<td>Credit facilities local banks may extend in dinars to nonresidents are limited to those that finance dinar-denominated contracts awarded by government entities in Kuwait, in accordance with the terms and controls in the CBK instructions of May 2, 1995. When extending credit facilities to their resident and nonresident customers for work and projects outside Kuwait, local banks must comply with the minimum limits under CBK Instruction No. BSB/105/1993 concerning the Rationalization and Organization of Banks’ Credit Policy and the relevant circulars. The following are relevant in this regard: (1) Credit must be extended on a sound basis, particularly regarding the purpose of the credit; the consistency of the credit type, size, and currency with the actual needs of the customer and within the limits of the financed contract; and use of the credit for the purpose for which it was extended. In general, an integrated credit study is required on the feasibility of the requested credit, taking into account the soundness of the customer’s financial position, the availability of repayment sources, and the collateral submitted, among other considerations. (2) Banks should minimize their exposure to credit risk by distributing risk across a wide customer base, diversifying their credit facilities portfolio and distributing it across various sectors of the economy, and establishing limits for risk associated with foreign credit, taking into account the nature of country risks. Banks must periodically review their credit policies and introduce appropriate amendments, particularly in regard to applied limits and delegated authority, all within the strategic direction of the bank and current developments.</td>

KYRGYZ REPUBLIC

(Position as of August 31, 2022)

Status under IMF Articles of Agreement

Date of membership: May 8, 1992.

Article VIII: Yes. Date of acceptance: March 29, 1995.

Article XIV

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices: Yes. The IMF staff report for the 2021 Article IV Consultation with the Kyrgyz Republic states that, as of May 18, 2021, the Kyrgyz Republic maintained a MCP arising from the use of the official exchange rate for government transactions. The official rate may differ by more than 2% from market rates because it is based on the average transaction weighted rate of the preceding day. (Country Report No. 21/174)

Exchange measures imposed for security reasons: Yes. The Kyrgyz Republic maintains certain exchange restrictions in accordance with UNSC resolutions to combat the financing of terrorism and for anti-money-laundering purposes.

Other security restrictions: Yes. Measures have been adopted that restrict financial transactions and freeze the accounts of certain individuals and organizations associated with terrorism, pursuant to UNSC resolutions, the current FATF list of organizations associated with terrorism, and a list of individuals and entities involved in terrorism and/or extremist activities, or in the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, compiled by the State Financial Intelligence Service under the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic (GKR).

Exchange Arrangement

Currency: Yes. The currency of the Kyrgyz Republic is the Kyrgyz som.

Other legal tender: No.

Exchange rate structure

Unitary

Dual: Yes. The exchange rate structure is dual, because the official rate may differ by more than 2% from market rates because it is based on the average transaction-weighted rate from 3:00 p.m. of the preceding trading day until 3:00 p.m. of the current trading day. In practice, the official and market rates have not differed by more than 2%, not including the period February 25–April 22, 2022. Since 2010, the official exchange rate of the US dollar against the som has been calculated daily as the weighted average of the exchange rates used in US dollar purchase and sale transactions carried out in the exchange market through the National Bank of the Kyrgyz Republic’s (NBKR’s) Automated Trading System (ATS) for the reporting period from 3:00 p.m. of the previous trading day until 3:00 p.m. of the current trading day. Since 2012, the official exchange rates of the euro, ruble, and tenge have been determined daily. The official exchange rates of other foreign currencies are determined on a weekly basis, based on the cross-rates of quotes for these currencies against the US dollar in international financial markets.

Stabilized arrangement Yes. The exchange arrangement is floating, that is, the movement of the exchange rate is determined by the foreign currency supply and demand. The National Bank may participate in the interbank foreign exchange market only for the purpose of smoothing out sharp fluctuations in the exchange rate. Information on interventions is published on the NBKR’s official website on the day interventions are conducted after the close of the trading day. Data on the date an intervention is performed and on the volume of U.S. dollars bought and sold are published.

In 2021, the situation in the foreign exchange market developed against the backdrop of further spread of the coronavirus infection. The National Bank’s participation in currency trading depended on the conditions in the domestic foreign exchange market. The official exchange rate of the U.S. dollar against the som in 2021 grew by 1.5%, reaching 84.7586 soms to the U.S. dollar at the end of the reporting year. From January 2022 on the situation in the foreign exchange market remained relatively stable, although from February 2022 it continued to be affected by the geopolitical situation in the world and uncertainty in external financial markets. From the beginning of 2022 through June 30, the official exchange rate of the U.S. dollar against the som fell by 6.25% from 84.8000 to 79.5000 soms to the U.S. dollar.

Since January 2021, the exchange rate stabilized within a 2% band against the US dollar. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified to stabilized from other managed, effective January 20, 2021. Although the exchange rate increased its flexibility since February 2022, more observations are needed to determine its new trend. Until then, the de facto exchange rate arrangement remains classified as stabilized.

Official exchange rate Yes. The official exchange rate of the US dollar against the som is calculated daily as the weighted average of the exchange rates used in noncash US dollar purchase and sale transactions carried out in the exchange market through the NBKR’s ATS for the reporting period.
from 3:00 p.m. of the previous trading day until 3:00 p.m. of the current trading day. Thus, the calculation of the official exchange rate of the US dollar takes into account all spot exchange rates, and it also takes into consideration volatility in the interbank foreign exchange market.

The official exchange rates of the euro, ruble, and tenge are determined daily. Effective March 14, 2022, the official exchange rate of the Russian ruble against the Kyrgyz som is calculated at a cross rate based on the average values between the maximum and minimum exchange rates of the US dollar against the ruble, recorded in the Bloomberg news agency/Reuters news agency in the period from 15:00 of the previous trading day until 15:00 of the current trading day Bishkek time.

The official exchange rates of other foreign currencies are determined on a weekly basis, based on the cross-rates of quotes for these currencies against the US dollar in international financial markets. The NBKR determines and announces the official exchange rates of foreign currency against the som for accounting and settlement purposes, without any obligation to buy or sell foreign currency at these rates.

According to the agreement between the NBKR and the Central Treasury of the Kyrgyz Republic Ministry of Finance, when performing operations involving the conversion/purchase and subsequent transfer of foreign currency, the Central Treasury uses (1) the official exchange rate for foreign currencies set by the National Bank and in effect on the date payment is made (in the event that the foreign currency is in the National Bank’s currency portfolio and is included in the quotation list of the National Bank), or (2) the negotiated currency exchange rate with a commercial bank of the Kyrgyz Republic or a foreign correspondent bank of the National Bank (in the event that the NBKR does not hold the foreign currency), with compensation by the Central Treasury of exchange rate differences arising in the purchase of foreign currency not held by the NBKR and their transfer.

The National Bank defines the procedure and conditions for the performance of transactions in the interbank foreign exchange market, and it develops and implements a single foreign exchange policy and regulation in the Kyrgyz Republic. Transactions involving the purchase and sale (exchange) of cash and noncash domestic and/or foreign currency within the Kyrgyz Republic are not restricted and are performed at banks, specialized financial and financial and lending institutions, microfinance companies, microcredit companies, credit unions, and exchange bureaus with the relevant license from the National Bank.

Transactions involving the purchase and sale (exchange) of cash and noncash domestic and/or foreign currency within the Kyrgyz Republic are not restricted and are performed only at banks, specialized financial and financial and lending institutions, microfinance companies, microcredit companies, credit unions, and exchange bureaus with the relevant license from the National Bank. The procedure and conditions for the performance of transactions involving the purchase and sale (exchange) of cash and noncash domestic and/or foreign currency, as well as requirements imposed on authorized persons, are determined by the National Bank (Article 26 of the Kyrgyz Republic Constitutional Law on the NBKR).

As of December 31, 2020, there were 23 licensed commercial banks (including one branch of a foreign bank), 379 foreign currency exchange bureaus, 9 microfinance companies licensed to perform certain banking operations in foreign currency, and 2 microcredit companies licensed to perform the purchase and sale of foreign currency on their own behalf.

In accordance with Article 11 of Kyrgyz Republic Law No. 206 of December 16, 2016, on the NBKR, Banks, and Banking, commission fees and rates for the performance of banking services are set independently by the persons performing the banking services, in accordance with the requirements of the banking legislation of the Kyrgyz Republic.

In accordance with Article 35 of the same law, the official exchange rate is determined and announced by the National Bank on the basis of the market spot exchange rate and other market rates. The official exchange rate is determined and announced by the National Bank with an obligation on the part of the National Bank to purchase and sell foreign currency at the announced exchange rates, and at the same time, pursuant to Paragraph 2 of the same article, the spot exchange rate and other market rates are freely determined between the seller and the buyer, unless otherwise established by the National Bank.

In accordance with Article 2-1 of Kyrgyz Republic Law No. 116 of July 22, 2011, on Competition, anti-monopoly regulation in the banking services market is performed by the NBKR in accordance with regulatory legal acts, compliance with which is mandatory for commercial banks and other financial and lending institutions licensed and regulated by the NBKR.

The sale and purchase of cash and noncash foreign exchange through clearing transactions, payment of traveler’s checks, and payments in foreign currency are limited to NBKR-licensed banks.

Licenses to perform the activity of a foreign currency exchange bureau are issued only to legal entities. The activities of foreign currency exchange bureaus are licensed and regulated by the NBKR. Foreign currency exchange bureaus may conduct only transactions specified in their licenses. They may not perform foreign exchange transactions directly with the CB. Legal entities that open exchange bureaus and have a license to perform exchange transactions with foreign exchange cash may without restriction purchase and sell using their own resources (within the limits of their reported working capital) and on their own behalf only foreign exchange cash, and only in exchange for cash domestic currency. Exchange bureaus must provide information on the sources of their working capital (NBKR Executive Board Resolution No. 53/10 of November 27, 2014). If a legal entity opens an account abroad, this does not mean that this is an account of the foreign currency exchange bureau. A foreign currency exchange bureau itself may not open an account abroad.

Spot exchange market: Yes.
To engage in the purchase and sale of foreign currency on its own behalf, credit union and microcredit company have to obtain an additional license from the NBKR. A microfinance company has to obtain a license to perform certain banking operations in foreign currency. A specialized financial and lending institution has to obtain licenses to perform exchange operations with foreign currency.
To ensure the economic security of the Kyrgyz Republic and stabilize the situation in the domestic foreign exchange market, the National Bank adopted a set of measures. Effective March 18, 2022, the volume of transactions in tenge for financial institutions was temporarily limited. Effective March 19, 2022, the purchase rate of the tenge for financial institutions was temporarily reduced (except for exporters). Effective July 22, 2022, the volume of transactions with foreign currency in cash between exchange offices and commercial banks was limited. Effective July 27, 2022, the conversion of a money transfer must be made at the rate indicated in the information stand of the purchase and sales rates of foreign currencies.

The list of liabilities included in the calculation base for required reserves includes all deposits of individuals and legal entities, as well as deposits of the Kyrgyz Republic Government and local government authorities. Commercial banks deposit required reserves in a correspondent account with the NBKR. The NBKR Executive Board Resolution No. 16/5 of April 23, 2014, specifies the procedure for compliance with reserve requirements, in accordance with which the base period for compliance with reserve requirements is four calendar weeks. The volume of required reserves is determined on the basis of the average daily calculation base for the previous base period, and the amount of required reserves is established by the NBKR Executive Board. The required reserve value that is established remains in effect throughout the four weeks of the base period. The som equivalent of foreign exchange liabilities included in the calculation base is calculated daily at the NBKR’s official exchange rate. Monitoring of compliance with required reserves is carried out at the end of the four-week base period. Reserve requirements are deemed to have been met if for the base period as a whole the difference between the amount of funds in a commercial bank’s correspondent account with the NBKR and the amount of required reserves is positive or equal to 0.

The volume of funds on a commercial bank’s correspondent account for compliance with the reserve requirements on a daily basis must not be below the minimum threshold level determined by the NBKR Executive Board. The minimum threshold level is 70% (since April 1, 2020) of a bank’s required reserves for the relevant period. The amount of required reserves, the list of liabilities to be included in the calculation base, and the interest rate for meeting required reserve standards are set by the Executive Board of the NBKR. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is a managed float. The Bank of Lao P.D.R. (BOL) allows the exchange rate to be determined by foreign currency supply and demand, but it may participate in the market as the last resort when needed. Despite trade surplus in 2021, the Lao Kip continues to depreciate against the US dollar, which may be driven by the appreciation of the US dollar against other major currencies in international markets, the repayment of debt denominated in foreign currencies, strong demand for the US dollar to serve as store of value in Lao P.D.R., especially during the second half of 2021.
wave of COVID-19 pandemic, and the imbalance of the use of foreign exchanges to settle international trade transactions as well as the increase in price of import products especially oil price. Although the trade balance is better than the same period of last year, only about 30% of export value has been conducted through bank transfers. The remaining 70% of export value has not been conducted through bank transfers. Meanwhile, more than 90% of import value has been conducted through bank transfers. This means that the banking system faces a shortage of foreign exchanges as the actual amount of foreign exchange outflow through imports is greater than that of the inflow through exports. Furthermore, the primary income continues to record as a deficit. In 2022, the Lao economy is expected to recover from the pandemic, but the pace of its recovery as well as the rest of the world would face several downside risks, especially the pressure on exchange rate because of a rise in interest rates in the United States, the conflict between Russian and Ukraine, and strong demand for foreign currencies in the Lao economy. Also, cash flow management in Lao currently is not efficient enough. An escalation of such risks would further contribute to the depreciation of the Lao Kip against the US dollar. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a crawl-like arrangement. Data on interventions are not published.

Official exchange rate  Yes. The official exchange rate is calculated by the BOL as the weighted average of the previous day’s interbank rates and rates of commercial banks. This rate is used to set the daily reference rate. Since September 15, 2021, the BOL increased the flexibility of the reference exchange rate for Lao Kip against the US dollar. The band of commercial banks’ exchange rate movement relative to the reference rate has been widen from ±0.25% to ±1.5%, and the margin of buying and selling rates was set at 0.50% for the US dollar, 0.75% for EUR and Thai Baht, and 2% for other foreign currencies. This means that the commercial banks could set their exchange rate below 1.5% of the reference rate or above -1.5% of the reference rate. The trend of the reference exchange rate movement has also been regular reviewed and adjusted to reflect the trend of the market exchange rate.

In addition, the supervision of foreign exchange bureaus was shifted from the BOL to commercial banks. In other words, the BOL has turned foreign exchange bureaus to foreign exchange service agents under the supervision of commercial banks in July 2021, to facilitate the foreign exchanges between foreign exchange bureaus and commercial banks, and to limit their unfavorable roles in the foreign exchange market.

Other monetary framework Yes. The monetary policy framework is a mixed regime of monetary targeting and an exchange rate anchor. The BOL’s ultimate targets are to ensure the GDP growth at 4% per year or higher over the period 2021–2025 and to maintain single-digit inflation rate.

In 2021, the BOL implemented an expansionary monetary policy to encourage commercial banks’ lending to the private sector, while increased the exchange rate flexibility to reflect the economic uncertainties during the COVID-19 pandemic. The private sector was supported by monetary support measures including reducing the reserve requirement ratio, maintaining a low policy interest rate, namely the reserve requirement ratio was reduced from 4% to 3% for the Lao Kip and from 8% to 5% for foreign currencies; the policy interest rate was kept at its lowest level, which was 3% for the interest rate on loans with the duration of less than 1 week; and the band of commercial banks’ exchange rate movement relative to the reference rate has been widen from ±0.25% to ±1.5%, and the margin of buying and selling rates was set at 0.50% for the US dollar, 0.75% for EUR and Thai Baht, and 2% for other foreign currencies.

In 2022, the Lao economy is expected to growth at 4.4%, but it could be undermined by rising inflation fueled by sharp increases in energy and food prices, tightening monetary condition, and economic slowdown in major advanced economies. Therefore, in 2022, the key monetary policy challenge is to manage policy trade-offs between prudent policies to control inflation as well as to lower exchange rate depreciation pressures. These include increasing the reserve requirement ratio from 3% to 5% for the Lao Kip while maintaining 5% for foreign currencies, increasing policy interest rate from 3% to 3.1% for loan less than 1 week.

Besides, in the middle of 2022, the BOL has issued kip denominated bond amounting to 5.000 billion kip (US$333 billion) with an interest rate of 20% per year and a maturity of 6 months. Such bonds can be held by individuals and legal entities based in Lao P.D.R., except commercial banks and financial institutions. The purpose of bond issuance is to reduce excess money supply, inflation rate, and exchange rate depreciation pressures.

To maintain price stability is the primary objective of the Eurosystem and of the single monetary policy for which it is responsible. This is stated in the Treaty on the Functioning of the EU, Article 127(1). “Without prejudice to the objective of price stability,” the Eurosystem will also “support the general economic policies in the Community with a view to contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Community.” These include a “high level of employment” and “sustainable and non-inflationary growth.” Effective July 7, 2021, price stability is defined as a symmetric 2% inflation target over the medium term. Latvia is a member of the EU. The BOL participates in the real-time euro gross settlement system under Trans-European Automated Real-time Gross Settlement Express Transfer System (TARGET2).

Government decisions adopted by the cabinet of ministers and approved by parliament prevail in foreign exchange and trade matters, but regulations governing foreign exchange transactions must be issued by the BOL. Foreign exchange transactions must be carried out through authorized banks and enterprises licensed by the FCMC and the BOL, respectively.

Gold articles (except coins and bullion) for the domestic market are subject to compulsory hallmarking. Market surveillance control on domestic trade in gold articles is also in place.

Business activity must be registered with the Assay Office of Latvia.

In accordance with Regulation (EC) No. 1889/2005, cash controls have been implemented based on a mandatory declaration system for amounts of cash entering or leaving the EU with a value of €10,000 or more. Travelers entering or leaving the EU and carrying cash of value of €10,000 or more are required to make a declaration to the relevant authorities of the member country through which they enter or leave the EU. The authorities must keep a record of such information and report it to their national FIU. The obligation to declare is not fulfilled if the traveler makes no declaration or if the information provided is incorrect or incomplete. To check compliance with the regulation, the national authorities have the right to search natural persons, their baggage, and their means of transportation. In the event of failure to comply with the declaration obligation, cash may be confiscated. The EC regulation requires member countries to impose penalties for failure to comply with the declaration obligation. If there are indications that cash is related to illegal activity, authorities of one member country may exchange information with authorities in other member countries. Under the framework of existing agreements on mutual administrative assistance, information obtained under the EC regulation may also be communicated to a third country in compliance with relevant national and EU provisions on the transfer of personal data to third countries. The EC regulation does not apply to physical cross-border transportation from one EU member country to another (that is, intra-EU transportation). Such transportation is not considered “cross-border” for the purpose of the EC regulation; the EC regulation only harmonizes the system for the EU’s external borders.

Travelers leaving the EU and carrying cash of value of €10,000 or more are required to make a declaration to the relevant authorities of the member country through which they leave the EU.

Latvian financial institutions with certain types of shell entities.
Customers from higher risk jurisdictions are subject to enhanced customer due diligence (EDD) (obligatory requirement).
The FCMC manual on client due diligence and AML/CFT internal control system was adopted (recommendations for the credit institutions and financial institutions). The recommendations give insight into the practical aspects of conducting and managing client risks, including determining the country of residence of the client, conducting due diligence, and the specifics of enhanced due diligence.
Effective January 12, 2021, the FCMC adopted a revised framework for client due diligence: the FCMC Regulations No. 5 “Client due diligence and risk scoring system and information technology regulations” (KYC Regulations) stipulating the risk-based approach and requiring to assess the risk in line with European Banking Authority (EBA) Guidelines on risk factors and simplified and enhanced customer due diligence. The Guidelines require to assess the nonresident risk factor and to understand the need to receive financial services abroad. The amendments to the AML/CFT Law remove the prohibition of remote identification for certain risk profile clients. Remote identification rules are stipulated in the Rules of the Cabinet of Ministers No. 392 “Procedures by which the Subject of the Law on the Prevention of Money Laundering and Terrorism Financing Performs the Remote Identification of a Customer” from July 3, 2018 (Remote identification rules). The FCMC remote identification guidelines were adopted effective February 15, 2022.

Accounts may be blocked in cases specified by the AML/CFT Law, for example, if account holders are suspected of engaging in money laundering. These provisions apply equally to resident and nonresident accounts, irrespective of the currency.

Lending to nonresidents is included in a set of credit risk indicators within the Supervisory Review and Evaluation Process. High share of nonresidents lending could impact the overall credit risk Supervisory Review and Evaluation Process score and the respective Pillar 2 capital requirements (P2R level).

Banks are subject to capital requirements for indirect foreign exchange risk arising from lending to unhedged resident retail borrowers if such loans exceed 10% of the loan portfolio (Regulations on Establishment of the Capital and Liquidity Adequacy Assessment Process).

The LCR requirement is 100%.

When calculating the capital requirement for sectoral concentration risk, banks must include all exposures with nonresidents – enterprises, and financial institutions – in the calculation in the form of a separate sector (Regulations on Establishment of the Capital and Liquidity Adequacy Assessment Process).

The open foreign exchange position is limited to 10% of capital for any single foreign currency and 20% for all foreign currencies. Banks are subject to capital requirements for indirect foreign exchange risk arising from lending to unhedged resident retail borrowers if such loans exceed 10% of the loan portfolio (Regulations on Establishment of the Capital and Liquidity Adequacy Assessment Process).

Net open position in a single currency and overall foreign exchange position are calculated according to Articles 352–354 of Regulation No. 575/2013, that is, using the methodology used to calculate capital requirements for foreign exchange risk (both residents and nonresidents).

All accounts are subject to the Law on Combating Money Laundering (which also deals with terrorism financing and corruption) and the relevant circulars issued by the BDL. Accounts are subject to the Law No. 55 related to the exchange of information for tax purposes in the case of request of foreign authorities.

Exceptionally, because of the financial crisis, depositors are allowed to withdraw banknotes from their foreign-currency-denominated accounts in Lebanese pounds using an exchange rate of USD/LBP 2,600 as of April 21, 2020. This rate then changed to 3,000 on May 10, 2020, 3,900 on July 20, 2020, and 8,000 effective December 10, 2021. Banks have to sell back the purchased foreign currencies to the BDL. This measure was introduced on April 21, 2020, and was to remain in effect until December 31, 2022. However, effective July 27, 2022, banks are no longer obligated to sell back the purchased foreign currencies to the BDL.

Effective July 1, 2021, banks should take the necessary measures to pay back part of a depositor’s total foreign currency accounts opened before October 31, 2019, in all banks operating in Lebanon as follows:

- Maximum amount to be paid back is around US$9,600 a year and US$50,000 over 5 years.
- 50% of the eligible amount (that is, US$4,800 a year) is allowed to be paid in USD banknotes or transferred abroad or used through banking cards on the basis of US$400 a month. The remaining 50% will be converted to LBP using an exchange rate USD/LBP 12,000. The amount allowed to be withdrawn in LBP banknotes is limited to half the converted amount.
- USD-denominated withdrawals will be financed through banks’ own liquidity (50% of the withdrawn amount) and through the freed mandatory placements with the BDL (the remaining 50% of the withdrawn amount). In case the minimum “net placements abroad ratio” (as per BDL Basic Circular No. 154) drops to below 3% because of only the above withdrawals, banks will have till end-2023 to re-comply with the minimum requirement mentioned above.
- Depositors benefitting from the above scheme in one bank are still eligible to benefit from BDL Basic Circular No. 151 in other banks. Subject to renewal or amendment, the measure will remain effective until June 30, 2023.

Nonresident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted  Yes. All accounts are subject to the Law on Combating Money Laundering (which also deals with terrorism financing and corruption) and the relevant circulars issued by the BDL. Accounts are subject to the Law No. 55 related to the exchange of information for tax purposes in the case of request of foreign authorities. Exceptionally, because of the financial crisis, depositors are allowed to withdraw banknotes from their foreign-currency-denominated accounts in Lebanese pounds using an exchange rate of USD/LBP 2,600 as of April 21, 2020. This rate was changed to 3,000 on May 10, 2020, 3,900 on July 20, 2020, and 8,000 effective December 10, 2021. Banks have to sell back the purchased foreign currencies to the BDL. This measure was introduced on April 21, 2020, and was to remain until December 31, 2022. However, effective July 27, 2022, banks are no longer obligated to sell back the purchased foreign currencies to the BDL.

