with eligible underlying). Non-resident companies engaging in financial and gold businesses, and portfolio investment in Thailand cannot apply for NRQC scheme.</td>

Effective January 5, 2021, without proof of underlying domestic trade or investment, the overall outstanding limit on baht liquidity provided by a domestic financial institution to a nonresident group (as a consolidated entity) is B 200 million (previously B 600 million) where the liquidity facilities include foreign exchange derivatives and overdrafts but do not include direct loans.

Because the NRQC Scheme will facilitate nonresident companies to engage in foreign exchange transactions with domestic financial institutions more freely, the outstanding limit has been reduced as this channel has become less necessary and to support activities under the NRQC Scheme. The limit on baht borrowing by a domestic financial institution from a nonresident group is B 10 million. Residents in Thailand are free to engage in forward transactions with authorized banks to hedge foreign exchange risk arising out of committed or forecasted payments or receipts for current or capital account transactions. Unwinding of forward transactions for hedging foreign exchange exposure is freely allowed.

The BOT has been making collaborative efforts with other CBs in ASEAN countries to establish cross-border linkages to facilitate Quick response (QR) code payment and innovative remittance. The initiatives that are in operation are as follows:

- Cambodia: Since February 18, 2020, Thai and Cambodian banks have launched cross-border QR payments between the two countries. Cambodian tourists visiting Thailand can use their mobile banking applications to scan the Thai QR Codes of merchants in Thailand. Thai tourists are expected to use their Thai mobile banking applications to scan Cambodian QR Codes to pay for goods and services at merchants in Cambodia in 2022.

- Singapore: A Thai payment service provider has launched a mobile wallet application that allows Thai e-wallet customers to make QR payments overseas through a Singaporean cross-border mobile payment provider (Q4 2018). Since April 4, 2019, Thai and Singaporean banks have launched the remittance service via... sponsoring bank model between Thailand and Singapore. Additionally, both jurisdictions have launched cross-border QR payment linkage via switch model since September 2022.

- Japan: Thai and Japanese commercial banks have launched cross-border QR payments between the two countries in 2018.
- Vietnam: BOT and State Bank of Vietnam have collaborated to spearhead the cross-border QR payment service between Thai and Vietnamese banks. Effective March 26, 2021, Tourists from Thailand are able to pay for goods and services via VietQR at merchants of the participating banks in Vietnam, and tourists from Vietnam are able to pay via Thai QR Payment logo.
- Malaysia: BOT and Bank Negara Malaysia have jointly steered the cross-border QR payment project between Thai and Malaysian banks to launch the service effective June 18, 2021. In the first phase, tourists from Thailand are able to pay for goods and services via DuitNow QR at merchants of the participating banks in Malaysia. The opposite payment flow was introduced in early 2022.
- Indonesia: BOT and Bank Indonesia have jointly steered the cross-border QR payment project between Thai and Indonesian banks. Effective August 17, 2021, Tourists from Thailand are able to pay for goods and services via Quick Response Code Indonesian Standard (QRIS) at merchants of the participating banks in Indonesia, and tourists from Indonesia are able to pay via Thai QR Payment logo.

The BOT and Monetary Authority of Singapore (MAS) have collaborated to introduce “PromptPay-PayNow,” the cross-border real-time remittance service between the Thai and Singaporean banks, effective April 29, 2021. It is recognized as the world’s first linkage between two real-time payment systems by connecting PromptPay and PayNow, which are the domestic real-time payment systems of both countries. The service allows the customers of participating banks to make and receive cross-border real-time fund transfers using mobile phone numbers as proxies.

Thailand and Hong Kong Monetary Authority (HKMA) developed the cross-border Payment versus Payment linkage between Bank of Thailand Automated High-value Transfer Network (BAHTNET) and US Dollar Clearing House Automated Transfer System to facilitate THB/USD settlement to reduce foreign exchange settlement risk arising from different time zones. US Dollar Clearing House Automated Transfer System was in operation since July 17, 2014. Currently, BOT has included OTC foreign exchange swap transaction into Payment versus Payment system since January 2017.

Thailand and Malaysia launched the local currency settlement framework on March 14, 2016, and its scope was expanded in January 2, 2018. Likewise, Thailand and Indonesia launched similar framework on January 2, 2018. These frameworks aim to promote the settlement of trade and direct investment in local currencies. Banks which fulfill key qualifications to facilitate bilateral trade are appointed to facilitate the frameworks.

- Differential treatment of deposit accounts held by nonresidents
  - Yes.
  - Nonresidents may open two types of nonresident baht accounts: nonresident baht account for securities and nonresident baht account for general purposes. Transfers are not allowed between different types of accounts. The limit on the outstanding balance of each type of account is B 200 million a nonresident.

  Exception applies to registered nonresident corporates under NRQC. Effective January 5, 2021, NRQCs can engage with onshore financial institutions more freely by managing Thai baht liquidity more flexibly without having to provide proof of underlying for each transaction and without being subject to the end-of-day outstanding limit of B 200 million imposed on nonresident baht accounts.

Abroad by banks

Financial institutions—commercial banks, finance companies, and credit foncier companies (credit foncier company is a public limited company licensed to undertake credit foncier business by accepting deposit from public, granting mortgage loan, and purchasing immovable property under contract of sale with right of redemption)—may invest, purchase, and hold directly or indirectly shares of any company up to the following amounts, including the shares of nominee shareholders of financial institutions: (1) 20% of the total capital of the financial institution for shares in all companies; (2) 5% of the total capital for shares in each company; and (3) 10% of the total shares sold. In cases of debt restructuring or as security for a loan, financial institutions may seek BOT approval to hold more shares. The BOT may grant waivers, but with certain conditions.

In banks by nonresidents

In principle, Thailand allows up to 25% foreign equity participation in commercial banks, finance companies, and credit foncier companies (credit foncier company is a public limited company licensed to undertake credit foncier business by accepting deposit from public, granting mortgage loan, and purchasing immovable property under contract of sale with right of redemption). The BOT may consider allowing foreign holdings between 25% and 49%. If deemed necessary to improve the condition or business of these institutions, the minister of finance, on recommendation of the BOT, may allow foreign investors to hold up to 100% of these institutions' shares for 10 years. After 10 years, foreign investors do not have to sell their shares but may not purchase additional shares, unless they hold less than 49% of total shares. Additional shares may then be acquired to bring foreign holdings up to the 49% maximum.

Open foreign exchange position limits

The regulation on net foreign exchange exposure limits allows commercial banks to maintain a position for each currency relative to its capital fund up to 15% or US$5 million, whichever is greater, and to maintain an aggregate position relative to its capital fund up to 20% or US$10 million, whichever is greater.

On resident assets and liabilities

The regulations governing shares and other securities of a participating nature apply.

On nonresident assets and liabilities

The limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents as per the office of insurance commission (OIC) insurance companies may invest up to 30% of their total investment assets in securities issued by nonresidents.

Insurance companies may invest up to 30% of their total investment assets in securities issued by nonresidents.

Total investment in each category is determined by a company's total investment assets: (1) government bonds, treasury bills, BOT bonds, and state enterprise bonds with an MOF guarantee, no limit; (2) corporate debt securities, 60%; and (3) stocks and equities, 30%.

When investing in foreign securities (that bear known amount of cash... flows for investors such as bonds), insurance companies must hedge their foreign exchange exposure based on their capital adequacy ratio (CAR). Insurance companies with CAR less than 250 must hedge at least 75% of their cash flow. Insurance companies with CAR over 250 but less than 380 must hedge at least 50% of their cash flow. Insurance companies with CAR over 380 can hedge freely according to the internal policy of the company’s investment committee.

Pension funds

The SEC oversees provident fund, a voluntary defined contribution plan jointly established by the employer and employee to serve as a long-term savings to support an employee on retirement.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents

The SEC investment rules require no limit on securities issued by nonresidents. Nevertheless, the following investment limits, namely (1) single entity limit, (2) group limit, (3) product limit, (4) concentration limit, and (5) employer’s asset limit, still apply to any provident fund investment.

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad

The SEC investment rules require no limit on investment portfolio held abroad. Nevertheless, the following internal investment limits, namely (1) single entity limit, (2) group limit, (3) product limit, (4) concentration limit, and (5) employer’s asset limit, still apply to any provident fund investment.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally

The SEC investment rules require no limit on investment portfolio held locally. Nevertheless, the following investment limits, namely (1) single entity limit, (2) group limit, (3) product limit, (4) concentration limit, and (5) employer’s asset limit, still apply to any provident fund investment.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition

As of December 31, 2021, foreign investment of provident funds is only about 1% of the total asset under management.

Investment firms and collective investment funds

Mutual funds may invest without limit in securities issued by nonresidents. (For Money Market Fund, foreign exposure must not exceed 50% of net asset value, with currency risk being fully hedged.)

Exchange tax

Yes. Authorized intermediaries apply a 0.6% commission on transfers to countries outside the WAEMU. This commission is transferred in full to the National Treasury and makes up part of its tax revenue.

Exchange subsidy

No.

Foreign exchange market

Yes. Authorized intermediaries (authorized intermediary banks and authorized non-electronic exchange dealers) freely determine the buying and selling rates of foreign currencies, with the exception of the euro, which must be traded against CFAF at the fixed rate of CFAF 655.957 per euro. The commission on foreign exchange transactions may not exceed 2%.

Instruction No. 013-11-2015 on the terms and conditions for conducting rapid money transfers as a subagent within the WAEMU is in effect.

Spot exchange market

Yes. Entities authorized to conduct non-electronic foreign currency transactions are authorized intermediary banks and individuals or companies authorized by order of the minister of finance, with the consent of the BCEAO. As of December 31, 2021, 53 institutions, including 14 banks and 39 authorized OTC exchange dealers, were to trade on the foreign exchange market.

Authorized intermediaries must comply with the provisions for non-electronic exchange operations with euro banknotes and issue a receipt for all operations with customers. In addition, authorized intermediaries must (1) permanently post at their windows the rates actually charged for the different currencies and (2) post notification that a transaction slip must be issued for all foreign exchange transactions on presentation of the requestor’s identity document. As of December 31, 2021, there were 50 institutions licensed to deal in the foreign exchange market. The minister of finance issues approvals, after consulting the BCEAO. Authorized intermediaries must comply with the provisions for executing banknote foreign exchange transactions involving foreign currency and issue a receipt for all transactions with clients. Banks and registered banknote exchange houses are intermediaries authorized by the Ministry of Economy and Finance (MEF) to carry out foreign exchange transactions with the public. The exchange houses may perform transactions in foreign currencies other than euros with the BCEAO. Registered banknote exchange houses may not make transfers or payment in foreign currencies with other countries or maintain accounts abroad.

In operations with customers, authorized intermediaries (authorized intermediary banks and OTC dealers) freely determine the buying and selling rates of foreign currencies, with the exception of the euro, which is traded at the official fixed rate of CFAF 655.957 and may be subject to a maximum commission of 2.0%.

The BCEAO deals directly with the government and other public entities, and the official rate is used for valuation.

The BCEAO exchanges foreign currency for CFA francs at the rates published in the international markets, with the exception of the euro, which is traded at the official fixed rate of 655.957 per euro. The non-electronic currency exchange windows are open to owners of accounts on the BCEAO books and to the general public. A commission of 0.5% is charged on all transactions with the public (purchases and sales) and all withdrawals by banks and financial institutions (including euro withdrawals). However, commissions are not charged on cash foreign exchange transactions conducted by governments, officials of Member States of the WAMU on missions abroad, officials of the CB and their beneficiaries, and on payments made by banks and financial institutions.

Transactions in CFA francs between authorized intermediaries are allowed. As of December 31, 2021, 13 out of 14 commercial banks were active on the interbank market in local currency in Togo. There is no interbank foreign exchange market in the WAEMU area.

Residents of the WAEMU zone are permitted to conduct the following transactions on the foreign exchange derivatives market with authorized intermediary banks established in the WAMU or with foreign banks: outright forward foreign exchange contracts (over the counter), foreign exchange options, foreign exchange swaps, and cross-currency swaps.

Transactions in foreign exchange options are limited to the following two types of transactions: options to purchase foreign currency, purchased by residents of the WAEMU zone from an authorized intermediary bank established in the WAMU or from a foreign bank, or options to sell foreign currency, purchased by residents of the WAEMU zone from an authorized intermediary bank established in the WAMU or from a foreign credit institution. Authorized intermediary banks are required to simultaneously cover... the exchange risk they incur with respect to derivative instruments traded with their customers.
The underlying commercial and financial operations must relate to imports and exports of goods and services by a resident, foreign borrowing operations by a resident (drawings and repayments), or FDI in a resident company.
All legitimate foreign currency needs are ultimately met by the BCEAO.

Exchange control is administered jointly by the MOF and the BCEAO. Most of the authority to supervise foreign exchange transactions is delegated to authorized banks, which are required to report these operations to the MOF. The BCEAO is also authorized to collect—either directly or through banks, financial institutions, the postal administration, or judicial agents—information necessary to compile balance of payments statistics. Customs officers monitor outflows of foreign exchange and confirm importation and exportation of goods. All WAEMU residents are treated as residents of Togo for the purpose of calculating the external position of banks, domiciliation and repatriation of export revenue, issuance and sales of securities, gold imports and exports, investment and lending transactions, and the material exportation of means of payment and of securities by postal package or ordinary mail. However, for statistical purposes with regard to the balance of payments, all countries other than Togo are considered foreign countries. ### Borrowing abroad
Foreign borrowing is unrestricted. For statistical purposes, these transactions must be declared to the MOF and the BCEAO when granted and when repaid.

Maintenance of accounts abroad
Banks and financial institutions are authorized to open accounts with their correspondent banks for settling transactions on their own behalf or on behalf of their customers. However, banks are not authorized to hold in these accounts amounts that exceed their current requirements. In accordance with Regulation No. 09/2010/CM/UEMOA on the External Financial Relations of the WAEMU Member States, to cover their foreign currency requirements, banks are authorized to hold in banking institutions located in non-WAEMU countries:
1. Demand deposits that may not exceed the total amount of import payments domiciled by clients in their books, payable within a period of eight days.
2. Demand deposits that may not exceed the balance of their open foreign accounts denominated in foreign currencies other than the euro and their open resident accounts denominated in foreign currency. The total amount of these assets may not exceed 5% of the clients' outstanding demand deposits. Assets in excess of foreign currency requirements must be surrendered to the BCEAO.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits)
Commercial lending is allowed. Financial credits are subject to MOF authorization following BCEAO approval.

Lending locally in foreign exchange
There are no explicit regulations regarding these transactions, but MOF authorization is required with BCEAO approval.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange
These purchases require MOF authorization if their issuance was not approved by the RCPSFN.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange
A reserve requirement of 3% applies to WAEMU banks. Demand deposits, other deposit accounts, and loan accounts are included in the base for the calculation of the required reserves. The base for the calculation of the required reserves to be held with the CB includes customer foreign currency deposits.

Reserve requirements
According to the prudential framework applicable to WAEMU banks and financial institutions that perform banking operations, the minimum standard liquid asset requirement is 75%.

Liquid asset requirements
Loans of any kind, CFA franc overdrafts, and, in general, any advances granted to nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are subject to MOF authorization, after BCEAO approval. These claims are included in the external position of banks and financial institutions, which is subject to special monitoring.

Interest rate controls
Banking regulations make no distinction among resident deposit accounts, nonresident deposit accounts, and foreign deposit accounts.

Credit controls
Any overdraft or advance granted to a nonresident requires MOF authorization and BCEAO approval.

Investment regulations
The regulations governing direct investment apply.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is a pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands. The external value of the pa‘anga is determined on the basis of a weighted currency basket comprising the US dollar, Australian dollar, New Zealand dollar, and Fijian dollar. The basket weights are determined based on the proportions of trade with trading partners. The exchange rate of the pa‘anga in terms of the US dollar, the intervention currency, is fixed daily by the...
National Reserve Bank of Tonga (NRBT) within a band of ±5% a month. Under Section 34 of the NRBT Act, the external value of the pa’anga is determined from time to time in a manner approved by the NRBT board, after consultation with the Ministry of Finance, in view of Tonga’s obligations connected with international monetary agreements in which it takes part. Section 35(1) of the NRBT Act empowers the NRBT to set the exchange rate. Because the composite weights cannot be confirmed, the de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as other managed.

Official exchange rate  Yes. The NRBT sets the US dollar–pa’anga exchange rate daily, which the banks use to set their exchange rates for the public. The official exchange rate set by the NRBT is the rate applicable for the transactions conducted by the NRBT for its customers, which are banks, government, public enterprises, and international agencies. The value of the pa’anga, which is the official exchange rate, is determined on the basis of a weighted currency basket comprising the US dollar, Australian dollar, New Zealand dollar, and Fijian dollar.

Other monetary framework

Yes. The monetary policy framework includes an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis a composite comprising the US dollar, Australian dollar, New Zealand dollar, and Fijian dollar. The exchange rate basket is intended to reduce exchange rate variability, maintain external competitiveness, and minimize imported inflation. The monetary policy framework includes monitoring the monetary aggregates, but no targets are set. A policy rate is also set, which is equivalent to the interest rate paid on commercial banks’ exchange settlement accounts with the CB. The policy rate floor system is currently set at 0. The CB board determines the monetary policy settings, and the board’s decision is published on a monthly basis following the board’s monthly meetings.

Exchange tax

Yes. A levy is imposed on foreign exchange transactions. It is assessed and paid at a rate of half a cent imposed as part of the spread of the pa'anga value of every purchase and sale of foreign currency. The levy applies only if the spread is more than half a cent.

Exchange subsidy

No.

Foreign exchange market

Yes. Commercial banks and authorized foreign exchange dealers (FEDs) may freely set their exchange rates and commissions in transactions with their clients, with the exception of banks’ spreads on telegraphic transfers in US dollars, Australian dollars, and New Zealand dollars, which are limited to 220 basis points, 300 basis points, and 350 basis points, respectively.

Spot exchange market

Yes. The NRBT has licensed four commercial banks and sixteen FEDs. Only licensed banks may make spot foreign exchange transactions directly with the NRBT; FEDs transact only with commercial banks. FEDs may conduct money conversion (conversion of foreign currency notes to or from pa'anga) and/or remittance business.
Ten FEDs hold Type A licenses, five hold Type B licenses, and one holds a Type C license. FEDs with Type A licenses are authorized to conduct money conversions, make foreign currency payments on behalf of their clients, and receive funds from overseas (both inward and outward remittances). FEDs with Type B licenses are authorized to receive funds only from overseas (inward remittances), and the Type C license is for money conversion only. Licensed banks are authorized to conduct foreign exchange business under their banking license. Licensed banks and FEDs may maintain accounts abroad without NRBT approval.

Operated by the central bank Yes. The NRBT operates a foreign exchange fixing arrangement.

Foreign exchange standing facility Yes. The NRBT sets the US dollar–pa’anga rate on a daily basis and buys and sells foreign exchange at these exchange rates with commercial banks. The NRBT deals with commercial banks and the government, public enterprises, and international agencies on demand. For the commercial banks’ transactions, they are required to list all the underlying customers. All foreign currency payments from pa’anga accounts, through either the commercial banks or the NRBT, are subject to the exchange control requirements, so supporting documents are provided accordingly, which verify whether the transactions are bona fide.

Allocation No.

Auction No.

Fixing No.

Interbank market Yes. There are four commercial banks, which are licensed by the NRBT, and they may trade among themselves. The NRBT does not intervene directly with market participants at their quoted rates. The NRBT sets the US dollar–pa’anga exchange rate, which is used for the NRBT’s daily foreign currency transactions with commercial banks, and these deals are at the commercial banks’ initiative. Commercial banks also maintain nostro accounts, and their total balances may not exceed T$1 million daily. The temporary limit of T$2.5 million that was necessary to allow one bank to meet the minimum requirements for a US dollar correspondent bank account in Australia was removed effective December 14, 2021. Excess foreign exchange must be sold to the NRBT within two business days. The NRBT imposes limits on commercial banks’ spreads on telegraphic transfers in US dollars, Australian dollars, and New Zealand dollars of 220 basis points, 300 basis points, and 350 basis points, respectively. There are no limits on the spreads for interbank foreign currency transactions (among commercial banks only).

Exchange Measures

The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Trinidad and Tobago states that, as of August 6, 2018, Trinidad and Tobago maintained an exchange restriction and two MCPs subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) and Section 3. The exchange restriction arises from the authorities’ restriction of the exchange rate (that is, by restricting the maximum market buying and selling rates, and prohibiting foreign exchange transactions beyond the maximum rates), while not providing enough foreign exchange (that is, through the Central Bank of Trinidad and Tobago (CBTT)’s foreign exchange interventions) to meet all demand for current transactions at that rate. The CBTT also limits sales of its foreign exchange intervention funds to meeting only “trade-related” demand, which do not include non-trade transactions that are, however, current international transactions as defined under Article XXX(d) of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement, and encourages ADs to similarly prioritize sales of foreign exchange obtained from other sources. Further, the authorities prioritize provision of foreign exchange to certain manufacturers through a special foreign exchange facility using the Export–Import Bank of Trinidad and Tobago (EximBank). These actions result in undue delays in access to foreign exchange to make payments or transfers for current international transactions and external payment arrears. The two MCPs arise from the absence of a mechanism to prevent the potential deviation of more than 2% at any given time among several effective exchange rates regulated by the authorities, for spot exchange transactions, namely: (1) the potential 2% deviation between: (a) on the one hand, the CBTT’s intervention rate and the ADs’ selling rates (the maximum of which is anchored on the intervention rate plus fixed margins), and (b) on the other hand, the ADs’ buying rates (the maximum of which is limited at the previous day’s mid-rate); (2) the potential 2% deviation between: (a) on the one hand, the buying and selling rates for foreign exchange transactions between the CBTT and the government, and (b) on the other hand, the ADs’ selling rates. Exchange rate structure

Unitary

Dual

Multiple Yes. The system is multiple as the authorities’ actions give rise to several exchange rates for spot exchange transactions, resulting in MCPs. The exchange rates for spot transactions in effect include: (1) the CBTT’s intervention rate, (2) the ADs’ selling rates, the ceiling of which is set by the CBTT based on fixed margins over the latest intervention rate, (3) the ADs’ buying rates for purchases from the market, the ceiling of which is established at the prior day’s mid-rate as guided and monitored by the CBTT, (4) the CBTT to government’s selling rate, which is set at the prior day’s average selling rate, and (5) the CBTT from government’s buying rate, which is set at the prior day’s mid-rate. The two MCPs arise from the absence of a mechanism to prevent the potential deviation of more than 2% at any given time among these multiple effective exchange rates regulated by the authorities, for spot exchange transactions, namely: (1) the potential 2% deviation between: (a) on the one hand, the CBTT’s intervention rate and the ADs’ selling rates (the maximum of which is anchored on the intervention rate plus fixed margins), and (b) on the other hand, the ADs’ buying rates (the maximum of which is limited at the previous day’s mid-rate); (2) the potential 2% deviation between: (a) on the one hand, the buying and selling rates for foreign exchange transactions between the CBTT and the government, and (b) on the other hand, the ADs’ selling rates.

Stabilized arrangement Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The CBTT intervenes regularly, and with no significant developments in the domestic foreign exchange market, the exchange rate has remained relatively stable. Because the Trinidad and Tobago dollar stabilized within a 2% band against the US dollar, the de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as stabilized. The CBTT publishes daily and monthly purchases and sales by the CB and ADs.

Commercial banks and nonbank financial institutions may conduct foreign exchange transactions, both spot and forward, with the public without limitation. ADs determine their selling rates to maintain a maximum spread of 1% above the CB intervention rate on the intervention settlement date with fixed margins thereafter for all spot transactions. ADs determine their buying rates, the maximum of which is limited at the previous day’s mid-rate.