Effective July 1, 2021, banks should take the necessary measures to pay back part of a depositor’s total foreign currency accounts opened before October 31, 2019, in all banks operating in Lebanon as follows:
• Maximum amount to be paid back is around US$9,600 a year and US$50,000 over 5 years.
• 50% of the eligible amount (that is, US$4,800 a year) is allowed to be paid in USD banknotes or transferred abroad or used through banking cards on the basis of US$400 a month. The remaining 50% will be converted to LBP using an exchange rate USD/LBP 12,000. The amount allowed to be withdrawn in LBP banknotes is limited to half the converted amount.
• USD-denominated withdrawals will be financed through banks’ own liquidity (50% of the withdrawn amount) and through the freed mandatory placements with the BDL (the remaining 50% of the withdrawn amount). In case the minimum “net placements abroad ratio” (as per BDL Basic Circular No. 154) drops to below 3% because of only the above withdrawals, banks will have till end-2023 to re-comply with the minimum requirement mentioned above.
• Depositors benefitting from the above scheme in one bank are still eligible to benefit from BDL Basic Circular No. 151 in other banks. Subject to renewal or amendment, the measure will remain effective until June 30, 2023.

Domestic currency accounts  Yes. Nonresident individuals, nonbanks, and nonfinancial entities may freely maintain onshore accounts in Lebanese pounds. Effective December 16, 2021, banks must pay banknotes in US dollars to their customers at the “Sayrafa” platform rate instead of paying them in Lebanese pounds the amounts resulting from making withdrawals from domestic currency accounts.
Nonresident banks and financial entities are not allowed to have debit or credit accounts (including fiduciary accounts) in Lebanese pounds with resident banks and financial institutions, except for the following purposes: (1) purchase of treasury bills and BDL CDs in Lebanese pounds, with BDL approval and provided the funds used for this purpose were originally foreign currency deposits converted to Lebanese pounds specifically for this purpose and (2) guarantees issued by nonresident banks against loans in Lebanese pounds for commercial or investment activities in Lebanon. All accounts are subject to the Law on Combating Money Laundering and Terrorism Financing.

In general, import licenses are issued mainly for health, security, and fraud prevention and apply to about 3% (in value terms) of all goods imported into Lebanon (except petroleum derivatives). Licenses generally apply to imports of certain animal and plant products, medical substances, arms, ammunition, explosive materials, and certain telecommunications equipment and petroleum and industrial products.
Import taxes and/or tariffs

Yes. Under the Harmonized Tariff System, customs valuation is based on c.i.f. or c.f.r. values; customs duties are generally ad valorem. The WTO valuation principle is also applied. Ad valorem rates vary between 0% and 75%. There are preferential duty rates for goods imported for industrial, agricultural, or public use. In addition to ad valorem duties, which apply to about 93% of products, the following rates apply: (1) The bracket-based calculation applies to cars. The value of a car is divided into two brackets, and the total duty is the sum of the duty applied at each bracket’s rate. (2) Duty may be calculated on the basis of units of measure, such as weight or volume (for example, for gasoline). (3) Combined duty may be calculated on an ad valorem and specific basis, and the higher amount collected (for example, for tropical fruits and chickens). Excise duty is collected on tobacco and alcoholic and nonalcoholic beverages, cars, cement, and fuels. Lebanon applies the GAFTA convention and has signed bilateral free trade agreements with Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Turkey (the latter was signed in November 2010 but awaits parliamentary ratification), and the United Arab Emirates. Lebanon signed an interim agreement with the EU and the EFTA countries on trade and commercial issues in 2003, which formally triggered the 12-year transition to free trade. A VAT of 11% is levied on all goods and services, whether imported or produced domestically, except for some exempt goods and services. A tax of 3% on imported products subject to VAT, excluding gasoline, is in place.

The 10% limit applies to spouses, minors, and any economic group. Approval of BDL Central Council is required for acquisition of shares in a bank if (1) it leads directly or indirectly to the acquisition by the purchaser more than 5% of total shares or voting rights; (2) the purchaser already holds more than 5% or more of total shares or voting rights; (3) the purchaser or seller of the shares is a member or an elected member of the board of directors of the bank involved; (4) the purchaser or seller of the shares is a member of the senior management or an employee of the bank involved and holds 1% or more of the total shares if such shares are listed; or (5) the purchase of shares by an employee leads directly or indirectly to his or her acquisition of more than 1% of the total shares if such shares are listed. Authorization and regulations also apply to ascendants, spouses, and descendants of sellers and purchasers.

When purchasers of shares in banks and financial institutions are companies or mutual funds, their respective by-laws or Articles of Association must explicitly include that all their shares are in registered form, and are fully and continuously owned, whether directly or indirectly, by natural persons or companies whose shares are in registered form (BDL Intermediate Circular No. 411).

Any legal entity, resident or nonresident, that acquires directly or indirectly a share in an issuing company or public company equal to or exceeding 5% of the shares or units of a fund with a voting right in the said company must submit a report to the CMA in this respect (Law No. 161).

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents

Yes.

Financial instrument transactions must be authorized by the CMA. Principal or secondary professional activity that involves solicitation of clients for subscription, purchase, swap, or sale of securities or financial instruments also requires CMA authorization.

Legal entities may not undertake a public subscription without CMA approval. Issuance, sale, or offers to sell financial instruments for public subscription are also prohibited prior to obtaining the CMA’s authorization. Invitations to potential investors for such financial instruments require CMA approval (Law No. 161).

No person, resident or not, may issue or invite the public to subscribe to or market or make any statement, announcement, or communication that has the effect of selling, issuing, or offering the following products without authorization from the CMA:

(1) shares, debt securities, or units issued by a public or private company or entity or a collective investment fund;
(2) bonds, notes, CDs, depositary receipts, and treasury bills and bonds;
(3) financial rights, options, futures, and any other derivatives or structured financial products; and
(4) any other financial instrument authorized by the CMA or its regulations, except an instrument specifically excluded by the law.

An exempt offer of securities (as defined in CMA Regulation (Series 6000)) must be notified to the CMA within a time limit of 14 days from the closing date for subscription, effective February 15, 2021. The offer of foreign securities in Lebanon (whether public or exempt) must be made through an approved institution licensed by the CMA.

The offer of securities issued by a foreign government or by a supranational authority recognized by the CMA is exempted from the above requirements (CMA Regulation (Series 6000)).

Purchase abroad by residents

Yes. BDL approval is required for Lebanese banks and financial institutions to participate, directly or indirectly, and within the limits set by Article 153 of the Code of Money and Credit, in any foreign financial entity (bank, financial institution, brokerage house, mutual fund, insurance company). BDL approval is not required (1) if a resident bank participates indirectly through foreign banks and financial institutions in which the resident bank has a stake greater than 20% and if the participation of these foreign banks or financial institutions in the foreign financial sector is less than 20% of their assets or (2) if the stake of a resident bank is less than 20%. Approval for Lebanese bank participation depends on specific BDL conditions regarding ethical and technical qualifications. Banks, nonbank financial institutions, foreign exchange bureaus, and leasing companies are not allowed, directly or indirectly, to conduct any transactions with bearer shares companies and mutual funds or companies and mutual funds owned by other companies and mutual funds with bearer shares (BDL Intermediate Circular No. 411).

Sale or issue abroad by residents

Funds used to purchase treasury securities or CDs in Lebanese pounds must originally have been deposited in foreign currency and converted specifically for the purchase.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents

Yes. Financial instrument transactions must be authorized by the CMA. Principal or secondary professional activity that involves solicitation of clients for subscription, purchase, swap, or sale of securities or financial instruments also requires CMA authorization. Legal entities may not undertake a public subscription without CMA approval. Issuance, sale, or offers to sell financial instruments for public subscription are also prohibited prior to obtaining the CMA’s authorization. Invitations to potential investors for such financial instruments require CMA approval (Law No. 161).

The offer of foreign securities in Lebanon (whether public or exempt) must be made through an approved institution licensed by the CMA.

The following apply to banks’ and financial institutions’ holdings, including by their foreign branches and subsidiaries: (1) A 25% equity limit applies to the nominal value of structured financial products held and purchased abroad, provided (a) they are issued or guaranteed by an issuer or a guarantor rated at least A and (b) their capital is unconditionally and totally guaranteed. (3) A 50% equity limit applies to non-Group of Ten (G10) sovereign bonds rated at least BBB and corporate bonds rated at least BBB; if guaranteed, the guarantor must be rated at least BBB. The applicable rating is the lowest of Standard & Poor’s (S&P’s) or another internationally recognized rating agency, provided it is BBB or higher. The 50% limit includes the 25% structured financial products’ equity limit and the 10% CLNs related to Lebanese Eurobonds and BDL CDs in foreign currencies equity limit and deposits abroad with a maturity of one year or more. With respect to Item (3), the BDL may authorize banks and financial institutions to exceed the 50% limit, if they have a high capital adequacy ratio and they abide by BCC and BDL circulars, particularly on ethical and technical qualifications of specific functions in the banking and financial sector. In the calculation of ratios, the investments of banks’ and financial institutions’ branches abroad are included in the portfolio of bonds, structured financial products, and CLNs and deposits abroad with a maturity of one year or more. Banks, nonbank financial institutions, foreign exchange bureaus, and leasing companies are not allowed, directly or indirectly, to conduct any transactions with bearer shares companies and mutual funds or companies and mutual funds owned by other companies and mutual funds with bearer shares (BDL Intermediate Circular No. 411).

short-term instruments are exempted from the CMA approval pursuant to Article 37 of Law No. 161.

The CMA has the right to object to the proposed offer or to prohibit it if it deems that the offer is not in the public interest or may result in a breach of CMA laws and regulations.

However, fresh funds representing cash transactions in foreign currencies and incoming transfers from abroad are not subject to the foreign currency mandatory placement requirement provided the following:

(2) The use of these funds is fully tracked by banks (through the opening of a new special account or a dedicated sub-account, etc.).
Effective February 25, 2021, banks must deposit what is equivalent to 100% of the value of the fresh funds, in cash with it or with its correspondents abroad in a free account.

Reserve requirements on Lebanese pounds are lower than statutory requirements because the BDL introduced subsidy plans that allow banks to deduct qualifying loans from required reserves on customer deposits, up to 90% of the reserve requirement. Deduction is no longer applicable against loans granted after October 20, 2017 (Intermediate Circular No. 475).

Banks are required to have a minimum of “net free liquidity abroad” (that is, net placements with foreign correspondents maturing within one year after deducting other foreign liabilities and off-balance-sheet commitments) no less than 3% of the non-financial sector deposit base in foreign currencies as of end-July 2020. The measure was introduced as of August 27, 2020.

No differential reserve requirement applies to foreign currency deposits except mandatory placement as mentioned above. However, effective reserve requirements on Lebanese pounds are lower than statutory requirements because the BDL introduced subsidy plans that allow banks to deduct qualifying loans from required reserves on customer deposits, up to 90% of the reserve requirement. Deduction is no longer applicable against loans granted after October 20, 2017 (Intermediate Circular No. 475).

limit applies to CLNs related to Lebanese Eurobonds and BDL CDs denominated in foreign currencies and purchased from abroad, provided (a) their capital is unconditionally and totally guaranteed, (b) they are issued or guaranteed by an issuer or guarantor rated at least A, and (c) they provide for mandatory physical settlement in the case of a credit event, such as default on Eurobonds or BDL CDs, whereby changes in prices of credit default swaps on Lebanese treasury bills not induced by an internationally recognized credit event are not categorized as a credit event and do not call for mandatory physical settlement. (3) A 50% equity limit on non-G10 sovereign bonds rated at least BBB and bonds issued by an issuer rated at least BBB; if guaranteed, the guarantor must be rated at least BBB by S&P or an equivalent rating agency. The 50% limit includes the 25% structured financial products’ equity limit and the 10% CLNs related to Lebanese Eurobonds and BDL CDs in foreign currencies equity limit and deposits abroad with a maturity of one year or more. In the calculation of all ratios mentioned, the investments of banks’ and financial institutions’ branches and subsidiaries abroad are included in the portfolio of bonds, structured financial products, CLNs, and deposits abroad with a maturity of one year or more. When placing bids, banks and financial institutions must also abide by the statutory limits.

Lesotho is a member of the CMA, within which payments are unrestricted, except that transactions must be reported for statistical and customs purposes. In its relations with countries outside the CMA, Lesotho applies exchange controls that are largely similar to those applied by Eswatini, Namibia, and South Africa.
The CBL exercises foreign exchange control and authorizes commercial banks to approve certain current payments up to established limits (particularly, the discretionary allowance, which still has indicative limits). The Department of Customs and Excise issues permits based on recommendations by the Department of Trade and Industry. Licenses for financial institutions accepting deposits, insurance companies, brokers, and agents are issued by the CBL.

Only ADs may trade in gold, and gold may not be held by everyone. Exports of gold from the CMA by individuals are subject to controls. The responsibility lies with the Ministry of Mining.

Exports of domestic currency from Lesotho are subject to a maximum of M 25,000. Exports of foreign currency from the CMA by residents are subject to controls. Up to M 1 million an individual a year is permitted.

Visitors to Lesotho from countries outside the CMA may on arrival bring in banknotes of CMA countries up to M 25,000 a person to cover initial expenses.

Proof of legitimate ownership is required.

Resident Accounts

Resident and nonresident individuals and Lesotho entities may maintain onshore accounts denominated in foreign currency with ADs in Lesotho without prior approval. Resident and nonresident individuals may maintain foreign currency account, while customer foreign currency account is opened for Lesotho entities only.

Resident individuals may maintain foreign bank accounts up to M 4 million.

However, in cases where the aforementioned amounts exceed the mentioned amounts, an application together with a copy of written confirmation from the Revenue Authority confirming that tax commitments have been met should be submitted to the CBL for approval. It should also be noted that the above amounts exclude household and personal effects, caravans, motor vehicles, motorcycles, and trailers to be exported.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is managed floating. The Central Bank of Liberia (CBL) allows the exchange rate to be determined in the foreign exchange market and intervenes to smooth volatility. The foreign exchange auction data (volume, price, etc.) are published on the CBL website. Since January 2021 up to August 2022, the average exchange rate has remained appreciated by over 10% mainly because of tight policy stance by the CBL.
Since March 2021, the exchange rate has stabilized and then increased its flexibility in October 2021. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified twice: (1) to stabilized from other managed, effective March 17, 2021, and (2) to other managed from stabilized, effective October 11, 2021.

Official exchange rate Yes. There is no official or reference exchange rate. The prevailing market rate published by the CBL is used for customs and valuation. The CBL bases the buying and selling exchange rates of the Liberian dollar vis-à-vis the US dollar on a daily survey of the major commercial centers and selected cities in the 15 counties. These rates are published in the local newspapers and the CBL website. They are also submitted based on request.

Monetary aggregate target Yes. The monetary policy framework of Liberia is monetary targeting since November 2019. Under this framework, the Bank manages monetary aggregates (mainly reserve money) as operating and/or intermediate target to influence the ultimate objective of price stability. The reserve money is the operation target by which the CBL influences monetary conditions in the economy to stabilize exchange rate, inflation and guide inflation expectations. The revised Act (An Amendment and Restatement of the CBL Act of 2020) was passed by the National Legislature. The Act calls for the establishment of a MPC. The main responsibility of the MPC will be to formulate monetary policy and exchange rate policies to achieve and maintain domestic price stability. Pursuant to its powers in Part IV, Section 9 of the CBL Act of 1999, the Board of Governors hereby establishes the Monetary Policy Advisory Committee (MPAC) as a statutory committee in the CBL pending the full establishment of an MPC of the Bank. The principal mandate of the MPAC will be to define and advise on the monetary policy rate (MPR) and other monetary policy instruments of the CBL aimed at maintaining price stability. The MPAC will also prescribe the rules and internal guidelines for the decision-making process.

The importation of more expensive rice is not subject to official controls. By law, import declaration is required only for items on the negative list—that is, fuel and selected chemicals, explosives, hazardous waste, cultural artifacts, obscene materials, military vehicles, and...
In January 2017, Liberia migrated to the 2017 version of the Harmonized System, and Customs commenced a phase (migration plan) implementation of the ECOWAS CET. The CET has five tariff bands including Basic Social Goods, Basic Goods, Intermediate Goods, Finished Products, and Selected Finished Products. In addition to the import duty, a Goods and Services Tax is also paid on all imported goods. The Goods and Services Tax rate over the last three years including the current year is 10%. Excise tax is also paid on a limited number of products, such as alcoholic and nonalcoholic beverages, tobacco products, and jewelries.

Because of the phase approach to implementing the ECOWAS CET, Liberia’s current duty rates vary from that of the ECOWAS CET. The average import duty rate for all 5899 tariff lines of the ECOWAS CET is 11.7%, whereas the average duty rate for Liberia over the last three years is 4.5%.

In September 2019, the import duty rates for beverages and tobacco were adjusted from the ECOWAS ad valorem rates to specific rates based on liters for beverages and number of sticks for cigarettes. This makes Liberia’s current import duty rate on beverages and tobacco about 200% higher than the ECOWAS CET.

The combination of excessive duty and excise rates on imported beverages and tobacco has resulted in a reduction in importation through formal channels and has increased smuggling of alcoholic beverages and tobacco products by seacoast and unofficial land border crossing points, thereby reducing revenue. This is expected to remain the case until the rates on alcoholic and tobacco products are harmonized with those in neighboring countries.

Effective May 3, 2021, the import tariff on rice in packing of more than 5 kg or in bulk were suspended under the Revenue Code of Liberia Act of 2000.

The dinar is pegged to the SDR at LD 1 per SDR 0.1555 effective January 1, 2021 (previously, LD 1 per SDR 0.5175). The US dollar is the intervention currency. The official exchange rate is used for accounting and valuation purposes. In addition, the conversion to Libyan dinars of oil export proceeds is conducted at the official rate on the transaction day of about LD 4.48 per US dollar effective January 3, 2021 (previously, LD 1.4 per US dollar).

The monetary policy framework is an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis a currency composite (the SDR).
Effective January 3, 2021, the surtax on sales of foreign currency for commercial or personal purposes (excluding family allowance) was eliminated. Previously, it was reduced from 183% to 163%, on August 4, 2019, appreciating the exchange rate to about LD 3.70 per US dollar.

Commercial banks may freely set the exchange rate in transactions with their clients within the range decided by the Central Bank of Libya (CBL). Free floating
Yes.  The exchange rate arrangement of the euro area is free floating.
Lithuania participates in a currency union (EMU) with 18 other members of the EU and has no separate legal tender. The ECB publishes information regarding its interventions; it last intervened in March 2011. When it intervenes, the ECB intervenes at the quotes of the market makers.

Official exchange rate
Yes.  The ECB publishes a reference rate based on the daily concertation procedure between CBs within and outside the European System of Central Banks. The publication time of the euro foreign exchange reference rates is around 14:15 Central European Time to around 16:00 Central European Time. The reference rate against the euro is the average of the buying and selling rates.
The Bank of Lithuania (BOL) republishes daily the euro foreign exchange rates published by the ECB and publishes monthly non-ECB euro foreign exchange reference rates published by the BOL.

To maintain price stability is the primary objective of the Eurosystem and of the single monetary policy for which it is responsible. This is stated in the Treaty on the Functioning of the EU, Article 127(1).
“Without prejudice to the objective of price stability,” the Eurosystem will also “support the general economic policies in the Community with a view to contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Community.” These include a “high level of employment” and “sustainable and non-inflationary growth.” Effective July 7, 2021, price stability is defined as a symmetric 2% inflation target over the medium term. (Previously, it was defined as inflation rate below but close to 2% over the medium term.)

In accordance with Regulation (EC) No. 1889/2005, cash controls have been implemented based on a mandatory declaration system for amounts of cash entering or leaving the EU with a value of €10,000 or more. Travelers entering or leaving the EU and carrying more than €10,000 are required to make a declaration to the relevant authorities of the member country through which they enter or leave the EU. The authorities must keep a record of such information and report it to their national FIU. The obligation to declare is not fulfilled if the traveler makes no declaration or if the information provided is incorrect or incomplete. To check compliance with the regulation, the national authorities have the right to search natural persons, their baggage, and their means of transportation. In the event of failure to comply with the declaration obligation, cash may be confiscated. The EC regulation requires member countries to impose penalties for failure to comply with the declaration obligation. If there are indications that cash is related to illegal activity, authorities of one member country may exchange information with authorities in other member countries. Under the framework of existing agreements on mutual administrative assistance, information obtained under the EC regulation may also be communicated to a third country in compliance with relevant national and EU provisions on the transfer of personal data to third countries. The EC regulation does not apply to physical cross-border transportation from one EU member country to another (that is, intra-EU transportation). Such transportation is not considered “cross-border” for the purposes of the EC regulation; the EC regulation only harmonizes the system for the EU’s external borders subject to Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2913/92 (Community Customs Code). The Act of Accession to the EU included Lithuania in the Community Customs Area (12003TN02/19/A1). According to the Regulation (EU) No. 2021/378 of the ECB of January 22, 2021, on the application of minimum reserves (recast) (ECB/2021/1), the institutions subject to the minimum reserve requirements should comply with the reserve requirements and are to hold required reserves on the accounts of the BOL. If an institution has liabilities in relation to a branch of the same entity, or in relation to the head office or registered office of the same entity, which are located outside participating Member States, it must include such liabilities in the reserve base. Liabilities which are owed to the ECB, to the participating national central bank, or to credit institutions which are subject to reserve requirements, are excluded from the reserve base. The amount of required reserves for a particular maintenance period should be calculated by applying the reserve ratios defined by the ECB. (1) UNSCR No. 1267 (1999), No. 1989 (2011), and No. 2253 (2015) and (2) No. 1988 (2011), as well as by virtue of the following texts adopted by the EU:

The exchange rate arrangement of the euro area is free floating. Luxembourg participates in a currency union (EMU) with 18 other members of the EU and has no separate legal tender. The ECB publishes information on its interventions; it last intervened in March 2011. When it intervenes, the ECB intervenes at the quotes of the market makers.

The ECB publishes a reference rate based on the daily concertation procedure between CBs within and outside the European System of Central Banks, which normally takes place at 2:15 p.m. Central European Time. The reference rate against the euro is the average of the buying and selling rates.

- To maintain price stability is the primary objective of the Eurosystem and of the single monetary policy for which it is responsible. This is stated in the Treaty on the Functioning of the EU, Article 127(1). “Without prejudice to the objective of price stability,” the Eurosystem will also “support the general economic policies in the Community with a view to contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Community.” These include a “high level of employment” and “sustainable and non-inflationary growth.” Effective July 7, 2021, price stability is defined as a symmetric 2% inflation target over the medium term (previously, it was defined as inflation rate below but close to 2% over the medium term).

- In accordance with Council Regulation (EU) No. 1024/2013, no entity may engage in the business of a credit institution without having been granted authorization by the ECB. As of December 31, 2021, there were 124 licensed credit institutions in Luxembourg. Foreign exchange bureaus are authorized by Article 28-2 of the Law of April 5, 1993, and must be licensed by the Commission de Surveillance du Secteur Financier (CSSF). They may not enter into foreign exchange transactions directly with the CB. However, Article 28-2 of the Law of April 5, 1993, states that “persons carrying out foreign exchange cash operations are professionals who carry out operations involving the purchase or sale of foreign currencies in cash. Such persons must be required to display the rates applied to the various currencies dealt in and to issue to clients, with respect to each operation, a statement indicating the name of the foreign... exchange office, the amounts in the currencies dealt in, the rates applied, and the date of the operation. Authorization to perform cash-exchange transactions is conditional on the production of evidence showing the existence of a capital base of not less than €50,000.” As of December 31, 2021, there are no foreign exchange bureaus in operation in Luxembourg.

No. In principle, Luxembourg may not impose any kind of restriction on capital movement and payment within the EU and with third countries. Luxembourg is, however, allowed to implement relevant tax provisions creating a distinction between taxpayers in different tax situations based on their residence or the location of their investment. Measures may also be adopted with a view to avoid breaches of national tax law and prudential supervision over financial institutions, organize declaration on movement of capital for the sake of administrative or statistical information, or take measures intended to protect public security. Under exceptional circumstances, movements of capital coming from or going to third countries may also be restricted if they may cause or threaten to cause serious difficulties for the functioning of the economic and monetary union.

Article 327. The sum of the absolute values of the two figures is its overall gross position. The institution must calculate, separately for each market, the difference between the sum of the net long and net short positions. The sum of the absolute values of those differences is its overall net position (Article 34). For collective investment funds, purchases of securities issued by nonresidents are subject to the same limits as securities issued by residents, namely (1) diversification ratios (5/10/40—that is, no more than 10% of the fund’s assets may be invested in transferable securities or money market instruments of the same issuer, and none of the fund’s holdings in single issuers that exceed 5% of the fund’s assets may cumulatively exceed 40%) and (2) borrowing ratios (10% an issuer).