As of June 30, 2022, there were 13 institutions: 8 commercial banks and 5 nonbank financial institutions, licensed by the CBTT to deal in foreign exchange with the public. These institutions constitute the group of ADs. Since 2018, the EximBank holds a limited-scope AD license to conduct specific foreign exchange transactions. The terms and conditions of this license are in accordance with the existing laws and regulations. Through the EximBank, the authorities prioritize provision of foreign exchange to certain manufacturers. Through the US$100-million EximBank facility, eligible small and medium exporters are able to obtain foreign exchange to finance inputs for export operations.

Foreign exchange bureaus are also licensed by the CBTT, but they may only buy currency notes, coins, and traveler’s checks and sell currency notes and coins (Clause 1 of the Terms and Conditions agreed to by all operators on the issuance of a license from the CBTT). As of June 30, 2022, there were four authorized foreign exchange bureau operators with 68 locations; they do not conduct foreign exchange transactions directly with the CBTT.

Until May 2012, the CBTT intervened in the foreign exchange market solely through a predetermined allocation system. In May 2012, the CBTT introduced an auction system that operated alongside its usual fixed allocation system for a portion of its intervention. The last auction held under this system was in June 2014.

The CBTT also provides a Foreign Exchange Liquidity Guarantee Facility to the ADs. The facility provides a source of liquidity that ADs can draw on if needed to quickly reduce an extended open position during times when there is a paucity of supply, as happens seasonally in the domestic market. Whilst the facility has been in existence since 2009, it was never utilized by the ADs and was temporarily suspended. The facility was reestablished in March 2017 and operates periodically. A Foreign Exchange Liquidity Guarantee Facility that operated for a period of 12 months expired effective June 30, 2021. Effective January 1, 2022, there is a Foreign Exchange Liquidity Guarantee Facility for a period of 12 months.
The Facility was renewed in advance effective April 8, 2022, for additional 12 months ending December 31, 2023. During 2021, the ADs accessed a total of US$12.1 million from the facility while the ADs did not access the facility during January to June 2022.

The authorities prioritize provision of foreign exchange to certain manufacturers through the EximBank. In 2018, the US$100-million EximBank facility was launched, through which eligible small and medium exporters are able to obtain foreign exchange to finance inputs for export operations. Additionally, as of April 30, 2020, the authorities launched another facility to EximBank to prioritize the provision of foreign exchange to certain companies for the import and manufacture of COVID-19-related necessities. Both facilities are still active as of June 30, 2022.

Duty-free licenses are granted to local concessionary manufacturers for imports of certain inputs for manufacturing. Imports of firearms, ammunition, and narcotics are tightly controlled. All goods, unless exempt for reasons of health or security or included on the negative list, may be imported without a license.
Other nontariff measures | Yes. | Imports of food and drugs must satisfy prescribed standards. Imports of meat, live animals, plants, and mining materials are subject to specific regulations.

Import taxes and/or tariffs | Yes. | Under the fourth phase of the CARICOM CET, customs’ duty rates on most goods range from 5% to 20%. The rate on agricultural products is 40%. The rates on new motor vehicles range from 25% to 45%. All goods from CARICOM countries are exempt, as are imports of some foodstuffs, fertilizers, and raw materials. Local companies that produce import substitutes or export goods may receive a customs duty exemption from the Ministry of Trade, Industry and Investment.

Band/Range
Since 2011, the CB has adopted a transitional regime that places greater emphasis on the dynamics of inflation and its determinants, and on its short- and medium-term outlook in formulating its monetary policy stance. This framework replaced the monetary targeting strategy, which had shown its limitations in managing the post-revolutionary phase, notably because of the instability of the money multiplier (cf. “Tunisia Monetary Policy Since the Arab Spring: The Fall of the Exchange Rate Anchor and Rise of Inflation Targeting” by K.M. El Hamiani, N. End, and R. Kolsi, IMF WP/20/167).

This new framework was reinforced by Article 7 of Law No. 2016-35 of April 25, 2016, Establishing the Charter of the BCT, which removed any ambiguity around the BCT’s main mission, which is the preservation of price stability.

Under the current monetary policy framework, the interest rate is BCT’s preferred monetary policy instrument, and inflation projections constitute the intermediate target.

This transition was made possible by the development of analytical and operational frameworks for monetary policy. In collaboration with a number of CBs, the BCT has succeeded in setting up an analysis and forecasting system to assess risks surrounding the inflation outlook. In addition, in 2017 it focused on reforming its regulatory framework for conducting monetary policy through the publication of Circular No. 2017-02 on the Implementation of Monetary Policy by the BCT, which defines the monetary policy instruments, the money market participants, and eligible collateral for refinancing.
This framework favored a restrictive monetary policy stance that resulted in an increase in the policy rate in February 2019 to 7.75%, which strongly supported the disinflationary process, and succeeded in reducing the inflation rate from a maximum of 7.7% in June 2018 to 4.9% at the end of 2020, thus returning to positive real interest rates, an action whose beneficial effects were soon felt in terms of reduced external vulnerability, accumulation of foreign exchange reserves, and appreciation of the dinar against the major currencies. These developments enabled an easing of monetary policy to mitigate the impact of the COVID-19 crisis on the domestic economy. To this end, the BCT decided to lower its key rate by 100 basis points, bringing it down to 6.75% in March 2020, then by 50 basis points to 6.25% at the end of September 2020, amid a relaxation of inflationary pressures.

Despite an unfavorable international and national environment (unprecedented health and economic crises, tense socio-political climate, etc.), the BCT is still working on a number of prerequisites (macroeconomic stabilization, exchange rate flexibility, deepening of the markets, and monetary policy communication). To this end, and as part of the 2019–2021 strategic project “Clear, transparent, and credible governance for the conduct of monetary policy,” the BCT has requested technical assistance from the IMF for the preparation of a roadmap for the migration to an explicit inflation targeting framework.

This activity is carried out via simple declaration to the BCT and is subject to Circular No. 2008-04. Exchange bureau operations are limited to buying and selling foreign banknotes and traveler’s checks. Banks carry out transactions with the BCT and open accounts with foreign correspondents. On the functioning of the foreign exchange market, all resident and nonresident authorized intermediaries may act as counterparties in transactions carried out in the foreign exchange market. | Floating         | Yes. | The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. Under the current regime, the foreign exchange supply and demand is mainly determined by economic fundamentals, the monetary and fiscal policies implemented, international developments and expectations. The Central Bank of the Republic of Türkiye (CBRT) has no nominal or real exchange rate target. The CBRT does not conduct foreign exchange buying or selling transactions to determine the level or direction of the exchange rates. To ensure that the foreign exchange market operates efficiently, the CBRT closely monitors exchange rate developments and related risk factors and continue to take the necessary measures and employ due instruments. Because of unhealthy exchange rate pricing, the CBRT intervened in the foreign exchange market through direct sales on December 1, December 3, December 10, December 13, and December 17, 2021, and injected a total of USD 7,278 million liquidity into the market with these interventions. The CBRT announced the general framework of the monetary and exchange rate policies envisaged for 2022 in a document titled “Monetary and Exchange Rate Policy for 2022” on December 29, 2021. The CBRT continues swap transactions to contribute to the TL and foreign exchange liquidity management of banks. TL currency swap transactions via the quotation method with one-week maturity; Borsa İstanbul (BIST) Swap Market transactions, which was started on May 15, 2019 (ended in late 2021), and swap auctions conducted via the traditional method, are used in line with the banks’ needs. The one-week repo auction rate is valid for the TL interest rate in swap transactions conducted via the quotation method and BIST Swap Market transactions were conducted consistent with the monetary policy rates. On the contrary, on December 27, 2021, steps were taken to ensure the balance between the open market operation (OMO) and swaps, to shorten the maturity structure in a measured way, and to improve the distribution of winning banks in swap auctions. In that context, it was decided to shift the transactions in the BIST Swap Market to traditional swap auctions with a maturity of 2 weeks. Moreover, in swap auctions held via the traditional method, the bid amount that each bank can submit in the auction was limited to a maximum of 30% of the total auction amount, and the transfer of the unused portion of the total swap position determined for auctions to the banks’ limits for swap transactions held via the quotation method was terminated and a measured shortening was introduced to maturity structures. In 2022, the bid amount that each bank can submit in the swap auctions was again increased to maximum 50% of the total auction amount.

Depending on market conditions, the CBRT continues to conduct the TL-settled foreign exchange futures transactions at the Derivatives Market (VIOP) operating under the BIST. Between December 29, 2021, and February 15, 2022, to help exporting and importing companies’ exchange rate risk management, TL-settled foreign exchange forward sales were carried out at the CBRT via auctions with maturities of 1 month and 3 months. TRY Gold Swap Market and foreign exchange Gold Swap Market transactions increase the effectiveness of banks’ liquidity management and contribute to the inclusion of gold savings into the financial system. Purchases of gold domestically produced from ore against TL, was suspended in October 2020 to contribute the local market gold supply and restarted in May 2021.

Stock and flow data regarding the swap transactions conducted by the CBRT with the banks in domestic markets and TL-settled foreign exchange futures transactions conducted on the BIST Derivatives Market have been released on a daily basis starting from January 4, 2021, on the CBRT’s website under the heading Statistics/Markets Data. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating.

Free floating

Official exchange rate  Yes.

There is no official exchange rate determined by the CBRT. However, there is an indicative rate, which is determined through six CBRT observations between 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m., at one-hour intervals, taking the average value of the averages of the buying and selling rates as quoted by banks in the interbank foreign exchange market for US$1. The arithmetic average of the six observed values thus obtained is the CBRT’s midrate for US$1. The buying and selling rates for US$1 are calculated based on the midrate. Similarly, the respective cross-rates of the currencies for which the CBRT announces indicative exchange rates are collected between 10:00 a.m. and 3:00 p.m. at one-hour intervals. The indicative exchange rates are announced at 3:30 p.m. and used for accounting transactions and some branch transactions of the CBRT, but there are no mandatory rates for individuals or entities. After the introduction of the Foreign Exchange-Protected Deposit Scheme, the CBRT also started to publish the relevant exchange rates and gold prices at one-hour intervals daily.

Accountability

Yes. If the end-year inflation outcome breaches the upper or lower end of the uncertainty band, the CBRT is required by law to send a letter to the government to explain the reasons behind why the target was missed. The uncertainty band, which is an element of the CBRT’s accountability, has been set at 2 pps in both directions around the inflation target. At the end of each quarter, if there is a deviation from the inflation target by more than 2 pps, the CBRT will disclose via Inflation Reports the reasons for deviation and the measures that have been already taken or to be taken to achieve the target. If realized inflation falls outside the uncertainty band at the end of the year, the CBRT will submit an “Open Letter” to the Government.

legally authorized to perform foreign exchange transactions. As of December 31, 2021, there were 47 banks and 6 participation (The term “Islamic banks” is replaced with the term “participation banks” in accordance with the definition stated in Banking Law No. 5411) banks operating in the foreign exchange market.

Operated by the central bank: Yes.
Foreign exchange standing facility: Yes.

To support the foreign exchange liquidity, the transaction limits of the banks in the CBRT Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets were increased by approximately 130% to US$50 billion (as calculated by current EURUSD parity) on September 1, 2015. The selling rate for foreign exchange deposits for USD at one-week maturity was increased from 2.5% to 2.75% effective March 21, 2022; to 3.25% effective May 5, 2022; to 4% effective June 16, 2022; and to 4.75% effective July 28, 2022 and the selling rate for foreign exchange deposits for USD at one-month maturity was increased from 3.25% to 3.5% effective March 21, 2022; to 4% on May 5, 2022; to 4.75% on June 16, 2022; and to 5.5% on July 28, 2022. The selling rate for foreign exchange deposits for EUR at one-week maturity was increased from 2.00% to 2.50% and at one-month maturity from 3% to 3.50% on July 28, 2022. Also, when deemed necessary, without any need for a press release, these rates, the rates applied to banks’ borrowings of the USD and EUR from the CB as a last resort facility, may be adjusted in either direction at 9:30 a.m. on business days and will be valid for the same business day. The rates are announced through Anadolu Agency DV006, Reuters CBTJ, and Bloomberg CBT pages.

The CBRT introduced the facility of foreign exchange deposits as collateral at two-day maturity in addition to one-week, two-week, and one-month maturities since February 25, 2020. The buying rate for this facility was set at 1.5% for USD and 0% for EUR, in line with other maturities. The buying rate on collateral foreign exchange deposits for the USD was increased from 0% to 0.25% effective March 21, 2022; to 0.75% effective May 5, 2022; to 1.5% effective June 16, 2022; and to 2.25% effective July 28, 2022 for two-day, one-week, two-week, and one-month maturities. The buying rate on collateral foreign exchange deposits for the EUR was also increased from 0% to 0.5% for two-day, one-week, two-week, and one-month maturities effective July 28, 2022.

On November 1, 2018, TL currency swap market was opened to enhance banks’ efficiency in TL and foreign exchange liquidity management. These transactions are conducted at one-week maturities via quotation method with banks, and the maximum amount for these transactions is limited to 30% of the banks’ pre-determined transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Market. To contribute to liquidity management of banks, it was decided that TL currency swap transactions, which are executed with one-week maturity via the quotation method, were also executed with one-, three-, and six-month maturities via the traditional (multi-price) auction method starting from August 5, 2019. These transactions were limited to 20% of the banks’ pre-determined transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Market when the facility was launched. In 2020, the total limit of outstanding TL currency swap transactions via the traditional (multi-price) auction method was gradually raised from 30% (April 3, 2020) to 60% (November 25, 2020) of banks’ total transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets. The unused portion of the total limit of outstanding swap transactions conducted via the traditional auction method was decided to be transferred to banks’ transaction limits at the TL Currency Swap Market on April 25, 2020. Effective December 27, 2021, the applications of a total limit of outstanding TL currency swap transactions conducted via the traditional (multi-price) auction method by 60% of banks’ total transaction limits at the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets and the transfer of the unused portion of the total swap position determined for auctions to the banks’ limits for swap transactions held via the quotation method were terminated and a measured shortening was introduced to maturity structures.

In 2021, the CBRT, in line with its current monetary policy, conducted transactions in the BIST Swap Market at various maturities as well. Effective December 27, 2021, it was decided to shift the transactions in the BIST Swap Market to traditional swap auctions with a maturity of 2 weeks. To contain possible adverse effects of the global uncertainty led by the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic on the Turkish economy, the CBRT took certain measures on March 17, 2020. Banks were offered targeted additional liquidity facilities to secure uninterrupted credit flow to the corporate sector.
Within this framework, TL currency swap auctions against USD and EUR based on quantity auction method were started. The outstanding amount of TL currency swap transactions conducted via the quantity auction method decreased to 0 on March 22, 2021, and no auctions were conducted afterward.

In 2021, the foreign exchange demand of US$6.111 billion of state-owned enterprises was met by the CBRT via direct selling method and in the first half of 2022, the foreign exchange demand of US$17.971 billion of state-owned enterprises was met by the CBRT via direct selling method.
The CBRT started to purchase of gold domestically produced from ore against TL in 2018 to contribute inclusion of gold savings into the financial system. On August 15, 2018, foreign exchange against gold market and location swap facilities were introduced. The CBRT conducts gold buying and selling transactions against foreign exchange in its spot market and location swap transactions as the banks demand. The commission rate charged over the TL equivalent of gold deposited to a custody center abroad in gold location swap transactions was reduced from 5 per 10,000 to 0 on September 14, 2020.

In the same manner, to contribute inclusion of gold savings into the financial system and the liquidity management of banks, a TL Gold Swap Market (for transactions on the buy side) was introduced on May 6, 2019. The CBRT gradually raised the initial limit for TL Gold
Swap Market from 100 tons, respectively, to 112 tons, 116 tons, 119.5 tons, 140.5 tons, and finally 169 tons on June 30, 2022. In addition, Foreign Exchange Gold Swap Markets (for transactions on both the buy and sell sides) were introduced on October 2, 2019.
Initial limit for Foreign Exchange Gold Swap Market was assigned as 100 tons for each (buy/sell) side. For the sell side, limit has been maintained at same level, whereas buying limit was raised gradually from 100 tons, respectively, to 112 tons, 128 tons, 133.5 tons, 150.5
tons, 151 tons, 162 tons, and finally 168 tons on June 30, 2022.
Moreover, in line with the measures taken by CBRT against possible adverse effects of the global uncertainty led by the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic on the Turkish economy, on March 17, 2020, TL gold swap auctions with traditional (multi-price) method were initiated to contribute to the TL and foreign exchange liquidity
The CBRT also started to sell gold against foreign exchange at the BIST Precious Metals and Diamond Market on September 25, 2020, buy gold against TL effective June 11, 2021, and sell gold against TL effective February 28, 2022.

The CBRT may intervene directly or through flexible auctions in the market, in case of unhealthy price formations because of speculative behavior stemming from a loss in market depth. The CBRT has issued the following auction guidelines for Foreign Exchange Buying–Selling Auctions against TL: (1) Only banks authorized to operate in Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets in the CB may participate in intraday auctions. (2) The number and other details of the auction are announced through Reuters CBTQ, Bloomberg CBT/Foreign Exchange Auctions, and Anadolu Agency DV007 pages. Following the announcement of the auction, banks may submit their offers within 15 minutes. (3) Offers may be sent via the CBRT Payment Systems Auction System (IhS). (4) Auctions are held under the multiple price method. (5) The results of the auctions are announced through Reuters CBTQ, Bloomberg CBT/Foreign Exchange Auctions, and Anadolu Agency DV007 pages within 15 minutes of the deadline for submission of the offers. (6) The minimum offer amount is US$1 million and larger amounts in multiples thereof. (7) The maximum bid amount for each bank is limited to 10% of the total auction amount. (8) Banks may not change their offer amounts and/or prices during the auction. (9) The full amount of offers received is met up to the auction amount. (10) If there is more than one offer at the price at which the auction is finalized, the distribution is made on pro-rata basis. (11) Banks that do not fulfill their obligations arising from the auctions are subject to the sanctions specified in the Implementation Instructions of the Foreign Exchange and Banknotes Markets.

On December 1, 2021, December 3, 2021, December 10, 2021, December 13, 2021, and December 17, 2021, the CBRT directly intervened in the market via selling transactions because of unhealthy price formations.

Since December 2014, the CBRT continues to supply foreign exchange to energy state-owned enterprises. Foreign exchange is provided directly by selling from CBRT currency rate; there is no auction.

With the aim of enhancing flexibility and instrument diversity of the TL and foreign exchange liquidity management within the current monetary and exchange rate policy framework, the CBRT held foreign exchange deposits against TL deposit auctions between January 18, 2017, and March 22, 2019, and conducted TL-settled forward foreign exchange sale auctions between November 20, 2017, and December 31, 2018, and then between December 29, 2021, and February 15, 2022, to help exporting and importing companies to manage exchange rate risk, TL-settled foreign exchange forward sales were carried out at the CBRT via auctions with maturities of 1 month and 3 months. Moreover, the CBRT continues to conduct TL-settled forward foreign exchange transactions which were started on August 31, 2018, at the Derivatives Market (VIOP) operating under BIST, with the aim of contributing to the effective functioning of foreign exchange.

On the contrary, TL deposits against foreign exchange deposits auctions were ended on March 22, 2019.

Yes.

Purchase abroad by residents

Insurance, reinsurance, and pension companies may invest their technical reserves in real estate located in OECD countries to cover their risk held outside Türkiye.

Purchase locally by nonresidents

Yes. There is no reciprocity requirement in real estate acquisitions of foreign real persons, and the Council of Ministers, in compliance with legal restrictions, bilateral international relations, and national interests, is authorized to determine the countries authorized to acquire real estate in Türkiye. The total area of the real estate acquired by foreign real persons may not exceed 10% of the privately owned land in the town and 30 hectares a person across the country. The Council of Ministers may also authorize an increase of 30 hectares not more than twice. If a foreign real or legal person acquires vacant land, a project must be developed within two years and submitted to the relevant ministry for approval. The project must be monitored by the same ministry. These restrictions for foreign real and legal persons do not apply to the pledge on real estate. In case of national interest, the Council of Ministers may limit,

In principle, foreign capital companies established in Türkiye may freely acquire and use real estate to conduct business activities listed in the articles of association of their companies. Within this context, companies controlled by foreign investors (the companies in which foreign shareholders own at least 50% of the shares or have the authority to assign or dismiss the majority of the managers), willing to acquire immovable and/or limited rights in rem in Türkiye, must apply to the Provincial Planning and Coordination Directorate (Prefecture Office) at the location of the property by presenting the required documents. Moreover, acquisitions in military zones and special security zones require permission from the Turkish military authorities and province governorships, respectively. These restrictions for foreign capital companies do not apply to the pledge on real estate, liquidation of such pledges, acquisitions of real estate within the context of mergers and divisions of the companies, acquisitions in specific investment areas such as organized industrial zones, technology development zones, or free zones, and acquisitions of banks for the collection of their receivables. However, the banking regulation stipulates liquidation of such properties within a specific time frame.

Golden visa scheme is in place with the amendment of the Regulation on the Implementation of the Turkish Citizenship Law such that foreign persons may acquire Turkish citizenship by purchasing real estate of at least US$1 million, which is validated by the Ministry of Environment and Urbanization.

<td>In an attempt to contain risks associated with resident foreign exchange borrowing, an amendment on foreign exchange legislation has been put into force from May 2, 2018 (Official Gazette No. 30312 of January 25, 2018). With the new legislation, in general, Turkish residents, who do not have income in foreign currency, cannot take loans in foreign currency domestically or from abroad. For residents that have income in foreign currency who have foreign exchange liabilities less than US$15 million, can borrow in foreign exchange according to a limit which does not exceed the sum of their foreign exchange income of the last three fiscal years. With the amendment, most of the exceptions in the former regulation were preserved. However, according to previous regulation, banks could extend foreign exchange credit to residents without considering whether they have foreign currency income or not, if the credit has an average maturity exceeding one year and is in an amount not less than US$5 million. With the new regulation, this exception was removed and the rule of borrowing in foreign currency according to a limit which does not exceed the sum of foreign currency income of last three fiscal years has been put into practice for ensuring the firms borrow prudently and manage their foreign exchange risk efficiently.</td>

Reserve requirement ratios (RRR) are differentiated by currency, maturity, and type of liabilities. Moreover, additional RRRs are implemented to increase share of TL deposits. RRRs on foreign exchange liabilities are significantly higher than TL liabilities, especially for short-term liabilities. Effective July 19, 2021 (with the maintenance period starting on August 6, 2021), RRRs for foreign exchange deposits/participation funds were increased by 200 bps for all maturity brackets. </table>
Effective October 28, 2021 (with the maintenance period starting on November 12, 2021), the RRRs for foreign exchange deposits/participation funds were increased by 200 bps for all maturity brackets. The current RRRs are given below:

(1) Deposits/participation funds up to one-year maturities: 25%.
(2) Precious metal deposits/participation funds up to 1-year maturities: 26%.
(3) Deposits/participation funds with one-year or longer maturity: 19%.

As stated in the “Monetary and Exchange Rate Policy for 2022,” the costs of foreign currency liabilities will be increased while mechanisms to promote TL deposits will be prioritized.

Effective May 27, 2022 (with the maintenance period starting on June 10, 2022), it was decided to differentiate foreign exchange deposit RRRs according to the conversion rate of real person’s foreign exchange deposits to TL deposits, and accordingly, it was decided to implement additional RRR of:
- 500 bps for banks with a conversion rate below 5%, and
- 300 bps for banks with a conversion rate between 5% and 10%.

Additionally, the commission rates regarding RRs held for foreign exchange deposits, that was introduced in 2020, have been revised and differentiated according to the conversion rates to TL deposits.

Effective October 28, 2021 (with the maintenance period starting on November 12, 2021), the upper limit of the facility for holding standard gold for TL RRs was decreased from 15% to 10%.

This implementation is in compliance with Basel III LCR Framework. The two LCRs deposit and participation banks must maintain such that the total LCR must be 100% and foreign exchange LCR must be 80%.

Effective June 24, 2022 (with the maintenance period starting on July 29, 2022), banks will maintain additional TL long-term fixed-rate securities for foreign exchange deposits/participation funds according to the conversion rates to TL deposits.

Abroad by banks  Yes. The opening of branches or representative offices, establishment of companies, and participation in existing companies abroad by banks founded in Türkiye are subject to BRSA approval, on the condition of compliance with the corporate governance and protective provisions set forth in the Banking Law and the principles established by the BRSA.

In banks by nonresidents  Yes. Acquisition of shares that results in one person directly or indirectly owning shares representing 10% or more of the capital of a bank; acquisition of shares that results in one person owning capital shares exceeding 10%, 20%, 33%, or 50% of the capital of a bank; and transfers of shares that result in one person’s capital shares falling below these limits are subject to BRSA approval. Transactions that result in a reduction in the number of shareholders to fewer than five, or in shares being assigned without permission, may not be registered. These rules apply to the acquisition of voting rights and establishment of rights to usufruct in connection with shares. The assignment and transfer of preferential shares that confer the right to promote a member to the board of directors or audit committee or issue new shares require BRSA approval, regardless of the above limits. All foreign-exchange-indexed assets and liabilities must be accounted for fully as foreign assets and foreign liabilities. Although the Exchange Control regulations are restrictive and prescribe approval requirements from the National Bank of Tuvalu (NBT), a commercial bank, or the minister of finance for most payments and transfers, in practice, approval is not required and transactions are administered liberally.

There is no central monetary institution. The NBT is the only bank in Tuvalu handling foreign exchange transactions. The NBT buys and sells foreign exchange at rates determined daily by the NBT’s board on the basis of rates quoted in the international markets plus specific spreads dependent on the currency.

Floating: Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The authorities intervene in Uganda’s foreign exchange market when short-term fluctuations jeopardize its orderly operation. The Bank of Uganda (BOU) intervenes in the interbank foreign exchange market (IFEM) at the banks’ quoted rates using the best bid-ask principle.
The BOU publishes information on its interventions in its bimonthly, quarterly state of the economy, and annual reports. The information includes amounts purchased and sold through the reserve buildup program, interventions, and targeted transactions. The data are made available in the Monetary Policy Report two weeks following the MPC Meeting. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is floating.

Free floating

Official exchange rate  Yes. The daily official exchange rate is calculated as the midrate computed from the simple average interbank quotes of exchange rates for purchases and sales of foreign exchange. The average rate for the previous month is used by the customs authority for tax computation on imports. The BOU’s foreign exchange transactions with government (ministries, departments, and agencies) are conducted at the day’s opening spot rates.

Core inflation
Yes. Inflation target is expressed as average annual core inflation. Core inflation excludes energy, fuel, and utilities and food crops.

Target horizon
Yes. The target horizon stands at 1–3 years.

Operating target (policy rate)
Yes.

Policy rate
Yes. The policy rate used by the CB is the Central Bank Rate (CBR). The short-term policy rate that is guided by the CBR is the seven-day interest rate. During 2021, the CBR averaged 6.71, having been lowered to 6.5% in June 2021 from the 7% it had trended at over the previous year. In October 2022, the BOU raised the CBR to 10% in response to the rising inflationary pressures.

Target corridor band
Yes. The monetary policy framework uses the BOU interest rate (called the CBR) as a signaling device of the monetary policy stance to meet the inflation target. The CBR guides the seven-day interbank money market rate, which is the operational target of monetary policy. The seven-day interbank money market rate can fluctuate within a band of ±2 percentage points around the CBR without the BOU intervention. The CBR as of December 31, 2021, was 6.5%. The rediscount rate is set as the CBR plus a margin of 3 percentage points, and the Bank Rate (the rate at which commercial banks borrow from the BOU through the Lombard window) at a margin of 4 percentage points on the CBR.

Other
- Accountability
  Yes.
  - Open letter
    No.
  - Parliamentary hearings

    - Publication of votes
      No. No information on votes of individual members or total number of votes in favor or against the decision is published.
    - Publication of minutes
      No. The minutes of the meetings of the MPC are not published.
    - Publication of inflation forecasts
      Yes. Every two months, inflation forecasts are published in the MPC Statement and Reports that follow the MPC meetings.

Exchange tax
- No.

Exchange subsidy
- No.

Foreign exchange market
Yes. Commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus are free to set exchange rates and commissions in transactions with their clients.

Spot exchange market
Yes. The BOU is authorized to grant licenses to deal in foreign exchange. ADs include commercial banks and foreign exchange bureaus. ADs may freely determine their bid-ask spreads and foreign exchange commissions in transactions in the retail market with their clients. However, ADs that participate in the wholesale market (IFEM) must maintain a 10 shilling spread on the bid-ask quotes they post on the Reuters Dealing System. Foreign exchange bureaus may operate if they are licensed by the BOU and adhere to the Foreign Exchange Act (FEA) and regulations. There were 219 authorized foreign exchange bureaus as of December 31, 2021, and 236 as of June 30, 2022, which engaged in transactions with commercial banks and the public, but not with the BOU. There are no restrictions on foreign exchange bureaus’ accounts abroad, although their operations are limited to spot transactions and OTC purchases and sales of foreign currency. There are special licenses permitting foreign exchange bureaus to transfer or receive funds to or from abroad on behalf of their clients, which they must perform through international money transfer agencies or domestic banks, with which they must maintain an account for clients’ funds. As of December 31, 2021, there were 89 money remitters (92 as of June 30, 2022).

The BOU occasionally intervenes in the interbank foreign exchange rate market to stem volatility. It also conducts opportunistic purchases of US dollars to build up reserves. These interventions take place through auctions conducted using the Reuters Dealing System. Participation in the IFEM is restricted to Tier 1 financial institutions. The BOU Act 2000, Section 19, authorizes the auctioning of foreign currency and states that “the bank may buy and sell foreign currency at rates determined by market conditions and on terms that may be determined by the Board.” Since August 2010, the BOU has been conducting opportunistic purchases for reserve building through auctions on a daily basis depending on the prevailing IFEM conditions, as ensuring smooth and stable exchange rate movements takes precedence over reserve buildup. Interventions in the IFEM are only conducted when the market experiences high volatility of the shilling. Intervention amounts are not announced in advance. In conducting intervention, the banks that are hit on the Reuters Dealing System by the CB at their quoted rate are obligated to execute a transaction for a minimum of, effective September 12, 2022, US$500,000 (previously US$250,000). Participants are not required to use the acquired foreign currency for any specific purpose. Commercial banks that are members of the IFEM may participate. The intervention amounts are announced with a lag in the CB’s Monetary Policy, State of the Economy, and Annual reports.

BOU ended the COVID-19 market-wide restriction on payment of dividends and other discretionary payments by supervised financial institutions (SFIs), effective May 31, 2022. The policy which was introduced in April 2020 achieved its objectives. It enabled SFIs to grow their capital buffers to a level that is more than double the minimum requirements. The restriction affected a considerable number of banks with nonresident shareholders. The payment of dividends remains subject to BOU approval, and every SFI that applies must comply with: (1) requirements of the Financial Institutions Act 2004 and Microfinance Deposit-Taking Institutions (MDI) Act 2003; (2) Basel II capital requirements demonstrate that it has adequate capital buffers to absorb potential shocks by submitting a satisfactory forward looking Internal Capital Adequacy Assessment Program (ICAAP) assessment report that takes into account ability to withstand a range of macroeconomic risks; and (3) Financial Institutions (Capital Buffers and Leverage Ratio) Regulations, 2020. BOU’s approval will also take into consideration the prevailing macroeconomic conditions and outlook.

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices

Yes.

The IMF staff report for the First Review under the Stand-By Arrangement, Requests for Extension and Rephasing of Access of the Arrangement, Waivers of Nonobservance of a Performance Criterion, Financing Assurances Review, and Monetary Policy Consultation with Ukraine states that, as of November 8, 2021, Ukraine continues to maintain one exchange restriction and two MCPs, but a roadmap is in place to gradually phase them out. The exchange restriction arises from limits on the availability of foreign exchange for certain non-trade current international transactions (the limit on individuals’ and corporates’ investments abroad may capture some current transactions). The MCPs arise from: (1) the use of multiple price foreign exchange auctions conducted by the National Bank of Ukraine (NBU) without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the auction and market exchange rates and (2) the use of the official exchange rate for exchange transactions with the government without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the official exchange rate and market exchange rates. (Country Report No. 21/250)

Restrictions established by the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine in accordance with UNSC resolutions remain in place for certain transactions with the Democratic Republic of the Congo, the Democratic Republic of Somalia, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, Guinea-Bissau, Lebanon, and South Sudan.

Effective February 1, 2021, restrictions also apply to certain transactions with Nicaragua and, effective February 19, 2021, with Mali and Yemen. New restrictions on Yemen were imposed on October 28, 2021. Restrictions with respect to the Libyan Arab Jamahiriya, the Taliban, and Al-Qaida remain in place. The sanctions against Iran have not been repealed, but the mechanism for their introduction has been changed. Resolution No. 1092 of the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine of September 5, 2007, on Implementation of UNSC Resolutions Concerning the Islamic Republic of Iran was in effect until November 18, 2016 (became inoperative by virtue of Resolution of the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine No. 786, dated...
Sanctions are now introduced by a decision of the Ukraine National Security and Defense Council, and in particular with respect to Iran: Ukraine National Security and Defense Council Decisions of May 20, 2016, on Implementation of UNSC Resolution No. 2231 of July 20, 2015, Concerning the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action with Respect to Sectoral Sanctions (introduced by Decree No. 254/2016 of the President of Ukraine of June 15, 2016, and approved by Ukraine Supreme Council Resolution No. 1471-VIII of July 14, 2016), and on Implementation of UNSC Resolution No. 2231 of July 20, 2015, Concerning the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action with Respect to Personal Sanctions (introduced by Decree No. 254/2016 of the President of Ukraine of June 15, 2016).

In its Directive No. 360-r, dated April 29, 2016, the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine proposed imposing personal sanctions on certain individuals and legal entities of Iran, including the freezing of assets (suspension of debit transactions in accounts) that are owned by or under the control of such individuals or legal entities, up to October 18, 2023. In accordance with a decision of the National Security and Defense Council of Ukraine dated May 20, 2016, “Concerning Implementation of UNSC Resolution No. 2231, dated July 20, 2015, Regarding the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action on Personal Sanctions” (introduced by Order of the President of Ukraine No. 254/2016, dated June 15, 2016), personal sanctions against these individuals and legal entities of Iran were imposed up to October 18, 2018.

Exchange Arrangement

Currency

Yes. The currency of Ukraine is the Ukrainian hryvnia (UAH).

Other legal tender

No.

Exchange rate structure

- Unitary
- Dual
- Multiple: Yes. The exchange rate structure is classified as multiple because of MCPs, which arise from (1) the use of multiple price foreign exchange auctions conducted by the NBU without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the auction and market exchange rates and (2) the use of the official exchange rate for exchange transactions with the government without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the official exchange rate and market exchange rates.

Classification

- No separate legal tender
- Currency board
- Conventional peg
The de jure exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating. The NBU may use foreign currency interventions for the purpose of accumulating international reserves, smoothing out the functioning of the foreign exchange market, and maintaining the transmission of the key interest rate as the main monetary policy instrument. The NBU publishes data on FX interventions for the current week on its website every Friday in the end of the day. Namely, weekly amounts of purchases and sales by types of interventions are published.

The official exchange rate of the hryvnia against foreign currencies and SDR shall be set and official prices for investment metals shall be calculated in accordance with the Regulation On Setting the Official Hryvnia Exchange Rate against Foreign Currencies and Calculating the Reference Exchange Rate of the Hryvnia against the U.S. Dollar and Official Prices for Investment Metals approved by NBU Board Resolution No. 148 dated 10 December 2019 (as amended), using the official hryvnia to U.S. dollar exchange rate.

In 2021 the NBU FX interventions balance was positive and amounted to 2,4 billion USD. Since January until the beginning of November 2021 hryvnia had strengthened by 8% against the US dollar after which devaluation trend began against the intensifying tension in the information space related to the threat of the Russian invasion of Ukraine. As of August 05, 2022, the NBU net FX intervention balance for 2022 was -12,5 bn USD, and hryvnia has depreciated against the US dollar by 34,1% in 2022.

On February 24, 2022, the NBU suspended the floating exchange rate regime after the start of the full-scale Russian invasion of Ukraine and fixed the hryvnia exchange rate against the US dollar at the level of 29.2549 hryvnia per US dollar. This measure helped to preserve macroeconomic stability, ensure stable functioning of the financial system, curb the panic and prevent inflationary processes from uncontrolled spreading due to rapid FX depreciation.

Amid high uncertainty caused by the war, the fixed exchange rate acts as the main anchor for stabilizing expectations and the key tool for achieving the NBU’s goals. These goals are maintaining price and financial stability, which are main prerequisites for economic recovery. In Monetary Policy Guidelines for the Duration of Martial Law the NBU has committed to go back to the floating exchange rate regime as the FX market regains its ability to self-balance and the Ukrainian economy and financial system return to their normal mode of operation.

Five months of war brought significant changes both to the Ukrainian and global economies. Moreover, the introduction of administrative FX restrictions and capital controls caused an increase of the difference between fixed official FX rate and the FX rate on the cash segment of the market, which is determined by supply and demand.
The National Bank will strive to restore the full functioning of the foreign exchange market as soon as possible and return to the floating exchange rate, if this does not create threats to the stable functioning of the banking and/or financial system of the state.

While the exchange rate has stabilized from February 2022, at least six months from the observed start date of a change in the exchange rate arrangement to the cutoff date of the assessment period for the 2022 AREAER (April 30, 2022) are necessary for a reclassification. Until then, the de facto exchange rate arrangement remains classified as floating.

Official exchange rate

Yes.

In the period of martial law, the reduced effectiveness of market instruments and high uncertainty in the conditions of the full-scale war make it impossible to implement monetary policy in the format of inflation targeting with a floating exchange rate. Effective February 24, 2022, the hryvnia exchange rate against the US dollar had been fixed at the level of 29.2549 hryvnia per US dollar.

Effective July 21, 2022, the NBU set and fixed the hryvnia exchange rate against the US dollar at the level of 36.5686 hryvnia per the US dollar. The official exchange rate of the hryvnia against foreign currencies and SDR shall be set and official prices for investment metals shall be calculated in accordance with the Regulation On Setting the Official Hryvnia Exchange Rate against Foreign Currencies and Calculating the Reference Exchange Rate of the Hryvnia against the U.S. Dollar and Official Prices for Investment Metals approved by NBU Board Resolution No. 148 dated 10 December 2019 (as amended), using the official hryvnia to U.S. dollar exchange rate.

Prior to that the exchange rates were calculated as follows.

Effective January 4, 2022, the calculation of the official UAH/USD exchange rate takes into account the information on all “tod”, “tom”, and "spot" deals on the purchase/sale of U.S. dollars in a volume from USD 100,000 through USD 5 million that were conducted on the foreign exchange market of Ukraine by banks with other banks and with the NBU on the day of calculating the official exchange rate, and which were reported to the NBU via the Bloomberg trading and information system through relevant information exchange channels by 3:00 p.m.

The information on the official hryvnia exchange rate against foreign currencies and the calculated accounting prices for investment metals are published on the NBU’s official website not later than at 3:30 p.m. on the day of setting/calculation and is sent to subscribers of the NBU’s email system.

The calculation methodology provides for a three-stage cut-off system for transactions with extreme parameters.

Previously, the official hryvnia exchange rate against the US dollar was calculated based on information about all transactions involving the purchase and sale of US dollars on “tod,” “tom,” and “spot” terms, which on the day of calculation of the official exchange rate took place in the interbank currency market of Ukraine between banks and between banks and the NBU, and information whereof was provided by the NBU trading information systems until 3:30 p.m. of the current business day.
The method of calculation provided a two-stage system for cutting off transactions with extreme parameters. The method had been in place since August 1, 2018, at the NBU.

Beginning December 27, 2019, based on NBU Resolution No. 148 of December 10, 2019, the official exchange rate of the hryvnia to other foreign currencies and the official price of bank metals have been calculated based on the official hryvnia–US dollar exchange rate and Bloomberg fixing (BFIX) quotes for the respective foreign currencies and bank metals, according to data from the Bloomberg trading and information system.

The official exchange rate of hryvnias against foreign currencies and bank metals is used by residents and nonresidents for recording transactions with foreign currencies and bank metals in their accounting records, in other cases as determined by the legislation of Ukraine, and for currency operations of the NBU with the State Treasury Service of Ukraine.

Since August 2015, the NBU has conducted its monetary policy based on the inflation-targeting framework. All of the strategic monetary policy documents confirm a consistent commitment to the inflation-targeting regime and a constant inflation target of 5% ±1 percentage point and the principles of monetary policy.

In September 2021, NBU Council approved Monetary Policy Guidelines for 2022 and Medium Term. This document reiterated goals, principles, and monetary policy instruments that are inherent in the inflation targeting regime.

However, high uncertainty and lower effectiveness of market-based monetary instruments caused by the full-scale Russian invasion made the usual inflation targeting format of monetary policy ineffective. To maintain macroeconomic stability in Ukraine, prevent the panic and the inflationary spiral development, the NBU was forced to temporarily suspend inflation targeting framework, fix the USD/UAH exchange rate and impose a number of administrative foreign exchange restrictions and capital controls.

Amid high uncertainty caused by the war, the fixed exchange rate acts as the main anchor for stabilizing expectations and the key tool for achieving the NBU’s goals. These goals are maintaining price and financial stability, which are main prerequisites for economic recovery. The NBU has committed to go back to the floating exchange rate regime as the FX market regains its ability to self-balance and the Ukrainian economy and financial system return to their normal mode of operation.
Those changes to the monetary policy principles were envisaged in the Monetary Policy Guidelines for the Duration of Martial Law. Effective April 15, 2022, the NBU Council adopted its Monetary Policy Guidelines for the Duration of Martial Law, which will apply until the economy and financial system are back to normal. At the same time, this document formalized the NBU’s commitment to the traditional inflation targeting format and its obligation to gradually return to principles and tools of this monetary regime as the economy gets back to normal.

Target horizon

- Yes.

High uncertainty and lower effectiveness of market-based monetary instruments caused by war conditions made the usual inflation targeting format of monetary policy ineffective. In such circumstances, the NBU temporarily cannot make a commitment to meet its inflation target over a specific period of time.

At the same time, Monetary Policy Guidelines for the Duration of...
Martial Law (adopted by the NBU Council on 15 April 2022) formalized the NBU’s commitment to the traditional inflation targeting format and its obligation to gradually return to principles and tools of this monetary regime as the economy gets back to normal. The normalization of the monetary policy means that the NBU would be ready to change the key policy rate as was in pre-war times to meet its inflation target over a policy horizon of 9–18 months.

Under war conditions, exchange rate became a nominal anchor for expectations acts as main instrument for curbing inflationary pressures and ensuring the macro-financial stability in Ukraine. Fixed exchange rate is supported by NBU’s interventions, so de-facto FX interventions temporarily act as the main monetary policy instrument.

In turn, key policy rate nowadays acts as an additional instrument of the NBU’s monetary policy – mainly to maintain FX stability and prevent inflation expectations' deterioration. This is why the NBU returned to active monetary policy in June due to the gradual adaptation of Ukraine’s economy and the psychological shock giving way to the economic decision-making logics of businesses and households. On June 2, 2022, the NBU decided to raise the key policy rate by 15 pp, to 25%.

The NBU will return to the usual principles of inflation targeting with a floating exchange rate and key policy rate as the main monetary policy instrument as the Ukrainian economy and financial system return to their normal mode of operation. This commitment is formalized in the Monetary Policy Guidelines for the Duration of Martial Law (adopted by the NBU Council on April 15, 2022).

As an accountability mechanism, the NBU uses mainly enhanced communication channels with the public (primarily through regular press briefings following NBU Board meetings on monetary policy issues, as well as the quarterly inflation report).

Policy rate

Yes. Market-based monetary instruments, in particular the key policy rate, has lost their significant influence on the money and FX markets functioning in the first months of the war due to high uncertainty and psychological pressure, so the NBU postponed its key policy rate decisions in March and April 2022.

Under war conditions, exchange rate became a nominal anchor for expectations acts as main instrument for curbing inflationary pressures and ensuring the macro-financial stability in Ukraine. The NBU also publishes Annual report, Management report, Consolidated financial statements).

According to Article 51 of the Law of Ukraine on the National Bank of Ukraine, the NBU is accountable to the Parliament (Verkhovna Rada of Ukraine) and President of Ukraine. Meanwhile, the NBU Board is accountable to the NBU Council, which monitors the Board’s conduct of monetary policy (that is, compatibility with the Monetary Policy Guidelines, adopted by the NBU Council).

Every year before May 1, the NBU Governor presents to the Verkhovna Rada of Ukraine a report about the NBU’s activities. An annual report on the monetary policy implementation for the previous year is submitted to the President of Ukraine and the Verkhovna Rada of Ukraine. The NBU on a quarterly basis also provides to the President of Ukraine and the relevant Committee of the Verkhovna Rada of Ukraine, the competence of which includes the issues related to banking, information on noncash money creation in the relevant period (namely for the bank refinancing purposes, for the interventions in the inter-bank foreign exchange market, for the stock market operations). On demand of the Government (the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine), the NBU provides information on its noncash emissions and on monetary developments and money market.

The legislation does not provide for other specific forms of reporting by the NBU on monetary policy and inflation outcomes.

According to Article 52 of the Law of Ukraine on the National Bank of Ukraine, the NBU and the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine may hold consultations on monetary policy and state economic policy, in particular on the forecast of key macroeconomic indicators, including monetary indicators and exchange rate policy indicators. At the same time, according to Article 53 of the NBU Law, any interference of the public authorities, other public institutions or their officials, any legal entities or individuals in the exercise of functions and powers of the NBU, NBU Council, NBU Board, or NBU employees shall be prohibited, except for within the limits stipulated by the Constitution of Ukraine and the NBU Law.

In February 2018, the NBU began to publish on a regular basis the Summary of Key Policy Rate Discussion by NBU Monetary Policy Committee. The MPC serves as a discussion platform and includes all members of the NBU Board and directors of the NBU departments involved in monetary policy decision making. Publication of the discussion results helps market participants anticipate further changes in the NBU’s monetary policy and, as a result, increases the efficiency of the interest rate channel of the transmission mechanism and allows more effective management of inflation expectations by the NBU. Without identifying individual members, this document details the views of all MPC members on necessary monetary policy decisions with relevant arguments from the majority as well as alternative views. The NBU continues to follow this practice under martial law.

Publication of inflation forecasts

- Yes.

The inflation report, with an inflation forecast, is published quarterly. Since July 2019, the NBU has been publishing a key policy rate forecast as a part of the quarterly revisions of the macroeconomic forecast. Publication of the key policy rate forecast increases the transparency and predictability of monetary policy. The NBU updates the key policy rate forecast along with other indicators on a quarterly basis and publishes it in the inflation report.
In April 2022 amid elevated uncertainty after the full-scale Russian invasion, the NBU temporarily postponed the publication of the Inflation report with a macroeconomic forecast.

In July 2022, the NBU resumed its forecast cycle and published the Inflation Report due to the gradual adaptation of Ukraine’s economy to the war and the NBU’s return to active monetary policy in June.

At the same time, banks may conclude deals at any time, regardless of the time set for the transaction confirmation system.