For investment firms, to the extent that they are required to apply the provisions of the European Directive No. 2013/36/EU and Regulation (EU) No. 575/2013, if the sum of the institution’s overall net foreign exchange position and net gold position, calculated as set out in Article 352, including for any foreign exchange and gold positions for which own funds requirements are calculated using an internal model, exceeds 2% of its total own funds, the institution must calculate an own funds requirement for foreign exchange risk. This requirement is the sum of its overall net foreign exchange position and net gold position in the reporting currency, multiplied by 8% (Article 351).

Institutions’ own funds requirements against positions in relevant closely correlated currencies may be lower. Two currencies are deemed closely correlated if the likelihood of a loss—based on daily exchange rate data for the preceding three or five years—of 4% or less of the value of the matched position in question (in terms of the reporting currency) on equal and opposite positions in such currencies over the following 10 working days has a probability of at least 99% for a three-year observation period and of 95% for a five-year observation period. The own funds requirement on the matched position in two closely correlated currencies is 4% of the value of the matched position (Article 354).

| Currency board | Yes. The exchange rate arrangement is a currency board. The pataca has been tied to the Hong Kong dollar (HKD) at a rate of MOP1.03 to HKD1. Banknotes are issued by two note-issuing banks, which deliver an equivalent amount of HKDs to the Monetary Authority of Macao (AMCM) in return for noninterest-bearing certificates of indebtedness, which serve as the backing for the banknote issue. The HKDs are part of the official foreign exchange reserves held by the AMCM. Under the currency board arrangement, the pataca is 100% backed by reserve assets. The legal documents that establish the currency board include the Basic Law (Chapter V, Articles 107 and 108). |

In accordance with the provisions of Decree-Law No. 14/96/M which governs its Charter, the AMCM is vested with the authority and responsibility to monitor internal stability and external solvency of... | the local currency so as to ensure its full convertibility.

The AMCM does not initiate market intervention but would conduct foreign exchange transactions involving the pataca on local banks’ demand.

The provisions are general exposure limits which are not designed as special restrictions for lending to nonresidents. Credit institutions can extend loans and other credit facilities to customers, irrespective of the currency, subject to the limits stipulated in the FSA.

According to Article 64 of the FSA, credit institutions may not incur an exposure to a customer or a group of connected customers, which exceeds 30% of their own funds. In addition, they may not incur large exposures (that is, 15% of own funds) which in aggregate exceed 800% of their own funds.

Articles 65 and 66 of the FSA also stipulate the specific limits on exposures to qualifying shareholders and other related parties of credit institutions, etc.

The provisions are general exposure limits which are not designed as special restrictions for lending locally in foreign exchange. Credit institutions can purchase locally issued securities irrespective of the currency, subject to the limits stipulated in the FSA.

According to Article 64 of the FSA, credit institutions may not incur an exposure to a customer or a group of connected customers, which exceeds 30% of their own funds. In addition, they may not incur large exposures (that is, 15% of own funds) which in aggregate exceed 800% of their own funds.

Articles 65 and 66 of the FSA also stipulate the specific limits on exposures to qualifying shareholders and other related parties of credit institutions, etc.

These are general exposure limits which are not designed as special restrictions on purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange.
According to Article 68 of the FSA, under normal circumstances, credit institutions may not have shareholding in another company which exceeds, either directly or indirectly, 15% of their own funds. The aggregate amount of such holdings may not exceed 60% of their own funds. These provisions do not apply to holdings in financial institutions subject to supervision deemed adequate by the AMCM.

According to Article 69 of the FSA, credit institutions may not, directly or indirectly, have a holding of more than 25% of voting rights attributed to the share capital of the relevant company. The provision does not apply to the holdings in financial institutions subject to supervision deemed adequate by the AMCM, insurance companies and pension fund management companies, and companies whose activity is complementary to the activity of the credit institution when prior authorization from the AMCM has been granted.

According to Article 66 of the FSA, investment in shares which are not for financial holdings must observe the following rules: (1) shares issued by companies incorporated overseas should be listed in a stock exchange and (2) the holding of shares issued by the same company may not exceed 5% of the credit institution’s own funds nor represent more than 5% of the capital of the issuing company.

According to Article 40 of the FSA, no individual or corporate body may acquire, either directly or indirectly, a qualifying holding of a credit institution incorporated in Macao or increase the same by over 5% of the share capital or voting rights, in one or more stages, without prior approval from the AMCM. A qualifying holding is that, either directly or indirectly, represents 10% or more of the share capital or voting rights, or in any other form which confers the possibility to exercise a significant influence over the management of the institution.

If the AMCM is not satisfied that the shareholders can ensure the sound and prudent management of the institution, it may oppose the acquisition of or increase in the qualifying shareholding.

These are general requirements which are not designed as special restrictions on investments in banks by nonresidents.

No regulatory foreign exchange position limits have been set by the AMCM. However, according to paragraph 26 of “Guideline on Management of Liquidity Risk” issued by the AMCM, banks are required to set internal limits on individual foreign currencies and conduct reviews on such limits, for the measurement of liquidity position.

Floating Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The exchange rate is determined in the official interbank market. Banky Foiben’i Madagasikara (the Central Bank of Madagascar – CBM) intervenes in the interbank market to smooth excessive exchange rate fluctuations and meet foreign exchange reserve targets. The CBM publishes a daily and weekly list of its interventions, the volume of interventions in the interbank foreign exchange market for participating banks, the reference exchange rate, and the lowest and highest rates. This information is submitted in hard copy by courier to the Ministry of Economy and Finance as well as to the Office of the President.

In the context of a contained but persistent public health crisis over part of the year, the changes in interbank foreign exchange market operations in 2021 are reflective of the economic recovery, with export performance and import dynamics. However, the market has been impacted by the strong appreciation of the US dollar worldwide.

The exchange rate rose 4.63% relative to the euro and dropped 3.45% relative to the dollar between end-December 2020 and end-December 2021.

In 2022, the interbank foreign exchange market felt the consequences of the global turmoil through soaring prices. The domestic currency appreciated 4.69% against the euro and depreciated 2.98% against the dollar between end-December 2021 and end-June 2022.

The de facto exchange rate arrangement is floating.

Commercial banks may freely set the exchange rate and commissions for transactions with their clients. The foreign exchange market handles spot and forward operations on a continuous basis.
bank checks, and buy and sell foreign currency held in foreign exchange accounts in Malagasy banks. Because they do not have the status of authorized intermediaries, exchange bureaus may not engage in foreign exchange transactions directly with the CB, maintain accounts abroad, or make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients.

Authorized intermediaries and the CBM participate in an electronic platform that allows them to continuously quote ariary for US dollars and euros. Effective February 19, 2021, 11 of the 12 banks (previously 10 of 11) are authorized by the CBM to participate in the interbank foreign exchange market. The CBM intervenes directly with market participants. Each participant proposes its quotes. There are no limits on the bid-ask spread or the commission of market operators (no change).

The interbank market is developing gradually. While 11 authorized territorial banks can participate in the interbank market, 5 to 9 banks participate regularly, in addition to the CBM.

The foreign exchange market operates OTC. There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads or commissions of market participants.

The CBM may participate in the forward foreign exchange market. Importers may buy foreign currency from their banks 120 days before settlement. There is a 120-day maximum for documentary credits for spot exchange cover (Article 28) and a 30-day maximum for documentary collections (remises documentaires), as well as a 360-day maximum for documentary credits for hedging delayed purchases or “couverture de change au comptant différée” (Article 33) with foreign exchange. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. Official intervention focuses on building foreign reserves and limiting exchange rate volatility while taking into account seasonal fluctuations. From September 2021, the exchange rate stabilized within a 2% band against the US dollar. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified to stabilized from crawl-like, effective September 22, 2021. The Reserve Bank of Malawi (RBM) does not publish its intervention data.

The RBM uses an interest rate-based monetary policy framework. Under this framework, a change in the policy stance is communicated by changing the policy rate. The MPC of the RBM meets quarterly to review global and domestic financial and economic developments and set the policy stance. The MPC decisions are published on the RBM website. However, monetary aggregates are still discussed and agreed in the context of the Extended Credit Facility (ECF) program.

There are 8 authorized banking institutions as of August 31, 2022, licensed by the RBM to deal in foreign exchange with the public. As of June 30, 2021, there were 17 foreign exchange bureaus. ADs are allowed to determine freely their commissions with their clients. Maximum spreads between buying and selling exchange rates are set at 2% for Telegraphic Transfer (TT) and 3% for cash. The limit on spread applies to only banks, and bureaus have never been subjected to price restrictions.

There are 8 banks authorized to trade in the foreign exchange interbank market as of August 31, 2022. The foreign exchange interbank market is very thin with very small volume of trades conducted within the confines of AD’s bid and offer rates. The CB intervenes at its own discretion. Foreign exchange trading among ADs or between ADs and RBM is conducted via Reuters. Where not possible, it is conducted on a recordable phone or any ordinary phone with evidence provided via e-mail. The minimum traded amount by RBM to AD banks is US$500,000. To grow the interbank market, all commercial banks must for each purchase of forex amounting to US$170,000 (or equivalent), cumulative per trading, offload 30% of the same to the interbank market. The minimum traded amount is US$50,000 (as stimulated in Guidelines for foreign exchange trading as of September 2019). This supersedes the previous explanation.

Over the counter Yes.
Brokerage No.
Market making Yes. The foreign exchange interbank market operates under a market-making arrangement.
Forward exchange market Yes. Authorized banks may quote bid-ask prices on demand. Forward exchange rates are not set by the RBM. Banks are free to set their own rates based on the forward variables as they see fit. There are only sporadic forward and swap transactions. The RBM does not do forwards per se but swaps. Under swap arrangement, there is always a forward leg. The forward market is still in its infancy with negligible trade volumes.

Official cover of forward operations No.

However, in 2014, it was amended to include that the Registrar may issue a directive to set limits for such investments. The Registrar is currently working toward publishing such a directive which has recommended that such investments be limited to 10% of the pension fund’s assets. The directive also places restrictions on the permissible types of investments.

Taxes collected through the exchange system No.

State import monopoly Yes. Under a privatization agreement, BERNAS had been granted the sole right to import rice into Malaysia for 15 years beginning in 1996; the agreement was extended for an additional 10 years in 2011.

Exports and Export Proceeds

Repatriation requirements Yes. Effective April 15, 2021, export proceeds must be repatriated to Malaysia in full value by resident exporters into their ringgit account or Trade FCA according to the sales contract within 6 months from the date of shipment, or within 24 months from the date of shipment where extenuating circumstances apply (see Appendix C of Notice 7 on Export on Goods). While the 6-month rule has been in place previously, the new arrangement eliminates the need for exporters to seek BNM’s approval in repatriating their export proceeds beyond the 6-month period for reasons beyond the exporters’ control. For other purposes, approval from BNM is still required. The refinement in FEP adopts the shift from approval-based to notification-based for low-risk transactions in line with better capability to monitor such transactions.

Effective April 15, 2021, resident exporters are allowed to offset or write-off export proceeds against permitted transactions or purposes.

Surrender requirements No.

Surrender to the central bank No.

Surrender to authorized dealers No. Effective April 15, 2021, the requirement to convert export proceeds was removed. Previously, resident exporters were only permitted to retain foreign currency proceeds from their export of goods in their Trade FCA held with licensed onshore banks up to the higher of (1) 25% of the export proceeds or (2) resident exporters’ 6-month foreign currency obligations that exist on the date of receipt of the export proceeds.

Financing requirements No. There are no specific export financing requirements. Resident exporters may obtain any amount of foreign currency trade financing facilities from licensed onshore banks and related nonresidents. Borrowing from other nonresidents is subject to compliance with FEP Notice 2.

Documentation requirements Yes. Requirements are determined by the receiving banks.

Letters of credit No.
Guarantees No.
Domiciliation No.
Preshipment inspection Yes. Exports of live fish are subject to preshipment inspection. If requested, a certificate of health, sanitation, or origin may be issued by the Department of Fisheries. Veterinary examination, laboratory testing, and animal quarantine procedures – as well as accreditation of establishments and premises for exports of animals and animal products – are carried out by the DVSM in accordance with import requirements of importing countries. Plants and plant products, including rice, and raw commodities may be subject to preshipment inspection, depending on the requirements of the importing country.
Other Yes. Exports of rubber from Peninsular Malaysia require a certificate issued by the Malaysian Rubber Exchange and Licensing Board.
Export licenses Yes.
Without quotas Yes. Certain exportable products are monitored to avoid shortages in the domestic market. Export licenses for fish and fishery products are issued by the Fisheries Development Authority of Malaysia. The shipment of live fish (including among Peninsular Malaysia, Sabah, and Sarawak) also requires a permit issued by the Department of Fisheries. In accordance with CITES, a permit from the Department of Wildlife and National Parks is required for exports of endangered species. The Certificate of Conformity issued by the Federal Agricultural Marketing Authority acts on behalf of the Royal Malaysian Customs Department to endorse exports and reexports of all types of vegetables, especially to Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Singapore, and Thailand. Exports of plants, seeds, and shoots for propagation require export permits issued by the Department of Agriculture. Export permits and veterinary health certification from the DVSM are required for exports of animals and animal products. Export licenses (issued by the Malaysian Pineapple Industry Board) are required for fresh pineapple and canned pineapple products.

Exportation of strategic items requires a permit under the STA 2010. Application for export of strategic items must be made through the ePermit STA system.

Export licenses or permits from the MITI are required for exports of scrap and waste metals; cement, clinker, under Ministry of Domestic Trade and Consumer Affairs, toxic chemicals and their precursors under the Chemical Weapons Convention and for strategic items under the STA 2010. Importers and exporters that meet the requirements may get online approval through these systems. Applications for live fish import and export permits must be made through an Internet-based system, e-permit. Importers and exporters may get online approval through e-permit, provided the requirements are met.

With quotas No.
Export taxes Yes.
Collected through the exchange system  No.

Other export taxes  Yes. Export taxes are levied on selected commodities as indicated in the Customs Duty Order 2017. There are 217 tariff lines with tariff duty rates out of 11,698 lines in the Customs Duty Order 2017. Ad valorem export duty rates are found in Chapters 1, 12, 15, 26, 27, 40, 44, 68, 71, 72, 74, 75, 76, 78, and 79. Specific export duty rates are found in Chapters 6, 12, and 14.

Controls on direct investment  Yes.

Outward direct investment  Yes. These transactions are not restricted for resident entities without domestic ringgit borrowing.

Resident entities with domestic ringgit borrowing may invest in foreign currency assets up to RM 50 million or its equivalent in aggregate on a corporate group basis a calendar year. (These limits applied only to those funding investment abroad through conversion of ringgit, transfer from Trade FCA, foreign currency borrowing from licensed onshore banks for purposes other than direct investment abroad, and swapping of financial assets.) No limit is imposed for resident entities with domestic ringgit borrowing using proceeds from foreign currency borrowing obtained from licensed onshore banks for direct investment abroad.

Inward direct investment  Yes. Controls are imposed on equity shares in accordance with national economic policy; however, no foreign exchange restrictions apply. The following inward investments require approval under the Economic Planning Unit (EPU) guidelines: acquisition of property (such as undeveloped or developed land) by foreigners, depending on the value. Applications requiring SC approval under the securities and futures laws are centralized at the SC. Certain exemptions or relaxation of the foreign equity limits (for example, exemption from the 12.5% Bumiputera equity requirement) are granted to companies with Multimedia Super Corridor and BioNexus status; companies with major foreign-based operations seeking listing on the Bursa Malaysia; and intermediaries licensed by the SC, including investment banks, local and foreign fund managers, investment advisers, and exempt dealers. In relation to a “company” being taken over includes a corporation listed on a stock exchange, listed real estate investment trusts in Malaysia, listed business trusts in Malaysia, and unlisted public companies with more than 50 shareholders and net assets of RM 15 million or more, any acquisition of more than 33% of voting shares or of more than 2% in any six-month period for a holder of more than 33% but less than 50% requires compliance with Part VI, Division 2, of the CMSA 2007, the Malaysian Code on Takeovers and Mergers 2016, and the Rules on Takeovers, Mergers, and Compulsory Acquisitions. Nonresidents may participate in the equity of Malaysian BIs if they meet the shareholder suitability requirements in Schedule 6 of FSA 2013 and IFSA 2013. These requirements take into account, among other things, prudential considerations and potential contributions of investors in the best interest of Malaysia. The minimum value for acquisition of residential property by foreigners is RM 1 million, as stipulated under the Guideline on The Acquisition of Properties by the EPU (Prime Minister Department). While the acquisition does not require an approval from the EPU, the acquisition is subject to the State Authority’s jurisdiction. The state governments have full control in considering and approving foreign ownership of properties including threshold values in their respective states. Therefore, the threshold prices would vary from one state to another.

Controls on real estate transactions  Yes.

Purchase abroad by residents  Yes. These transactions are not restricted for resident entities without domestic ringgit borrowing.

Resident entities with domestic ringgit borrowing are no longer subject to the prudential limit of up to the ringgit amount sourced from proceeds of an IPO on the Main Market of Bursa Malaysia.

Purchase locally by nonresidents Yes.

Purchases of residential, commercial, and office property by nonresidents may be made freely, provided the purchase price is more than RM 1 million, as stipulated under the Guideline on The Acquisition of Properties by the EPU (Prime Minister Department). While the acquisition does not require an approval from the EPU, the acquisition is subject to the State Authority’s jurisdiction. To residents from nonresidents Yes. Resident individuals may borrow from their immediate family members. Borrowing in foreign currency from other than immediate family members is allowed up to RM 10 million in aggregate. Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions  Yes.

Borrowing abroad  No.

Maintenance of accounts abroad  No.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits)  Yes. Licensed onshore banks may lend in foreign currency to nonresidents.

Lending in ringgit by licensed onshore banks, except licensed IIBs, to nonresidents must be used to finance real sector activities in Malaysia (including refinancing of existing ringgit borrowing that was used for real sector activities in Malaysia and on lending to resident entities within the same group of entities or immediate family members that will be ultimately used for real sector activities in Malaysia).

All licensed BIs are subject to the following prudential limits, which are applied to credit exposures to both residents and nonresidents:

(1) Exposures to a single counterparty or a group of connected counterparties may not exceed 25% of a BI’s total capital (that is, the sum of Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital). For exposures to BI’s related banking entities (whether operating in- or outside Malaysia), a limit as may be approved by the BNM may not exceed 50% of the BI’s total capital and subject to clear criteria. This is applicable in aggregate to ringgit and foreign-currency-denominated exposures, including all claims, commitments, and contingent liabilities arising from on- and off-balance-sheet transactions (in both banking and trading books).

From March 24, 2020, until December 31, 2021, in response to the COVID-19 outbreak and to support lending activities by BIs, BNM temporarily increased the single counterparty exposure limit from 25% to 35% of a BI’s total capital for exposures to counterparties that are connected to selected large companies based on economic dependence factors. BIs must pare down any exposures in excess of 25% of total capital by December 31, 2022.

(2) Total outstanding credit exposure to all connected parties may not exceed 100% of a BI’s total capital or 25% of total outstanding credit exposures.

Licensed onshore banks may lend in foreign currency any amount to resident entities and nonresidents. Lending to resident individuals is subject to RM 10 million in aggregate.

All licensed BIs are subject to the following prudential limits, which are applied to credit exposure to both residents and nonresidents:

(1) Exposures to a single counterparty or a group of connected counterparties may not exceed 25% of a BI’s total capital (that is, the sum Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital). For exposures to BI’s related banking entities (whether operating in- or outside Malaysia), a limit as may be approved by the BNM may not exceed 50% of the BI’s total capital and subject to clear criteria. This is applicable in aggregate to ringgit and foreign-currency-denominated exposures, including all claims, commitments, and contingent liabilities arising from on- and off-balance-sheet transactions (in both banking and trading books).

(2) Total outstanding credit exposure to all connected parties may not exceed 100% of a BI’s total capital or 25% of total outstanding credit exposures. Residents may enter into a transaction with (a) a licensed onshore bank to convert an existing ringgit debt obligation to a foreign currency debt obligation, provided there is no actual delivery of foreign currency at the inception of the transaction and (b) a licensed onshore bank, an IIB, or a nonresident to convert an existing foreign currency debt obligation to another foreign currency debt obligation.

All licensed BIs are subject to the following prudential limits, which are applied to credit exposures to both residents and nonresidents:

(1) Exposures to a single counterparty or a group of connected counterparties may not exceed 25% of a BI’s total capital (that is, the sum of Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital). BIs must pare down any exposures in excess of 25% of total capital by December 31, 2022.

(2) Total outstanding credit exposure to all connected parties may not exceed 100% of a BI’s total capital or 25% of total outstanding credit exposures.

The BNM statutory reserve requirement (SRR) rate of 2% is applied on BIs’ eligible liabilities, which consist of ringgit-denominated deposits and non-deposit liabilities, net of interbank assets, and placements with the CB. Foreign-currency-deposit liabilities are not subject to reserve requirements.

On May 16, 2020, in response to the COVID-19 outbreak and to support lending activities by BIs, BNM temporarily allowed all BIs to recognize holdings of Malaysian Government Securities (MGS) and Malaysian Government Investment Issues (MGII) as part of their SRR compliance (that is, Statutory Reserve Accounts balances). Such securities used in this manner may be deducted from BIs’ eligible liability base calculations and must continue to be recognized as High-Quality Liquid Assets. This temporary flexibility was made available initially until May 31, 2021. Effective March 16, 2021, this temporary flexibility was extended until December 31, 2022.

The LCR was implemented June 1, 2015, based on the global phase-in timeline, that is, with an initial minimum requirement of 60% and followed by yearly 10% increment, reaching 100% by January 1, 2019. Banks are required to comply with a minimum LCR for their net cash outflows in all currencies on an aggregated basis and for their RM-denominated net cash outflows (that is, banks must hold a minimum amount of RM-denominated High-Quality Liquid Assets as a buffer for RM-denominated net cash outflows).

On December 15, 2020, BNM has reiterated that all BIs may drawdown on their LCR buffers (below 100%) when needed in response to liquidity shocks to support key lending activities for economic recovery from the COVID-19 outbreak. Those that drawdown the prudential buffers are required to establish plans that clearly identify actions and timelines to restore the buffers to their original regulatory minimums. However, to date, all banks have maintained their LCR above 100%. Consistent with the original design of the LCR rules, the liquid asset buffers can be utilized for idiosyncratic stress and there is no fixed timeline or deadline for banks to restore their buffers on utilization. The restoration timeline would hence be dependent on bank-specific circumstances.

The Net Stable Funding Ratio (NSFR) has been implemented with an initial minimum requirement of 80% and by September 30, 2021, to 100%.

The NSFR requirement applies to all BIs at the aggregate currency portfolio (that is, Ringgit and all other currencies. All foreign currency exposures must be reported in Ringgit-equivalent terms based on the foreign exchange rates as at the reporting date.). The NSFR requirement is calculated in line with the Basel 3 standards. Where minor adjustments have been made, this was made mainly to account for domestic system structures or areas where Basel had provided national discretion.

FSA and IFSA: BIs may not establish or acquire a subsidiary in- or outside Malaysia, or acquire or hold any material interest in any corporation without the prior approval of BNM. Material interest is defined as 20% or more of the voting shares or voting power in a corporation.

In addition, BNM’s approval is also required for any direct or indirect acquisition or holding of 33% or more of the voting shares or voting power in a corporation.

The BI must also notify BNM of any subsequent direct or indirect acquisition where it results in an increase in shareholding at any multiple of 5% above the material interest threshold, at least one month before the proposed acquisition. Nevertheless, BNM may require a BI to obtain its prior written approval if any subsequent increase impacts the BI’s safety and soundness.

Investments by BIs, both locally and abroad, are subject to the following prudential limits:
(1) Aggregate direct and indirect acquisition or holding of interest in non-financial corporations by BIs, including those held below the material interest threshold (that is, 20% or more of the voting shares/power), must not exceed 10% of a BI’s Tier 1 capital.

(2) BIs may not acquire, hold, or rent immovable properties, except to:
(a) conduct their business;
(b) provide housing or other amenities for their staff; or
(c) satisfy debts (that is, foreclosed properties).
Approval from the BNM is required if a BI intends to acquire, hold, or rent immovable properties for purposes other than (a), (b), and (c).
BIs total holdings of immovable properties acquired in satisfaction of debts may not exceed 1% of its Total Capital.

In the case of Islamic finance, Islamic BIs are allowed to undertake property development and property investment activities subject to conditions such as allowable structures, governance, risk management, limits, and disclosure requirements. These investments are subject to prudential safeguards, including limiting each exposure to 25% of the Islamic BI’s capital base. Islamic BIs and their subsidiaries are prohibited from direct property development activities but may participate in such activities through a joint venture or equity participation with reputable property development companies that are not subsidiaries of Islamic BIs.

(3) Exposures to a single counterparty or a group of connected counterparties may not exceed 25% of a BI’s total capital (that is, the sum of Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital). For exposures to BI’s related banking entities (whether operating in- or outside Malaysia), a limit as may be approved by the BNM may not exceed 50% of the BI’s total capital and subject to clear criteria. This is applicable in aggregate to ringgit and foreign-currency-denominated exposures, including all claims, commitments, and contingent liabilities arising from on- and off-balance-sheet transactions (in both banking and trading books).

BIs must pare down any exposures in excess of 25% of total capital by December 31, 2022.
In banks by nonresidents

Yes. Nonresidents may participate in the equity of Malaysian BIs. However, nonresidents may not hold 5% or more interest-in-shares, unless they have obtained the approval of the BNM or the Minister of Finance pursuant to Section 87 of the FSA 2013 and Section 99 of the IFSA 2013. These requirements take into account prudential considerations and potential contributions of investors in the best interest of Malaysia.

Exports and Export Proceeds

| Repatriation requirements | 04/15/2021 | Resident exporters are allowed to offset or write-off export proceeds against permitted transactions or purposes. Export proceeds must be repatriated to Malaysia in full value by resident exporters into their ringgit account or Trade Foreign Currency Account according to the sales contract within 6 months from the date of shipment, or within 24 months from the date of shipment where extenuating circumstances apply (see Appendix C of Notice 7 on Export on Goods). While the 6-month rule has been in place previously, the new arrangement eliminates the need for exporters to seek Bank Negara Malaysia’s (BNM’s) approval in repatriating their export proceeds beyond the 6-month period for reasons beyond the exporters’ control. For other purposes, approval from BNM is still required. |
| Surrender requirements | 04/15/2021 | The requirement to convert export proceeds was removed. Previously, resident exporters were only permitted to retain foreign currency proceeds from their export of goods in their Trade foreign currency account held with licensed onshore banks up to the higher of (1) 25% of the export proceeds or (2) resident exporters’ 6-month foreign currency obligations that exist on the date of receipt of the export proceeds. |

Surrender to authorized dealers 04/15/2021

The requirement to convert export proceeds was removed. Previously, resident exporters were only permitted to retain foreign currency proceeds from their export of goods in their Trade foreign currency account held with licensed onshore banks up to the higher of (1) 25% of the export proceeds or (2) resident exporters’ 6-month foreign currency obligations that exist on the date of receipt of the export proceeds.

Purchase abroad by residents 04/15/2021

The liberalization of purchase of foreign-currency derivatives (other than exchange rate derivatives) directly from nonresident counterparties is expanded to all residents (that is, both individuals and entities). Previously, it was only liberalized for individuals.

Sale or issue abroad by residents 04/15/2021

Ringgit-denominated interest rate derivatives may be transacted with nonresidents banking institutions (BIs) with or without firm commitment basis. Previously, ringgit-denominated interest rate derivatives could not be issued or offered to a nonresident BI without firm commitment.

Exchange Measures

The IMF staff report for the 2021 Article IV Consultation with Maldives, states that, as of August 6, 2021, Maldives continues to avail itself of the transitional provisions of Article XIV but no longer maintains any measures under this provision, and has not yet accepted the obligations of Article VIII, Sections 2, 3, and 4. It maintains an exchange restriction subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement arising from a shortage of foreign exchange (FX) at the official rate which leads to the Maldives Monetary Authority (MMA) rationing its supply of FX to commercial banks. This results in a channeling of FX transactions for current international transactions to the parallel market where transactions take place at an exchange rate that deviates by more than 2% from the prevailing market exchange rate. The greater than 2% spread gives rise to multiple currency practice subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3, and also to an exchange restriction, given the additional cost involved for obtaining foreign exchange. Since April 2020, the MMA has continued to increase the amount of US dollar sales to commercial banks. The official exchange rate used by the MMA for government transactions is calculated based on the mid-point of the weighted average of the buying and selling rates of FX transactions conducted by commercial banks one day earlier. The lack of a mechanism to prevent the spread between this official exchange rate used by the MMA for government transactions and the prevailing market exchange rate from deviating by more than 2% gives rise to a multiple currency practice subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3. (SM/21/150, Sup. 1)

Since 2011, the de jure exchange rate arrangement is classified as a pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands. This regime allows the rufiyaa to float within a 20% band around a central parity of Rf 12.85 a US dollar. However, the rufiyaa remained stabilized in a narrow band against the US dollar near the ceiling of the band (Rf 15.42 a US dollar). Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a stabilized arrangement. Under the MMA Act, the president may decide to change the exchange rate regime and the authority shall determine and implement adjustments to the exchange rate and exchange rate-related policies to implement the exchange rate regime.

The MMA quotes buying, selling, and midrates each day. The midrate (reference exchange rate) is calculated each day as the midpoint of the weighted average of the buying and selling rates of commercial banks' transactions with their clients conducted two days before. This rate is used when the MMA sells foreign exchange to the government. It buys foreign exchange from the government at the buying exchange rate. The MMA sells foreign exchange to the banks at its selling rate and to state-owned enterprises at the upper limit of the band.

Spot exchange market: Yes.

There are 8 commercial banks (of which 3 are locally incorporated, 4 are branches of foreign banks, and 1 is fully owned subsidiary of a foreign bank) and 384 licensed money changers as of December 31, 2021. Money changers are licensed by the MMA and may buy and sell foreign exchange. There are no restrictions on money changers opening and maintaining accounts abroad.

Operated by the central bank: Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility: Yes.

The MMA exchanges rufiyaa for US dollars at the official buying and selling rates. However, a dollar shortage led to supplying limited amount of foreign exchange to market participants. The MMA intervenes in the foreign exchange market by allocating foreign exchange to banks and selling US dollars to state-owned enterprises. Commercial banks may deal with the MMA, the central government, state-owned enterprises, and the private sector at the official exchange rate (within the bounds of the 20% exchange rate band).

Allocation: Yes.

The MMA sells foreign exchange to the commercial banks on a weekly basis. The allocation includes a fixed and a variable component. The fixed amount sold to the banks takes into consideration the bank’s net open positions and its share of total banking sector assets. An additional allocation (variable component) is sold to the banks to meet the travel, educational, and medical requirements of the general public and to the growing demand of small and medium enterprises (SMEs), specifically for their LC payments and telegraphic transfers. This allocation is sold based on the seasonal requirements and utilization of the funds.

Auction: No.

Fixing: No.

Interbank market: Yes.

Banks may deal in foreign exchange among themselves, but because of a lack of depth, the market is limited to a few banks. There is no active interbank trading of foreign exchange in Maldives.

On environmental grounds, Maldives imposes a quota on the import of substances that deplete the ozone layers, such as hydrochlorofluorocarbon (HCFC) gas.

Prohibitions are imposed on imports under national laws, such as R-34/2012. Pork and liquor products are restricted, and special permit needs to be obtained from the Ministry of Economic Development.

With the recent amendments (in force since August 1, 2020) to the Export and Import Act, tariffs are levied at 19 different rates (13 ad valorem, 3 specific duty, and 3 composite duty) using the 2022 version of World Customs Organization’s Harmonized System (HS-2022). Under the current tariff structure, Maldives’ national tariff lines have 8530 items at the ten-digit level. Except for the specific and composite duty on cigarette, soft drinks, energy drinks, and alcoholic products, all tariff lines are ad valorem, levied on the free on board value of imports. More than 42.4% of the tariff lines are subject to a zero rate, which is applied to essential goods, such as food, medicine, construction goods including steel, cement, sand and wood, fertilizers, garments, domestic electric appliances, environment-friendly goods, machineries, and vehicles which run on electric or renewable energy. 6.5% of the tariff lines are subject to a duty rate equal to or higher than 35%. The highest rate of duty currently imposed is 400%, levied on non-biodegradable single-use plastic bags and plastic drinking straws.

The exchange rate arrangement of the WAEMU is a conventional peg. Mali participates in a currency union with seven other members of the WAEMU and has no separate legal tender. A monetary cooperation agreement between the WAEMU member states and France was concluded on December 21, 2019, to replace the agreement dated December 4, 1973. The Monetary Cooperation Agreement is based on three pillars: (1) a common issuing institution, (2) fixed parity with the euro, and (3) a guarantee of unlimited convertibility.
The CFA franc is officially pegged to the euro, the anchor currency, at the fixed rate of CAF 655.957 an euro. Exchange rates for other currencies are cross-rates derived from the rate for the currency concerned in the Paris foreign exchange market vis-à-vis the euro. The official rate is used for accounting and valuation. The Conference of Heads of State and Government may decide to amend the Monetary Cooperation Agreement between the WAMU member countries and France.

Applications for the acquisition of real estate by nonresidents from outside the EU require the MOF approval. Nonresidents from the EU, including Maltese citizens, may acquire one piece of real estate to be used as their primary residence, but may not acquire a second residence without MOF approval unless they have resided in Malta at least five years. Nonresidents from the EU may acquire property freely in specially designated areas of the country.

Nonresidents may not engage in real estate transactions, except for the sale of properties acquired with MOF approval.

Primarily, the Payment Accounts Directive (PAD) seeks to ensure access to basic payment accounts with credit institutions to enable all consumers legally resident in the EU to have access to basic banking service, independently of their financial situation or place of residence.

In particular, the PAD applies to consumers who intend to open and use a payment account on a cross-border basis. The PAD facilitates the opening of accounts on a cross-border level by allowing the consumer to ask the new payment service provider to set up on the new payment account all or part of standing orders for credit transfers, accept direct debits from the date specified by the consumer, and provide the consumer with information on the new account.
The PAD also aims to enhance transparency and comparability of fee information about payment accounts to make customers more aware of the fees and charges by payment services providers. Additionally, the PAD provides for more efficient switching of cross-border payment accounts by establishing minimum standards.

The provisions of the PAD have been transposed into Maltese legislation by means of the Credit Institutions and Financial Institutions (Payment Accounts) Regulations.

The CRR requires credit institutions to allocate capital against foreign exchange risk. Pursuant to Article 351 of the Regulation, “If the sum of an institution’s overall net foreign exchange position, calculated in accordance with the procedure set out in Article 352, including for any foreign exchange and gold positions for which own funds requirements are calculated using an internal model, exceeds 2% of its total own funds, the institution shall calculate an own funds requirement for foreign exchange risks. The own funds requirement for foreign exchange risk shall be the sum of its overall net foreign exchange position in the reporting currency, multiplied by 8%.” Therefore, a credit institution’s total net open foreign exchange position is subject to a prudential capital requirement of 8% of its own funds. Financial institutions licensed under local legislation may also be required to comply with this requirement. Foreign exchange risk requirements apply to the net foreign exchange position for all business activities of an institution (that is, trading and banking books). Thus, calculation of the net spot position in a particular currency includes all assets minus all liabilities, including accrued interest, in the currency in question. These requirements are not based on the principle of the residence of assets and liabilities but on the foreign exchange risk of currencies against the base currency of the assets and liabilities.

The provisions of the CRR have been transposed into the national regulatory framework by means of amendments to the Banking Act, subsidiary legislation, and several Banking Rules.

Effective June 26, 2021, a new prudential regime was introduced for investment firms – the Investment Firm Regulation and Directive. Investment firms are subject to newly introduced K-Factors, which will be used to determine own funds requirements. The K-Factors are quantitative indicators to accurately reflect the risks which investment firms face. There are three groups of K-Factors: risk to customers, risk to market access, and risk to the firm itself. Class 2 Firms will be required to calculate their K-Factors when assessing their own funds requirements. Class 1 Firms are to calculate their own funds requirements as per the CRR, whereas Class 3 Firms are to apply either the Fixed Overheads Requirement or the Permanent Minimum Capital Requirement. Moreover, certain collective investment funds are subject to investment and borrowing restrictions. Retail collective investment funds are subject to restrictions on investments in securities, such as exposure limits to credit institutions, other collective investment funds, and financial derivative instruments. Retail collective investment funds may borrow up to 10% of their assets for investment purposes and are allowed to have a global exposure of up to 100% of NAV (calculated according to the Value-at-Risk or Commitment Method). Experienced professional investment funds may borrow up to 100% of the NAV of their funds. AIFs are subject to leverage requirements as stipulated in the AIFMD 2011/61/EU (calculated according to the Gross and Commitment Methods and using the conversion methodologies stipulated in the Directive). In terms of the loan fund rules, a number of investment restrictions are also present for such funds investing through loans including the restriction relating to short selling, reuse collateral, and the use of leverage of not more than 200% of the NAV.

From a local perspective, the MFSA enacted changes to the “Part BI: Rules Applicable to Investment Services License Holders which Qualify as Market in Financial Instruments Directive (MiFID) Firms” (the MFSA Rulebook). This, to reflect the relevant provisions introduced by the Investment Firm Regulation and Directive package.

The MFSA Rulebook distinguishes between the three classes of investment firms namely Class 1 and Class 1 Minus, Class 2 and Class 3 under Part 2 and Part 3 of the Rulebook, respectively. These three classes of firms are differentiated based on their size, such that Class 1 and Class 1 Minus firms are investment firms of considerable size. On the other hand, Class 2 and Class 3 are both firms which are not considered systematic nor of significant size. More specifically, Class 2 firms are small but interconnected firms, whereas Class 3 are generally small and non-interconnected firms. Moreover, K-factors under the Rulebook are divided into three risk groups as follows: Risk-to-client; Risk-to-market; and Risk-to-firm group.

The regulatory requirements do not impose restrictions on the source and location of assets.
Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad

No. The regulatory requirements do not impose restrictions on the source and location of assets unless this is self-imposed in the Prospectus.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally

No. The regulatory requirements do not impose restrictions on the source and location of assets.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition

No. The regulatory requirements in the Rules for Investment Services Providers and related Guidance Notes do not impose restrictions on the source and location of assets relating to currency matching. Although the Rules for Investment Services Providers and related Guidance do not make specific reference to currency matching, the license holders are required to employ a risk management process which enables them to monitor and measure at any time the risk of the positions and their contribution to the overall risk profile, including currency/exchange risk. In addition, UCITS and Alternative Investment Fund Managers are required to establish and maintain a permanent risk management function.

| Crawl-like arrangement | Yes. |

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The Central Bank of Mauritania (BCM) intervenes to regulate the exchange market according to its exchange rate policy objectives (smoothing the exchange rate and the projected level of official reserves). Total bids and asks as well as the amounts settled with the fixing rate are published daily on the BCM website. A summary statement of market turnover data is updated daily on the BCM website. From January 2021, the ouguiya followed a depreciating trend within a 2% band against the US dollar. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a crawl-like arrangement.

Official exchange rate  Yes.  The official or reference exchange rate is used by the BCM, banks, and exchange bureaus to set the bid and ask rates offered to customers, with a distinction being made between account operations and OTC transactions. These rates are also used by the customs services and other economic operators for contractual, accounting, and statistical purposes.

The official or reference exchange rate is determined as follows: for the US dollar (reference rate), the arithmetic average of the weighted average rates of purchases on the exchange market and that of sales on the same market (Instruction No. 02/GR/2020). For other currencies, it is calculated as a cross-rate between the US dollar and the respective parities of the currencies with the US dollar on the international market published by Refinitiv.

The monetary framework pursues multiple targets. The first is to ensure price stability. In addition, without prejudice to the objective of price stability, the BCM pursues the stability of the financial system and contributes to the implementation of the general economic policies defined by the Government.

ADs may freely determine their bid-ask spreads and commissions on foreign exchange transactions with their clients.

As of December 31, 2021, 18 commercial banks and 19 exchange bureaus were licensed by the BCM to deal in foreign exchange with their clients. The BCM is the only institution authorized to grant licenses to banks and exchange bureaus.

Banks must offset their clients’ purchase and sale orders in US dollars and euro and present a single purchase or sale order by currency to the organized foreign exchange market, depending on whether the net balance after offset is positive or negative.

Exchange bureaus may not engage in exchange operations directly with the BCM. They engage in currency exchange by buying and selling banknotes and receive and transfer funds in foreign exchange on behalf of their clients in accordance with the exchange regulations. However, they are not authorized to open customer accounts.

Nonetheless, they may have accounts abroad and make payments and transfers in foreign exchange on behalf of their clients.
Auction

Fixing Yes. The BCM conducts fixing sessions to allocate foreign exchange to the banks and to itself and to determine the equilibrium rate based on supply. During the fixing sessions, banks submit purchase and sale orders with exchange rates, which are classified in descending order for purchases and ascending order for sales; an equilibrium rate emerges from the comparison of these orders, which is the highest selling rate that finds a buyer. The BCM may intervene (after calculating the provisional equilibrium rate). Purchase orders retained in full or in part on the foreign exchange market are unwound at the proposed rates, within the limit of 2% of the market-clearing price, with day value date “D.” A purchase commission of 0.75% is charged. Sale orders are unwound at the final market-clearing price minus a sales commission of 0.25%.

The ouguiya equivalent of the cumulative bids submitted by banks at an exchange market session must not exceed their free reserves in ouguiyas at the previous day’s close. Bids that exceed the limit are automatically rejected.

The BCM has issued an instruction prohibiting the manipulation of exchange rates for transactions on the official foreign exchange market.

Other types of foreign commitments (document remittances and free transfers) are subject to 100% coverage through an effective contribution before the transfer is carried out. However, in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, the requirements for deposits were suspended for essential goods and for hydrocarbons. Effective December 31, 2021, the suspension ended.

Any import resulting in the transfer of currency must be domiciled with an authorized Mauritanian intermediary (Intermédiaires agréés en Mauritanie—IAM).

Foreign currency transactions between residents are subject to BCM authorization.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange  Yes.
Banks must hold required reserves in their current accounts at the CB for domestic and foreign currency deposits of residents and nonresidents pursuant to Instruction Nos. 3/GR/2006, 18/GR/2008, and 7/GR/2017.

Reserve requirements  Yes.

The required reserve base in ouguiya is the average of customer deposits. It is calculated over a period of four consecutive weeks based on total ouguiya deposits at the end of each week. The amount of the required reserve is calculated by applying the required reserve ratio in effect to the reserve base. The reserve holding period is four weeks beginning one week after the calculation period. During this period, the average daily balance of banks’ ordinary current accounts in ouguiya at the CB must be greater than or equal to the reserve requirement. The required reserve ratio is 6%. Any deficiency of required reserves in ouguiya results in a penalty assessed on the deficiency during the holding period. The rate applied corresponds to the BCM policy rate plus 8 percentage points.

The base for required reserves in foreign currency is the daily average of foreign currency demand deposits, term deposits, and other amounts due foreign currency, less the special accounts of projects financed from external resources. The daily average of the end-of-day balances of the current accounts in foreign currencies of each bank over the maintenance period must be at least equal to 7% of the daily average of the base. The holding period is 2 weeks. Any deficiency gives rise to a penalty a working day, applied on the amount of the insufficiency converted in ouguiya at the sale price of the BCM. The rate applied corresponds to the BCM policy rate plus 8 percentage points.

Liquid asset requirements  No.
Liquid asset requirements apply for both foreign and domestic currencies. The liquid asset requirement is set at a minimum of 100%, which is the ratio between the high-quality liquid asset and the net cash outflows over a one-month horizon. The calculation of the new ratio complies with Basel III rules.

Interest rate controls  Yes.
Current accounts in foreign currency opened by primary banks with the CB do not earn interest.

Credit controls  No.

Reserve requirements  No.
Banks must hold required reserves on resident and nonresident foreign currency deposits in their current accounts with the BCM. Resident and nonresident accounts are subject to the same treatment with regard to the reserve requirement (currency of denomination, remuneration, and penalty).

Liquid asset requirements  No.
Liquid asset requirements apply for both domestic and foreign currencies. The liquid asset requirement is set at a minimum of 100%, which is the ratio between the high-quality liquid asset and the net cash outflows over a one-month horizon. The calculation of the new ratio complies with Basel III rules.

Interest rate controls  No.
Only savings accounts (resident and nonresident) earn interest.

Credit controls  No.
The loan agreement must be linked to the borrower’s repayment capacity, which is a ratio between the monthly payment and the stable income. Debt capacity takes account not only of the monthly payment of the loan repayments but also of all other commitments. The duration of the loan allocated may not exceed the duration of the

Stabilized arrangement
The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The exchange rate of the rupee follows movements on the international foreign exchange market as well as domestic demand and supply conditions. Interventions by the Bank of Mauritius (BOM) in the foreign exchange market are limited to situations of excessive exchange rate volatility, shortages of foreign exchange on the market, and accumulation of foreign exchange reserves. The BOM publishes the amount bought or sold and the rate of intervention by close of business on the day the intervention takes place. Information on foreign exchange intervention is also disseminated in the Monthly Statistical Bulletin and Annual Report of the Bank.

Since the onset of COVID-19 with an abrupt decline in tourism inflows, the BOM has stepped up the frequency of its foreign exchange interventions and sold US dollars to banks and foreign exchange dealers. Additionally, the BOM has conducted bilateral sales of foreign exchange to the State Trading Corporation (STC), which is the sole importer of petroleum products and an importer of basic commodities. Interventions were carried out at market rates, within the bid quotes from banks. During 2021, the domestic foreign exchange market remained under pressure as demand for foreign currencies exceeded supply causing the local currency to depreciate. The situation improved with the full re-opening of national borders as from October 2021, leading to higher foreign exchange inflows. However, over the same period, the USD started to appreciate, which added to the depreciating pressures on the rupee.

From May to December 2020, the Mauritius rupee stabilized against the US dollar, and it followed a depreciating trend within a 2% band thereafter, with one realignment in June 2021. Therefore, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified retroactively twice: (1) to stabilized from floating, effective May 6, 2020, and (2) to crawl-like from stabilized, effective December 18, 2020.

The official exchange rate (referred to as the central rate of the BOM) is used for the valuation and recording of BOM assets and liabilities. The central rate is computed as an average of the mid dealt rates of USD/MUR of the last three working days, with the dealt rate being the weighted average rate of market deals of US$20,000 and above as reported by banks and foreign exchange dealers. The official exchange rate is also used for conducting government transactions in foreign exchange. Specifically, government transactions are conducted at the official rate (that is, average of mid dealt rates for past three days) adjusted by a margin. The margin is added/subtracted to/from the official rate to determine the buying and selling rates. The margin varies according to the currency being transacted against the Mauritian rupee and represents costs incurred by the BOM for conducting the transaction, that is, SWIFT, negative interest, etc. Using the SWIFT network involves fees which the BOM passes through to the government in the margin. The official exchange rate within horizontal bands is used for the valuation and recording of BOM assets and liabilities.

Section 4 of the BOM Act 2004 stipulates that the primary object of the Bank is to maintain price stability and promote orderly and balanced economic development. The MPC of the BOM normally meets on a quarterly basis to formulate and determine the monetary policy to be conducted by the BOM to maintain price stability, taking into account Mauritius’ orderly and balanced economic development. The MPC determines the Key Repo Rate (KRR), the policy rate, after reviewing international and domestic economic and financial developments while also assessing the balance of risks to the growth and inflation outlook. Section 5(2) of the BOM Act 2004 stipulates that the Bank will determine, with the concurrence of the Minister of Finance, the accepted range of the rate of inflation during a given period consistent with the pursuit of price stability. However, the provisions of this section are yet to be implemented.

In December 2006, the BOM introduced a new framework for the conduct of monetary policy. The Lombard Rate, which used to be the signaling rate of the monetary policy stance, was replaced by the KRR, with the overnight interbank money market interest rate as the operational target. The framework was based on a corridor of ±50 basis points for the KRR, within which the overnight interbank interest rate was expected to move. The BOM would conduct repurchase transactions to inject/absorb liquidity in the banking system. Two additional instruments were introduced in April 2008 – the Special Deposits Facility and the Overnight Facility, while the corridor was widened to ±125 basis points around the KRR.

Since early 2018, the BOM has been focusing on the 91-Day Bill yield as its short-term operating target. After every MPC meeting, the governor holds a press conference on the same day to explain the decision of the MPC. The MPC also announces its decision through a Media Release that outlines the assessment of prevailing economic and financial conditions and forecasts for inflation and real GDP growth. The Media Release is posted on the BOM’s website simultaneous to the holding of the press conference. The MPC minutes are released on the BOM’s website exactly two weeks after the meeting and also contain the voting pattern of members.

In its Annual report, the BOM provides an overview of the MPC meetings held during the financial year.

The BOM is expected to come up with a new monetary policy framework. The new framework will promote greater transparency on the monetary policy decision-making process, while adopting a forward-looking approach. It is expected to further strengthen monetary policy operations and the monetary policy transmission mechanism. The BOM’s strategy will focus on a number of key operational and strategic elements, namely a well-defined and flexible inflation target; prominent role for inflation forecasts as intermediate target; revamped operating target with a redefined policy interest rate; greater clarity on the nature, scale and magnitude of the target.
of foreign exchange interventions; and appropriate institutional design for different aspects of the monetary policy decision-making process. It will also embed stronger communication.