Banks confirm transactions with the NBU involving the purchase/sale of foreign currency through the transaction confirmation system if the NBU uses this system for the confirmation of transactions.

The transaction confirmation system operates on business days (Monday through Friday) from 9:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. Kyiv time.

Banks may engage in trading in foreign currency/bank metals regardless of the operating hours of the transaction confirmation system.

Beginning February 24, 2022, banks are prohibited from conducting transactions involving trade in foreign currency (including for clients), excepting certain transactions, a list of which has been established by Resolution No. 18 (the list is not exhaustive and is reviewed based on the current situation on the exchange market and the state’s needs during a state of martial law). Because of Russia’s military aggression against Ukraine, all exchange transactions are being conducted in consideration of the limitations established in NBU Resolution No. 18, dated February 24, 2022.
The NBU suspended the floating exchange rate regime following the start of the Russian invasion. Effective February 24, 2022, the hryvnia has been pegged to the US dollar as at UAH 29.2549 to the US dollar.

Effective July 21, 2022, the NBU set and fixed the exchange rate of the hryvnia to the US$ at 36.5686 hryvnias to the US dollar.

In addition, effective February 24, 2022, the NBU set exchange-rate rules for transactions involving the purchase and sale of cash and noncash currency and for transactions made with electronic means of payment.

The NBU has made changes to the procedures under which nonbank financial institutions and postal service operators are issued licenses to perform exchange transactions. The NBU has established a procedure for banking system operations during the period of martial law for the purpose of ensuring reliability and stability in banking system functions, effective February 24, 2022.

The NBU has established regulation for the purpose of determining aspects of the functioning of the money and exchange markets during the period of martial law, assisting in increasing the volumes of transactions with sovereign bonds of Ukraine.

Currency exchange transactions include:

1. The purchase of foreign currency cash from (resident and nonresident) individuals for cash hryvnias or noncash hryvnias with subsequent posting to these individuals’ own current accounts;

2. The sale of foreign currency cash to (resident and nonresident) individuals for cash hryvnias or noncash hryvnias from these individuals’ own current accounts;

3. The exchange of foreign currency cash of one country for foreign currency cash of another country for (resident and nonresident) individuals.

These transactions may be performed by banks, nonbank financial institutions, postal service providers, and currency exchange offices of banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service providers.

Banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service providers may change the purchase and sale exchange rates for currency exchange transactions during the course of a business day.

Nonbank financial institutions and their stand-alone divisions and currency exchange offices of banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service providers may begin operations following registration of an electronic cash register with the tax authorities.

As of December 31, 2021, a total of 29 nonbank financial organizations and the national postal service, Ukrpochta, may perform currency exchange operations (in their local branches, offices, and exchange points) and a total of 76 banks were entitled to conduct foreign currency exchange operations.

Effective February 24, 2022, banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service providers are permitted to perform only transactions that involve the purchase of foreign currency from clients (the sale of foreign currency in cash to clients is prohibited). Banks are prohibited from conducting transfers of individuals on current non-commercial transactions, other than the cases defined in Resolution No. 18 (this list is not exhaustive and is revised based on the current situation on the exchange market and the government’s requirements under martial law conditions).

Effective April 24, 2022, banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service providers are also permitted to perform transactions involving the sale of foreign currency in cash to individual clients. Transactions involving the sale of foreign currency in cash must be performed within the limits of an amount that exceeds the total amount of the purchase over its sale price. The excess amount must be calculated beginning April 13, 2022, and for the following transaction/working days.

Effective July 27, 2022, the sale of foreign currency in cash to clients must be conducted within the limits of an amount defined as the sum of two components: the amount by which a purchase of foreign currency in cash exceeds the amount of its sale for all foreign currencies, calculated beginning April 13, 2022, and the subsequent transaction/working days, and 50% of the amount of a purchase of non-cash foreign currency from individuals for all currencies, calculated beginning April 13, 2022, and the subsequent transaction/working days. The total of these components is calculated in dollar equivalent. To convert it one uses the official exchange rate of the hryvnia to the foreign currency, as set by the NBU as of the date of this calculation.

Effective February 24, 2022, with the imposition of martial law, the NBU temporarily changed its approach to foreign exchange interventions which are no longer conducted under the Foreign Exchange Intervention Strategy of the NBU (approved by the NBU Board decision dated December 29, 2020 No. 769-pu) but according to the following procedure. Since the beginning of the full-scale war of Russia against Ukraine the NBU enters daily into U.S. and, until effective May 10, 2022, Euro sale and purchase transactions with banks and IFIs. Such transactions are effected without limiting the amount on TOD terms (from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.) and TOM terms (starting from 3 p.m.) through the functionalities of Refinitive and Bloomberg or (if Refinitive and Bloomberg are unavailable) by phone against prepayment by the bank. To perform the transactions the amount of U.S. dollars to be sold or purchased need to be no less than USD 100,000. Exchange rate for: 1) purchases by the NBU from banks/IFIs of the U.S. dollars is set at the level of the official exchange rate of hryvnia to the U.S. dollar effective as of the day of the transaction; 2) sales by the NBU to banks/IFIs of the U.S. dollars is set at the level of the official exchange rate of hryvnia to U.S. dollar effective as of the day of the transaction increased by 1% and rounded to four decimal places. Banks will be permitted to conduct foreign exchange transactions with the NBU provided that they have complied with the net long open foreign exchange position for the preceding 10 days.

Previously, as per Foreign Exchange Intervention Strategy of the NBU (approved by the NBU Board decision dated December 29, 2020 No. 769-pu) the NBU conducted four types of foreign exchange interventions: (1) foreign exchange auctions; (2) single-rate intervention; (3) best rate intervention; and (4) targeted intervention.

According to the Basic principles of monetary policy during martial law the NBU will strive to restore the full operation of the foreign exchange market as soon as possible and return to the floating exchange rate regime, if this does not create threats to the stable functioning of the banking and/or financial system of the state. As soon as administrative restrictions are lifted and operations on the foreign exchange market revive, the National Bank will return to foreign exchange interventions taking into account the tasks and principles established in the Foreign Exchange Interventions Strategy of the National Bank of Ukraine.

Currently the NBU, de facto, is only performing foreign exchange interventions at a single exchange rate (sale at official exchange rate plus 1% and purchase at official exchange rate), and the sales for household deposits at the official exchange rate. But de jure, the NBU may conduct any form of interventions from their usual toolkit.

The NBU may organize currency interventions on “tod,” “tom,” and “spot” terms. The NBU may perform currency interventions on “swap” terms only at a single exchange rate.

Intervention at a single exchange rate takes place either (1) by collecting bids from market participants for the purchase/sale/exchange of foreign currency at a single exchange rate and their proportional fulfillment within the limits of the volume determined for currency intervention or (2) by placing an offer to buy/sell foreign currency at a single exchange rate in the trading information system (Bloomberg or Refinitiv) and accepting offers from market participants before the supply is exhausted.

The NBU informs banks that a foreign currency auction is to be held by posting the information on the official website of the NBU, as well as by means of the trading information system, if the auction is held using this system. Conditions are specified by the NBU in the notification.

The NBU informs banks participating in an auction of the cut-off exchange rate and the weighted-average exchange rate for the auction by posting the information on the official website of the NBU, as well as by means of the trading information system, if the auction is held using this system.

An intervention using the best exchange rate is carried out either (1) by asking market participants for the price of purchase/sale of foreign currency through the trading information system and the transaction at the best offered price or (2) by choosing the best price for the purchase/sale of foreign currency from the quotes of market entities available in the trading information system and conducting a transaction with a market entity that offers this price.

The list of banks entitled to participate in an intervention at the best exchange rate, which is carried out by requesting the banks’ prices for the purchase/sale of foreign currency, includes 20 banks selected on the basis of a set of criteria such as the volume of interbank transactions, the volume of transactions with customers, and the size of bank assets. This list of banks was first published on October 31, 2016, and it is updated every quarter.

To prevent the spread of systemic risks resulting from market participants’ foreign currency derivatives contracts, the NBU may adopt a decision regarding the date on which banks must create and hold reserves for forward transactions. Reserves must be held by banks in hryvnias in a correspondent account at the NBU in addition to their required reserves.

The requirements of this provision do not extend to foreign currency forwards that are the second leg of foreign currency swaps.

If the delivery time for goods and services exceeds 365 calendar days (the cutoff point for settlements on transactions involving exports and import of goods), it may be extended with approval of the central executive government body implementing economic development policy.

Effective February 24, 2022, the standards of Regulation No. 18 have established a ban on the transborder transfer of cash funds from Ukraine and on the transfer of cash funds to correspondent accounts of nonresident banks in hryvnias or foreign currency, opened in resident banks (including transfers that authorized institutions carry out on instructions from their clients), other than standalone transactions. This ban on transferring cash funds outside Ukraine extends, among others, to resident transactions:

- involving the repayment of credit/loans received from nonresidents (other than loan repayments by borrower banks in observance of time limits set in credit agreements for such payments);

- involving credit/loans provided to nonresidents (separate requirements are established for banks).

Banks are prohibited from performing money transfers from Ukraine for purposes of providing credit to nonresidents (with the exception of credit extended to foreign financial institutions).

The ban on transferring funds from Ukraine does not extend to individual cases, including transactions entailing the fulfillment of a resident’s obligations:

- that are guaranteed by the State of Ukraine;

- the creditors of which obligations are IFIs of which Ukraine is a member, or IFIs, under agreements with which Ukraine has committed to ensure a legal regime that is provided to other international organizations (hereinafter—IMF);

- banks’ own transactions, including repayment of credit they had attracted from nonresidents (but not earlier than the timeframes set by the terms of the credit agreement). Creditor banks are permitted to separately transfer funds for banks to provide credit in foreign currency to foreign financial institutions.

As of April 14, 2022, borrower banks have been prohibited from reducing the time limits for their fulfillment of debt obligations on credit and loans they had attracted under agreements with nonresidents (Resolution No. 18).
As of February 24, 2022, Resolution No. 18, dated February 24, 2022, has prohibited banks from performing transactions involving trade in foreign currency (including for clients), with the exception of specially defined transactions. In particular, it is permitted to purchase foreign currency to conduct permitted transborder money transfers from Ukraine/money transfers to correspondent accounts of nonresident banks in hryvnias/foreign currency, which accounts are held in resident banks.

Additionally, banks may sell foreign currency to clients, using their own foreign exchange position, in order for borrower clients to meet their own obligations to credit banks under loan agreements.

Effective May 21, 2022, banks are prohibited from:

- restructuring debt under credit agreements in a foreign currency, if such agreements were entered into by creditor banks with client borrowers (other than interbank loans) by replacing the currency used to fulfill the obligation under such a foreign currency bank loan with hryvnias (with the exception of isolated cases involving restructuring under consumer credit agreements as stipulated in Section IV, Item 7 of the Law of Ukraine “On Consumer Lending”;

- granting credit in hryvnias, to be used for a borrower client to pay off a bank loan in foreign currency.

In addition, as of April 5, 2022, under martial law the standards of Resolution No. 18, dated February 24, 2022, have reduced the time limits for settlements on transactions involving export/import of goods that are conducted beginning April 5, 2022:

a 90-day deadline was set for such transactions for the period from April 5, 2022, through June 7, 2022:

as of June 8, 2022, the deadline for the relevant transactions was increased to 120 calendar days:

as of July 9, 2022, the deadline for the relevant transactions was increased to 180 calendar days.

For export-import transactions of goods that were performed before April 5, 2022, the deadline for settlements was not revised and comprises 365 calendar days.

Nonresidents (legal entities and individuals) may open current accounts in hryvnias and in foreign currency in banks located within Ukraine to carry out settlements and payments with residents and other nonresidents.

The standards of Regulation No. 18, dated February 24, 2022, prohibiting transfers from Ukraine, does not extend to transfers of funds within the territory of Ukraine that are carried out between accounts of residents and nonresidents that were opened in Ukrainian banks, for exchange transactions that are allowed under the rules for such accounts (account rules are established in Regulation No. 5, dated January 2, 2019).

The hryvnia is the sole legal tender in Ukraine, taking into account the special considerations established by the second part of Article 5 of the Law of Ukraine on Foreign Exchange and Foreign Exchange Operations (referred to hereinafter as the Law on Foreign Exchange).

Foreign exchange supervision in Ukraine is administered by foreign exchange supervisory bodies and foreign exchange supervisory agents.

According to the Law on Foreign Exchange, foreign exchange supervisory bodies are the NBU and the central executive branch authority responsible for the development and implementation of state tax policy.

Authorized institutions (banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service operators that have obtained a license in accordance with the Law on Foreign Exchange) are foreign exchange supervisory agents that are accountable to the NBU.

When foreign exchange transactions are performed, authorized institutions directly supervise compliance with the requirements of the foreign exchange legislation by residents (except for other authorized institutions) and nonresidents who are performing foreign exchange transactions through these authorized institutions.

Foreign exchange supervision is not performed with regard to transactions involving exports and imports in an amount that is below the threshold established for financial transactions (stipulated in Article 20 of the Law of Ukraine on Preventing and Combating Money Laundering, the Financing of Terrorism, and the Financing of Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction (No. 361-IX, dated December 6, 2019).

The procedure for the performance of foreign exchange supervision by foreign exchange supervisory agents is established by the NBU.
Foreign exchange supervisory agents may request documents related to the performance of foreign exchange transactions from participants in foreign exchange transactions, and participants must provide such documents at the request of foreign exchange supervisory agents within the specified deadlines.

In order for authorized institutions to prevent their customers from using these institutions to perform foreign exchange transactions that do not meet the requirements of Ukrainian law, an authorized institution is required to perform a comprehensive analysis and verification of documents (information) concerning foreign exchange transactions, if the presentation of the relevant documents (information) is provided for by Ukrainian law for certain transactions identified by the NBU.

In accordance with Ukrainian legislation pertaining to money laundering and combating the financing of terrorism, banks and nonbank institutions must report the following to the specially authorized agency:

Article 13 of the Law on Foreign Exchange states that in the event that the NBU establishes a deadline for the performance of settlements under transactions by residents involving exports of goods, funds must be credited to the residents’ accounts at Ukrainian banks within the deadlines specified in the contracts, but no later, and in the amount established by the NBU.
The NBU has established a deadline of 365 calendar days for settlements on transactions by residents involving exports of goods.

(2) exports of work, services (other than transportation and insurance services and work), and intellectual property rights (part 1, paragraph 5, of NBU Executive Board Resolution No. 67 of May 14, 2019).

Residents provide financial credits to nonresidents in foreign currency. Banks provide credits with no restrictions on the amount, while individuals, legal entities, and individuals involved in entrepreneurial activity may provide loans within established limits.

Thus, resident individuals may conduct foreign exchange operations involving (1) the transfer of funds outside Ukraine/to current accounts of nonresident legal entities in Ukraine (other than investment accounts)/under life insurance agreements/the performance of investments abroad/the placement of funds on their accounts abroad and (2) loans to nonresidents up to €200,000 in a calendar year (or the equivalent in another currency).

Legal entities and individual entrepreneurs may perform foreign exchange operations involving the transfer of funds outside Ukraine/to current accounts of nonresident legal entities in Ukraine (other than investment accounts) up to €2 million a year (or the equivalent in another currency).

Residents may not transfer funds for the purpose providing credits (loans, financial assistance) to nonresidents that are registered/are located/reside in states (jurisdictions) that are classified by the Ukrainian Cabinet of Ministers as offshore zones and/or recognized by the Supreme Council of Ukraine as aggressor states/occupying states, and/or that are not in compliance with or not in proper compliance with recommendations of international or intergovernmental organizations engaged in combating money laundering, the financing of terrorism, or the financing of proliferation of weapons of mass destruction (except in the case of banks or nonbank institutions that provide consumer credits in hryvnias to nonresident individuals).

Residents may not provide credits (loans, financial assistance) to nonresidents in hryvnias, with the exception of:

1. the granting of consumer credits to nonresident individuals by banks and nonbank financial institutions;

2. the granting of credits by banks to nonresidents for the purpose of the purchase by the nonresident of Ukrainian domestic government bonds, if the date for repayment to the bank of the given credit is more than 14 days from the date the credit is granted;

3. the granting of credits (loans, financial assistance) to the account of a representative office of a foreign investor under a production sharing agreement within the territory of Ukraine, which is done to meet the requirements of the production sharing agreement.

Effective February 24, 2022, the standards of Regulation No. 18 have... established a prohibition on transborder transfers from Ukraine/cash transfers to correspondent accounts of nonresident banks in UAH/foreign currency in resident banks (including transfers that authorized institutions perform on instructions from their clients), which extends, among others, to residents’ transactions involving provision of credit/loans to nonresidents (separate requirements are established for banks).

Banks are prohibited from transferring funds from Ukraine for purposes of providing credit to nonresidents (excepting credit to foreign financial institutions).

Residents may engage in borrowing from nonresidents both in foreign currency and in hryvnias. Banks through which resident borrowers perform operations under credit agreements (loan agreements) with nonresidents inform the NBU of the conclusion of such agreements by residents.

Resident borrowers have the right to purchase foreign currency and to transfer funds in foreign currency or hryvnias abroad or to accounts of nonresident creditors opened in Ukraine (other than investment accounts) for the purpose of the repayment of a credit (loan) and to make other payments provided for by a credit agreement (loan agreement) between a resident borrower and a nonresident. Such operations are performed on the basis of supporting documents, which are submitted to the bank.

Effective February 24, 2022, the standards of Regulation No. 18 have established a temporary prohibition on transborder money transfers from Ukraine/cash transfers to correspondent accounts of nonresident banks in UAH/foreign currency in resident banks (including transfers that authorized institutions perform on instructions from their clients), other than standalone transactions. This prohibition on the transfer of cash from Ukraine extends, among others, to residents’ transactions involving paying off credit/loans received from nonresidents (other than payoffs of loans by borrower banks in observance of the time limits established by lending agreements for such payments).

The temporary ban on funds transfers from Ukraine does not extend to individual cases, including transactions to fulfill resident obligations:
- that are guaranteed by the State of Ukraine;
- the creditors of which are IFIs of which Ukraine is a member, or IFIs under agreements with which Ukraine has obligated itself to ensure the legal regime that is granted to other international organizations;
- a bank’s own transactions, including to pay off credit they have raised from nonresidents (but no earlier than the time limits set by the terms of the credit agreement).

Effective April 14, 2022, borrower banks have been prohibited from reducing the time limits for their fulfillment of debt obligations on credit and loans they had attracted under agreements with nonresidents (Resolution No. 18).

The standards of Regulation No. 18 of February 24, 2022, which prohibit transfers from Ukraine, do not apply to funds transfers within Ukraine that are performed between accounts of residents and nonresidents in Ukrainian banks on foreign exchange transactions, permitted pursuant to the rules of such accounts (account rules are established in Regulation No. 5 of January 2, 2019). Thus, resident borrowers may transfer funds (in foreign currency/UAH) to pay off credit/loans, they received from nonresidents to current accounts of nonresidents in banks within Ukraine.

Such transactions of resident legal entities are performed within a limit of €2 million (or the equivalent in another foreign currency or hryvnias) a year. The limit on guarantee transactions and sureties is not applied if that limit does not extend to transactions involving the fulfillment of an underlying obligation secured by such a guarantee or suretyship.

In November 2019, the NBU adopted a decision on the introduction of nonzero risk weights when evaluating the credit risk of domestic government bonds in foreign currency (NBU Resolution No. 132 of November 7, 2019). In March 2020, the NBU deferred this increase in view of threats related to the spread of COVID-19 (NBU Board Resolution No. 25 of March 5, 2020).

Effective April 1, 2021, the NBU raised these risk weights from 0% to 20% for newly acquired domestic government bonds. At this time, the schedule for raising the risk rates is as follows: to 50% as of December 31, 2021, and to 100% as of June 30, 2022.

The Regulation on Transactions with Exchange Assets, approved by Resolution of the NBU Board No. 2 of January 2, 2019, defines a number of transactions for which settlements within Ukraine may be performed in foreign currency or in UAH. Among others, such permitted transactions include:

- transactions entailing the sale of sovereign bonds of Ukraine, denominated in foreign currency, to residents by firms that are nonbank financial institutions;
- transactions entailing the purchase by firms that are nonbank financial institutions from residents (banks, investment firms, and individuals) of sovereign bonds of Ukraine denominated in foreign currency (without the possibility for investment firms/nonbank financial institutions to purchase foreign currency for purposes of conducting settlements on such purchases from residents (other than banks).

In particular, domestic government debt securities denominated in foreign currencies with residual maturity over 30 days are eligible for HQLAs in all currencies; however, they are not eligible for HQLAs in foreign currencies. and the NBU regulations, to agree on the acquisition or increase of a significant participation in the bank. The NBU may prohibit the acquisition of, or increase in, material participation in a bank.

Following the NBU’s methodology, banks calculate limits for the overall long and short open foreign exchange positions, taking into account a bank’s reserves for its asset-related operations in foreign exchange and the sums of the delta equivalent of an exchange derivative built into a financial instrument with an indexed value, as well as an option contract.

Off-balance-sheet items are included in the calculation of the open foreign exchange positions. The limits of the total (short/long) open currency position are set as a percentage of the regulatory capital.

Pursuant to NBU Board Decision No. 1019-RS of December 28, 2019, the exchange position calculation also takes into account the sums of the delta equivalent of an exchange derivative built into a financial instrument with an indexed value. In addition, the requirements concerning financial instruments with indexed values were canceled.

As of September 6, 2021, the calculation of banks’ foreign exchange positions will include the sums of the delta equivalent of an option contract (with or without delivery of the underlying asset).

Effective December 1, 2021, the limit of the aggregate long open currency position of a bank (L13-1) may not exceed 15% (previously 10%) of the regulatory capital; the limit of the aggregate short open (L13-2) foreign exchange position may not exceed 15% (previously 10%) of its regulatory capital in accordance with NBU Board Decision No. 573 of November 16, 2021, which amended Decision 184-RS of March 29, 2018. A 100% of the reserves for asset-related banking operations in foreign currency are included in the calculation of the total (long/short) open foreign exchange position limits.

Effective May 4, 2022, the limit on a bank’s overall long currency position (L13-1) may not exceed 5% of its regulatory capital; the limit on a bank’s overall short open exchange position may not exceed 5% of its regulatory capital, pursuant to Resolution No. 18.

The purchase of property, securities, and corporate rights outside Ukraine is considered investment abroad and is performed within the limits established by the Regulation on Protection Measures and Determination of the Procedure for the Performance of Certain Operations in Foreign Currency, approved by NBU Executive Board Resolution No. 5 of January 2, 2019 (entered into force February 7, 2019, as amended).

Resident legal entities may purchase and transfer foreign currency for investments abroad through the acquisition of securities not exceeding a total of €2 million or the equivalent in another currency per calendar year.
Effective February 24, 2022, the standards of Regulation 18 of February 22, 2022, established a temporary prohibition on transborder transfers of funds from Ukraine on transferring funds to correspondent accounts of nonresident banks in UAH/foreign currency in resident banks (including transfers that authorized institutions perform on instructions from their clients), including transfers from Ukraine on investment transactions abroad.

(The conditions for allowing securities of foreign issuers to be traded within Ukraine are established by the National Commission on Securities and the Stock Market, Decision No. 34 of February 21, 2021).

There are no restrictions on investments using one’s one funds, but pursuant to Directive No. 850 of June 7, 2018, of the National Commission, which is responsible for government regulation of the financial services markets, there are mandatory criteria and requirements regarding an insurer’s capital adequacy, solvency, liquidity, profitability, asset quality, and operational risk. To meet solvency requirements, insurers are permitted to invest funds in stocks, bonds of Ukrainian issuers, local bonds, mortgage bonds, and government securities. To meet solvency requirements, an insurer may invest funds in bonds of IFIs, securities of foreign governments, securities of foreign issuers (stocks, bonds), provided securities of foreign issuers may be traded within Ukraine (the conditions for admitting securities of foreign issuers for trading within Ukraine are established by the National Commission for Securities and the Stock Market, Decision No. 34, dated February 21, 2021). Moreover, the credit rating of a foreign issuer’s bonds must be no lower than A3/A. No limit is established.

Insurers are also permitted to invest funds from insurance reserves in securities of issuers in foreign countries, corresponding to the established ratings (no lower than A3 or A), with the corresponding restrictions: for an insurer that has obtained a license to engage in life insurance, – not more than 20% of insurance reserves, and for an insurer offering types of insurance other than life insurance. – not more than 10% of insurance reserves.

It is also permitted to enter into reinsurance agreements with reinsurers in currency (that meet the established requirements). Moreover, claims against resident insurers are accepted as coverage for insurance reserves – not more than 10% of insurance reserves, and claims against nonresident insurers for an insurer that has obtained a license to engage in life insurance activities – not more than 40% of insurance reserves.

There are no restrictions on investment with one’s own funds but, pursuant to Directive of the National Committee for Financial Services No. 850, dated June 7, 2018, mandatory criteria and requirements for capital adequacy and solvency, liquidity, profitability, asset quality, and riskiness of the insurer’s activities.

To meet requirements concerning the solvency of insurers, it is permitted to invest funds in stocks and bonds of Ukrainian issuers, local loan bonds, mortgage bonds, and government securities. At the same time, the credit rating of a foreign bond issuer must be no lower than A3/A. Funds in current accounts and bank deposits are also allowed. No limits are established.

Insurers are also permitted to invest funds from insurance reserves in securities of Ukrainian issuers, with the following limitations:
- shares of Ukrainian issuers: no more than 10% of insurance reserves, with no more than 3% of insurance reserves in the shares of a single issuer;

- bonds of enterprises of Ukrainian issuers: for an insurer that has obtained a life insurance license: no more than 40% of insurance reserves, including no more than 10% of insurance reserves in the bonds of a single issuer and, for an insurer engaged in insurance other than life insurance –

- not more than 30% of insurance reserves, including no more than 10% of insurance reserves in bonds of a single issuer;

- local loan bonds: no more than 10% of insurance reserves;

- Ukrainian government bonds: no more than 95% of insurance reserves for an insurer that has obtained a license to engage in life insurance and, for an insurer practicing insurance other than life insurance, not more than 80% of insurance reserves;

- bank deposits: no more than 70% of insurance reserves;

- funds in current accounts: for an insurer who has a license to practice life insurance, not more than 20% of insurance reserves and, for an insurer practicing insurance other than life insurance, not more than 30% of insurance reserves;

In 2021, the NBU developed a draft regulation to replace Directive No. 850, which stipulates the need for exchange reconciliation of insurance reserves and the assets they cover, in light of the requirements of Directive ES—“Solvency I,” which preceded Directive 2009/138/ES. Nonetheless, Ukraine adopted the Law of Ukraine “On Insurance,” No. 1909-IX, dated November 18, 2021, which is to be put into effect January 1, 2024, and was developed in light of the requirements of Directive ES. The National bank will develop regulations in adopting this Law, including ones concerning requirements on investing insurer funds.

Requirements and restrictions have been established for the composition of acceptable insurer assets, with regard to shares and bonds of foreign issuers, bonds of IFIs, and securities of foreign states (Law of Ukraine on Financial Services and State Regulation of the Financial Services Market).

Directive of the National Commission for State Regulation in Financial Services Markets No. 850, dated June 7, 2018, establishes mandatory criteria and standards of capital adequacy and solvency, liquidity, profitability, and asset quality and risky activities in the operations of insurers, but does not contain requirements on exchange reconciliation as to asset composition and insurers’ obligations, but when placing insurance reserve funds the insurer must observe requirements as to quality, security, profitability, liquidity, and diversification of assets.

Along with this, the NBU developed a draft regulation to replace Directive No. 850, which stipulates the need for exchange reconciliation of insurance reserves and the assets they cover, taking into account the requirements of Directives 2009/138/ES. However, the adoption of these changes was suspended because of the introduction of martial law in Ukraine. Ukraine adopted the Law of Ukraine “On Insurance,” No. 1909-IX, dated November 18, 2021, which is to be effective January 1, 2024, and was developed in consideration of the requirements of Directive ES. The National Bank will develop regulations, including ones concerning requirements on investment of insurers’ funds.

The calculation of the official UAH/USD exchange rate takes into account the information on all “tod”, “tom”, and “spot” deals on the purchase/sale of U.S. dollars in a volume from USD 100,000 through USD 5 million that were conducted on the FX market of Ukraine by banks with other banks and with the NBU on the day of calculating the official exchange rate, and which were reported to the NBU via the Bloomberg trading and information system through relevant information exchange channels by 3:00 p.m.

The information on the official hryvnia exchange rate against foreign currencies and the calculated accounting prices for investment metals are published on the NBU’s official website not later than at 3:30 p.m. on the day of setting/calculation and is sent to subscribers of the National Bank of Ukraine’s (NBU) email system.
The calculation methodology provides for a three-stage cut-off system for transactions with extreme parameters.

Previously, the official hryvnia exchange rate against the US dollar was calculated based on information about all transactions involving the purchase and sale of US dollars on “tod,” “tom,” and “spot” terms, which on the day of calculation of the official exchange rate took place in the interbank currency market of Ukraine between banks and between banks and the NBU, and information whereof was provided by the NBU trading information systems until 3:30 p.m. of the current business day.

The method of calculation provided a two-stage system for cutting off transactions with extreme parameters. The method had been in place since August 1, 2018, at the NBU.

In the period of martial law, the reduced effectiveness of market instruments and high uncertainty in the conditions of the full-scale war make it impossible to implement monetary policy in the format of inflation targeting with a floating exchange rate. The hryvnia exchange rate against the US dollar was fixed at the level of 29.2549 hryvnia per US dollar. The official exchange rate of the hryvnia against foreign currencies and SDR shall be set and official prices for investment metals shall be calculated in accordance with the Regulation On Setting the Official Hryvnia Exchange Rate against Foreign Currencies and Calculating the Reference Exchange Rate of the Hryvnia against the U.S. Dollar and Official Prices for Investment Metals approved by NBU Board Resolution No. 148 dated 10 December 2019 (as amended), using the official hryvnia to US. dollar exchange rate.

The National Bank of Ukraine set and fixed the hryvnia exchange rate against the US dollar at the level of 36.5686 hryvnia per the US dollar.

Monetary policy framework

Inflation-targeting framework

04/15/2022 The NBU Council adopted its Monetary Policy Guidelines for the Duration of Martial Law, which will apply until the economy and financial system are back to normal.

Foreign exchange market

02/24/2022 The hryvnia has been pegged to the US dollar as at UAH 29.2549 to the US dollar.

02/24/2022 The National Bank of Ukraine (NBU) has made changes to the procedures under which nonbank financial institutions and postal service operators are issued licenses to perform exchange transactions. The NBU has established a procedure for banking system operations during the period of martial law for the purpose of ensuring reliability and stability in banking system functions.

02/24/2022 The National Bank of Ukraine has established regulation for the purpose of determining aspects of the functioning of the money and exchange markets during the period of martial law, assisting in increasing the volumes of transactions with sovereign bonds of Ukraine.

02/24/2022 The National Bank of Ukraine set exchange-rate rules for transactions involving the purchase and sale of cash and noncash currency and for transactions made with electronic means of payment.

07/21/2022 The National Bank of Ukraine has set and fixed the exchange rate of the hryvnia to the US$ at 36.5686 hryvnias to the US dollar.

Spot exchange market

02/24/2022 Banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service providers are permitted to perform only transactions that involve the purchase of foreign currency from clients (the sale of foreign currency in cash to clients is prohibited). Banks are prohibited from conducting transfers of individuals on current non-commercial transactions, other than the cases defined in Resolution No. 18 (this list is not exhaustive and is revised based on the current situation on the exchange market and the government’s requirements under martial law conditions).

Banks, nonbank financial institutions, and postal service providers are also permitted to perform transactions involving the sale of foreign currency in cash to individual clients. Transactions involving the sale of foreign currency in cash must be performed within the limits of an amount that exceeds the total amount of the purchase over its sale price. The excess amount must be calculated beginning April 13, 2022, and for the following transaction/working days.

The sale of foreign currency in cash to clients must be conducted within the limits of an amount defined as the sum of two components: the amount by which a purchase of foreign currency in cash exceeds the amount of its sale for all foreign currencies, calculated beginning April 13, 2022, and the subsequent transaction/working days, and 50% of the amount of a purchase of non-cash foreign currency from individuals for all currencies, calculated beginning April 13, 2022, and the subsequent transaction/working days. The total of these components is calculated in dollar equivalent. To convert it one uses the official exchange rate of the hryvnia to the foreign currency, as set by the National Bank of Ukraine as of the date of this calculation.

Operated by the central bank

With the imposition of martial law, the NBU temporarily changed its approach to foreign exchange interventions which are no longer conducted under the Foreign Exchange Intervention Strategy of the NBU (approved by the NBU Board decision dated December 29, 2020 No. 769-pu) but according to the following procedure. Since the beginning of the full-scale war of Russia against Ukraine the NBU enters daily into U.S. and Euro sale and purchase transactions with banks and IFIs. Such transactions are effected without limiting the amount on TOD terms (from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.) and TOM terms (starting from 3 p.m.) through the functionalities of Refinitive and Bloomberg or (if Refinitive and Bloomberg are unavailable) by phone against prepayment by the bank. To perform the transactions the amount of U.S. dollars to be sold or purchased need to be no less than USD 100,000. Exchange rate for: 1) purchases by the NBU from banks/IFIs of the U.S. dollars is set at the level of the official exchange rate of hryvnia to the U.S. dollar effective as of the day of the transaction; 2) sales by the NBU to banks/IFIs of the U.S. dollars is set at the level of the official exchange rate of hryvnia to U.S. dollar effective as of the day of the transaction increased by 1% and rounded to four decimal places. Banks will be permitted to conduct foreign exchange transactions with the NBU provided that they have complied with the net long open foreign exchange position for the preceding 10 days.

Previously, as per Foreign Exchange Intervention Strategy of the NBU (approved by the NBU Board decision dated December 29, 2020 No. 769-pu) the NBU conducted four types of foreign exchange interventions: (1) foreign exchange auctions; (2) single-rate intervention; (3) best rate intervention; and (4) targeted intervention. The National Bank of Ukraine stopped the daily purchase and sale of Euro with banks and IFIs and conduct operation solely in US dollars.

Interbank market

Banks are prohibited from performing transactions involving trade in foreign currency (including for clients), with the exception of certain transactions, a list of which is established in Resolution No. 18 (the list is not exhaustive and is revised based on the current situation on the exchange market and the government’s requirements in conditions of martial law).
Per Resolution No. 18, as of February 24, 2022, banks must perform transactions involving trade in foreign currency in accordance with the exchange-rate rules established by the NBU for exchange transactions (transactions involving the purchase and sale of cashless and cash foreign currency, for transactions with electronic means of payment).

Banks were prohibited from performing transactions involving trade in foreign currency (including for clients), with the exception of certain transactions, a list of which is established by Resolution No. 18 (the list is not exclusive and is reviewed based on the current situation on the exchange market and the government’s needs during martial law).

Swap transactions were permitted with resident clients, if the first part of the transaction provides for a purchase of foreign currency from a resident client.

Transactions involving the purchase of foreign currency by clients on “forward” terms under forward contracts are permitted that were signed before February 23, 2022 (inclusive).

Swap transactions with clients were permitted under a foreign currency exchange for the group 1 Classifier.

Effective June 1, 2021, pursuant to an amendment of the UAE Companies Law of January 2, 2021, and Cabinet Resolution of May 30, 2021, foreign nationals may own up to 100% of commercial companies within the country after the company obtains the approval of the Department of Economic Development to increase foreign ownership and the approval of the company’s general assembly to amend the articles of association and the approval of the Securities and Commodities Authority (SCA) on the assembly’s decision, subject to some restrictions in strategic impact industries.

Specifically, they may have majority ownership if their activity is in a sector set out in the positive list adopted in Cabinet Resolution No. 16/2020. For all other sectors, the requirement of a majority shareholding of more than 50% held by an UAE national still applies, with higher thresholds being applicable in certain sectors (for example, in banking, it is no less than 60% pursuant to Article 76 of the UAECB Law). The same provision applies to investment funds unless their Prospectus states otherwise. Previously, at least 51% of the equity of companies other than foreign company branches had to be held by Emirati citizens. Citizens of GCC countries could hold (1) up to 100% of the equity of companies in the industrial, agricultural, fisheries, and construction sectors as of November 2005 and (2) up to 100% of the equity of companies in the hotel industry. In free zones, foreign ownership is permitted up to 100%. There are no minimum holding requirements either.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents: Yes.

The issuance of capital market securities by nonresidents is allowed, provided the sellers/issuers comply with the listing requirements of the Emirates SCA pursuant to the SCA Board of Directors’ Decision No. (7/R) of 2002 concerning the Regulation for Listing of the Shares of Foreign Companies as amended. Pursuant to SCA Chairman of the Board Resolution No. (11/R.M) of 2016 on the Regulations for Issuing and Offering Shares of Public Joint-Stock Companies, among other requirements, shares issued for offer may not exceed 30% of the issuing company’s capital.

The following regulations apply to the issuance of Depository Receipts and their listing on a market: (1) Depository Receipts may not be issued through a public offering or listed on a market without the approval of the Authority in accordance with the provisions of these Regulations; (2) Depository Receipts issued outside the State may not be offered through public offering inside the UAE or listed on a market without the approval of the Authority in accordance with the provisions of these Regulations.

Nonresidents must have an account at the relevant Stock Market to purchase securities and a bank account to purchase units. Local established funds may promote units offshore if they have the required approvals in the foreign jurisdiction.

There are no limits on purchase by nonresidents except as approved by the Prospectus and as specified by the local promoter.

The issuance of shares of some mutual funds is permitted. A foreign fund may be promoted in the UAE after the fund is registered with the SCA. Funds that are registered for promotion must also select an SCA-approved local promoter to market the units. A foreign fund is allowed to promote its units to a qualified “non-natural person” investor as defined in SCA Board of Directors’ Chairman Decision No. (9/R.M) of 2016; the minimum is AED180,000.

It is permitted for residents to purchase from outside the UAE (reverse solicitation).

Locally established CIS and funds may have their units sold abroad as long as (1) they are done through the appropriate and approved channels (authorized to be sold by the foreign regulator in the foreign jurisdiction if this is required by the foreign jurisdictions regulations) and (2) the locally established investment fund is fully licensed by the SCA – locally established funds require an SCA-authorized Management Company to be established as well. A fund must first be authorized and approved in the UAE by the SCA before it may market and sell its units either in the UAE or abroad.

Effective June 1, 2021, pursuant to an amendment of the UAE Companies Law of January 2, 2021, and Cabinet Resolution of May 30, 2021, foreign nationals may own up to 100% of commercial companies within the country after the company obtains the approval of the Department of Economic Development to increase foreign ownership and the approval of the company’s general assembly to amend the articles of association and the approval of the SCA on the assembly’s decision, subject to some restrictions in strategic impact industries. Specifically, they may have majority ownership if their activity is in a sector set out in the positive list adopted in Cabinet Resolution No. 16/2020. For all other sectors, the requirement of a majority shareholding of more than 50% held by an UAE national still applies, with higher thresholds being applicable in certain sectors (for example, in banking, it is no less than 60% pursuant to Article 76 of the UAECB Law). Previously, at least 51% of the equity of companies other than foreign company branches had to be held by Emirati citizens. Citizens of GCC countries could hold (1) up to 100% of the equity of companies in the industrial, agricultural, fisheries, and construction sectors as of November 2005 and (2) up to 100% of the equity of companies in the hotel industry. The same provision applies to investment funds unless their Prospectus states otherwise. GCC citizens are treated as UAE nationals. In free zones, foreign ownership is permitted up to 100%.

Best, or “A2” by Moody’s. The limits apply to total invested assets. The limits on aggregate exposure differentiate between investment abroad and at home pursuant to Article 3 of the Financial Regulations for Insurance Companies.

In response to COVID-19, (1) as of March 30, 2020, for insurance brokerages, the amount of the letter of guarantee was reduced by AED 1 million, equivalent to 33% of the previous value of the letter of guarantee; (2) as of April 22, 2020, a modification of the Motor Vehicle Insurance Tariffs System until the end of the period of COVID-19 included discounts of 50% for motor insurance premiums for vehicles owned by workers in the frontlines and other categories.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition Yes. Insurance companies adhere to the IFRS regarding currency-matching. The Financial Regulations for Insurance and Takaful Companies in Section 1 (Regulations Pertinent to the Basis of Investing the Rights of the Policyholders), Article 1 (General Requirements for Investments) states that (1) for the purpose of matching assets and liabilities, the assets held by an insurance company to cover its technical provisions and all other long-term insurance liabilities must: (a) have characteristics of safety, yield, and marketability which are appropriate to the type of business carried on by the company and (b) be diversified and adequately spread. (2) The assets must be of a sufficient amount, and of an appropriate currency and maturity, to ensure that the cash inflows from those assets will meet the expected cash outflows from the company’s insurance liabilities as they become due. The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are free floating. The exchange rate of the pound sterling is determined on the basis of supply and demand in the foreign exchange market. The Bank of England (BOE) has a separate pool of foreign exchange reserves, which it uses at its discretion to intervene in support of its monetary policy objectives. A monthly press release issued by Her Majesty’s Treasury (HMT) reports HMT and BOE intervention.

The BOE calculates indicative exchange rates on a daily basis and publishes these on its website. These are not official rates. Exchange rates are determined as middle spot rates prevailing in the market at a given point in time. Separately, the BOE provides exchange rates to the IMF for SDR calculations and these rates are published daily by the IMF on their website.

The BOE’s monetary policy objective is to deliver price stability – low inflation – and, subject to that, to support the government’s economic objectives including those for growth and employment. Price stability is defined by the government’s inflation target of 2%. The remit recognizes the role of price stability in achieving economic stability more generally, and in providing the right conditions for sustainable growth in output and employment. The government’s inflation target is announced each year by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Annual Budget statement.

The inflation target of 2% is expressed in terms of an annual rate of inflation based on the CPI. The remit is not to achieve the lowest possible inflation rate. Inflation below the target of 2% is judged to be just as bad as inflation above the target. The inflation target is therefore symmetrical.

Core inflation

| Target horizon | Yes. |

A target of 2% does not mean that inflation will be held at this rate constantly. That would be neither possible nor desirable. Interest rates would be changing all the time, and by large amounts, causing unnecessary uncertainty and volatility in the economy. Even then, it would not be possible to keep inflation at 2% in each and every month. Instead, the MPC’s aim is to set interest rates so that inflation can be brought back to target within a reasonable time period without creating undue instability in the economy. The inflation target is forward-looking to ensure inflation expectations are firmly anchored in the medium term. The government believes that low and stable medium-term inflation is an essential prerequisite for economic prosperity.

Operating target (policy rate)

| Yes. |

The MPC currently influences monetary conditions in two main ways. First, it sets Bank Rate (and takes steps to ensure it is passed through to households and businesses). Second, it can use asset purchases, also known as “quantitative easing (QE).” The Bank’s first operational target currently is to keep overnight rates in wholesale sterling markets close to Bank Rate. We apply Bank Rate to reserves balances held with us by eligible financial firms. The MPC sets Bank Rate eight times a year, and its level remains fixed between each MPC announcement.

Second, the Bank manages the MPC’s asset purchases, which comprise a stock of U.K. government bonds and sterling non-financial investment-grade corporate bonds. In February 2022, the MPC voted to begin to reduce the stock of U.K. government bond purchases by ceasing to reinvest maturing assets; since then, the stock of government bond purchases has fallen from £875bn to £844bn. The MPC also set a target to unwind fully the stock of corporate bond purchases by no earlier than toward the end of 2023, from the current level of £19.1bn. In addition, in August 2022, the MPC confirmed it was provisionally minded to commence gilt sales shortly after its September policy meeting, subject to economic and market conditions being judged appropriate and to a confirmatory vote at that meeting. The Committee judged that, over the first twelve months of a sales program starting in September, a reduction in the stock of purchased gilts held in the Asset Purchase Facility (APF) of around £80 billion was likely to be appropriate.

As of August 21, 2022, Bank Rate set by the MPC was an overnight rate of 1.75%.

Each year, the Chancellor of the Exchequer writes a letter to the governor confirming the inflation target and the BOE’s remit for monetary policy. If the target is missed by more than 1 percentage point on either side, that is, if the annual rate of CPI inflation is more than 3% or less than 1%, the governor of the BOE must write an open letter to the chancellor explaining the reason why inflation has increased or fallen to such an extent and what the BOE proposes to do to ensure inflation comes back to the target. Four times a year, typically when the BOE publishes its Monetary Policy Report (called the Inflation Report prior to November 2019), MPC members attend a public meeting with the House of Commons Treasury Committee.

Parliamentary hearings Yes.

Other No.

Transparency Yes.

Publication of votes Yes. The minutes of the MPC meetings publish the votes of the individual members of the Committee.

Publication of minutes Yes. The MPC is committed to the greatest possible degree of transparency around its decision-making. The minutes of the MPC meetings are published simultaneously with the interest rate decision. They also record the votes of the individual members of the Committee. The minutes give a full account of the policy discussion, including differences of view.

Publication of inflation forecasts Yes. In addition to the MPC minutes, the BOE publishes its Monetary Policy Report (called the Inflation Report prior to November 2019). This report gives an analysis of the U.K. economy and the factors influencing policy decisions. The Inflation Report also includes the MPC’s latest forecasts for inflation and output growth.

Other monetary framework

Exchange tax No.

Exchange subsidy No.

Foreign exchange market Yes. Participants may freely determine their exchange rates and commissions in their transactions with clients.

Spot exchange market Yes. Foreign exchange bureaus engaged only in spot foreign exchange transactions are not subject to licensing or regulation by the BOE as CB, the Prudential Regulation Authority as prudential regulator, or the Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) as financial conduct regulator.

The U.K. version of Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 2017/565 is identical in scope to the regulation in force in relation to instruments covered. Spot contracts which meet the criteria in the U.K. version of Article 10(2) of Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 2017/565 are specifically excluded from the scope of financial instruments for the purposes of MiFID II-based obligations, so that firms only doing business in relation to such contracts are not subject to MiFID II-based authorization requirements. However, businesses that conduct spot foreign exchange transactions may engage in other activities that require FCA authorization.
addition, some firms may be subject to the separate authorization and registration obligations of the Payment Services Regulations 2017. Also, many foreign exchange bureaus that do not engage in activities that require FCA authorization must register with Her Majesty’s Revenue and Customs (HMRC) under the Money Laundering, Terrorism Financing, and Transfer of Funds (Information on the Payer) Regulations 2017, which require foreign exchange bureaus (as well as money transmitters and check cashers) to investigate customers as part of customer due diligence. Banks and investment firms engaged in foreign exchange services connected with the provision of investment services are subject to certain conduct and other obligations for foreign exchange services pursuant to U.K. requirements imposed as part of MiFID II implementation and which form part of “retained EU law” under the EU (Withdrawal) Act 2018.

Interbank market

Yes. The market is not formally regulated; participants are encouraged to adhere to the foreign exchange Global Code which is a voluntary code of conduct. Although the foreign exchange Global Code has no direct statutory underpinning, noncompliance (depending on the circumstances, seriousness, frequency, and duration of the incidents) may raise issues, such as the integrity or competence of a market firm, relevant to the firm’s authorization requirements under the Financial Services and Markets Act of 2000 and the FCA’s Principles for Businesses.