- Exchange tax: No.
- Exchange subsidy: No.
- Foreign exchange market: Yes. Banks, foreign exchange dealers, and money-changers are free to set their exchange rates.
- Spot exchange market: Yes. As of end-December 2021, 19 banks, 6 foreign exchange dealers, and 6 money-changers (bureaux de change) were licensed by the BOM. Foreign exchange dealers buy and sell foreign currency and engage in both spot and forward foreign exchange transactions. Foreign exchange dealers may carry out money and value transfer services, maintain accounts abroad, and make payments and transfers in foreign currency on behalf of their clients. Money-changers carry same-day transactions and deal only in banknotes.

Effective November 18, 2021, the daily foreign exchange exposure limit of foreign exchange dealers was revised upward to 75% of their specific net owned funds for a period of six months. Effective May 18, 2022, this upward revision was maintained for another period of six months.

- Operated by the central bank: Yes.
- Foreign exchange standing facility: No.
- Allocation: Yes. With the onset of the COVID-19, foreign exchange inflows from the tourism sector declined drastically.

In 2020, the BOM introduced a USDMUR swap arrangement with commercial banks for an initial amount of US$100 million to support import-oriented businesses, which was later increased by an additional amount of US$100 million. Effective January 1, 2021, the facility was extended until and ended effective June 30, 2021.

This facility was a temporary measure taken by BOM to ease the liquidity situation in the domestic foreign exchange market. There are no outstanding drawdowns under the facility.

Effective June 30, 2022, the BOM discontinued bilateral sales to the STC. Previously, since March 2020, the BOM had serviced the foreign exchange requirements of the STC, which is the sole importer of petroleum products and a major importer of basic commodities.

- Auction: Yes. The BOM conducts a single price foreign exchange auction at its initiative. The foreign exchange auction is conducted with banks.

Effective October 5, 2021, the BOM stopped extending the auctions to foreign exchange dealers. Previously, since October 6, 2020, the BOM had resumed intervention with foreign exchange dealers after a long hiatus in response to the effect of the COVID-19 pandemic on the domestic market.

The bids received normally reflect participants’ demand, and the allotment is made on a pro-rata basis depending on the amount the BOM would buy or sell. Counteroffers are made to all bidders (including outliers) at the price determined by the BOM. The auction/counteroffer price is determined by the BOM based on banks’ bid prices, the prevailing USDMUR market rate, and international movements in EURUSD. The rate of intervention is set within the minimum and maximum rates bid by participants. There is no set frequency of foreign exchange auctions.

Fixing  No.

Interbank market  Yes.  Banks and foreign exchange dealers trade among themselves at freely determined exchange rates. The BOM is the sole institution that grants licenses to banks, foreign exchange dealers, and money-changers. As of end-December 2021, 19 banks and 6 foreign exchange dealers were permitted to carry out transactions in the interbank foreign exchange market.

Controls on direct investment

Yes. As per the Insurance (Long-Term Insurance Business Solvency) Rules 2007 and Insurance (General Insurance Business Solvency) Rules 2007, insurers’ investment concentration limits may be as follows:

1. The aggregate value of investments as reported on the balance sheet by an insurer in any corporation, commodity or group of related corporations, except property, whose shares are listed on a licensed exchange in Mauritius or listed on such exchanges as are specified in the Second Schedule, may not exceed 10% of the assets of the insurer.

3. An insurer may invest up to 10% of its assets in any property.

4. When an insurer and its related company, other than a long-term insurance company, make an investment in any corporation or commodity, the aggregate value of that investment in that corporation or commodity may not exceed:

   In the case of listed shares described in paragraph (2), 10% of the assets of the insurer; and in the case of shares described in paragraph (3), 5% of the assets of the insurer.

5. The aggregate value of investments of an insurer in one or more of its related companies may not exceed 10% of the assets of the insurer.

7. The branch of a foreign company may not invest more than 10% of its assets in any property. Property includes direct investment in Investment Properties, mortgages, and Land and Building for insurer’s own use.

It is worth noting that insurers may invest beyond the above

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions  Yes. As per the Guideline on Credit Concentration Risks (2019) issued by BOM, the same limits apply to credit exposures to both single customers or group of connected counterparties, irrespective of whether a credit facility is extended in Mauritius or provided to a counterparty based outside Mauritius.

Borrowing abroad  No.

Maintenance of accounts abroad  No.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits)  Yes.
The Bank issued a 2020 Guideline on Cross-Border Exposure which supplements the existing Guidelines issued by BOM and provides a set of additional minimum standards that would need to be adhered to by banks in respect of their cross-border exposures, that is, exposures to a counterparty or group of connected counterparties based outside Mauritius or whose majority of operational cash flows is derived from operations in a jurisdiction other than Mauritius.

The guideline requires banks to have a board-approved policy on cross-border exposure and inter alia sets out, in respect of cross-border exposure: (1) clearly defined roles and responsibilities of the board of directors, control functions, and external auditors in respect of cross-border exposures; (2) specific due diligence to be conducted on counterparties, jurisdictions, and third parties involved in such exposures; (3) guidance on the risk appetite framework, risk identification and assessment and risk monitoring; (4) requirements for specialized lending and silent guarantees; (5) requirements for credit risk management and risk monitoring in addition to those prescribed in the Guideline on Credit Risk Management and Guideline on Country Risk Management.

Subject to compliance with additional criteria set out in the Guideline on Credit Concentration Risk (2019), subsidiaries and branches of foreign banks may apply different thresholds for exposures denominated in currencies other than Mauritian rupee, applicable to both credit extended in Mauritius or provided to counterparties based outside Mauritius.

For banks other than subsidiaries and branches of foreign banks, the credit exposure, denominated in currencies other than the Mauritian rupee, must be within the following limits:

1. aggregate credit exposure to any single customer may not exceed 25% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital;
2. aggregate credit exposure to any group of connected counterparties may not exceed 40% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital; and
3. aggregate large credit exposures to all customers and groups of connected counterparties may not exceed 800% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital.

The aggregate credit exposure, in currencies other than the Mauritian rupee, of a subsidiary of a foreign bank must be within the following limits:

1. aggregate credit exposure to any single customer may not exceed 50% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital;
2. aggregate credit exposure to any group of connected counterparties may not exceed 75% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital; and
3. aggregate large credit exposures to all customers and groups of connected counterparties may not exceed 1200% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital. This limit is exclusive of the limit of 800% imposed in Mauritian rupee denominated credit.

For credit exposure of a branch of a foreign bank in currencies other than the Mauritian rupee, there is no limit vis-à-vis the Tier 1 capital of the branch.

The acquisition of these securities falls under the Guideline on Credit Concentration Risk, in which “credit exposure/facility” means a commitment by a financial institution to provide funds or substitute of funds, including investment in fixed dated securities/debentures and off-balance-sheet funds to a customer or group of connected counterparties on a secured or unsecured basis.
For banks other than subsidiaries and branches of foreign banks, the credit exposure, denominated in currencies other than the Mauritian rupee, must be within the following limits:

(1) aggregate credit exposure to any single customer may not exceed 25% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital;
(2) aggregate credit exposure to any group of connected counterparties may not exceed 40% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital; and
(3) aggregate large credit exposures to all customers and groups of connected counterparties may not exceed 800% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital.

The aggregate credit exposure, in currencies other than the Mauritian rupee, of a subsidiary of a foreign bank must be within the following limits:

(1) aggregate credit exposure to any single customer may not exceed 50% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital;
(2) aggregate credit exposure to any group of connected counterparties may not exceed 75% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital; and
(3) aggregate large credit exposures to all customers and groups of connected counterparties may not exceed 1200% of the bank’s Tier 1 capital. This limit is exclusive of the limit of 800% imposed in Mauritian rupee denominated credit.

For credit exposure of a branch of a foreign bank in currencies other than the Mauritian rupee, there is no limit vis-à-vis the Tier 1 capital of the branch.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange

Yes.

Reserve requirements

Yes.

Foreign currency deposits of residents (excluding Global Business Companies), irrespective of whether these deposits are used to finance Segment A or Segment B activities, are subject to the Cash Reserve Requirement (CRR). However, all deposits of Global Business Companies which are used to finance Segment A activity are subject to the CRR.

Liquid asset requirements

Yes.

Banks have to maintain a LCR of 100% in MUR, 100% in material foreign currencies, and 100% on a consolidated basis.

The Guideline on Liquidity Risk Management was revised in 2020 primarily to provide banks with some flexibility regarding the LCR for foreign currency in response of the COVID-19 pandemic. Specifically, the following provisions were added:

(1) Contractual committed liquidity facilities in foreign currency from the BOM may receive a 100% inflow rate subject to the following conditions:
   a) The committed liquidity facility must be supported by unencumbered collateral. The collateral should not be included in the stock of high-quality liquid assets.
   b) The remaining contractual maturity of the liquidity facility must exceed 30 days.
   c) The committed liquidity facility must be irrevocable prior to maturity.
   d) The bank must ensure that it has appropriate arrangements in place to meet its liquidity requirements after the expiration of the committed facility.
   e) The aggregate value of such committed liquidity facilities to be considered as inflows may not comprise more than 15% of the total stock of high-quality liquid assets.
(2) A new section on “Transitory deposits” was added, which reads as follows: Notwithstanding paragraph 47 of this Appendix, large wholesale foreign currency deposits of transitory nature from distinct depositors may be excluded from outflows for the purpose of computing the LCR subject to the following conditions:

a) The value of the deposit from the distinct depositor should amount to at least MUR20 billion, or equivalent amount in other currencies, and should be kept at the bank for a maximum period of 3 days;

b) Such deposits should be fully covered by the same amount of balances held with other banks in the same currency;

c) The balances held with other banks covering the deposits should be excluded from inflows for the purpose of computing LCR;

d) Firm instructions should be obtained from the depositors confirming that the deposit would be kept for a maximum period of 3 days;

e) The bank should have policies and limits in place to ensure that its balances with other banks are duly diversified; and

f) The details of such deposits and the corresponding balances held with other banks which have been excluded from the computation of the LCR should be submitted in the format provided by the BOM together with the returns on LCR.

Effective January 11, 2021, the minimum value of the deposit from the distinct depositor under Section 48 (a) of the Guideline on Liquidity Risk Management was changed from MUR20 billion to MUR12 billion (or equivalent amount in other currencies), and the maximum period to be kept at the bank was changed from 3 to 7 calendar days.

The Foreign Exchange Commission (FEC), comprised of members of Banco de México (Mexico’s Central Bank, BM, acronym in Spanish) and the MOF, determines the foreign exchange rate policy. The FEC does not target or defend any exchange rate level. In February 2017, the FEC announced an intervention mechanism through a foreign exchange hedging program. The foreign exchange hedging is auctioned through non-deliverable forwards.

On March 1, 2021, the BM announced two auctions, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$750 million each with a maturity of 84 days, to take place on March 3 and March 8, 2021, respectively.

On May 24, 2021, the BM announced two auctions, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$400 million each with a maturity of 84 days and 79 days, respectively, to take place on May 26, 2021, and May 28, 2021, respectively.

On June 16, 2021, the BM extended the US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve through December 31, 2021, for up to US$60 billion.

On August 16, 2021, the BM announced an auction, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$400 million, with a maturity of 84 days to take place on August 18, 2021. The current amount outstanding of the US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve is US$100 million.

On November 8, 2021, the BM announced an auction, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$200 million, with a maturity of 84 days to take place on November 10, 2021.

It is worth to mention that both mechanisms are considered temporary. In the case of the foreign exchange hedging program, each outstanding amount must be rolled over under a roll-over auction until the FEC instructs otherwise. On the contrary, the US dollar liquidity swap line expired on December 31, 2021, in line with the Federal Reserve’s decision. In line with the above, the FEC decided to conclude the dollar-denominated financing auction mechanism on that date.

Detailed data on the received bids and results of the US dollar loan auctions are published on the BM website. In particular, the BM discloses received and allocated bids, including the forward points, as well as the total amount demanded.

The exchange rate (FIX) is calculated by the BM as an average of quotes in the wholesale foreign exchange market for operations payable in two banking days following the quote date of any of the exchange transaction platforms or of some other similar electronic means that BM considers indicative of prevailing conditions in the wholesale foreign exchange market. The BM releases the FIX at noon each banking day after receiving all quotes and performing the corresponding calculations. The FIX is published in the Official Journal of the Federation one banking day after its calculation and is used to settle liabilities in US dollars payable in Mexico on the day following its publication. The FIX serves only as a reference; therefore, its use in foreign exchange transactions by market participants is not mandatory.

The decisions regarding monetary policy and those related to the responsibilities of BM are made by the members of its Board of Governors, which is composed of five members: The Governor presides and the others are called Deputy Governors.

The Governor, or at least two of the Deputy Governors, may call for a meeting of the Board of Governors. For a session to be convened, at least three of its members must be present.

The Minister of Finance and the Deputy Minister of Finance may attend the Board of Governor’s meetings with voice but without vote for which purpose they must be previously called and informed of the corresponding agenda. These officials may call a Board of Governor’s meeting and suggest issues to be addressed during the meeting.

To be valid, resolutions require the majority of the votes of the present members; in case of a tie, the presiding member has the casting vote case.

BM’s permanent target is annual inflation equivalent to the National CPI of 3% with a variability interval of 1 percentage point (pp). The definition of this interval is simply a practical way of considering the inherent uncertainty as to the exact realization of the 3% permanent target, because of the existence of diverse disturbances, such as relative price variations, that may affect inflation in the short run and place it above or below its target.

The BM is accountable to the Congress of the Union and the Federal Executive Branch. As established in the BM Law, the BM must send quarterly reports (within the next 45 working days after each quarter) to the Congress and the President of the Republic of Mexico regarding several topics, including the registered inflation over the said period. Also, in January of each year, the BM must submit a statement to the latter parties on the monetary policy to be adopted by the CB in the respective fiscal year, among others.

Any of the Chambers of the Congress of the Union may summon the Governor of the Bank to report on the policies and activities of the Institution.

Transparency
Yes.

Publication of votes
Yes.

The BM can disclose its monetary policy through the following mechanisms:

1. Monetary Policy Announcements: public communications through which the Governing Board announces the decision regarding the objective for the overnight interbank interest rate;
2. Minutes of the meetings of the Board of Governors, which describe decisions taken by the majority of board members and, if applicable, the dissenting vote where the corresponding member of the Board of Governors is identified; and
3. Quarterly reports: These reports are presented at a public session presided over by the Governor and in the presence of the other members of the Board of Governors.

Publication of minutes
Yes.

Ten business days after each announcement regarding monetary policy decisions, the minutes of the session in which the Board of Governors deliberated and decided about it are published, thereby allowing access to the data on which the monetary policy was based as well as the arguments that led to such decision.

On May 17, 2018, BM modified some elements of its monetary policy communication strategy:

1. The minutes on the monetary policy decision include the voter’s identity. If there are dissenting opinions in the voting, the reasons for such dissents are included as well;
2. The transcripts of the Board of Governors’ meeting involving monetary policy decisions are available to the public three years after the corresponding meeting took place;
3. The monetary policy decision press release (monetary policy statement) and the corresponding minutes are published.
simultaneously in both Spanish and English;

(4) The speeches and public presentations of the members of the Board of Governors are also published. These materials are available to the public on BM’s official webpage no later than two days after the event.

On February 10, 2020, BM modified some elements of its monetary policy communication strategy:

(1) General communication criteria for the Board was updated according to international standards;

(2) Monetary policy communiqués and minutes will be more concise and clearer;

(3) The monetary policy decision communiqué will include how many members of the Board attended the meeting.

Effective August 5, 2021, BM modified some elements of its monetary policy communication strategy:

(1) In each monetary policy announcement, the Bank will publish its update on its inflation and core inflation expectations for the next eight quarters; and

Foreign exchange firms must be authorized by the MOF to purchase, sell, and exchange foreign exchange currency, including funds transfers. Foreign exchange firms may not perform exchange transactions directly with BM.

Corporations registered as foreign exchange centers at the National Banking and Securities Commission (NBSC) do not require an authorization by the MOF and may perform the following transactions: purchase and sell foreign currencies through bank account funds transfers; purchase and sell bills, minted pieces, and... common metals with legal tender in the issuer country, traveler’s checks in foreign currency, and coin blanks; and purchase documents on demand denominated and payable in foreign currency, payable by financial entities, up to the equivalent of US$10,000 in domestic currency for each client on the same day. The FEC operates an intervention mechanism through a foreign exchange hedging program. The foreign exchange hedging is auctioned through non-deliverable forwards.

As a response to the surge in global financial market volatility because of the spread of COVID-19, the FEC announced an increase to the foreign exchange hedging program, authorizing up to US$30 billion of non-deliverable forwards. During March 2020, the FEC announced two auctions of US$2 billion through non-deliverable forwards, on March 12, 2020, and March 18, 2020, respectively. At its maturity, each outstanding amount must be rolled over under a roll-over auction until the FEC instructs otherwise. The data on interventions are published on the Bank’s website immediately after the auctions. In particular, BM discloses received and allocated bids, including the forward points, as well as the total amount demanded.

The FEC has the possibility of selling non-deliverable forwards settled by differences in US dollars with international counterparties, to be traded during hours when Mexican markets are closed.

In March 2020, the BM announced a temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, valid initially through September 30, 2020, for up to US$60 billion, and extended twice, until September 30, 2021. On March 1, 2021, the FECBM announced two auctions, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$750 million each with a maturity of 84 days, on March 3 and March 8, 2021, respectively.

On May 24, 2021, the FECBM announced two auctions, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$400 million each with a maturity of 84 days and 79 days, respectively, on May 26, 2021, and May 28, 2021, respectively.

Effective June 16, 2021, the BM announced an extension of the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, through December 31, 2021 (previously valid through September 30, 2021) for up to US$60 billion.

On August 16, 2021, the FECBM announced an auction, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$400 million, with a maturity of 84 days to take place on August 18, 2021. The current amount outstanding of the US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve is US$100 million.

On November 8, 2021, the BM announced an auction, under the temporary US dollar liquidity swap line established with the Federal Reserve, for US$200 million, with a maturity of 84 days to take place on November 10, 2021.

It is worth to mention that both mechanisms are considered temporary. In the case of the foreign exchange hedging program, each outstanding amount must be rolled over under a roll-over auction until the FEC instructs otherwise. On the contrary, the US dollar liquidity swap line expired effective December 31, 2021, in line with the Federal Reserve’s decision. In line with the above, the FEC decided to conclude the dollar-denominated financing auction mechanism on that date.

Detailed data on the received bids and results of the US dollar loan auctions are published on the BM website.

There are no restrictions on participation in the interbank market: All commercial banking institutions and development banking institutions may participate.

There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads and commissions of market participants. In the exchange interventions, the BM operates directly with commercial banks. Participants present the market rates to buy US dollars, and BM decides whether to make the transactions, which must be in line with prevailing market rates. As of August 2022, there are 50 commercial banks and 6 development banks that participate in the interbank market.

Some operations may take place in the OTC market.

About 67% of spot operations in the local exchange market are handled through an electronic brokerage system and 5% through voice brokers according to the last triennial survey of the Bank for International Settlements from 2019.

Brokerage houses and commercial and development banks may enter into exchange rate, stock exchange, and other derivatives transactions. To act as an intermediary with respect to the latter transactions, BM authorization is required, which is granted on the basis of certain legal and risk-management requirements. The BM does not participate in the forward market with delivery of the underlying.

for 117 out of the 12,806 tariff items subject to general import duties, including 25 tariff lines related to special operations (Eighth Rule). Under this Rule, registered manufacturing industries may import (zero duty but under the corresponding license) finished goods to allow them to fulfill their contracts and comply with manufacturing programs in which they are registered. Licenses are also required for 19 tariff lines for used vehicles, certain imports under the trade agreement that require a license to receive tariff preference, and industrial raw diamonds imported under the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme. The Agreement by which the MOE issued rules and general criteria on foreign trade subject certain goods to automatic import permit: footwear products, steel, slot machines, and textile and clothing products. Once the requirements have been met, the corresponding permit is issued. Import licenses are generally valid for one year, but for certain sensitive products and used clothing, they are valid only for three months. The license may be renewed, depending on the importer’s performance. Import licenses are not required for used vehicles imported by the diplomatic or consular missions, or by personnel of the Mexican Foreign Service, for station-wagon-type (family) vans ("motor home"), vehicles for physically challenged persons, funeral vehicles or funeral carriages and coaches, go-karts, or collector’s vehicles (at least 30 years old), among others. Imports of other used cars require MOE approval. Only special-purpose vehicles not made locally are allowed for import.

In February 2019, the agreement that establishes the classification and codification of hydrocarbons and petroleum products whose import and export are subject to prior permission by the MOE was modified, to adjust the requirements to get a prior permission for the import or export of these products.

The Agreement that establishes the classification and codification of merchandise and products whose import, export, entry, or exit is subject to sanitary regulation by the Ministry of Health subjects various fish and crustaceans, mollusks and other aquatic invertebrates, as well as organic chemicals to regulation.

The Agreement that establishes the classification and codification of merchandise and products whose import and export are subject to regulation by the agencies that conform to the Inter-ministerial Commission for the Use and Process Control of Pesticides, Fertilizers, and Toxic Substances subject to diverse organic chemical products and products of the chemical industries to regulation.

The Agreement by which the MOE issues general rules and criteria on foreign trade was modified on several occasions. Among other things to add tariff lines that will be subject to automatic import permits related to various footwear, textile, and clothing products and make the corresponding adjustments to Annex 2.4.1 of the Agreement with respect to what is applicable to merchandise subject to compliance with Official Mexican Standards of the textile and clothing sectors, and footwear; to modify Annexes 2.2.1 and 2.2.2 of the aforementioned Agreement to update the list of tariff items subject to the Automatic Import Notice of Steel Products scheme; to add the reduction of response times, in some cases elimination of requirements, as well as the implementation of electronic means for their processing; to incorporate Sections VII and VIII of Numeral 10 of Annex 2.4.1 of, to guarantee compliance with the purposes of the Official Mexican Standards in terms of Article 40 of the Federal Law.
on Metrology and Standardization, and thereby ensure that imported products comply with the minimum safety requirements and standards and thus provide full protection to consumers; to extend the term of the agreement that made the export of iron ore subject to prior permission to inhibit the illegal exploitation and commercialization of said merchandise, update and strengthen the requirements of the prior export permit for said good; to add the official Mexican standards concerning specifications that must be met to import petroleum products, terminals connected or interconnected through wired access to a public telecommunications network; and radio communication equipment with digital interface, respectively, as well as to submit some steel products to the submission of an automatic import notification.

On May 9, 2022, the new Agreement by which the MOE issues general rules and criteria on foreign trade matters was published in the Official Gazette of the Federation, which aims to standardize the criteria, offices, notes, and instruments of foreign trade.

Chapter 2.4 deals with the Mexican Official Standards that are enforceable at the point of entry, as well as the alternatives for compliance, previously located in Annex 2.4.1.

The new agreement adds to NOM-222-SCFI/SAGARPA-2018 for compliance at point of entry.

The imports of some endangered species, stickers known as “Garbage Pail Kids,” certain types of pesticides and insecticides, and some narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances are prohibited, as well as weapons and other goods from countries that are under sanctions by the UNSC and electronic cigarettes and vaporization devices with similar uses, as well as their cartridges and accessories.

In November 2019, the General Import and Export Taxes Law was modified, creating 19 tariff items identified as pesticides, of which 17 are forbidden because they have been identified as high hazardous chemicals under the Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants and by the Rotterdam Convention on the Prior Informed Consent Procedure for Certain Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides in International Trade. In February 2020, the General Import and Export Taxes Law was modified, which prohibits the import and export of electronic cigarettes and vaporizing devices with similar uses, as well as their cartridges and accessories.

Furthermore, Eritrea was eliminated from the embargoed countries by the Resolution issued by the UNSC.

| Import taxes and/or tariffs | Yes. |

On July 1, 2020, the new General Import and Export Taxes Law was published, implementing the sixth amendment to the World Customs Organization’s Harmonized System. Mexico has 7,859 tariff items in the General Import and Export Taxes Law: 97% have ad valorem taxes of between 0% and 20%, and 58% are exempt from import duties.

The largest import tax is 75% and applies to a few products, such as poultry meat and edible offal and fructose.

A 50% tariff applies to imports of used cars from countries without a trade agreement.

Imports from USMCA (Agreement between the United States of America, the United Mexican States, and Canada), ALADI (Latin American Integration Association), and EFTA member countries, Australia, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, El Salvador, the EU, Guatemala, Honduras, Israel, Japan, Nicaragua, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore, Uruguay, and Vietnam receive preferential treatment.