The FCA recognized the updated version of the foreign exchange Global Code (July 2021) effective November 19, 2021 and the three-year recognition period will last until November 22, 2024.

This means that behavior that is in line with the foreign exchange Global Code will tend to indicate that a person subject to the FCA’s Senior Managers and Certification Regime (SM&CR) is meeting their obligation to observe proper standards of market conduct under the FCA Principles for Business.

The majority of the interbank market is made up of the 30 largest banks; however, hundreds of banks participate given the many small entities that are active.

Trading in wholesale interbank spot foreign exchange is facilitated by a multienvironment direct and intermediated market structure. A large number of trading platforms attract liquidity from wholesale institutions authorized by the Prudential Regulation Authority and the FCA.

The interbank market actively trades via brokers. Brokerage firms offer voice and electronic execution and provide multiclient trading venues.

Many participants are market makers in the foreign exchange markets.

The forward exchange market for contracts falls outside the scope of financial instruments for the purpose of MiFID-based regulation where it amounts to a means of payment as set out in Article 10 of the U.K. version of the Commission Delegated Regulation (EU) No. 2017/565 of April 25, 2016. The BOE participates in the forward

Under the Enterprise Act of 2002, ministers have certain powers to intervene in mergers that raise specified public interest considerations. Three considerations are currently specified: plurality of the media, financial stability, and maintaining in the U.K. the capability to combat and to mitigate the effects of public health emergencies. Under Section 58 of the Enterprise Act, ministers may add considerations with parliamentary approval. Use of the intervention powers means the competition authorities must consider the public interest issue identified by the minister in addition to competition issues raised by the merger. Ministers are bound by the findings of the competition authorities on the competition issues raised by the case, but decide whether a merger should be cleared, cleared subject to conditions, or blocked on the grounds of the specified public interest consideration. There are statutory timetables for considering a case and reaching decisions.

Effective January 4, 2022, the National Security and Investment Act 2021 is the basis for the UK’s national security screening system for acquisitions of control over qualifying entities (such as businesses) and qualifying assets (land, physical assets, and intellectual property). The Act applies to all qualifying acquisitions of control, regardless of the nationality of the acquirer. Certain acquisitions within 17 sectors of the economy (specified in “Notifiable Acquisition Regulations”) are subject to mandatory notification and clearance requirements before they can take place. Other acquisitions (including those in the wider economy) can be voluntarily notified to receive a decision from the U.K. government about whether they will be “called in” for a full national security assessment. There is a statutory timetable – both for the initial screening of notifications and for full national security assessments. At the end of a national security assessment, the U.K. government must either issue a “final notification,” in effect clearing the acquisition and confirming no further action will be taken under the Act, or make a “final order,” imposing conditions on the acquisition to address the national security risk. This could include, as a last resort, blocking or unwinding an acquisition. The Secretary of State for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy is the quasi-judicial decision maker for all cases, and is supported by the Investment Security Unit. Businesses, investors, advisers, and others can contact the Unit to discuss current or future acquisitions that may be subject to the Act. Criminal and civil sanctions are available in the event of non-compliance.

In addition, controls apply to the following: (1) non-EU investment in EU-based airlines is capped at 49% to ensure that the controlling stake remains within the EU; exceptions are allowed but require a signed agreement between the EU and the non-EU country; (2) investment in certain broadcasting licenses (including, in particular, commercial television, teletext, and radio licenses) other than by nationals of, or enterprises originating in, EU member countries; (3) acquisition of U.K. flag vessels, except through an enterprise incorporated in the U.K.; and (4) to the extent that under EC Directive No. 85/611, a depository of a UCITS must have its registered office either in the same EU country as that of the enterprise or be established in the EU country if its registered office is in another EU country. Restrictions apply to operations between residents of the Channel Islands and nonresidents: (1) Acquisition in Alderney of real property by non-EU nationals and enterprises from non-EU countries requires authorization unless the investor is forming or investing in a land-owning company. (2) Ownership in Sark of tenements is reserved for British nationals. Purchases of real estate in Jersey depend on economic and social needs tests or acquisition through the purchase of shares in a property holding company.

Net spot liabilities in foreign currencies (that is, the net amount of foreign currency resources funding sterling assets) form part of a bank’s liabilities subject to a non-interest-bearing deposit requirement with the BOE. The required deposit is based on the average of reported eligible liabilities over a six-month period in excess of the equivalent of £600 million. This rule applies to building societies as well as to banks.

If the sum of an institution’s overall net foreign exchange position and its net gold position exceeds a 2% threshold of own funds, the institution must calculate an own funds requirement for foreign exchange risk by multiplying the net open position by 8%. This requirement is applied to all firms and is reported via Common Reporting.

U.K. insurers are subject to on-shored Solvency II regulation and are therefore subject to risk-based capital requirements to cover the risk of loss of own funds over a one-year period to the 99.5% confidence level.
level. In addition to capital requirements, firms must ensure that their investments are consistent with the Prudent Person Principle, a qualitative set of risk management requirements.

U.K. insurers are subject to on-shored Solvency II regulation and are therefore subject to capital requirements and the Prudent Person Principle. The most relevant requirement of the Prudent Person Principle in this case is the requirement that assets backing technical provisions (insurance liabilities) are invested in a manner appropriate to the nature and duration of the liabilities.

| Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad | No. |
| Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally | No. |
| Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition | No. |

The U.K. uses the Prudent Person Principle: There are no explicit quantitative restrictions on pension funds’ investments. Firms that manage personal or stakeholder pensions are subject to FCA authorization and Prudential Regulation Authority Handbook requirements.

There are also occupational pension schemes which are the regulatory responsibility of the Pensions Regulator and the restrictions imposed by the Occupational Pension Schemes (Investment) Regulations 2005 apply.

| Investment firms and collective investment funds | Yes. |

There are no explicit limits on the amount of assets an investment firm may hold in the form of foreign exchange products or that must be held locally. However, investment firms, including firms executing client orders, managing portfolios, and dealing on their own behalf, are subject to risk requirements comprising foreign exchange components and own funds requirements relating to foreign exchange. A new prudential regime for MiFID investment firms became effective January 1, 2021 including the rules contained in the FCA the prudential sourcebook for MiFID investment firms (MIFIDPRU). A key provision is MIFIDPRU 4.12.2R – this obligation captures any positions in foreign exchange (see MIFIDPRU 4.11.1G). For non-MiFID investment firms, there are foreign exchange-related requirements in the Interim Sourcebook for Investment Business of the FCA’s Handbook of rules and guidance (IPRU-INV).

Authorized retail investment funds (UCITS and non-UCITS retail schemes) are subject to limits on investment in certain types of financial instruments pursuant to Chapter 5 of the FCA COLL sourcebook. There are also investment restrictions under the UK’s qualified investor scheme regime pursuant to Chapter 8 of the FCA COLL sourcebook. Other such restrictions arise in the case of fund types in the form of the requirements of the U.K. versions of the following regulations, which enable continuity in law application after EU law ceased to apply to the U.K.: The Money Market Funds Regulation (EU) No. 2017/1131, the U.K. version of the European long-term investment funds Regulation (EU) No. 2015/760, the U.K. version of the European venture capital funds Regulation (EU) No. 345/2013, and the U.K. version of the European social entrepreneurship fund Regulation (EU) No. 346/2013. As regards other collective investment funds, there are generally no regulatory limits on their investments in securities issued by nonresidents, investment portfolios held abroad, and asset and liability composition. A collective investment fund may also impose its own limits according to its prospectus and investment objectives, and managers of AIFs may be subject to the retained EU law requirements in respect of the AIFMD (EU) No. 2011/61. The UCITS and the AIFMD ceased to apply as a matter of U.K. law. Amendments made by U.K. legislation were designed to ensure continuity for investors.

Floating
The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are free floating; the exchange rate of the US dollar is determined freely in the foreign exchange market. Foreign exchange interventions are not formally ruled out in the United States, but they are rarely used. The secretary of the Treasury is responsible for the formulation and implementation of international monetary and financial policy, including foreign exchange market intervention policy. The Federal Reserve (Fed) has separate legal authority to engage in foreign exchange operations, which are conducted in close and continuous consultation and cooperation with the Treasury to ensure consistency with US international monetary and financial policy. The Treasury and the Fed have closely coordinated their foreign exchange operations since early 1962, when the Fed commenced such operations at the request of the Treasury. Operations are conducted through the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, as fiscal agent of the United States and as the operating arm of the Federal Reserve System. Interventions are announced when they occur, and the size of the interventions is reported in the Treasury and Federal Reserve Foreign Exchange Operations quarterly bulletin. US authorities last intervened in the foreign exchange market in March 2011, following the earthquake in Japan, in a coordinated G7 effort to sell Japanese yen. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York publishes quarterly reports on Treasury and Federal Reserve foreign exchange operations.

Inflation target

- Point target
Monetary policy aims at maintaining the long-term growth of the monetary and credit aggregates commensurate with the economy’s long-term potential to increase production, so as to promote maximum employment, stable prices, and moderate long-term interest rates. The Federal Open Market Committee’s (FOMC) longer-term goals, include targeting inflation that averages 2% over time, as measured by the annual change in the price index for personal consumption expenditures. In setting monetary policy, the FOMC will seek to mitigate deviations in inflation from its longer-term goal and employment shortfalls from the FOMC’s assessment of its maximum level. FOMC meeting minutes are published online.

Exchange rates and commissions in transactions are freely determined.

There are no licensing requirements to deal in foreign exchange. In addition, there are no restrictions on the types of foreign exchange transactions institutions or individuals may engage in or the types of foreign accounts they may have. There are, however, various reporting requirements.

Interbank market

There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads and commissions of market participants. The Fed’s participation in the interbank market is not limited, but it does not regularly intervene in the foreign exchange market.

Over the counter

The foreign exchange market in the United States operates primarily over the counter. The key participants are the large money center banks, investment and insurance firms, branches and subsidiaries of foreign banks, brokerage firms, and principal trading firms. Some of these participants serve as market makers. A fraction of total foreign exchange trading takes place on futures and options exchanges; most trading takes place through direct dealing, on electronic trading systems using either multibank dealing or single-bank proprietary platforms, or through electronic brokerage systems.

The Department of Commerce controls exports and reexports of dual-use and less-sensitive military commodities, technology, and software for reasons of national security, foreign policy, nonproliferation, and short supply. Except for shipment to US territories and possessions, which are treated as part of the United States, most exports from the United States are subject to the Export Administration Regulations and to varying license requirements depending on destination, end use, and end user. The Department of Commerce Bureau of Industry and Security administers and enforces the Export Administration Regulations. Several agencies of the US government maintain export controls on products other than those subject to the Export Administration Regulations, including the Departments of State and Energy and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

In accordance with 22 US Code 2778-2780 of the Arms Export Control Act (AECA) and the International Traffic in Arms Regulations (22 CFR parts 120–130), the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls in the Department of State is charged with controlling exports and temporary imports of defense articles and defense services covered by the United States Munitions List in the International Traffic in Arms Regulations. Generally, ammunition for military use may be exported only under a license issued by the Directorate of Defense Trade Controls.

Banks are subject to prudential oversight in these areas.

The foreign currency positions of banks, whether overall or with respect to individual currencies, are not subject to quantitative limits, but banks are subject to prudential oversight. In addition, large foreign exchange market participants are required to report their holdings of five major foreign currencies and US dollars weekly, monthly, or quarterly.
Most private sector US-based pension plans are subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) of 1974. Except with respect to securities issued by a plan’s sponsor (or an affiliate) and real estate leased to a sponsor (or an affiliate), ERISA does not impose quantitative limits on the percentage of plan assets that may be invested in particular types of assets. Instead, ERISA establishes a set of general principles (for example, prudence and diversification) that plan fiduciaries must observe in making and holding plan investments. ERISA also prohibits any fiduciary from maintaining the indicia of ownership of any assets of a plan outside the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, except as authorized by regulations issued by the secretary of labor.

As is the case with domestic securities, foreign securities must have a “ready market” or their value is deducted in full when computing a broker-dealer’s regulatory “net capital.” Securities that are listed on many major foreign securities exchanges are considered to have a ready market. In addition, securities that have a ready market are subject to haircut deductions that vary depending on the type of security. To account for currency risk, an additional haircut charge is required for securities denominated in a foreign currency. However, broker-dealers generally may reduce or eliminate the additional currency risk haircut charge by holding an offsetting position denominated in the same currency. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1, 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1. In addition, broker-dealers holding balances of foreign currency are subject to certain haircut deductions to account for currency risk. Broker-dealers apply a lower haircut for certain major foreign currencies, and securities denominated in those currencies, and a higher haircut for other foreign currencies and securities denominated in those foreign currencies. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1, 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1. A broker-dealer may pledge certain foreign sovereign debt and foreign currencies as collateral when borrowing fully paid securities from a customer. A certain amount of additional collateralization is required when the securities or currency that is pledged differs from the securities that are borrowed. See Securities Exchange Act Release No. 47683 (April 16, 2003). For purposes of this response, the term “broker-dealer” includes any entity registered with the US SEC as a broker or dealer.

Although broker-dealers are not subject to a quantitative limit on the number or value of securities issued by nonresidents, foreign securities must have a “ready market” to have value for broker-dealer regulatory “net capital” purposes. Securities that are listed on many major foreign securities exchanges are considered to have a ready market.

Broker-dealers are not required to hold a minimum portion of their portfolio locally.

To account for currency risk, an additional net capital charge is required for securities denominated in a foreign currency. However, broker-dealers generally may reduce or eliminate the additional currency risk haircut charge by holding an offsetting position denominated in the same currency. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1 (c)(2)(vi), 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1 (c)(2)(vi). In addition, broker-dealers holding balances of foreign currency are subject to certain deductions to account for currency risk. Broker-dealers apply a lower deduction for certain major foreign currencies and securities denominated in those currencies and a higher deduction for other foreign currencies and securities denominated in those foreign currencies. See Securities Exchange Act Rule No. 15c3-1(c)(2)(vi), 17 CFR § 240.15c3-1(c)(2)(vi).

Under Article 17 of Law No. 17,835 of September 23, 2004, on Strengthening the Control and Prevention of Money Laundering and Terrorism Financing, financial intermediation institutions are required to inform the Central Bank of Uruguay’s (CBU’s) FIU of assets linked to (1) persons identified as terrorists or as belonging to organizations associated with terrorism on the relevant lists prepared by the UN and (2) persons declared terrorists by final decision of a national or foreign court of law. In addition, Article 6 authorizes the FIU to prevent all transactions giving rise to reasonable suspicion of a link with criminal organizations related to money laundering, as described in Article 17, from being carried out for a period of 72 hours. The law further provides that the FIU’s decision must be communicated immediately to the criminal courts, which will determine whether the assets should be frozen without notice.

The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are floating. The exchange rate of the peso is determined on the basis of supply and demand, although the CBU reserves the right to intervene to cushion abrupt changes in a concentrated market of few transactions. The intervention currency is the US dollar. The CB can intervene in the exchange markets (spot as well as forward and future markets) to smooth excess exchange rate volatility without affecting its fundamentals-driven trends. The CBU publishes information on intervention on its website on a daily basis, a few minutes after the market closes.

The exchange rate is freely determined by the market. The end-of-day official exchange rate is the weighted average of all spot operations undertaken in the interbank market (BEVSA, Bolsa Electrónica de Valores del Uruguay S.A., Electronic Stock Exchange).

The inflation-targeting framework entered into force in 2005.

The MPC (COPOM in Spanish) consists of the three Board of Directors as members and three other senior officers appointed by the Board according to their specific tasks in the monetary policy. The Committee serves the following functions: (1) provides advice to the Board for determining monetary policy guidelines and parameters and (2) monitors and evaluates the money market, the short-term macroeconomic situation, and the financial program. COPOM decisions are taken by majority. The COPOM meets after the Macroeconomic Coordination Committee (CCM in Spanish), which

The peso is freely traded, primarily on the Electronic Securities Exchange of Uruguay (BEVSA), although there is also an OTC market through exchange brokers. Formal exchanges in the foreign currency market must accept offers to buy or sell foreign currency with a minimum price fluctuation of Ur$0.01 (US$0.01) of a preexisting offer, if the counterparty is dealing in pesos. Authorized intermediaries may freely determine the bid-ask spread and exchange commissions with their customers (Circular No. 2095).

Institutions authorized to operate in the foreign exchange market are banks, finance houses, foreign financial institutions, financial intermediation cooperatives, financial services firms, and exchange houses. Eleven banks (including 2 state-owned), one finance house, one foreign financial institution, one financial intermediation cooperative, 22 financial services firms, and 52 exchange houses operate in the market. These institutions are supervised by the Superintendency of Financial Services. Exchange houses and financial service firms may deal with the CB by phone, maintain accounts abroad, and make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients.

Sixteen authorized institutions (including 11 banks) may trade among themselves at freely determined rates through the BEVSA and may operate in the OTC market through dealers. Banks and provident savings fund administrators (administradoras de fondos de ahorro previo) are the primary interbank market participants. They determine the daily closing exchange rate, defined as a weighted average of the day’s foreign exchange transactions, on the basis of their operations. The CBU grants the licenses. The minimum bid-ask spread is Ur$0.01. There are no limits on commissions, and each institution manages them independently. Generally, the CBU does not intervene in the spot foreign exchange market. But when it does, it intervenes directly with market participants at their quoted levels or proposes its own quotes. Authorized institutions are allowed to trade among themselves under the regulatory framework established by the CBU and BEVSA.

The market operates over the counter. Participants may also operate in the OTC market, through brokers.

The CBU established a market for forward purchases and sales of US dollars. The CBU resumed operations on the US dollar forward market on November 3, 2009, operating with foreign exchange.
forwards and being the main counterparty in all operations. In December 2010, it began operating with foreign exchange futures. These are standardized daily settlement contracts. Currently, the CBU trades futures and forwards (with and without delivery). Interbank swap operations have not yet been implemented. On December 3, 2018, the regulation authorized specialized investors to participate in the foreign exchange market. These are large enterprises whose business activity necessitates the use of hedging instruments. In addition, there are two formal venues for forward exchange market trading (BEVSA and the Uruguay Futures Exchange (UFEX)), which employ the central counterparty method.

The securities market and all participants, stock exchanges, other markets involved in the trading of publicly offered securities and other securities, and the issuers of publicly offered securities are subject to the Securities Market Law, regulations issued by the executive branch, and the general regulations and special instructions issued by the CBU Superintendency of Financial Services. Under Law No. 18,401, the CBU’s authority to regulate, supervise, and impose penalties under Law No. 16,749 of May 30, 1996, concerning the Securities Market, is not limited by the exercise of powers granted to stock exchanges. Law No. 18,627 was enacted in 2009 to (1) ensure transparent and efficient operations; (2) adequately inform and protect investors; (3) rebuild the confidence essential to the market’s development; and (4) promote the securities market. The law represents a shift from market self-regulation under the former law to a regulatory focus in which the Superintendency of Financial Services plays a more significant role.

Reserve requirements for deposit accounts in foreign currency differ according to depositor status (resident or nonresident), the term of the deposit, and the type of financial entity (see below).

As of January 2022, the legal reserve rates for obligations in pesos and CPI-linked units (UI) of banks, financial intermediation cooperatives, and financial houses are: 15% (Circular No. 2284), 3%, 2%, and 1% for obligations with maturities of less than 30 days, 30–90 days, 91–180 days, and 181 days less than 367 days, respectively (Circular No. 2376).

For retail banks and retail financial intermediation cooperatives, these percentages are: 15% (Circular No. 2252), 3%, 2%, and 1% for obligations with maturities of less than 30 days, 30–90 days, 91–180 days, and 181 days to less than 367 days, respectively (Circular No. 2376).

The reserve requirements for banks, financial intermediation cooperatives, and exchange houses on foreign currency liabilities to residents are 28% for terms of up to 180 days and 20% for longer terms (Circular No. 2252 and Circular No. 2224). For retail banks and retail financial intermediation cooperatives on foreign currency liabilities to residents, the corresponding percentages are 12% for terms of up to 180 days and 7% for longer terms (Circular No. 2252 and Circular No. 2224).

Minimum reserve requirements for foreign currency liabilities to nonresidents are 28% (Circular No. 2252 and Circular No. 2224), calculated net of foreign assets in the currency in question. Beginning in September 2013, following the issuance of Circular No. 2153, the minimum reserve requirements are computed contemporaneously and consist only of coins, banknotes, and demand deposits in the CBU. Term deposits are no longer accepted. The reserve in indexed units applies to liabilities of all maturities, including on demand. The reserve position is calculated by currency, according to the currency of the liability. The reserve position in pesos, foreign currency, and indexed units is based on the daily average for the month in question, including weekends and holidays. The domestic currency and the indexed unit are considered jointly. In the case of indexed units, liabilities are converted to pesos by multiplying by the value of each day. According to Communication No. 2016/074 and Circular No. 2230, the minimum reserve requirement in domestic currency earns interest at 5% per annum; the minimum reserve requirement in US dollars earns interest at 0.15% per annum, and for currencies other than the US dollar, it is calculated as the MPR minus 0.25% per annum. No interest is earned on required reserves in indexed units.

In 2017, liquid assets requirements have been replaced by the LCR requirement. The LCR must be at least 80% in local currency and 100% in foreign currency and in total. A surplus in foreign currency can be computed to fund a deficit in local currency, providing the latter does not exceed 20%.

The reserve requirements on foreign currency liabilities to residents are 28% for terms of up to 180 days and 20% for longer terms. The minimum reserve requirement for foreign currency liabilities to nonresidents is 28% (Circular No. 2252 and Circular No. 2224), calculated net of foreign assets in the currency in question.

Part of the assets and liabilities in question consist of operations to be settled (basically OTC derivatives). The foreign currency position arising from these derivatives may not exceed the 150% limit. The foreign currency position arising from other assets and liabilities may not exceed 170% of the net assets, minus operating fixed assets. Operating fixed assets are claims more than two years overdue that have not been provisioned, investments in companies other than portfolio investment companies, assets constituting the category of property, plant and equipment, and intangible assets.

However, if 0.4% of assets is less than US$4 million, pension funds may trade up to that amount daily. Trading the same instrument on the same day is limited to 1.5% of the pension fund assets for the previous day. Pension funds are subdivided into accumulation funds and retirement funds, depending on the age of the contributor. Accumulation funds may invest up to 75% in government securities and 15% in instruments issued by multilateral institutions or foreign governments with high credit ratings. The maximum investment in foreign currency for accumulation funds is 35% of the total. In the case of retirement funds, these percentages are 90%, 20%, and 20%, respectively.

- Crawl-like arrangement: Yes.
  - The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The exchange rate is determined based on foreign currency supply and demand on Uzbekistan’s currency exchange. The Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan (CBU) is a direct buyer of precious metals produced in Uzbekistan (gold and silver), acting as supplier in the foreign exchange market in amounts equivalent to the value of precious metals purchased from producers. The CBU also intervenes in the foreign exchange market to smooth out undue short-term volatility. Foreign exchange sales by the CBU in the foreign exchange market are not directed at affecting the fundamental trend of the exchange rate and are driven exclusively by the aim of sterilizing additional liquidity from the CBU purchases of precious metals. The exchange rate of the sum to the US dollar is used as an operational benchmark, because the vast majority of the country’s trading operations are carried out in US dollars. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as crawl-like. Data on the CBU interventions are published on the CBU website in quarterly “Survey of the Domestic Exchange Market” publications.

Official exchange rate Yes. The official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar, effective February 15, 2021, is determined by the CBU on a daily basis as the weighted average exchange rate based on trading on the Currency Exchange for the previous day, and it remains in effect until the exchange rate is determined on the following day. Exchange rates of other currencies are calculated using the cross rate with respect to the US dollar on the basis of the average rate as of 3:00 p.m. Tashkent time (on the day the rate is published) from the Refinitiv system (or Bloomberg).

Previously, the official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar and the euro was determined by the CBU once a week as the weighted average exchange rate in trading sessions on the Currency Exchange for the previous week, and it remained in effect until the exchange rate was determined the following week. In the event that a change in the exchange rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange with respect to the CBU exchange rate exceeded 2%, the CBU set a new exchange rate for foreign currencies. The new CBU exchange rate was equal to the rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange on the day of a sharp change in the exchange rate of the foreign currency.

The CBU exchange rate is used for accounting purposes, statistical and other reporting on foreign exchange operations, and calculating customs and other mandatory payments within the Republic of Uzbekistan.

Inflation-targeting framework Yes. Effective January 1, 2021, the CBU started the transition to inflation targeting and set inflation targets of 10% for 2021 and 5% for 2023 (as per Decree of the President of November 18, 2019, No. UP-5877). At present, the monetary policy regime can be characterized as advanced transition toward inflation targeting. Monetary policy decisions are made on the basis of forecasting and policy analysis systems (FPAS).

Previously, before 2018, the goal of the CBU was to ensure the stability of the national currency. Since 2018, the CBU oriented its monetary policy on the stability of prices in the economy. Since the start of 2020, the CBU’s main objective is to lower the rate of inflation (as measured by the change in the CPI) to 5% by 2023 and to maintain it at that level, through the implementation of its monetary policy within an inflation-targeting regime. Because of the global inflation conditions, the CBU delayed the target timeframe until 2024.

Monetary policy is determined by deviations in intermediate inflation forecasts from the short-term and medium-term targets, using the new operational framework to achieve the operational goal via the management of short-term interest rates in the money market through a set of instruments introduced specifically for that purpose:

- the CBU’s key rate and a symmetrical interest rate corridor of, as of July 29, 2021, 4 (previously 2) percentage points (overnight lending and deposit facilities, at 2 (previously 1) percentage points higher and lower, respectively, than the CBU’s key rate, which is at the center of the corridor);
- the CBU’s money market operations with a term of one week at the CBU rate (deposit auctions to mop up excess liquidity);
- overnight standing facilities, forming the upper and lower bounds of the interest corridor.

Target setting body
- Government: Yes.
- Central Bank: Yes.
- Monetary Policy Committee: Yes.
- Central Bank Board: Yes.
- Other: Government and Central Bank

Inflation target
- Yes.

Target number
- 10% for 2021 (end of period; as measured by CPI headline inflation).

Point target
- 5% for 2024 (end of period; as measured by CPI headline inflation).

Target with tolerance band
- Yes.

Band/Range
- The inflation target is set in terms of the headline CPI and is measured as year-on-year rate of change.

The CPI is calculated by the State Committee on Statistics, based on IMF standards (using fixed weights for all types of goods and services) according to the results of the observation of prices and rates. A representative sample of 510 types of goods and services is included in observations. Of those, 170 are foodstuffs, 250 are nonfoods, and 90 are services. In calculating CPIs, a modified Laspeyres formula with annual fixed weights is used. The structure of consumer spending based on household survey data is used as weights for calculating the indices.
Effective January 1, 2021, in the inflation-targeting regime, the CBU’s short-term rate is used as the main monetary policy instrument, and it is the key rate.

The CBU maintains symmetrical interest rate corridor of, effective July 29, 2021, 4 percentage points (overnight lending and deposit facilities, at 2 percentage points higher and lower, respectively) around the CBU’s key rate, which is at the center of the corridor. The CBU’s money market operations with a term of one week at the CBU rate (deposit auctions to mop up excess liquidity). Overnight standing facilities, forming the upper and lower bounds of the interest corridor.

The CBU is accountable to the Republic of Uzbekistan Oliy Majlis Senate that considers the CBU’s annual report and the auditor’s conclusion. Annually, before the beginning of the reporting year, the CBU submits “Guidelines of Monetary Policy” to the Oliy Majlis Senate.

The minutes of board meetings are not subject to publication. An extensive press release summarizing the committee’s discussions is published after the monetary policy decision, however.

Inflation forecasts are published in monetary policy reports that are issued quarterly.

The foreign exchange market consists of: (1) the Republic of Uzbekistan Currency Exchange, where participants on trading sessions are commercial banks, and the CBU; (2) the interbank foreign exchange market; (3) operations involving the purchase and sale of foreign currency between banks and their customers, which are performed directly at banks; and (4) cash foreign exchange operations through exchange bureaus of commercial banks.

Commercial banks’ operations with foreign currency are performed on the basis of a banking license. Banks freely determine their bid/ask spread and foreign exchange commissions with their clients.

Effective January 29, 2021, trading in the currency exchange is performed according to the call auction (opening auction) and two-way continuous reverse auction (matching) methods. However, the CB acts in the Uzbek Republic Currency Exchange (UZCE) auctions...
An opening auction is held from 10:00 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., and a matching auction is held from 10:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. An opening auction is held according to the call auction system, in which a single exchange rate is determined that provides for the maximum volume of transactions concluded. The minimum unit of measure for a change in the exchange rate of foreign currency to the sum is 1 sum.

Along with foreign exchange transactions on the Currency Exchange, commercial banks (33 banks as of August 18, 2022) may perform foreign exchange transactions with each other (interbank foreign exchange market) and with clients by mutual agreement. Foreign exchange transactions with individuals are performed through banks and their foreign exchange bureaus. Banks’ exchange bureaus may buy cash foreign exchange from individual residents and nonresidents and sell it to individual nonresidents and residents. All exchange bureaus operate under commercial banks. Their operation is limited to the purchase and sale of and transactions related to cash foreign currency, such as exchanging damaged banknotes and providing change. Direct transactions are not performed between the CBU and exchange bureaus. There are 2,090 exchange bureaus (as of August 1, 2022). In addition, there are 1,916 automatic currency exchange machines in operation (as of August 1, 2022).

Effective February 15, 2021, there are no more fixing sessions on the UZCE. Previously, if the total supply of foreign currency at the start of the trading session, based on bids placed before trading hours, exceeded total demand for it, the exchange operator raised the exchange rate of the foreign currency to the local currency, the sum (and vice versa). A fixed exchange rate for a foreign currency to the sum was set for current trading when a balance was reached between supply and demand for that foreign currency. In such cases, the exchange operator announced a fixing and declared an end to the trading session. The uniform exchange rate of the foreign currency to the sum, established by the fixing, was used for all the transactions concluded during the trading session.

The interbank foreign currency market consists of exchange and OTC markets. Interbank exchange trading is performed on the UZCE. Foreign exchange operations in the domestic market are regulated by the Rules on Conducting Foreign Exchange Operations in the Republic of Uzbekistan (CBU Resolution No. 3281 of September 31, 2020).

The CBU conducts foreign exchange interventions during the trading sessions on the UZCE to sterilize excess liquidity from the purchase of monetary gold from local producers. Commercial banks perform transactions with each other outside of the exchange using Refinitiv and Bloomberg trading terminals, as well as other methods.

Changes during 2021 and 2022

Exchange Arrangement

| Official exchange rate | 02/15/2021 | The official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar is determined by the Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan (CBU) on a daily basis as the weighted average exchange rate based on trading on the currency exchange for the previous day, and it remains in effect until the exchange rate is determined on the following day. Previously, the official exchange rate of the sum against the US dollar and the euro was determined by the CBU once a week as the weighted average of the exchange rate in trading sessions on the currency exchange for the previous week. In the event that a change in the exchange rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange with respect to the CBU exchange rate exceeded 2%, the CBU set a new exchange rate for foreign currencies. The new CBU exchange rate was equal to the rate based on the results of trading in the currency exchange on the day of a sharp change in the exchange rate of the foreign currency. |

Monetary policy framework

| Inflation-targeting framework | 01/01/2021 | The Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan started the transition to an inflation-targeting monetary policy framework and set inflation targets of 10% for 2021 and 5% for 2023 (as per Decree of the President of November 18, 2019, No. UP-5877). At present, the monetary policy regime can be characterized as advanced transition toward inflation targeting. |

| Operating target (policy rate) | |
| Policy rate | 01/01/2021 | In the inflation-targeting regime, the Central Bank of the Republic of Uzbekistan’s short-term rate is used as the main monetary policy instrument, and it is the key rate. |
| Target corridor band | 07/29/2021 | The symmetrical interest rate corridor is 4 (previously 2) percentage points (overnight lending and deposit facilities, at 2 (previously 1) percentage points higher and lower, respectively, around the CBU’s key rate, which is at the center of the corridor. |

| 01/29/2021 | Trading in the currency exchange is performed according to the call auction (opening auction) and two-way continuous reverse auction (matching) methods. However, the CB acts in the Uzbek Republic Currency Exchange auctions only as a participant. |

| Operated by the central bank | |
| Fixing | 02/15/2021 | There are no more fixing sessions on the Uzbek Republic Currency Exchange. Previously, if the total supply of foreign currency at the start of the trading session, based on bids placed before trading hours, exceeded total demand for it, the exchange operator raised the exchange rate of the foreign currency to the local currency, the sum (and vice versa). A fixed exchange rate for a foreign currency to the sum was set for current trading when a balance was reached between supply and demand for that foreign currency. In such cases, the exchange operator announced a fixing and declared an end to the trading session. The uniform exchange rate of the foreign currency to the sum, established by the fixing, was used for all the transactions concluded during the trading session. |

Residents that failed to repatriate foreign trade transaction assets during the period exceeding 45 (previously 30) days (90 days for small business entities; previously 60 days) after the expiration of 180 days from the date of payment or export to a nonresident pay a fine to the republic budget.

The fine for failing to meet the repatriation requirement is in the equivalent of 5% (previously 10%) of the amount of non-repatriated assets if the asset repatriation is delayed by up to 365 days (previously 180 days) from the date of payment or export to a nonresident.

No fines are applied for a failure to repatriate foreign trade transaction assets when a document is presented that is issued by an authorized body and confirms the destruction or seizure by government authorities of goods that became unusable during transportation or storage for reasons beyond the control of the parties.

No fines are applied for a failure to repatriate foreign trade transaction assets when there is no breach of deadlines established in import contracts concluded under projects implemented by resolutions by the President and Cabinet of Ministers of the Republic of Uzbekistan or in import contracts approved by the Management Committee under the implementation of product sharing agreements.

03/11/2022 No fines are applied for a failure to repatriate foreign trade transaction assets for the amount of repatriated assets under this Law pending the court decision in a fine application case.

03/11/2022 If the fine is paid voluntarily within 10 days proportionally to the amount of assets repatriated in foreign trade transactions within a 90-day period, the paid fine is reimbursed to the resident.

  - Pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands
- Since 1988, Vanuatu has officially maintained an adjustable peg exchange rate arrangement. Currently, the exchange rate of the vatu is linked to a transaction-weighted (trade and tourism receipts) basket of currencies whose weights and composition are not publicly disclosed and are adjusted periodically. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as other managed, because the composite weights are not disclosed and cannot be confirmed, and, in practice, the vatu has been more volatile against a composite than the 2% band typical of stabilized or pegged arrangements.

The main objectives of monetary policy are (1) low and stable inflation and (2) a sufficient level of official foreign exchange reserves. Specifically, the RBV aims for CPI inflation in the 0%–4% range and aims to maintain foreign reserve cover of at least four months of imports. The RBV achieves these objectives by pegging the vatu to an undisclosed basket of currencies, targeting excess reserves in the banking system through its open market operations, and periodically adjusting its rediscount rate and the statutory reserve requirement in line with economic and financial conditions.

Commercial banks may freely trade within a band set by the RBV.

Foreign exchange bureaus may operate after obtaining a license from the Department of Finance (government). Such bureaus may not deal directly with the RBV. Currently, there are 3 focusing on exchange and transfer and 3 Chinese stores that include exchange in their retail activity.

The RBV has a dealing facility with the local commercial banks for the purchase and sale of US dollars and Australian dollars against the vatu.

Five commercial banks participate in the interbank foreign exchange market. There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads and commissions of market participants.

Banks operate mainly over the counter.

The RBV does not deal in the forward exchange market; however, commercial banks provide forward exchange facilities to their customers at their own expense. The RBV does not deal in derivative instruments.

Vanuatu participates in the Melanesian Spearhead Group (MSG) Trade Agreement and PICTA. Vanuatu also signed PACER Plus agreement in September 2017. Australia and New Zealand have ratified it, but other signatories are working toward ratification. The PACER Plus will come into force 60 days after being ratified by an eighth signatory.

For verification purposes, all appropriate documentation must accompany requests for foreign settlement by commercial banks.

The importation of frozen chicken pieces, T-shirts bearing a Vanuatu motif, firearms and ammunition, animals and plants, and transistor and telephone equipment is restricted through import-licensing arrangements. A similar restriction is applied to the importation of rice, sugar, flour, canned fish, and tobacco products. Bans are in effect for health reasons on imports of animals and animal products from Europe and the United Kingdom, as well as on imports of chicken and poultry products from Victoria and New South Wales, Australia.

The RBV has the authority to restrict import requests to the equivalent of US$100,000 an individual.

The import duty structure consists of eight rates, ranging from 0% to 30%, with the 30% rate applying to most goods. Most basic items are subject to a 5% duty. Approved goods imported under the MSG, PICTA, and PACER trade agreements are duty-free. These goods require certificates of origin issued to exporters and importers by the member countries. Goods imported or delivered from bonded houses are also duty-free. A 35% duty applies to certain imported products in the protected goods category, except for six items covered under the MSG trade agreement, to which a 40% duty applies. In addition, a 40% duty, which decreases by 2% a year, is applied to ice cream, fruit juice, meat, and soap, and duties of VT 350 and VT 315 a liter are applied to fuel and paint, respectively. As a result of free trade under the MSG trade agreement, excise tax rates have been increased and extended to additional excisable products (domestic and imported). Customs uses the harmonized system of tariffs (2007 version). Vanuatu became a WTO member in 2012 and has agreed to bind all its tariff rates.

Unitary

Multiple Yes. Complementary Floating Market Exchange Rate (DICOM) is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the Exchange Agreement (EA) No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. The DICOM rate stood at BsF/US$5,189.56 (buying) and BsF/US$5202.57 (selling) on May 13, 2019. In addition to the official DICOM exchange rate, there is a parallel market that is widely used by the private sector and individuals. As of May 13, 2019, the parallel exchange rate stood at 5698.53 bolivars per dollar, according to DolarToday. Since March 10, 2016, the rate was established as the DICOM under Exchange Rate Agreement No. 35 of March 9, 2016 (G.O. No. 40.865 of the same date). Pursuant to Article 17 of that Agreement, until the alternative foreign exchange markets provided for in EA No. 33 are replaced, the DICOM will be the rate referenced in Article 24 of the latter EA. It should also be noted that pursuant to Article 13 of the aforesaid EA No. 35, all foreign exchange operations not expressly stated in the EA will be settled through the alternative foreign exchange markets regulated by the exchange regulations at the DICOM. The transactions of sale of foreign currency for payment of consumption and advances of cash with credit cards and acquisition of cash for minors, because of trips abroad, were applied the DICOM rate of exchange in effect at the time when the transaction is made or when the cash is delivered. The sale of foreign currency from the activities of exportation to the BCV made by natural persons and private legal persons was made at the DICOM rate of exchange reduced by 0.25%.

Individuals and private companies can buy and sell foreign currency through local commercial banks and exchange houses with no constraints on prices or amounts. The new market has been established where private foreign exchange buyers and sellers interacted under BCV’s control. Individuals are still transacting small amounts in euros in cash in DICOM with government-owned banks. The BCV continues publishing the DICOM rate daily, resulting in two legal foreign exchange rates.

The de jure exchange rate is a conventional peg against the US dollar. The DICOM is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the EA No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. In addition to the official DICOM exchange rate, there is a parallel market that is widely used by the private sector and individuals. According to DolarToday, Article 31 of the EA No. 39 establishes that the conversion of foreign currency for the determination of the taxable amount of tax obligations derived from customs operations will be carried out at the DICOM exchange rate in effect on the date of the operation. Article 33 indicates that the exchange rate to be used for foreign currency conversion for the determination of the amounts to be paid because of the customs and tax penalties regimes will be the DICOM exchange rate at the date of the corresponding sanction. The tax obligations established in special laws, as well as the rates, commissions, surcharges, and public prices that have been set in the corresponding regulations in foreign currency, may be paid alternatively in the currency in which they are denominated, in their equivalent in other foreign currency in accordance with the price published for that purpose by the BCV, or in bolivars applying the DICOM in force at the date of the transaction. (EA No. 39, Article 34).

Official exchange rate: Yes.

DICOM is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the EA No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. The DICOM rate stood at Bs/US$79,800 (buying) and Bs/US$80,000 (selling) on May 29, 2018. The operations of sale of foreign currencies to the BCV must be carried out at the exchange rate set forth in Article 11 of EA No. 39, reduced by 0.25% (EA No. 39, Article 28). The value of the exchange rate in bolivars resulting from the auction will be the lowest price proposed by the legal entities demanding foreign currency that is awarded, that is, the marginal value on the claims awarded to legal persons (EA No. 39, Article 3). All operations for settlement of foreign currencies not expressly provided for in this EA will be processed through the alternative markets regulated in the exchange regulations, at the DICOM (EA No. 39, Article 30). Pursuant to Article 17 of that Agreement the DICOM will be the rate referenced in Article 24 of the latter EA. It should also be noted that pursuant to Article 13 of the aforesaid EA No. 35, all foreign exchange operations not expressly stated in the EA will be settled through the alternative foreign exchange markets regulated by the exchange regulations at the DICOM. The transactions of sale of foreign currency for payment of consumption and advances of cash with credit cards and acquisition of cash for minors, because of trips abroad, were applied the DICOM rate of exchange in effect at the time when the transaction is made or when the cash is delivered. The sale of foreign currency from the activities of exportation to the BCV made by natural persons and private legal persons was made at the DICOM rate of exchange reduced by 0.25%.

As per BCV’s Resolution No. 2019-05-01 establishes that the price published daily by BCV will be the official rate as per Article 9 of EA No. 1: New Exchange Framework. The BCV will publish a reference rate based on the daily weighted average exchange rate of the transactions conducted by exchange operators. The reference exchange rate must apply to all foreign currency settlement operations of public and private sector banks. Foreign currency sales operations carried out by the BCV will be carried out at the reference exchange rate, while foreign currency purchase operations will be at the reference rate reduced by 0.25%.

In light of the regulatory framework for foreign exchange, monetary policy is a result of the interaction of exchange and fiscal policy and is tailored to both these policies.

Since March 10, 2016, the concepts associated with imports of goods on the list of food and health sector products, pensions for old age, retirement, partial disability, incapacity, and survivors, and with the recovery of health, sports, culture, scientific research, and face-to-face academic activities abroad under EA No. 35 of March 9, 2016, are settled at the selling rate of Bs/US$10.00.

DICOM is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the EA No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. The DICOM rate stood at Bs/US$79,800 (buying) and Bs/US$80,000 (selling) on May 29, 2018. In addition to the official DICOM exchange rate, there is a parallel market that is widely used by the private sector and individuals. As of May 30, 2018, the parallel rate stood at 1,684,848 bolivars per US dollar, according to BolivarCucuta; at 1,614,820 bolivars per dollar according to AirTM; and at 2,151,163 bolivars per dollar according to Cotizaciones. In comparison, DICOM was trading at only 80,000 bolivars per dollar during the same period. EA No. 39 regulates three types of transactions: (1) auctions of foreign currency, conducted through the new system at the supplementary floating market exchange rate (DICOM), (2) direct sales of foreign currency, and (3) transactions involving the negotiation in local currency of securities denominated in foreign currency issued by private sector issuers. EA No. 39 revokes EA Nos. 38 and 35. Article 37 stipulates that EA No. 39 has precedence over any other regulation issued in the past. Individuals and legal entities who wish to sell foreign currency for an amount of €8,500 or its equivalent in any other foreign currency, or less, can sell such foreign currency directly to the authorized exchange operators (which are, essentially, universal banks incorporated or domiciled in Venezuela and authorized to act in such capacity by the exchange control governmental authorities), at the DICOM exchange rate in force and effect as of the date of such sale, without having to resort for that purpose to the auctions of foreign currency conducted through the new DICOM system (EA No. 39, Article 15). The authorized exchange operators must make the sale of the foreign currencies received: (1) In the case of foreign currencies acquired on the occasion of the settlement of purchase operations through bank account transfers, they must be offered in full in the Market Floating Supplementary Exchange Rate System (DICOM), at the exchange rate of acquisition, increased by 1%. If said position is not awarded, it may be acquired by the BCV. (2) In the case of foreign currency in cash, they must be sold weekly to the BCV, at the exchange rate of acquisition, increased by 1%, under the terms indicated in the instructions issued for this purpose (EA No. 39, Article 15). The exchange rate of reference for the sale of the securities referred to in this Chapter must be that provided for in Article 11 of this EA, and the exchange rate applicable for the purchase must be the same rate of exchange reduced by 0.25%, applicable to the market value of the negotiable instrument, or to the value freely agreed by the parties involved in the transaction, when the instrument has no reference value in the market (EA No. 39, Article 22). Foreign exchange allocated by Centro Nacional de Comercio Exterior (National Foreign Trade Center—CENCOEX) is sold by foreign exchange dealers licensed by the BCV once CENCOEX has approved the foreign currencies in question. Trading, in domestic currency, of foreign exchange regulated by Chapter II of EA No. 33 of February 10, 2015 (Special G.O. No. 6.171 of the same date), is settled on the second business day following the agreement. Retail foreign exchange operations regulated by Chapter III of EA No. 33 of February 10, 2015 (Special G.O. No. 6.171 of the same date), are settled by foreign exchange dealers the same day. Trading, in domestic currency, of securities regulated by Chapter IV of EA No. 33 of February 10, 2015 (Special G.O. No. 6.171 of the same date), is settled three bank business days from the date of the agreement for value on that day. Individuals and private companies can buy and sell foreign currency through local commercial banks and exchange houses with no constraints on prices or amounts. The new market has been established where private foreign exchange buyers and sellers interact under BCV’s control. Individuals are still transacting small amounts in euros in cash in DICOM with government-owned banks.

Operated by the central bank: Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility: No.

Allocation: Yes. Allocations of foreign exchange are authorized by CENCOEX in accordance with the availability of foreign exchange and the country’s needs.