There is a preferential tariff of 0% to 10% for imports within the framework of the Sectorial Promotion Programs (PROSEC) only for the inputs used in the elaboration of specific products, regardless of whether the goods produced are destined for export or domestic market. At 2021, the number of tariff items included in the PROSEC amounted to 854, with the automotive, electrical, and electronic products being the most benefited sectors. No tariffs are applied to goods imported temporarily for repair or transformation purposes and which will then be returned abroad.

Mexico applies antidumping and anti-subsidy duties to the following products: bond paper and rebar from Brazil; atomizers, chemical products, steel products, mushrooms, bicycles, coaxial cable “guidewire,” pencils, ceramic tiles, cookware, polyester, ceramic dinnerware and ceramic parts, metallic balloons, cooking pots, and aluminum foil, hydraulic cylinder jacks, wind towers, metal zippers, zamak and steel pull handles and aluminum disks from China; steel pipe from the UK; epoxidized soybean oil, rubber, chemical products, steel products, and chicken leg and thigh from the USA; rubber and steel products from Japan; rubber, polyester, and steel products from Korea; steel products from Italy, France, Germany, Kazakhstan, Portugal, Romania, Russia, Spain, Taiwan Province of China, and Ukraine; metoprolol, steel products, and antibiotics from India; and epoxidized soybean oil from Argentina.

New electric motor vehicles for the transport of ten or more people, new light electric motor vehicles, new electric motor vehicles for the transport of goods, and new trolleybuses are temporarily exempted from the import duty. These measures will be in force until October 1, 2024.

Effective February 23, 2021, the import duty was temporarily waived for vaccines against the SARS-CoV-2 virus and aluminum tanks for oxygen for medicinal use. The measure will be in force until the contingency situation derived from the disease epidemic generated by the SARS-CoV-2 virus (COVID-19) has ended in Mexico.

The imposition of import duties of 15% was extended for 180 days for 186 tariff items in the steel sector, dating from June 5, 2019.

In the same sense, a six-year reduction plan was established for the steel sector. This means the creation of 82 tariff items, the modification of 25, and the elimination of 21. Thus, for 228 tariff items, an import tariff of 15% is established until 2021, later it will go to levels of 10% until 2023 and, finally at 3% levels and Exempt until 2024.

A 180-day import tariff was established for three tariff items related to the steel sector.

A temporary import tariff was established for 180 days on various tariff items in the textile-clothing and footwear sector.

A tariff reduction program was established for the clothing and footwear sector, which means temporarily establishing the import tariff of 317 tariff items at levels of 25% and 30% until 2024, the year in which they will return to their MFN level.

Tomato exports are subject to an automatic Notice (only when they are definitive exports).

In February 2019, the agreement that establishes the classification and codification of hydrocarbons and petroleum products whose import and export are subject to prior permission by the Ministry of Energy was modified, to adjust the requirements to get a prior permission for the import or export of these products.

The Agreement that establishes the classification and codification of merchandise and products whose import, export, entry, or exit is subject to sanitary regulation by the Ministry of Health was modified in 2020 to add further merchandise to those already regulated. The modification did not imply qualitative changes in the regulation.

The Agreement that establishes the classification and codification of merchandise and products whose import and export are subject to regulation by the agencies that conform to the Inter-ministerial Commission for the Use and Process Control of Pesticides, Fertilizers, and Toxic Substances was modified in 2020. Derived from the creation and modification of tariff lines for chemical products, goods were added for better identification, and those already regulated, which underwent changes, were updated. The modification did not imply qualitative changes in the regulation. The agreement that establishes the classification and codification of petroleum and petroleum by-products determines imports and exports are subject to prior approval by the Ministry of Energy.

In December 2019, the Agreement by which the MOE issues general rules and criteria in Foreign Trade matters was modified, to publicize the modifications applicable to prior import and export permissions and the procedure to request tomato export notice.

On August 28, 2019, the agreement by which the exports of various steel goods were temporarily subject to prior license was published. This was done to ensure statistical monitoring of the trade of these goods and comply with the commitments established in the Joint Declaration between the United States and Mexico on Section 232 tariffs on aluminum and steel.

Sugar exports must receive prior export authorization, and when the destination is the USA, a maximum export quota is set, as well as a minimum price. The agreement that allows the export of sugar was published in the Official Journal of the Federation (“Diario Oficial de la Federación”—DOF) on October 5, 2017, by means of an Agreement by which the export of sugar is subject to prior permission and a maximum quota for its export is established.

Foreign exchange transactions are limited or infrequent and handled or transacted by a foreign commercial bank in the Federated States of Micronesia (FSM). There were about 50–100 foreign currency exchange transactions in 2019. The two commercial banks in the FSM are insured by the U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The foreign banks only accept limited foreign currencies in exchange for the US dollar at foreign exchange rates. The absence of a domestic currency and a monetary authority—a CB—somewhat constrains the ability of the local authorities to regulate the scope of foreign exchange activities in the country. There are no foreign exchange bureaus in the country.

Foreign investors must obtain an application from the federal government and submit it for review and action to the Foreign Investment Board of the state in which the business will be located. They must also obtain a license from the federal government to engage in business or to acquire an interest in a business in Micronesia. If a foreign investor wishes to conduct business in more than one state, an application for each state must be obtained from the federal government and submitted to the Foreign Investment Board of each state in which the business will be located and operated. Priorities for foreign investment are reviewed from time to time by the federal and state authorities.

By FSM Constitution, no foreign person may own land in the FSM.

Foreign investment in the real estate and construction sectors is prohibited in accordance with the laws prohibiting land ownership by foreigners. Foreign investors typically obtain long-term leases (usually up to 55 years with an option to renew for another 44 years) for land needed for their businesses.

The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as floating. The National Bank of Moldova (NBM) intervenes in the domestic foreign exchange interbank market to smooth out sharp exchange rate fluctuations of MDL against the US dollar. Sharp fluctuations are not specifically defined. However, the NBM intervenes based on market conditions and future expectations of market participants. These interventions do not aim to change the trend of the exchange rate determined by the market. The NBM intervenes directly at the market-quoted rates and publishes aggregated monthly data on its website regarding its interventions and interbank market turnover. The data show interventions by currency and type of operation (spot or derivative).

In the first three quarters of 2021, a moderate deficit on the domestic foreign exchange market has exerted depreciation pressures on the nominal exchange rate, as net foreign exchange demand from firms continued to expand, mirroring the growing trade balance deficit. With the onset of the energy crisis and soaring natural gas and oil prices in the fourth quarter of 2021, the foreign exchange market deficit has significantly deteriorated. In the first four months of 2022, the situation has worsened as the developments brought on by the war in Ukraine added to the pressures from rising energy prices. The initial few weeks of the military conflict in Ukraine were characterized by a high level of uncertainty and market turmoil, leading to higher foreign exchange outflows, businesses’ preference for foreign exchange deposits and households’ preference for foreign exchange cash hoarding, all factors combined, increasing the demand for foreign exchange. In these conditions, the MDL has weakened versus the USD, in nominal terms, by 3.1% in 2021 compared to end-of-2020 level and by 7.8% in the first half of 2022 compared to end of 2021. Since the end of May, when conditions on the local foreign exchange market returned to normal, the exchange rate has been relatively stable.

Overall, the CB has intervened on the domestic foreign exchange market, to smooth exchange rate fluctuations, with net sales of USD 305 million in 2021 and USD 412 million in the first half of 2022. Most of the interventions were conducted between November 2021 and March 2022.

Data on CB’s net foreign exchange interventions can be found in the press release on the evolution of official reserve assets, which is published by the 7th following the month for which the data are reported. The press release is available in Romanian and Russian (second hyperlink provided). More detailed data (third and fourth hyperlinks) are published by the 22nd following the month for which the data are reported.

Yes. The inflation target measure is the monthly year-on-year CPI inflation published by the National Bureau of Statistics.

Definition of CPI: The CPI is an estimative indicator, which characterizes the general trends of the prices for purchased goods and the tariffs for services used by the population, to satisfy their needs over a certain period of time (current period) in comparison with a fixed period (base period). The calculation of indices is based on the structure of household’s expenditures and the prices recorded for 1200 goods and services,
The inflation target is set for an indefinite period and should be met continuously. According to the medium-term monetary policy strategy of the NBM, there is no term in years for inflation target, which means that the inflation target is set for an indefinite period and should be met continuously.

Strengthening the financial stability of the nonbank lending sector and fostering consumer protection and responsible lending practices to reduce the risks of over-indebtedness of the population and bring into line the laws related to the activity of nonbank lending organizations has led to performing the following amendments to the law:

A required reserves ratio (RRR) of 0% applies to banks’ liabilities with a contractual maturity higher than 2 years that fall under certain criteria.

Starting 2019, the CB pursued a policy toward rebalancing RRR, to the extent the one in domestic currency is inferior to the RRR in foreign currencies. Following a series of gradual reductions of RRR in domestic currency and increases of RRR in foreign currencies to 26% and 30%, respectively, to counter persistent inflationary pressures, the CB has gradually hiked both ratios in 2022 and has widened the gap between them to 5 percentage points:

- effective April 16, 2022, to May 15, 2022, the RRR for foreign currency was increased from 30% to 33%.
- effective May 16, 2022, to June 15, 2022, the RRR for foreign currency was increased from 33% to 36%.
- effective June 16, 2022, to July 15, 2022, the RRR for foreign currency was increased from 36% to 39%.

In July 2022, the RRR in domestic currency was 34%, while the one in foreign currency was 39%.

Liquid asset requirements Yes. Banks must ensure that the currency denomination of their liquid assets is consistent with the distribution by currency of their net liquidity outflows. However, where appropriate, the NBM may require banks to restrict currency mismatch by setting limits on the proportion of net liquidity outflows in a currency that can be met.
during a stress period by holding liquid assets not denominated in that currency. According to Item 15 of Regulation No. 44/2020 on requirements of LCR for banks, banks must report liquidity buffer, liquidity inflows, and liquidity outflows when aggregate liabilities in a currency other than Moldovan lei amounting to or exceeding 5% of the bank’s or the single liquidity sub-group’s total liabilities.

Exchange rate structure
Unitary |

Multiple | Yes. |
The exchange rate structure is classified as multiple because the official exchange rate may differ from the market rate by more than 2%, and a multiple-price auction was introduced without a formal mechanism to prevent a spread exceeding 2% of effective rates between the winning bids. Since the inception of the auction, however, winning bids have never deviated by more than 2%. To eliminate the risk of accepted bids deviating by more than 2%, in addition to multiple-price auction, the BOM introduced a single-price auction, from October 1, 2015, that is, where all accepted offers are fulfilled at a single cutoff rate.

Stabilized arrangement: Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The BOM reserves the right to intervene in the foreign exchange market. To ensure the togrog’s exchange rate flexibility with macroeconomic fundamentals, BOM intervenes through the auction in the foreign exchange market to mitigate the supply-demand gap. BOM’s intervention in the foreign exchange market through auction has increased drastically compared to 2021. In the first quarter of 2022, the order from banks has increased by 4 to 8 times from previous year.

As of June 30, 2022, Mongolia’s imports have risen by 21% to US$3.90 billion, exports have increased by 29% to US$4.3 billion from previous year, and Balance of Payment (BOP) showed deficit of US$9.9 million.

As of June 30, 2022, the exchange rate of MNT against USD depreciated by 10.0% to 3134.10 from the start of the year. Also, compared to June 30, 2021, the exchange rate depreciated by 10.0%.

From September 2020, the exchange rate stabilized within a 2% band against the US dollar. While the exchange rate has depreciated since February 2022, more observations are necessary to determine its new trend. Until then, the de facto exchange rate arrangement remains classified as stabilized.

The intervention data is published on the Bank of Mongolia’s website bi-weekly, right after the intervention.

Official exchange rate

Yes. The BOM’s closing rate—tugrog against US dollar—is calculated as the sum of weighted purchase and sale rates multiplied by total purchase and sale volume percentages, respectively. Purchase and sale volumes are based on transactions between 4:00 p.m. of the previous day and 4:00 p.m. of the current day reported by banks by 4:40 p.m. every business day. The closing reference rate is announced by 5:40 p.m. everyday once it is cleared by the director of the Reserve Management and Financial Markets Department at the BOM. Calculation of reference rates of tugrogs against all other foreign currencies is based on rates in international markets between 4:00 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. of the current day. The reference rate is used in accounting, customs valuation, and government transactions with the BOM. For accounting purposes, the daily reference rate is the BOM’s closing rate on the previous day. The reference rate is announced each weekday except national holidays.

The BOM has had a monetary aggregate targeting framework since the mid-1990s with reserve money as the operating target and M2 as the intermediate target. However, because of the remonetization process and the volatility of the money multiplier since 2007, the BOM has not strictly adhered to its monetary targets (except during 2009–2011, when the BOM had an IMF-supported program). It has pursued an eclectic anchoring strategy involving the monitoring of a broad range of financial (exchange rate, money and credit growth, interest rate) and real (domestic demand, current account, production) indicators. Since 2012, the BOM has been pursuing a more forward-looking approach by introducing the Forecasting and Policy Analysis System (FPAS) in which monetary policy decision is based on macroeconomic forecasts. The current policy strategy of the BOM can be considered as inflation-targeting framework. Following the annual BOM Monetary Policy Guidelines proposal, the 2021 and medium-term inflation targets were set at 6%±2% for the years 2021–2023, which were approved by parliament in November 2020. The target measure is headline inflation (CPI). The BOM cut the policy rate from 11% to 8% in three increments of 100 basis points, and once by 200 basis points to 6% in 2020. The policy rate remained at 6% in 2021. However, inflation increased considerably in the last months of 2021 because of supply-driven factors, including supply chain disruptions, border restrictions, oil price increases as well as spread of highly contagious animal diseases. Considering the risks of higher inflation expectations and intensifying second-round effects of inflation that could be caused by supply disruptions, monetary policy was tightened in January 2022. The policy rate increased by 50 basis points effective January 28, 2022, by 250 basis points effective March 24, 2022, by 100 basis points effective June 22, 2022, and by 200 basis points effective September 20, 2022. Inflation targets are set in the Monetary Policy Guidelines, which is prepared by the BOM and approved by the parliament. Realization of the target is reported to the parliament. The MPC consists of 7 members, including the BOM Governor, the First Deputy Governor, the Deputy Governor, and four outside members. Currently, there are 3 outside members who are advisor to the National Development Agency’s Chairman and 2 professors from the Institute of Finance and Economics and National University of Mongolia. The meetings of the MPC are held at least 4 times a year, and it publishes its decisions after each such meeting. Minutes of the MPC meetings are published on the BOM website. Inflation forecasts are published quarterly in the Inflation Report.

The limits are 15% of adjusted capital for the net position in a single currency and 30% of adjusted capital for the total net position in all currencies. Adjusted capital is calculated, as follows: (1) Treasury-owned common and preferred equities are deducted from Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital, respectively; (2) goodwill is deducted; (3) the sum of deferred taxes and software in excess of 10% of Tier 1 is deducted; (4) 75% and 25% of amounts in excess of limits set in the Banking Law 17.1–17.5 are deducted from Tier 1 and Tier 2 capital, respectively. If Tier 2 is insufficient, the remainder is deducted from Tier 1; (5) Tier 2 is capped at 50% of Tier 1. The same requirements apply to resident and nonresident assets and liabilities.

Import licensing procedures are maintained for various reasons including protection of national security, human, animal, or plant life or health, and to meet commitments under international conventions to which Montenegro is a signatory, for example, the CITES. As of the end of 2021, these requirements covered approximately 396 ten-digit HS tariff items, or 3.98% of all tariff lines, comprising explosives, headgears, optical instruments, pharmaceutical products, insecticides, contact lenses, uranium, and apparatus based on the use of X-rays or alpha, beta, or gamma radiation.

Montenegro prohibits a few imports, mainly to protect health, safety, security, the environment, and natural resources. Imports of radioactive waste and trade in nuclear materials are prohibited. No other import prohibitions are in place. Regarding the importation of used products, certain technical requirements must be met.

Waste tires can only be imported for processing, on the basis of an approval or an import license issued by the Environmental Protection Agency, and provided their import does not endanger the Export and import quotas have been eliminated in Serbia and Montenegro, in accordance with an agreement between the two republics for harmonizing their trade, customs, and indirect tax regimes.

According to the Law on Road Traffic Safety (“Official Gazette of Montenegro” (OGM) Nos. 33/12, 58/14, 14/17, and 66/19) motor vehicles and trailers that are imported, or being placed on the Montenegrin market for the first time, as well as their parts, devices, and equipment, according to their construction and safety characteristics, must be in compliance with technical requirements and conditions. Vehicle homologation is carried out at the request of the legal or physical person who imports the vehicle, that is, the vehicle manufacturer registered in Montenegro. The rulebook on technical requirements for vehicles that are imported or put on the market for the first time in Montenegro (OGM, Nos. 05/15, 63/18, and 10/19) stipulates that the homologation procedure is carried out for new and used vehicles that are imported, that is, put on the market for the first time in Montenegro, before the procedure of importing and registering vehicles in Montenegro.

The Law on Customs Tariff (OGM No. 28/12) stipulates customs duty that has to be paid for imports of goods. The rate does not exceed 50%. The average applied tariff rate for 2022 is 5.43% calculated by customs rates set out in the Decree on Customs Tariffs for 2022 (OGM No. 142/21).

Montenegro applies only tariff-rate (preferential) quotas under its Regional Trade Agreements. They currently affect imports of 149 agricultural products from the EU in line with the Stabilization and Association Agreement (for example, poultry meat, fish, cheese, water, and wine) since 2008 and imports of dried fruit from Turkey since 2010. Tariff-rate quotas are allocated by the Customs Administration on a first-come, first-served basis.
Nonautomatic export licenses are required for the following commodities: drugs, medicines, blood and pharmaceutical products, precious metals, explosives, arms, military equipment, dual-use goods, and goods which may be used for the execution of a death penalty and whose application may be subject to torture and national art treasures.

To (1) preserve the stability of the supply of raw materials to the processing sector, (2) ensure the stability of the population of the northern part of Montenegro who use wood for heating, (3) preserve the stability of the prices of fuel, and (4) control the preservation of the forest fund, combat illegal harvesting, and control the implementation of the cutting in line with the cutting plan, Montenegro has in place a licensing regime for export of raw wood and certain wood products. The scope of the licensing regime consists of a total of 30 tariff lines that are restricted (OGM No. 33/2018). Effective May 1, 2021, the validity of the licensing regime for exports of raw wood and certain products was extended for two more years (OGM No. 43/2021).

The Decision on Temporary Limitation of Export of Certain Wood Articles published in the “OGM,” No. 43/2021 of April 23, 2022, entered into force May 1, 2021, and applies until May 1, 2023, with the same content, without additional restrictions or measures.

In addition to the shortage of firewood and logs on the Montenegrin market, there was also a significant increase in prices, which in the case of firewood had an impact on the standard of the most vulnerable social groups of the population, especially in rural areas.

In this situation, the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Water Management was forced to initiate the introduction of a temporary measure to control the export of wood assortments as a raw material basis for the wood industry, and to protect the firewood market as one of the most important household items, especially in rural areas. The measure in question has a limited duration of two years, with the fact that in the meantime the development of the situation on the Montenegrin market would be monitored and, if necessary, appropriate measures would be taken. The implementation of the decision in question is expected to eliminate market disturbances in terms of price stabilization and market supply.

Bank Al-Maghrib (BAM) is implementing exchange rate policy in connection with the exchange regime and guidelines established by the government, subject to the opinion of the bank (Article 11 of the Law establishing the Charter of the BAM).

The de jure exchange system is a pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands calculated based on a basket of currencies, comprised since April 2015 of the euro and the US dollar, weighted, respectively, at 60% and 40%. The limit exchange rates for the fluctuation band around the central rate of the basket have been (+) and (−) 5% since March 2020.

Since then, the exchange rate has increased its flexibility while still being managed within the +/−5% band against the US dollar–euro basket. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands.

Official exchange rate  Yes.

The dirham has been pegged since 1973 to a basket of currencies reflecting Morocco’s foreign exchange structure with the rest of the world. The composition of this basket is subject to adjustment. Since April 2015, the basket has been composed of the euro and the US dollar, with weights of 60% and 40%, respectively. The BAM sets the central dirham/US dollar exchange rate, as well as the limits for the exchange rate fluctuation bands around the central rate at +/−5%. However, the BAM may establish limits for the exchange rate bands against another currency.

Based on its published methodology, the BAM establishes daily reference exchange rates for the dirham based on quotes listed by banks with market maker status as outlined in the BAM’s Circular.

Composite  Yes.

The monetary policy framework is an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis a composite comprising the euro and the US dollar. Within the framework of an exchange rate fixed to a currency composite, the BAM adopted a monetary policy framework in 2006 based on various inflation indicators, with the overnight interest rate as its operational target to pursue its main objective of price stability. On March 22, 2016, the BAM lowered the reference interest rate to 2.25%. Since April 2015, the basket has been composed of the euro and the US dollar, with weights of 60% and 40%, respectively.

<td>Banks must adhere to the band rates set by the BAM when performing spot market foreign exchange transactions in exchange for dirhams, referred to in Articles 2 and 4 of the Decision of the Governor of the BAM on how to apply the exchange rate regime. The exchange rate band in relation to the central rate is set at $+/−5%$. The FEO’s Foreign Exchange Policy Statement defines spot foreign exchange transactions as follows: (1) the purchase and sale of foreign currencies against dirhams by banks, between themselves, with the BAM, or with their customers; (2) the purchase and sale of foreign currencies against other foreign currencies by banks, between themselves, with customers, with foreign banks, or with the BAM. Banks are authorized to carry out, either on their own account or on behalf of their customers, spot foreign exchange transactions, hedging transactions, loan-borrowing transactions in accordance with the 2022 General Instructions on Foreign Exchange Operations, and to establish foreign exchange positions, in accordance with the procedures laid down by the BAM. Amounts repatriated and not paid into the foreign currency accounts referred to in the provisions of the foreign exchange regulations in force must be transferred under market conditions and in accordance with the procedures laid down by the BAM regarding the applicable exchange rates within three working days of receipt of the funds by the bank. The equivalent in dirhams must be immediately made available to the beneficiary by the bank that received the funds. For foreign exchange transfers, licensed banks and exchange bureaus freely determine their bid-ask spread within the fluctuation band of $+/−5%$ around the central rate of the band established by the BAM. Banks charge a 0.1% commission on foreign exchange transactions for dirhams with customers, as well as with foreign banks. This commission is not charged on transactions between Moroccan banks. For banknote transactions with foreign banks, the commission is not charged. Banks are authorized to buy and sell foreign currency among themselves and with customers and to maintain foreign exchange positions on terms established by the BAM. Purchase, sale, and arbitrage operations among banks or on behalf of their clients may be denominated in any currency traded in the foreign exchange market. Banks may conduct foreign currency buying and selling operations with foreign banks and the BAM for any currency traded in the foreign exchange market. The BAM reserves the right not to list certain currencies even if they are traded in the foreign exchange market. Currencies not listed by the BAM may be traded by banks among themselves or with their foreign correspondents. There were 15 financial institutions active on the foreign exchange market as of December 31, 2021.</td>

also organize auctions for other currencies. Only banks with market maker status are authorized to participate in the currency auctions. The first auction took place January 15, 2018.

Before each session, the BAM uses the auction platform to publish its contribution pages on Reuters, Bloomberg, and its website, with the press release setting out the characteristics of the following call for tenders: Session date; Purchase or Sale; Currency; Amount; Opening time; Closing time; and Value date.

Bids must comply with the following conditions: The minimum amount per bid is US$500,000; the amount of the bid must be a multiple of 500,000; each bid may be divided, at most, into 3 tranches of a multiple of 500,000; the amount per bid must not exceed the amount of the auction announced by the BAM.

The BAM sets and publishes the fluctuation band, in relation to the central exchange rate, which it uses as a basis for operating on the foreign exchange market. To that end, it sets a minimum and maximum exchange rate for each auction. Bidders may modify or cancel their bids until the auction closing time.

At the closing time of the auction session, the bids submitted to the BAM are deemed firm and irrevocable.

The BAM publishes the overall results of the auction on its website as well as on its contribution pages on Reuters and Bloomberg.

The CB organized auctions as of September 20, 2021, to buy foreign currency to absorb foreign exchange surpluses and ensure proper market operation.

The BAM reserves the right to suspend access for banks having status as market makers in foreign exchange auctions when they fail to comply with the rules in connection with this status to which they are subject under the circular from the BAM.

The BAM may also decide to withdraw market maker status from a bank when it no longer meets the conditions for which the status of market maker was granted, and despite warnings issued by the BAM, the bank engages in actions that may adversely affect the proper operation of the foreign exchange market.

Interbank market

Yes. The interbank market participants are primarily market makers, the number of which was nine banks as of December 31, 2021. Banks that have status of market makers must comply daily, among themselves, with firm reciprocal buying and selling price obligations on the USD/MAD parity.

Banks having market maker status may freely engage in foreign exchange operations with other Moroccan and foreign banks in compliance with current regulations.

As of December 31, 2021, 15 banks were participating in the interbank market.

Over the counter

Yes. Banks, OTC traders, and sub-delegates authorized by the FEO may conduct OTC transactions, in accordance with the General Instruction on Foreign Exchange Operations.

1. Banks, foreign exchange bureaus, and payment institutions, licensed for this purpose by the FEO, may engage in trading involving foreign banknotes and traveler’s checks with customers. Only credit institutions with the status of authorized intermediary may negotiate with customers LCs, bank checks, and money orders. These institutions may also engage in currency trading involving foreign banknotes with Moroccans and foreign nationals holding foreign exchange accounts. For OTC foreign exchange operations, licensed intermediary banks may (a) buy or sell foreign currency banknotes, travelers’ checks, LCs, bank checks, and money orders with their customers and (b) repurchase nonresidents’ dirhams at the... end of their stay in Morocco from previously surrendered foreign currency. The FEO permits exchange bureaus and payment institutions it has authorized to conduct OTC operations to buy and sell foreign banknotes and travelers’ checks with their customers as allowed by foreign exchange regulations. Foreign exchange bureaus and payment institutions authorized to conduct OTC transactions may buy, in exchange for domestic currency, foreign banknotes and/or foreign-currency-denominated travelers’ checks and sell for cash, in exchange for domestic currency, foreign banknotes and traveler’s checks, as part of the allowance for personal travel, missions, and internships abroad by personnel of central and local governments and of public institutions and enterprises. Payment institutions are also permitted to grant electronic trade allowances to individuals.

Foreign exchange bureaus may hold cash equivalent to DH 500,000. For exchange bureaus in airport duty-free (hors douane) departure lounges or bonded arrival areas, the cash limit is DH 600,000.

Foreign exchange bureaus must deal with a licensed intermediary bank or the BAM to transfer their surplus holdings and cash travelers’ checks. Certain establishments – other than licensed bank intermediaries, exchange bureaus, and payment institutions – may also be authorized by the FEO to purchase foreign banknotes and/or traveler’s checks for dirhams on behalf of a licensed bank intermediary they have freely chosen. These authorizations are known as sub-delegations and the beneficiaries as sub-delegates. Such establishments are classified as hotels, guesthouses, tourism residences, youth hostels, international passenger carriers, travel agencies, and car rental firms with offices at ports and airports, and casinos authorized by the relevant authorities.

Sub-delegates may engage, for the account of an authorized intermediary, in operations involving the purchase of foreign banknotes or negotiation of traveler’s checks with customers.

(2) Authorized intermediaries, foreign exchange bureaus, and payment institutions may deal in foreign banknotes, traveler’s checks, LCs, bank checks, and money orders in foreign exchange with their customers up to the limits allowed by the limit rates applied by the BAM at the central rate of plus 7.5% for sales and minus 7.5% for purchases. The BAM sets the OTC fluctuation band exchange rate limits for the dirham against other currencies.

Sub-delegates engage in the transactions referred to in Article 1(3) of the BAM Circular on OTC transactions at the exchange rates agreed on with the authorized intermediary on whose behalf they are dealing. Rates applied to OTC exchange transactions are net, inclusive of all charges and commissions.

Foreign exchange bureaus and payment institutions must go to a credit institution with the status of authorized intermediary trade in foreign banknotes and cash traveler’s checks. These operations are carried out on the terms and conditions agreed on between the parties.

As of December 31, 2021, there were 655 exchange bureaus authorized by the FEO exclusively to engage in OTC foreign exchange operations. It may postpone setting the OTC band rate limit of one or more currencies in the event of a major event affecting them. When performing OTC foreign exchange transactions, banks must apply exchange rates that fall within the band rate limits referred to in Article 8 of the Decision of the Governor of the BAM on how to apply the exchange rate regime. The BAM informs banks of the exchange rates of listed currencies against the US dollar applicable to the foreign banknote transactions it carries out with them at the time.
of publication of the rate limits. Regarding OTC foreign exchange transactions between the BAM and banks, the settlement of foreign banknote transactions initiated by banks with the BAM is carried out by hedging in foreign currency with their foreign correspondent banks. These transactions involve only the banknotes of listed foreign banks and result in the payment of 1% commission, before tax, to the BAM.

Brokerage
No.

Market making
Yes. Banks with market maker status must meet the following requirements: (1) Provide continuous buy/sell trading quotes of USD/MAD on the spot market listed on Reuters and Bloomberg, with updates every 15 seconds; (2) provide firm buy/sell spot market quotes for USD/MAD on the trading platform for at least 6 banks with market maker status within the limits of their daily requirements; (3) provide simultaneous and identical quotes on the trading platform and on Reuters and Bloomberg contribution pages; (4) provide quotes for a minimum of, effective February 1, 2021, US$1,000,000 (previously US$500,000) with a maximum bid-ask spread of 50 basis points (bps) within the limits of the daily requirement; (5) provide reciprocal daily commitments vis-à-vis relevant market makers in terms of amounts and spread; (6) perform all trades relating to the reciprocal quote commitments on the trading platform; and (7) perform all other operations not relating to reciprocal commitments on the Bloomberg or Reuters platform.

Forward exchange market
Yes. Banks may perform the following hedging operations against the following risks on behalf of their customers or for their own proprietary purposes, in compliance with the foreign exchange regulations in effect: (1) hedging operations against foreign exchange rate risk for foreign currencies against dirhams and foreign currencies against other foreign currencies; (2) hedging operations against interest rate risk; (3) hedging operations against the risk of commodity fluctuations taken out by Moroccan legal entities with banks or foreign broker-dealers on an organized international market; commodities include mining, energy, and agricultural products, as well as timber, coal, silver, and other precious metals; and (4) hedging transactions against any risk inherent in any asset or debt. Banks are required to ensure that the unwinding of hedging transactions does not exceed the settlement periods of the current or underlying capital transaction provided for in the commercial or financial contracts concluded in this context. Operators may undertake hedging operations with justification that the outcome has been secured rather than the initiation of the hedge agreement for imports and exports of goods. This option of signing hedging agreements for imports and exports may be executed within the limit of 25% of the average value of imports carried out during the last three fiscal years and 100% of the average export turnover for the past three fiscal years.

Hedging transactions, carried out by banks with their customers, must be covered by a contract in the framework of the International Swaps and Derivatives Association (ISDA), the French Banking Federation (FBF), or the European Market Infrastructure Regulation (EMIR).

Hedging transactions – foreign exchange transactions against dirhams – carried out with customers are subject to foreign exchange commissions in accordance with current regulations. Articles 140 and 143 of the 2020 General Instruction from the FEO on Foreign Exchange Operations on hedging operations specifies the terms and conditions of hedging operations with regard to the above-mentioned risks, which must be related to actual commercial or financial operations when the hedge relates to a current or capital transaction linked to the activity of the company (which must have been in business for at least three years) and when the amount to be hedged does not exceed the amount of the transaction and the settlement does not exceed the settlement deadlines. These provisions are intended to prevent speculative transactions in the foreign exchange market.

Banks may offer their customers a combination of instruments as part of the same hedging operation. Hedging transactions may also result in the unwinding of positions arising from such transactions. In addition, hedging the stock of imported commodities may cover exported/imported products as well as imported and stored products. For hedging against any risk inherent in any asset or debt, banks may conclude these transactions only on a proprietary basis or on behalf of certain institutional entities – credit institutions and similar entities, insurance companies, and collective investment funds (organismes de placement collectif en titrisation). Institutional investors were also allowed to cover capital transactions, such as investments made abroad by UCITS or insurance companies.

Official cover of forward operations No.

However, importers of services are authorized to use dirhams on the national territory to settle transactions for import services rendered in Morocco by nonresident natural persons. “Special” accounts denominated in dirhams may be opened in the name of nonresident foreign natural or legal persons in the cases and conditions set out in the 2022 General Instruction on Foreign Exchange Operations. Current transactions within the national territory may only be settled in the national currency. Any foreign exchange transaction not specifically defined remains subject to the authorization of the Exchange Office.

For capital transactions Yes. As a general rule, settlement of capital transactions between residents and nonresidents must be made in currencies listed by the BAM. However, banks are allowed to grant loans in national currency to nonresidents: (1) loans in dirhams granted by banks to nonresident foreign individuals and Moroccans residing abroad, intended to finance the acquisition and/or development of real estate in Morocco; (2) consumer loans granted in dirhams by banks to foreign personnel working for diplomatic representations accredited in Morocco or international organizations based or represented in Morocco; and (3) credit lines and facilities granted to branches registered with the FEO as part of the execution of contracts in Morocco, the remuneration of which is denominated entirely in dirhams. Credit transactions within the national territory may only be settled in national currency.

Transactions among residents in Morocco must be denominated and settled in domestic currency.

Use of foreign exchange among residents Yes.

Payments arrangements Yes.

Bilateral payments arrangements No.

Operative No.

Inoperative No.

Regional arrangements Yes.

A regional payments arrangement among the CBs of Algeria, Libya, Mauritania, Morocco, and Tunisia governs payment operations among those countries. Economic operators may settle their transactions either within the framework of these arrangements or by following normal procedures. Payments between Morocco and AMU countries may be made either under the unified bilateral payments agreement concluded between AMU countries or through the banking system. Payments between Morocco and the AMU countries and all related documents must be denominated either in one of the currencies of the two countries involved in the transaction or in a currency that is jointly quoted by the two countries.

Clearing agreements No.

Barter agreements and open accounts No.

Administration of control Yes.

Foreign exchange controls are overseen by the FEO (Office des Changes) and the Administration of Customs and Indirect Taxes, both under the MOF. The Office has delegated the execution of the main exchange regulation measures to authorized banks. Foreign exchange controls involve verifying that all foreign exchange transactions are conducted in accordance with the regulations in effect.

Payments arrears No.

Official No.

Private No.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion) Yes.

On domestic ownership and/or trade Yes.

Residents may purchase, hold, and sell gold coins in Morocco for numismatic or investment purposes. Ten different types of foreign gold coins are traded on the Casablanca Stock Exchange, which does not, however, deal in gold bars. Any individual or legal entity wishing to operate as a manufacturer or merchant of items made of platinum, gold, or silver is required to file a declaration with the customs precious metal warranty office, eight days prior to the date on which the establishment opens or commences operation (Article 4 of Dahir No. 1-77-340 and Article 91 of Minister of Finance arrêté 1309-77).

This application must include the following supporting documents: (1) a copy certified as true to the original from the register of commerce and (2) a certificate of registration in the business license tax rolls (rôlé des patentes), prepared for the year during which the declaration is prepared.

Items made from platinum, gold, or silver, except for those articles weighing one gram or less, imported into or manufactured in Morocco, must be presented to the customs precious metal warranty offices to undergo assay and, if necessary, to be covered with hallmarks indicating warranty (Article 44 of Dahir No. 1-77-340). The items thus presented may not have a fineness of less than the following minimum amounts: (1) for platinum items: 950 per mille; (2) for gold items: 750 per mille; and (3) for silver items: 800 per mille.

Manufacturers and merchants (including itinerant traders) of platinum, gold, or silver items are required to keep a register signed and initialed by the chief of the customs precious metal warranty office with local jurisdiction, in which register they must enter the type, number, weight, and fineness of the articles made of these materials which they are purchasing, selling, or receiving to repair, and they must do so on a daily basis and at the very time when these items are bought, sold, or brought in (Articles 93 and 94(2) of the Minister of Finance arrêté).

On external trade

Imports of gold are subject to authorization from the Administration of Customs and Indirect Taxes. The MOF fixes a quota annually for the importation of gold ingots. The quota is allocated among jewelers and industrial users of precious metals. Exports of gold are also regulated.

Controls on exports and imports of banknotes

On exports

Exports of domestic banknotes are subject to authorization. However, authorized intermediary banks or operators established in industrial acceleration zones may export dirham-denominated banknotes to industrial acceleration zones with an export declaration. The dirhams must be drawn from convertible dirham accounts of operators in the export zone and used solely for payments to residents for the following expenditures: wages and other wage-earner remuneration up to any amount and transportation, repairs, work, and supplies of products from the territory covered up to DH 5,000 an operation and subject to an annual ceiling of DH 150,000 an operator. Travelers may export up to DH 2,000 in dirham banknotes. Authorized intermediary banks may set up foreign exchange counters on sea ferries operating between Morocco and other countries. The rules governing such foreign exchange counters (1) allow banks to bring aboard the ferry, under customs control, a stock of dirham banknotes for each crossing, and (2) limit such transactions at these counters to the purchase of foreign banknotes against dirhams from Moroccan citizens and foreign residents or nonresidents traveling to Morocco. Stocks of dirham banknotes for such counters must be brought aboard the ferry under customs control. For this purpose, the bank must execute with customs a dirham export declaration at the time of the ferry’s departure.

Foreign and Moroccan nonresidents may export foreign-currency-denominated means of payment previously imported or debited from their foreign exchange or convertible dirham accounts. Nonresident individuals (foreigners and Moroccans residing abroad) are not required to show a declaration to Customs filled out on entering the territory or a foreign currency receipt when, at the end of their stay, they resell remaining dirhams from previous exchange transactions to foreign exchange bureaus, payment institutions authorized to conduct OTC exchange transactions, and authorized intermediary banks situated at ports or airports, up to DH 2,000 a passport. Residents may also export foreign banknotes within the limits specified in the foreign exchange regulations (for example, for travel allowances).

Nonresident individuals are authorized, when leaving Morocco, to export previously imported foreign-currency-denominated means of payment in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations currently in force. Moroccan nationals residing abroad may repurchase and export 100% of the foreign exchange previously repatriated and transferred on the foreign exchange market up to a maximum of DH 100,000, excluding the foreign currency credited to their convertible dirham accounts.

On imports

Yes.

Domestic currency

Yes. The importation of domestic banknotes is subject to authorization. Travelers are, however, authorized to import up to DH 2,000 in dirham banknotes.

Foreign currency

No. Nonresident travelers may bring in unlimited amounts of foreign banknotes, traveler’s checks, and other means of payment denominated in foreign exchange, including negotiable bearer instruments. The term “negotiable bearer instruments” means monetary bearer instruments such as traveler’s checks; negotiable instruments (especially checks, promissory notes, and money orders) that are either payable to the bearer or freely endorsable or made out to a fictitious beneficiary or in any form that permits a transfer by simple remittance; and incomplete instruments (especially checks, promissory notes, and money orders) that are signed but do not indicate the beneficiary. Resident travelers may also import unlimited amounts of foreign banknotes, but must surrender them for dirhams within 30 days of their return to Morocco. Imports of foreign banknotes must be declared at customs offices when the amount to be imported exceeds the equivalent of DH 100,000. Imports of foreign currency banknotes less than the equivalent of DH 100,000 may be covered, if desired, by a written declaration filed with customs on entering Morocco.

Resident Accounts

Yes.

The foreign exchange accounts permitted are:

(1) foreign exchange accounts in the name of exporters of goods and services;
(2) “international trade” foreign exchange accounts;
(3) “foreign exchange insurance” accounts;
(4) foreign exchange accounts for reinsurance in foreign exchange;
(5) foreign exchange accounts in the name of reinsurance brokers;
(6) “business travel allowance” foreign exchange accounts;
(7) foreign exchange accounts for hedging operations against the risk of price fluctuation;
(8) foreign exchange accounts in the name of resident foreign nationals (natural or legal persons);
(9) foreign exchange accounts in the name of corporations established in industrial acceleration zones or offshore financial centers located in Morocco;
(10) foreign exchange accounts for investment transactions abroad of Collective Capital Investment Organizations (Organisme de Placement Collectif en Capital – OPCC), UCITS, and Collective Real Estate Investment Funds (Organismes de Placement Collectif Immobilier – OPCI);
(11) foreign exchange accounts for investment abroad of insurance or reinsurance companies;
(12) foreign exchange accounts in the name of service exporters bidding for or holding contracts awarded as part of foreign tenders;
(13) foreign exchange accounts in the name of Moroccan resident individuals, not listed in the trade register, with foreign-source income;
(14) foreign exchange accounts in the name of Moroccan nationals who had resided abroad and have transferred their tax residence to Morocco.

Two types of accounts may be opened:
(1) Foreign resident individuals and foreign firms may open foreign exchange accounts in Moroccan banks without limitation. These accounts may be credited with:
(a) transfers from abroad;
(b) payments by any foreign-exchange-denominated means of payment (for example, banknotes and traveler’s checks);
(c) Transfers of foreign banknotes by the account holder must be justified by an original signed import declaration from the border customs offices or a foreign currency receipt or any other document, dated within one month, justifying the origin of the foreign currency;
(d) foreign currency withdrawals from Moroccan banks in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations in force;
(e) remuneration and reimbursements arising from capital operations carried out by account holders;
(f) effective January 3, 2022, retirement pensions repatriated by foreigners residing in Morocco directly into ordinary dirham accounts opened in their names, for the past 12 months, on presentation to the bank of a copy of the corresponding pension form. These accounts may be debited for transfers abroad or for the surrender of foreign currency for dirhams for all domestic settlements. There are no restrictions on interest payments on these accounts, on transfers between foreign exchange accounts, or on transfers between foreign exchange accounts and convertible dirham accounts. Authorized banks may issue international credit cards to holders of these accounts. Overdrafts on these accounts are not permitted.
(2) Moroccan exporters of goods and services (including fishing companies) may open foreign exchange accounts and deposit up to 70% of the repatriated foreign exchange receipts from exports. The portion that Moroccan exporters of goods in the aeronautics and space industries may hold is 85% of export earnings in convertible dirham or foreign exchange accounts. The accounts may be credited in full or in part at the discretion of the exporter. In the case of a partial credit, the remaining amount may subsequently be credited to the account within a maximum period of one year from the date the foreign exchange was sold on the foreign exchange market. Convertible dirham accounts may be credited with:
(a) amounts from other foreign exchange or convertible dirham accounts belonging to the same holder;
(b) funds debited from foreign exchange accounts and sold on the foreign exchange market;
(c) funds withdrawn from convertible dirham accounts for payment of expenses in Morocco. These funds may be credited to exporters’ accounts within a period of one year of the date on which they were withdrawn. The accounts may also be credited with foreign banknotes withdrawn for professional travel purposes and not used, provided the account is credited within 30 days of the date foreign currency was withdrawn for travel that did not take place or for travel that did take place within 30 days of entry into Morocco. Exporters’ foreign exchange accounts may be debited:
(a) for foreign exchange expenses related to the account holder’s professional activity;
(b) to credit another foreign exchange or convertible dirham account in the name of the same account holder;
(c) to sell foreign exchange in the foreign exchange market;
(d) for cost of travel organized by travel agencies for residents. The costs of ground services abroad and transport costs payable in foreign currency may be deducted from the funds available in the account on presentation of the supporting documents required by the General Instruction on Foreign Exchange Operations.

Holders of these accounts may obtain international credit cards from authorized banks. Overdrafts are not permitted in foreign exchange accounts.

Authorized banks may open foreign exchange accounts for foreign placement operations for insurance and reinsurance companies, UCITS, and OPCCs, and make transfers related to foreign deposit, investment, and placement operations. Effective January 3, 2022, banks may open foreign exchange accounts for investment transactions abroad on behalf of OPCIs.

They may also open foreign exchange accounts to allow traders to improve their management of international trade operations while avoiding exchange rate fluctuations and commissions and fees related to sales and repurchases of foreign currency. Authorized intermediary banks may open, on behalf of nonexporter individuals or firms, foreign exchange accounts to facilitate use of annual allowances in their favor under exchange regulations currently in force.

Banks are authorized to open, on behalf of companies that do not have a foreign currency account – micro-credit associations, associations recognized as being of public utility, cooperatives and professional federations as well as individuals engaged in professional activity – and who benefit from a business travel allowance, a foreign currency or convertible dirham account for “business travel allowance” for the purpose of receiving the allowance.

These accounts may record on the credit side up to 100% of the allowances related to business travel. Such accounts may also be freely debited (1) with foreign banknotes to meet business travel needs; (2) with outward transfers or Internet purchases, in connection with the above-mentioned business travel (hotel bookings, transport costs abroad, etc.); (3) for the issuance of bank checks and/or traveler’s checks; and (4) for the issuance or charging of international bank cards in accordance with the provisions of the exchange regulations.

“Tourism allowance” foreign exchange accounts were eliminated effective January 3, 2022. Previously, these accounts could be credited (1) with 100% of the tourism travel allowances and (2) with the tourism travel allowances for the individual’s minor children or spouse. They could be debited (1) with foreign banknotes to meet needs associated with tourism or business travel; (2) with outward transfers or Internet purchases in connection with tourism travel; (3) for the issuance of bank checks and/or traveler’s checks; and (4) for the issuance or charging of international bank cards issued in accordance with the exchange regulations. Authorized intermediaries may open on their books foreign exchange accounts in the name of insurers and reinsurers for the purpose of engaging in the collection of premiums or settlement of amounts of compensation for claims associated with foreign exchange policies signed in accordance with the insurance regulations in force. These accounts may be credited (1) with the amounts of the premium, which is to be settled in foreign exchange; (2) with the share of premiums accruing to the insurer under a coinsurance policy. In such cases, the transfer must be made by debiting the “foreign exchange insurance” account of the lead insurer; (3) with the payments of reinsurers and coinsurers to cover their liabilities; (4) with the payments in connection with recoveries (recours et sauvetage); (5) for foreign exchange purchases required to cover liabilities originating from insurance policies underwritten in foreign exchange if the balance on a foreign exchange insurance account is unable to cover liabilities borne by the insurer; and (6) for the refund of premiums paid to a reinsurer following termination of the policy. Rental fees for stands and exhibitor fees for fairs and exhibitions abroad by residents without a foreign exchange or a convertible dirham account may be transferred by authorized intermediaries on presentation of an invoice or fee slip signed by the organizer of the fair or exhibition. Costs related to consignment sales may be settled directly by deduction from the selling price of the goods sold on consignment, including such costs as commissions, transit charges, handling charges, customs duty, packaging and repackaging costs, warehousing and storage fees, expert costs, analysis or sampling fees, destruction expenses in case of damage, costs for advertising and promotion incurred by foreign commission merchants and purchasing cooperatives, costs of transportation to or from Morocco, and costs incurred by foreign consignees for marketing goods sold on consignment (fresh fruit, and vegetables, citrus fruits, flowers, and fishing products). Authorized intermediaries may also freely transfer funds returned by the General Treasury for the VAT on bills of purchase in Morocco collected by diplomatic and consular representatives and representatives of international public organizations and their foreign staff.

Insurance underwriting for commercial transactions is carried out in accordance with insurance regulations. The regulatory framework governing insurance and reinsurance operations lists the foreign currency operations eligible for insurance in Morocco and authorizes economic operators to contract insurance with insurance and reinsurance companies abroad. The foreign currency operations for which economic operators may contract insurance denominated in foreign currency with insurance and reinsurance companies in Morocco are as follows: (1) imports and exports, when the related contracts are signed by or on behalf of nonresidents; (2) merchandise shipments from a foreign country or a free trade zone in Morocco to a foreign country within the framework of international business transactions initiated by resident operators; (3) exports not involving payments; (4) risk in free trade and offshore areas established in the national territory; (5) aviation risk (hull and civil liability); and (6) “contractor’s all risk” operations, when the insured party is a nonresident. The foreign currency operations for which insurance may be contracted with foreign insurance and reinsurance companies are as follows: (1) mandatory insurance for which coverage cannot be found with insurance and reinsurance companies in Morocco; (2) aviation and maritime and transportation insurance, including international road transportation (hull and cargo), whether or not covered by insurance and reinsurance companies in Morocco; (3) import insurance related to payment for certain goods (crude oil, gas, and diesel fuel; heifers; wood; goods imported by air or by post; externally financed imports if the terms include foreign insurance) whose import certificate is expressed in c.i.f. value and for which the importer is required to accept insurance abroad; and (4) premiums payable by Moroccan ship owners to foreign associations as coverage for certain risks related to the development of their shipping company that cannot be covered by insurance and reinsurance companies in Morocco. Moroccan businesses with construction contracts abroad may transfer up to 20% of the contract amount to defray their initial expenses and liberalized transfers for technical assistance required for the performance of contracts abroad.