Auction: Yes. DICOM is the single official exchange rate in Venezuela. The DICOM rate is determined through an auction system. Article 28 of the EA No. 39 indicates that the exchange rate to be used by public and private sectors for all settlement operations in foreign currency will be the DICOM exchange rate. The DICOM system allows the sale and purchase of foreign currency (typically, euros) in exchange for local currency, through auctions of foreign currency administered, regulated, and directed by the Committee of Foreign Currency.
Auctions (the Committee), which is an internal specialized body within the BCV. Individuals and legal entities of the private sector can participate in the new DICOM system as offering parties (sellers) or bidding parties (purchasers) of foreign currency. On the other hand, public sector legal entities cannot participate in such system. To participate in the DICOM system, the respective person must electronically register with the system and provide certain information, make a sworn statement as to the origin and destination of the funds, hold a demand or term account denominated in foreign currency with a universal bank organized or domiciled in Venezuela and authorized to operate as such under Venezuelan banking legislation (a Local Account in Foreign Currency), and be up to date with the national tax obligations and the social security. The Committee must call auctions at least once a week and the calls must be made two banking days prior to the date of the auction. To participate in an auction of foreign currency, the bidding parties (purchasers) of foreign currency must submit their bids in terms of price and amount, and the offering parties (sellers) of foreign currency must submit their offers in terms of amount, electronically through the system, and indicate the validity term for their bids and offers (which can be no less than seven days nor greater than 30 days). The award of foreign currency starts by awarding foreign currency to the purchaser–bidders of foreign currency who have submitted bids for the highest admissible exchange rate and thereafter to the other purchaser–bidders of foreign currency based on the exchange rate submitted in their bids from the highest to the lowest exchange rate, until the point where the foreign currency offered (and, therefore, the foreign currency that can be awarded) at the respective auction is exhausted. In addition, the system is designed so that at least 10% of the foreign currency offered at each auction is awarded to individuals. The exchange rate applicable to each sale and purchase transaction of foreign currency conducted through the auctions can differ for each transaction because the same exchange rate will be, for each such transaction, the exchange rate that the respective purchasing–bidding party of foreign currency, to whom the foreign currency has been awarded, submitted in its bid. The settlement of the foreign currency awarded through the auctions will be made by crediting them to a Local Account in Foreign Currency. The auctions of foreign currency are conducted on the basis of a floating exchange rate system, based on an American auction type, where the offer (sale) and demand (purchase) bids of foreign currency are technologically matched (EA No. 39, Article 2). The BCV publishes on its website the exchange rate resulting from every auction of foreign currency. This exchange rate will be the lowest exchange rate at which a bid for the purchase of foreign currency was submitted in the auction by a legal entity (as opposed to by an individual) and was awarded foreign currency at the auction (which the rules refer to as the “marginal value of the awarded bids”). The exchange rate in force and effect at any given moment will be this exchange rate published by the BCV for the latest auction conducted as of the relevant moment (EA No. 39, Article 3). The Committee has discretion to determine the methodology for the award of the foreign currency under the new DICOM system. The DICOM system has limitations on the maximum amount of foreign currency purchases made through it. Individuals can purchase up to a maximum of €420 or its equivalent in any other foreign currency a calendar quarter. Private sector legal entities can purchase a monthly amount equal to 30% of the average monthly gross income declared for income tax purposes in the immediately preceding fiscal year, provided such amount does not exceed €340,000 or its equivalent in any other foreign currency a month. On the other hand, the said system has no limitations on the maximum amount of the sales of foreign currency (EA No. 39, Article 9). The current exchange rate will be that of the last auction. As well as the amounts awarded of foreign currencies, the list of individuals and legal entities (who won the auction) will be published on the website of the BCV, as well as on the website www.dicom.gob.ve, of the Market Floating Complementary Exchange Rate System (DICOM), corresponding to every auction made (EA No. 39, Article 11). The institutions of banking, insurance and securities market sectors, as well as savings banks and funds, trust funds, companies, and reciprocal guarantee and venture capital funds may not participate in the DICOM (EA No. 39, Article 19). Special foreign exchange and/or securities auctions are held by CENCOEX through Sistema Complementario de Asignación de Divisas (SICAD) and are administered and managed directly by it in accordance with the provisions of EA No. 26 of April 3, 2014 (G.O. No. 40.391 of April 10, 2014). CENCOEX is solely responsible for regulating the terms and conditions of these special auctions. CENCOEX handles the bid selection process for each auction based on the methodology approved for this purpose by its board of directors and informs the CB so that it may determine the exchange rate applicable to the auction in question, or the implicit exchange rate generated by the bid price for the purchase and sale in bolivars of securities denominated in foreign currencies, as appropriate.

Resolution No. 05-11-01 issued by the BCV on November 3, 2005, containing the “Regulations for the Declaration of the Import and Export of Foreign Exchange and the Export of Goods or Services.” Article 15 of the Decree with the Status, Effect and Force of Law on the Exchange Regime and Related Unlawful Activities establishes that individuals or legal entities that export or take out foreign exchange from the territory of the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela in amounts exceeding US$10,000 or its equivalent in other currencies must declare the amount and nature of the respective operation or activity to CENCOEX in the manner that it establishes, without prejudice to the powers of the BCV in this area. Moreover, Article 19 of the same decree law establishes that operations in securities issued by the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela that are purchased by individuals or legal entities, as well as all foreign exchange purchased by nonresident individuals who are in transit or who are tourists in the national territory and will remain in the country for a period of 90 consecutive days or less, are exempt from this requirement.

Exchange Rate Agreement No. 20, which came into force in June 2012, allowed accounts in foreign currency under certain conditions. Legal entities not domiciled in the national territory could maintain accounts in foreign currency sourced from abroad and could mobilize them only through total or partial withdrawals in Venezuelan legal tender at the current exchange rate. The law also allowed resident legal entities and natural persons to maintain foreign currency accounts, but the funds had to come from the settlement of securities issued by the government or another entity through the official systems for receiving foreign currency.

This agreement established the maintenance of foreign currency in the universal banks but did not allow operations or transactions in foreign currency. Deposits could be mobilized exclusively through their withdrawal in bolívares. Likewise, banks with deposits in foreign currency had to keep them in foreign currency accounts at the BCV.

With the repeal of the Law of the Exchange Regime and its Illicit Acts in 2018, new rules were established for the market, which contemplated the free convertibility of the currency in the national territory and the centralization in the BCV of purchases and sales of foreign currency by the universal banks. This agreement allowed citizens to use foreign currency for daily operations and led to a significant increase in dollarization in the country.

Regarding possession of accounts in dollars, the new EA allows individuals within Venezuela, as well as national and foreign legal entities, to maintain accounts in foreign currencies sourced from abroad or from the Venezuelan financial system itself. These funds may be mobilized by means of transfers and checks from the bank with its correspondents abroad.

In 2019, a number of different national banks offered accounts to legal entities to deposit their foreign currency cash. These accounts are called “free convertibility accounts” and are used mostly by the private sector.

At the beginning of 2020, the list of banks offering accounts for the deposit of foreign currency in cash was expanded. As of October 9, 2020, the BCV issued a circular ordering the cessation of products or services that facilitated payment for goods and services in Venezuela in foreign currency through local agents’ foreign currency accounts in domestic banks. The “free convertible accounts” were maintained, but their only function is to safeguard such money, and they may not be mobilized or used in transactions, except through physical withdrawals or deposits or transfers from branches abroad.

Foreign exchange accounts may be held in the national financial system by (1) individuals who are of age and resident in the national territory and legal entities domiciled in the country; (2) Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. and its subsidiaries; (3) public sector agencies and entities with BCV authorization or with an account with the BCV; and (4) Venezuelan nationals with a license from the Ministry of Popular Power for Petroleum and Mines to engage in the activities referred to in Chapter V of the Organic Law on Gaseous Hydrocarbons.

New measures announced in January 2021 allow accounts in foreign currency, but transfers and other operations in foreign currency between local banks are not yet authorized.

Approval required
Yes. Approval is required in the following cases: Public sector entities require the authorization of the board of directors of the BCV (except in cases in which the foreign exchange account is held with the BCV). Resolution No. 13-07-02 of July 25, 2013, issued by the BCV sets out provisions on the holding by the public sector of foreign currency funds in any form, establishing that these funds may be held in accounts opened for that purpose with the BCV, in universal banks in the domestic banking system, or in financial institutions abroad. The circular issued by the BCV on August 10, 2015, regulates the requirements for public sector entities subject to the measure for the centralization of foreign exchange and public banking institutions designated by said entities as banking agents for the provision of financial services on special foreign exchange accounts to be held with the BCV, for compliance with the aforementioned measure, and the execution of financial services on the aforementioned accounts. Article 1 of EA No. 13 of December 3, 2009, establishes that the board of directors of the BCV may authorize private sector legal entities to hold foreign exchange accounts with the BCV.

Held abroad

Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. may hold foreign currency funds with the approval of the Board of Directors of the BCV, along with its subsidiaries. In accordance with Article 5 of EA No. 9, companies created under partnership agreements signed by Petróleos de Venezuela S.A. under the framework of the now repealed Organic Law Reserving Industry and Trade in Hydrocarbons for the State, semipublic enterprises referred to in the Organic Law on Hydrocarbons and the Organic Law on Gaseous Hydrocarbons, and semipublic enterprises created under the provisions of the Decree with the Status, Effect and Force of Organic Law for the Development of Petrochemical Activities may, for purposes of making payments that must be made abroad, hold foreign exchange accounts abroad containing income received; such accounts are monitored by the BCV.

Clause 2, Article 15 of Decree No. 70/2014/ND-CP of July 17, 2014, states that: (1) the official exchange rate is determined based on demand and supply in the foreign exchange market under State Bank of Vietnam (SBV) regulations. The SBV regulates the exchange rate by deploying monetary policy instruments and intervening in the foreign exchange market. (2) The de jure exchange rate arrangement is managed floating and is determined by the SBV based on a currency basket of countries with trade, financing, and investment relationships with Vietnam, consistent with macroeconomic targets of each period. Decision No. 2730/QD-NHNN specifies that the central exchange rate is announced daily, based on reference of the interbank-weighted exchange rate, exchange rate developments in global markets of some currencies that are of Vietnam’s major investment, credit, and trading partners, monetary and macroeconomic balances, and monetary policy targets. The dong–US dollar exchange rate might fluctuate around the average interbank foreign currency market exchange rate announced by the SBV within a daily transaction band of ±3%. Since March 26, 2020, the exchange rate appreciated within a 2% band against the US dollar. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as crawl-like.

Floating
Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The Central Bank of Yemen (CBY) receives most of the foreign exchange proceeds, particularly crude oil export revenues, official loans, and official development assistance. Because of the conflict and economic instability, market rates started diverging from the fixed official exchange rate in 2015. In August 2017, the CBY decided to float the exchange rate. Nonetheless, different nonmarket official exchange rates have been used for different purposes, including time-varying official exchange rates for letters of credit to food importers between 2018 and 2021. Different official exchange rates were also used for the government’s foreign exchange transactions, including foreign exchange revenues from oil exports and foreign exchange expenditures, until January 2022, when the official exchange rate was adjusted from Yrls 400 per US dollar to the market rate. In August 2021, the official midpoint rate for customs-related transactions was changed from Yrls 250 to Yrls 500 per US dollar. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating.

The authorities apply a nonmarket exchange rate to the valuation of imports for the calculation of customs duties (effective July 25, 2021, Yrls 500 per US dollar; previously, 250 rials per US dollar). Effective January 27, 2022, the official rates for oil and foreign exchange expenditures were replaced with the market rate.

Monetary aggregate target

Yes. The main mission of the CBY, as set forth in Law No. 14 of 2000, is to maintain price stability by keeping inflation low. It aims to achieve this goal through monetary targeting. In 2020, the CBY began targeting the growth rate of the money supply (broad money) as an intermediate target; base money growth is used as an operational target. The annual monetary plans have focused on controlling the money supply in a manner consistent with the real economic needs of the public and private sectors. These plans remain a core part of the CBY’s strategy moving forward. Absent a foreign reserve buffer, strong commitment to the annual monetary plan targets remains the only tool at the CBY’s disposal to attempt to contain inflationary pressures and stabilize exchange rate movements. The CBY remains committed to its effective implementation.

Effective March 31, 2021, the exchange subsidy for private food importers was discontinued.

Commercial banks and money changers may freely set their exchange rates in transactions with their clients.

There are 22 commercial banks, including four foreign subsidiaries operating in Yemen, and five new banks were licensed in 2022. As of December 31, 2021, there were 315 licensed money changers (foreign exchange bureaus) licensed by the CBY that may maintain accounts abroad. Foreign exchange bureaus play an important role in the foreign exchange market and the determination of the spot exchange rate. The CBY conducts foreign exchange transactions only with commercial banks.
The CBY started a weekly single-price foreign exchange auction effective November 10, 2021. Participation in the auction is restricted to banks, which can bid on behalf of themselves or their clients. The auction started with a weekly amount of US$15 million, increased to US$20 million effective February 15, 2022, and to US $30 million effective May 16, 2022. For several weeks, the auction was conducted twice a week. Banks are required to report on the use of the foreign exchange obtained, which finances imports of all the commodities demanded in the market.

There is no formal interbank market. Beyond foreign exchange auctions, banks obtain foreign exchange from other sources, such as remittances and foreign aid inflows. Foreign exchange bureaus obtain their foreign exchange primarily from remittances.

Residents may use foreign currency for settlement of transactions.

Exchange control authority is vested in the CBY.
After the 1996–2001 Paris Club agreements, official creditors had to renegotiate the terms of their loans to Yemen to conform to Paris Club conditions, and rescheduling agreements had been signed with almost all creditors. With the start of the conflict in 2014, new arrears with respect to bilateral external creditors have accumulated. Yemen is current on its obligations to the IMF and the International Development Association. Yemen is a beneficiary of the IMF Catastrophe Containment and Relief Trust and G20/PC Debt Service Suspension Initiative.

Information on private sector external debt is not available.

Exports of domestic currency banknotes are not permitted.

Exports of more than US$10,000 require a permit from the CBY since December 22, 2019.

Imports of domestic currency banknotes are not permitted.

Imports of more than US$10,000 must be declared.

Foreign exchange accounts held domestically are permitted, and balances may be transferred abroad freely.

Foreign exchange accounts held abroad are permitted, and balances may be transferred to Yemen freely.

There are no nonresident blocked accounts.

Exchange Measures

- Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices: Yes.
- The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Zambia, states that as of July 11, 2019, Zambia maintained an exchange restriction, which is subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, arising from limitations imposed by the government on access to foreign exchange for the making of payments and transfers for current international transactions, which is evidenced by the existence of external payments arrears accumulated prior to October 4, 1985. (Country Report No. 19/263)

- Exchange measures imposed for security reasons: No.
- In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51) No.
- Other security restrictions No.

Exchange Arrangement

Classification

- Conventional peg
- Stabilized arrangement
- Crawling peg
- Crawl-like arrangement
- Pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands
- Other managed arrangement
The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The official exchange rate is determined in the interbank market. The Bank of Zambia (BOZ) intervenes primarily through transactions with ADs, which are registered commercial banks that meet the prescribed eligibility criteria under the Interbank Foreign Exchange Market (IFEM) Framework. The BOZ interventions are published on a biweekly basis with a 3-month lag.

From July 2021, the exchange rate increased its flexibility. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified to floating from crawl-like, effective July 19, 2021.

The Kwacha recovered strongly in 2021, particularly in the second half of the year, from a sharp depreciation in 2020. This was mainly supported by higher inflows from nonresident investors in government securities and positive market sentiments driven by better macroeconomic prospects, including expectations and eventual allocation of the SDRs by the IMF. Consequently, the Kwacha appreciated by 21.0% against the US dollar to close the year at K16.67. However, demand pressures emerged during the fourth quarter as the need to finance imports of petroleum products intensified. To moderate these pressures and avoid excessive volatility of the exchange rate, the BOZ supported the market by selling the mineral tax receipts—paid directly in US dollars to the government through the BOZ. This significantly reduced the demand backlog to almost US$63.0 million at end-December 2021 from a peak of US$415.0 million in May 2021.

The foreign exchange interbank rates are used to determine the BOZ official exchange rates: The BOZ buying rate is the simple average of the AD bid rates, and the selling rate is the simple average of the AD offer rates. The simple averages of the real-time rates collected from the ADs are published on the BOZ website as official rates. The daily official publication times on the BOZ website for 09:30 hrs, 12:30 hrs, and 15:30 hrs are simple averages of the real-time rates collected from the ADs at these respective times. Transactions between the BOZ and the market, and between the BOZ and the government use the mid-exchange (official) rate, calculated as the average of the bid and offer exchange rate quotes provided by ADs in the IFEM. Other members of the public such as research institutions and academia use historical exchange rate data published on the BOZ website to conduct research work. In some instances, members of the public request for this information to facilitate awards and compensation for court cases.
In April 2012, the BOZ introduced the policy rate as a key policy instrument to signal the monetary policy stance and anchor inflation expectations. Under this framework, the BOZ manages liquidity conditions in the market so as to ensure that the interbank rate remains within the policy rate corridor, defined as ±2 percentage points around the policy rate. The policy rate corridor is currently ±1... percentage point around the policy rate. Government, through the minister of finance, sets the inflation target range. The Board of the BOZ is composed of the governor, who is the chairperson, and six other directors appointed by the minister of finance. The directors are appointed from among persons with professional or academic experience in business or financial matters and who are not officials or employees of the Bank. The secretary of the Treasury is an ex-officio member of the Board and without power to vote and does not count for a quorum.

In Zambia, the price stability objective is attained through the achievement and maintenance of inflation within the target range of 6–8%. Bi-annual publication of the Monetary Policy Statement is required by Law. Currently, the BOZ publishes its inflation forecasts for a period of six months in its Monetary Policy Statement and for eight quarters in the MPC Statement.

Exchange tax
No.

Exchange subsidy

Foreign exchange market
Yes. Commercial banks negotiate rates for transactions with their nonbank counterparties. For interbank transactions, commercial banks designated as ADs are obliged to provide firm two-way quotes to fellow ADs for the market lot ranging from US$0.5 million to US$1.0 million. For amounts outside the market lot, the two-way quote provided is subject to negotiation. ADs are required to conduct business in a professional and ethical manner to enhance market discipline and market integrity. ADs are required to disclose any investigations, litigation, arbitration, complaints, disciplinary proceedings, or other matters relating to professional conduct. This is intended to hold commercial banks accountable for any breaches of the IFEM rules. Commercial banks are the only institutions that may engage directly with the BOZ in buying and selling foreign exchange. Commercial banks also transact with retail and corporate clients at rates not exceeding the interbank bid price and sell at rates not exceeding the retail board offer rate.

Spot exchange market
Yes. Seventeen commercial banks are licensed by the BOZ to trade in the IFEM. Commercial banks are the only financial institutions that may engage directly with the BOZ in buying and selling foreign exchange. Foreign exchange bureaus may operate in Zambia and are also licensed by the BOZ. As of December 31, 2021, there were 74 licensed exchange bureaus. They may transact with the public and commercial banks but may not maintain accounts abroad. Transactions of foreign exchange bureaus are limited to the OTC sale and purchase of foreign exchange banknotes and traveler’s checks.

Over the counter

Other imports, except those on the negative list, do not require licenses. The Ministry of Commerce, Trade, and Industry is responsible for trade arrangements.

Restrictions apply to imports of firearms, ammunition, and ivory.

Some imports are exempt under the Investment Act. Imports from signatories of the COMESA FTA are tax exempt.

Exchange Measures

The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Zimbabwe states that, as of February 12, 2020, Zimbabwe continues to maintain a series of measures that give rise to several exchange restrictions and MCPs, inconsistent with Article VIII, Section 2(a) and Section 3, in particular:

1. Under the official guidance issued by the Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe (RBZ), commercial banks are required to prioritize their foreign exchange sale to finance specific categories of international transactions which constitutes an exchange restriction as it limits the availability of foreign exchange for payments and transfers for current international transactions, in particular in the non-priority or low-priority categories. Further, the prioritization also results in an MCP as it channels some of the non-priority or low-priority transactions to the bureau market which has an exchange rate of more than 2% in excess of that in the interbank market.
2. The RBZ also allocates foreign exchange to finance certain necessity imports, and purchases repatriated foreign exchange proceeds that exporters are required to sell (surrender) to the RBZ, at the prior business date’s interbank rate. These allocation and purchase transactions at the prior business date’s interbank rate constitute an MCP as this rate has recently deviated and may continue to deviate by more than 2% from the prevailing foreign exchange rate for other foreign exchange transactions taking place on the same date. The foreign exchange allocation here also gives rise to an exchange restriction as it limits the availability of foreign exchange for payments and transfers for other current international transactions not eligible to receive such allocation.
3. Zimbabwe has also a longstanding exchange restriction subject to IMF jurisdiction arising from unsettled balances under an inoperative bilateral payment agreement with Malaysia. (Country Report No. 20/82)

Other managed arrangement: Yes.

In February 2019, Zimbabwe adopted a de jure floating exchange rate arrangement. The currency of Zimbabwe is the Zimbabwe dollar and is the sole legal tender. The CB provides foreign currency that the importers bid for at the weekly Foreign Exchange Auction. The CB regularly sells a given amount of foreign exchange through a bidding process and buys foreign exchange in the intervening periods at the previous auction-determined rate.

From September 2020 to August 2021, the exchange rate stabilized against the US dollar, with one realignment in February 2021, before increasing its flexibility again. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified twice: (1) retroactively to stabilized from other managed, effective September 16, 2020, and (2) to other managed from stabilized, effective August 6, 2021.

The monetary policy framework is based on targeting monetary... aggregates. The CB will use reserve money as the operational target for monetary policy. Specifically, the CB will target an appropriately calibrated growth in broad money (M3) of about 15% in 2019 (excluding revaluation changes), with a view to help stabilize the macroeconomic environment, support the new currency, and restore investor confidence. To achieve this, the CB will use base money (comprised of bond notes and coins, and Real-Time Gross Settlement (RTGS) dollar balances of banks with the CB as an operational target for monetary policy. To achieve these targets, the CB will use all instruments at its disposal, including interest rates, changes in the minimum reserve requirements, and open market operations (securities discount window), as needed.

On domestic ownership and/or trade | Yes.

No one, either as principal or agent, may deal in or possess gold unless that person is (1) the holder of a license or a permit, (2) the holder or the distributor of a registered gold mining location, or (3) an employee or an agent of (1) or (2) and is authorized to deal in or possess gold already in the lawful possession of the employer or principal. A mining commissioner may issue to any person a permit authorizing the acquisition, possession, or disposal of less than one troy ounce of gold. For larger amounts, permission must be issued by the secretary for mines. Under the Gold Trade Act, three types of licenses may be issued: gold dealing, gold recovery, and gold assaying. Gold obtained from a registered mining location must be turned over to the holder of its gold dealing license no later than the 10th day of the month, except with specific permission from the mining commissioner or the appropriate minister. Smelting of gold or articles containing gold requires a license from a district commissioner in accordance with the Second-hand Goods Act, which authorizes the possession of smelting equipment. The 2014 National Budget Statement presented by the minister of finance and economic development on December 19, 2013, states that only Fidelity Printers and Refiners (a subsidiary of the CB) may buy and export gold.

Exporters must apply to the CB for authorization to export gold. The importation of gold is controlled by the Gold Trade Act. Foreign currency and traveler’s checks may be imported without restriction but must be declared on entry to facilitate re-exportation and checks on money-laundering tendencies.

Resident Accounts | Yes.

Foreign exchange accounts permitted | Yes.
Held domestically
Yes. Individuals and firms may open with an AD up to nine foreign exchange accounts denominated in US dollars, South African rand, Botswana pula, pounds sterling, euros, Chinese renminbi, Australian dollars, Japanese yen, and Indian rupees. These may be (1) individual foreign exchange accounts—the balance may be transferred abroad without restriction, including for capital account transfers; (2) general corporate foreign exchange accounts—these hold balances of locally earned foreign currency of companies, state enterprises, and public entities and may be freely transferred abroad for current account transactions. Capital account transfers require Exchange Control approval; and (3) export corporate foreign exchange accounts—these hold foreign currency earned by resident companies (including state enterprises and public entities) through exports and may be freely transferred abroad for current account transactions. Capital account transfers require Exchange Control approval. Funds may be held in these accounts indefinitely. Account holders may withdraw any amount of cash from their foreign exchange accounts. Individuals may deposit any amount with banks on a know-your-customer basis. The designation of Foreign Currency Accounts (FCAs) was changed in 2015. To reduce the administrative burden on ADs and account holders, the CB transformed the FCA framework that was based on Source of Funds Concept into a new FCA framework based on the Account Holder Concept. Under the new framework, the RBZ re-designated FCAs with a view to providing operational simplicity, convenience to the account holder, and reduction in costs. The FCAs were re-designated and consolidated using the Account Holder Concept into the following two categories: (1) corporate FCAs (CFCAs) and (2) individual FCAs (IFCAs).