The regulatory framework for international transport is set out in the 2019 General Instruction on Foreign Exchange Operations. The regime applicable to international transport uses a single “international transport account” to record all transactions carried out with the same foreign partner.

Effective January 3, 2022, the FEO put in place a global allowance for personal travel in the amount of DH 100,000, plus an additional 30% income tax allowance, with an overall cap of DH 300,000 a person a calendar year. This allowance may be used for any type of personal travel abroad (for example, tourism, religious, medical, etc.) and also replaces the departure allowances (for example, education, medical care, etc.). Previously, the following were in place: (1) Tourism allowance: the ceiling on the tourism allowance was DH 200,000 and the indexation rate for the income tax supplement was 25%, with the option of carrying the unused portion forward once to the next year. As a result of the closing of air, sea, and land links to address the spread of COVID-19, the FEO decided to provide a DH 20,000 exceptional tourism allowance for Moroccan residents who had been stranded abroad and who had used all of their tourism allowance. This temporary measure ended when the borders reopened. The overall amount of the tourism allowance could not exceed DH 100,000 a person and a calendar year. (2) Religious travel allowance: DH 15,000 a person a calendar year for Umrah pilgrimage; DH 15,000 a person a calendar year for the Hajj pilgrimage; an additional DH 20,000 for the staff of the travel agency accompanying pilgrims, per accompanying person a trip. Business travel allowance:

- 100% of the amount of corporate or income tax for companies subject to this tax or of the minimum contribution amount, paid in the past fiscal year by corporations, cooperatives subject to corporate tax, and branches registered with the FEO that do not hold foreign exchange or convertible dirham accounts, up to DH 500,000 a calendar year;
- 100% of the amount of income tax for individuals engaged in professional activity, as referred to in Article 105 of the 2022 General Instruction on Foreign Exchange Operations, in the past fiscal year, up to DH 100,000 a calendar year;
- DH 60,000 a calendar year for companies that paid corporate tax of less than DH 60,000, those exempt from corporate tax, newly established companies, companies with a tax credit, and Moroccan micro-credit associations or associations deemed to be in the public interest, cooperatives, and professional federations;
- 100% of the tax for the past fiscal year charged against the tax credit, up to DH 500,000 a calendar year for companies with a tax credit;
Cooperatives and professional federations also benefit from the DH 60,000 allowance for business travel. Larger allowances may be approved by the FEO on proof of need. The allowances for specific business travel may not be added to other allowances, except for the allowance for personal travel.
Cooperatives subject to corporation tax have the option of benefiting from a business travel allowance of 100% of the amount of tax paid, with a ceiling of DH 500,000.

For a given trip, the allowance for personal travel, which replaced the various types of personal travel and departure allowances (for example, tourism, religious, medical, education, etc.) on January 3, 2022, may be combined, in whole or in part, with any other foreign exchange allowances granted under a general or special FEO authorization. The same allowance for tourism travel may also be granted to Moroccan nationals living abroad. Foreign residents who wish to travel abroad may be granted the foreign exchange equivalent of all their income savings. Allowances for personal travel may be delivered in whole or in part, by subrogation, to Moroccan travel agencies approved by the Ministry of Tourism for tourism, family, cultural, or private travel abroad by means of an individual or group check or by transfer to foreign service providers.
With regard to tourism and religious travel, (1) pilgrims may make advance payment of living expenses if required by contractual provisions; (2) pilgrims may purchase foreign exchange for personal expenses; (3) travel agencies may, in case of overrun of their allowances, use funds in their convertible dirham and/or foreign-currency-denominated accounts to cover the expenses of pilgrims and their travel companions; and (4) intermediaries may issue securities guaranteeing the settlement of services to be provided to pilgrims and their travel companions on behalf of Saudi service providers, at the request and on behalf of travel agencies organizing Hajj trips. Business travel by exporters of goods and services may be financed without restriction by debiting foreign exchange or convertible dirham accounts in Moroccan banks. For business travel other than by exporters of goods and services, a tax criterion is used to determine the maximum business travel allowance banks may provide to individuals and legal entities for companies without convertible dirham and foreign exchange accounts. The allowance is 100% of the amount of corporate or income tax (for companies subject to that tax) paid by such companies in the past fiscal year, up to DH 500,000 a calendar year; 100% of the amount of income tax for Moroccans engaged in professional activity, with an increased ceiling for such allowances to 100% of the income tax they paid in the past fiscal year, up to DH 100,000, and up to DH 60,000 for companies that paid corporate tax of less than DH 60,000, those exempt from corporate tax, and Moroccan micro-credit associations or associations deemed to be in the public interest.

Licensed banks are also authorized to transfer sums relating to the purchase of medicine, medical supplies, and medical tests by foreign laboratories. The allowance of DH 20,000 for the father, mother, or guardian of a minor student leaving Morocco for the first time and the allowance for acquisition of computer hardware among the facilities granted for study travel abroad were eliminated.

Medical personnel in public agencies, local governments, and public institutions and enterprises wishing to attend professional events abroad may also purchase foreign exchange. If the costs of the mission or internship are borne in full by the traveler, banks may provide DH 2,000 a day up to DH 20,000 a trip. Requests for additional amounts require FEO approval, which is granted on presentation of supporting documents. Banks may transfer funds for family assistance up to DH 10,000 a year.

Foreigners residing in Morocco and employed in either the private or public sector or engaged in industrial, commercial, agricultural, or certain other professions may transfer all their income. There are no quantitative limits on transfers of foreign workers' remuneration. Transfers of wages and retirement pensions may be made monthly, in arrears. When the payments are not executed at these intervals, the interested parties may arrange to settle arrears in connection with their income entitlements for the past 12 monthly payments that have already matured. They may also freely contribute to pension or social security funds in their countries of origin. These arrangements apply equally to Moroccans' foreign spouses. Commercial banks are authorized to transfer pensions paid by government or private organizations to retirees residing permanently abroad. In addition, retired foreigners and Moroccans' foreign spouses may transfer their entire pensions. They may also transfer severance benefits paid by their Moroccan employers by order of a Moroccan court. Authorized banks may make payments for after-tax earnings of foreign or Moroccan artists residing abroad who are invited to exhibit or perform in Morocco, and transfers of prize money won at film festivals.

_Purchase abroad by residents_ Yes. Derivatives transactions must be based on real trade or financial transactions and may not be speculative. Economic agents may negotiate directly with international broker-dealers or through authorized banks to hedge against price fluctuation risk for certain commodities that are or may be traded on a secondary market. These transactions must take place through dedicated multicurrency accounts at Moroccan banks. Authorized banks may offer their customers options for exchanging dirhams and foreign currency and one foreign currency for another, to the exclusion of foreign instruments. To hedge against customer risk, authorized banks must have recourse to the local interbank market. If they are unable to find the appropriate hedging instrument in the local market, they may turn to the international market for foreign exchange hedging instruments. Hedging transactions must be backed by the foreign exchange options selected by customers. Authorized intermediary banks may also offer instruments to hedge against the risk of interest rate fluctuation to resident economic operators with foreign loans. Authorized banks may offer their customers forward cover for foreign exchange and may do so by borrowing or investing foreign exchange at the same maturities as the hedging operations. Authorized intermediaries may also sign, on their own behalf or on behalf of their customers (1) spot or forward contracts for foreign currency swaps, (2) swap contracts with their foreign correspondents, and (3) swap contracts for foreign exchange and dirhams, regardless of the maturity date, on behalf of Moroccan companies with concessional financing by foreign governments or public agencies or international development institutions. For hedging against any risk inherent in any asset or debt, banks may conclude these transactions only on a proprietary basis or on behalf of certain institutional entities—credit institutions and similar entities, insurance companies, and collective investment funds (organismes de placement collectif en titrisation). Institutional investors were also allowed to cover capital transactions, such as investments made abroad by UCITS or insurance companies.

This allowance may be used for any type of personal travel abroad (for example, tourism, religious, medical, etc.) and also replaces the departure allowances (for example, education, medical care, etc.). Previously, the following were in place: (1) Tourism allowance: the ceiling on the tourism allowance was DH 200,000 and the indexation rate for the income tax supplement was 25%, with the option of carrying the unused portion forward once to the next year. As a result of the closing of air, sea, and land links to address the spread of COVID-19, the FEO decided to provide a DH 20,000 exceptional tourism allowance for Moroccan residents who had been stranded abroad and who had used all of their tourism allowance. This temporary measure ended when the borders reopened. The overall amount of the tourism allowance could not exceed DH 100,000 a person and a calendar year. #### Classification

- No separate legal tender
- Currency board
- Conventional peg
- Stabilized arrangement Yes.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating. As one of the main conduits for foreign aid inflows, the Bank of Mozambique (Banco de Moçambique—BM) is one of the main channels for foreign exchange to enter the market. The BM also intervenes on the market to address disorderly market conditions. In its foreign exchange buying and selling operations on the interbank foreign exchange market (MCI), the BM uses average listings from commercial banks, which are only required to observe a maximum spread of 2% between buying and selling exchange rates for foreign... currencies. Commercial banks may change their listings when deemed to be required, during the MCI’s operating hours. From January 2021, the exchange rate increased its flexibility while still being managed, and then stabilized within a 2% band against the U.S. dollar. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified twice: (1) to other managed from crawl-like, effective January 29, 2021, and (2) to stabilized from other managed, effective June 24, 2021.

Official exchange rate  Yes. The official (benchmark) market exchange rate is calculated as the weighted average of the market exchange rates listed by commercial banks registered at three times during the day: 9:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., and 3:30 p.m. The last exchange rate calculated for the day is the benchmark rate for the day and is used for valuation purposes and criteria.

The BM applies a monetary policy system based on the use of the policy interest rate, the interbank money market rate of Mozambique (MIMO), as the key instrument in pursuit of pre-established inflation targets for the government’s economic policy time frame. The government of Mozambique defines the annual inflation target in its Economic and Social Plan. The government established an average annual inflation target of 5.3% for 2022 (PESOE 2022). The BM communicates with the public through monetary policy press releases, press conferences, the short-term economic and inflation outlook report (CEPI), the annual report, and through social media.
transfers in foreign exchange on behalf of their customers. To open accounts abroad, foreign exchange bureaus require authorization from the BM. Authorized operators may trade freely with their customers. The maximum spread between buying and selling rates is 2% plus fees collected by banks for foreign exchange operations.

Operated by the central bank Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility No.

Allocation Yes. The BM currently intervenes on the market through bilateral operations to share up to 100% of the payment of invoices for imports of fuel, on request, and on the presentation of the documentation by the banks to avoid disorderly market conditions. This intervention mechanism was introduced at end-2005, and the relevant information is reported in the successive annual reports of the BM and in the interbank market bulletins.

Auction No. The BM may intervene through auctions to achieve the objectives of addressing disorderly market conditions and accumulating and maintaining an adequate stock of international reserves. This approach derives from the MCI Regulation published on December 22, 2021, the BM’s policy, and the Regulation on the BM’s intervention on the foreign exchange market, published on August 10, 2022. The operational guidelines for foreign exchange auctions are now being developed, and they will be published for banks and for the general public. Their implementation will be subject to the implementation of the BM’s new information system that is now in the final stages of implementation, through which such transactions will be carried out with banks as counterparties.

Fixing Yes. Interbank market operations and operations with the BM are carried out using the BM’s software. All US dollar–metical buying and selling quotes of banks authorized to operate in the MCI are shown on a screen. The quotes may be adjusted as many times a day as necessary during MCI operating hours, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The average official exchange rate of the day is set at 3:30 p.m. (close of business). All operations between the banks and the BM are based on the exchange rates shown on the screen. The exchange rate used for accounting and valuation purposes is the benchmark rate, calculated at 3:30 p.m. on each business day.

Interbank market Yes. Commercial banks that participate in the MCI may arrange foreign exchange buying and selling operations between themselves at effective May 20, 2022, freely negotiated rates (previously within the maximum spread between buying and selling prices set by the BM). Twelve banks are currently participating in the MCI.

Over the counter Yes. Commercial banks may engage in interbank transactions through the MCI. Exchange bureaus may not participate in the MCI. Twelve commercial banks participate in this market. Operations between commercial banks are arranged with exchange rates near market rates. The BM intervenes in the MCI at prices quoted by commercial banks through the BM’s application software (Meticalnet). The BM is a price taker.

Brokerage No.

Market making No.

Forward exchange market Yes. Effective April 16, 2021, banks and their customers were permitted to trade financial derivatives. Forward foreign exchange operations, foreign exchange swaps, interest rate swaps, and forward rate agreements are authorized. All other financial derivatives require authorization from the BM to be carried out. Participants may agree... to use the International Swaps and Derivatives Association (ISDA) Master Agreement for financial derivative transactions.

In accordance with the provisions under the Counter-Terrorism Law enacted in June 2014, the Central Committee of Counter Terrorism released the Order Nos. 1/2015 and 3/2015 in relation to the freezing and prohibition of assets and financial resources of those persons involved in international terrorism or groups associated with terrorism. Following these orders, the Central Bank of Myanmar (CBM) issued letters to banks and nonbank financial institutions (NBFIs) to comply with provisions under the Counter-Terrorism Law. After the enactment of the Counter-Terrorism Law, the CBM issued Instruction No. 6/2014 of October 3, 2014, Letter No. MaBaBa/BRD/Htwe (42/2015) of January 20, 2015, Letter No. MaBaBa/BRD/AML/CFT (7/2015) of March 13, 2015, Letter No. MaBaBa/BRD/AML/CFT (14/2015) of November 27, 2015, and Letter No. MaBaBa/BRD/AML/CFT (7/2016) of January 29, 2016, to banks and NBFIs. According to the name list of persons involved in terrorism connected with Taliban or Al-Qaida designated as persons associated with terrorism by US Executive Order No. 13224, the UN 1267 Sanctions Committee forwarded by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Myanmar, US Embassy, and Australian Embassy and through the UN website, the CBM issued seven letters in 2006, seven letters in 2007, nine letters in 2008, six letters in 2009, one letter in 2011, and two letters in 2013, respectively, to all state-owned banks and private banks to comply with the CBM Directive No. 2/2002 issued March 7, 2002, which required banks to freeze funds and other assets of and prohibit transactions with persons suspected to be involved in terrorism and organizations associated with terrorism to report these accounts related to such persons to the CBM. With reference to the Anti-Money-Laundering Central Board’s letter, the Central Committee for Counter Terrorism issued the Freezing Order No. 3/2016 of May 19, 2016, with respect to freezing and prohibition of money, properties, and funds of those persons and organizations associated with terrorism including the ISIL, Taliban, and Al-Qaida groups and the groups associated with those groups connected with terrorism under the Sanctions list of the UNSC. Therefore, the CBM instructed state-owned banks, private banks, foreign bank branches, and finance companies to comply with the Order No. 3/2016 issued by the Central Committee for Counter Terrorism.

to all banks, NBFIs, and mobile financial services providers for freezing and prohibition of money, properties, and funds of the related persons and organizations of Democratic People’s Republic of Korea which are included in the freeze lists of the said resolutions. Moreover, the CBM has directed the aforesaid Institutions to take necessary due diligence on the information about the U.S. Department of the Treasury’s “Treasury acts to Increase Economic Pressure on North Korea and Protect the US Financial System” in 2017.

According to the UNSC Resolution Nos. 1267 (1999), 1989 (2011), 2253 (2015), and 2462 (2019), the CBM issued nine letters in 2019 to all banks, NBFIs, and mobile financial services providers for freezing and prohibition of money, properties, and funds of the related persons and organizations of ISIL (Da’esh) (Al-Qaida) which are included in the freeze lists of the said resolutions. Following the Standing Order Nos. 1/2017 and 1/2018 of the Central Committee for Counter Terrorism, Countering the Financing of Terrorism Working Committee, the CBM had released two letters in 2017 and 2018 to all banks, NBFIs, and mobile financial services providers for freezing and prohibition of money, properties, and funds of Bengali Extremist Terrorists designated by the Central Committee for Counter Terrorism, Arakan Rohingya Salvation Army, and persons who are related to such persons and the name list of the Arakan Rohingya Salvation Army.

According to the Standing Order No. 3/2017 of the Central Committee for Counter Terrorism, Countering the Financing of Terrorism Working Committee, all banks, NBFIs, and mobile financial services providers are instructed to regularly update the UNSC’s list of persons and groups associated with terrorism and enhance customer due diligence to freeze and prohibit money, properties, and funds of the said persons involved in terrorism. In 2018, Myanmar FIU’s Directives in relation to high-risk and noncooperative jurisdictions were circulated to all banks, NBFIs, and mobile financial services providers to apply Enhanced Due Diligence (EDD) measures to business relationship and transactions with natural and legal persons, and financial institutions, from countries called for by the FATF.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is a managed float. The CBM has no predetermined target for the level of the kyat exchange rate and expects the value to fluctuate with supply and demand in the market. The CBM reserves the right to intervene to moderate excessive exchange rate volatility in the foreign exchange market. The de facto exchange rate regime is classified as other managed. The CBM published its intervention data on its website timely whenever there is foreign exchange auction.

The CBM computes and publishes the daily reference exchange rate based on transactions in the foreign exchange market in accordance with CBM Instruction No. 5/2019. The reference exchange rate is computed by assigning weights to the average rate between executed interbank foreign exchange transactions among AD banks, and the average rate of transactions between AD banks and their customers. This reference rate is an indicative rate, and participants in the foreign exchange market are not required to use it in their transactions. Indicative cross-rates for certain other currencies are based on Thomson Reuters and the IMF website.

Since February 2021, reference rate determination has been paused several times with the CBM taking decision about the reference exchange rate. Effective July 5, 2021, CBM auction rates had been used as the reference rate until end of March 2022. After that, the reference rate has been fixed with occasional revision. The reference rate was set at MMK1850/USD on April 4, 2022.

Effective April 3, 2022, the CBM notified the inflows of foreign exchange of all Myanmar at banks must be exchanged into local currency within one working day. The exchange rate was fixed at MMK1850/USD and reset at MMK2100/USD effective August 5, 2022.

The CBM has been exercising Reserve Money Targeting monetary policy framework. Under this framework, reserve money is the operational target and broad money is the intermediate target. Currently, the CBM is conducting deposit auction based on the moderate level of inflation. The CBM also stipulates the reserve requirement ratio for all banks to control the broader monetary conditions.

To boost and maintain the adequate level of liquidity in the system responding to the COVID-19 pandemic impact, the CBM has temporarily suspended the deposit auction as of March 26, 2020, and lowered the minimum reserve requirement ratio for banks to 3.5% (on April 9, 2020) and then to 3.0% (effective May 7, 2021) of customers' deposits in Myanmar currency (Myanmar kyat (MMK)) from 5%. Furthermore, to stimulate the country’s economic development, the CBM cut the bank rate three times: 50 basis points (bps) on March 16, 2020, 100 bps on April 1, 2020, and 150 bps on May 1, 2020, respectively.

Residents may hold up to the equivalent of US$10,000 in foreign currency (euros and Singapore dollars) for six months after receipt. Foreign exchange account holders were able to transfer funds from their accounts to settle transactions between residents without approval until March 2022. Effective April 3, 2022, the CBM notified the inflows of foreign exchange of all Myanmar at banks must be exchanged into local currency within one working day. This was then relaxed to 30 days (except 65% of export earnings) effective August 16, 2022. Residents may deposit the foreign currency in AD banks.

Settlements with member countries of the ACU are made in ACU dollar/ACU euro (ACUD/ACUE) through the ACU mechanism. 1 ACUD = 1 USD, 1 ACUE = 1 euro.

The CBM issued a letter to the union ministries and regional governments to use only kyat for domestic transactions and payments, instead of the use of foreign currencies (primarily USD) as it creates higher demand for foreign exchange and instability of the foreign exchange rates.

Crawl-like arrangement
The exchange rate arrangement of the euro area is free floating. The Netherlands participates in a currency union (EMU) with 18 other members of the EU and has no separate legal tender. The ECB publishes information regarding its interventions; it last intervened in March 2011. When it intervenes, the ECB intervenes at the quotes of the market makers.

The ECB publishes a reference rate based on the daily concertation procedure between CBs within and outside the European System of Central Banks. The publication time of the euro foreign exchange reference rates is around 14:30 Central European Time to around 16:00 Central European Time. The reference rate against the euro is the average of the buying and selling rates.

To maintain price stability is the primary objective of the Eurosystem and of the single monetary policy for which it is responsible. This is stated in the Treaty on the Functioning of the EU, Article 127(1). “Without prejudice to the objective of price stability,” the Eurosystem will also “support the general economic policies in the Community with a view to contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Community.” These include a “high level of employment” and “sustainable and non-inflationary growth.” Effective July 7, 2021, price stability is defined as a symmetric 2% inflation target over the medium term. Previously, it was defined as inflation rate below but close to 2% over the medium term.

No exchange controls apply to either the spot exchange market or the forward exchange market. ADs may freely determine their exchange rates and foreign exchange commissions in transactions with their clients.

Money transfer offices fall under the regulatory framework for payment service providers (PSPs) in the Financial Supervision Act (Wet op het financieel toezicht (WFT)). Under Section 2:3a of the WFT, no one domiciled in the Netherlands may conduct business as a PSP without an authorization from De Nederlandsche Bank (DNB, Dutch Central Bank). This prohibition does not apply to credit institutions authorized by the DNB. As of December 31, 2020, there were 224 PSPs, of which 81 were credit institutions and 143 were other PSPs. In 2019, there were 237 PSPs, of which 94 were credit institutions and 143 were other PSPs.
The foreign exchange market operates on the basis of a market-making agreement for large professional market participants, such as banks. Smaller participants usually use a broker. In theory, there are no limits on bid-ask spreads. Excessive spreads, however, would be deemed “off-market” and are, therefore, not allowed. Commissions must also be market based. Intervention, if any, must be coordinated within the Eurosystem and takes place directly via market makers at their quoted rates (best price). Banks licensed by the DNB may trade in the interbank foreign exchange market.

The interbank market operates on the basis of a market-making agreement, under which participants commit to a maximum spread and a minimum amount to trade. To the extent that the necessary contracts are in place, banks may participate in the interbank foreign exchange market. There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads and commissions of market participants.

The CB may engage in foreign exchange swaps or foreign exchange forwards in the global market for investment purposes.

In accordance with Regulation (EC) No. 1889/2005, cash controls have been implemented based on a mandatory declaration system for amounts of cash entering or leaving the EU with a value of €10,000 or more. Travelers entering or leaving the EU and carrying more than €10,000 are required to make a declaration to the relevant authorities of the member country through which they enter or leave the EU. The authorities must keep a record of such information and report it to their national FIU. The obligation to declare is not fulfilled if the traveler makes no declaration or if the information provided is incorrect or incomplete. To check compliance with the regulation, the national authorities have the right to search natural persons, their baggage, and their means of transportation. In the event of failure to comply with the declaration obligation, cash may be confiscated. The EC regulation requires member countries to impose penalties for failure to comply with the declaration obligation. If there are indications that cash is related to illegal activity, authorities of one member country may exchange information with authorities in other member countries. Under the framework of existing agreements on mutual administrative assistance, information obtained under the EC regulation may also be communicated to a third country in compliance with relevant national and EU provisions on the transfer of personal data to third countries. The EC regulation does not apply to physical cross-border transportation from one EU member country to another (that is, intra-EU transportation). Such transportation is not considered “cross-border” for the purpose of the EC regulation; the EC regulation only harmonizes the system for the EU’s external borders.

The EU requires import authorizations for steel products, which are subject to prior Union surveillance measures (Regulation (EU) No. 2016/670). Iceland, Liechtenstein, and Norway are exempted from... the prior Union surveillance on steel on account of their membership of the EEA. The EU requires import authorization for textile products which are subject to surveillance measures (Regulation (EU) No. 2015/9361 and Council Regulation (EC) No. 3060/95).

Open general licenses

No.

Licenses with quotas

Yes. Some quotas are managed by European Commission’s Directorate-General responsible for Agriculture and Rural Development through a system of import licenses. The EU requires import authorization for textile products which are subject to quantitative restrictions (Regulation (EU) No. 2015/9361 and Council Regulation (EC) No. 3060/95). On the basis of EU regulations, an import license has been required for textile products from the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea since 1993. The autonomous import quotas on textile from Belarus were scrapped in 2017 (Regulation (EU) No. 2017/354). The EU requires quota authorizations for certain wood products (spruce, pine), which are subject to tariff-rate quotas in accordance with the bilateral EU–Russia Wood agreement. The quota is set by Russia, but managed on the EU side. It stems from Russia’s WTO Accession Protocol (August 22, 2012).

Other non-tariff measures

Yes. Imports of most products covered by the CAP from non-EU countries are subject to EU regulations.

Import taxes and/or tariffs

Yes. Import tariffs exist. All relevant information with regard to EU import (and export) rules can be found on the European Commission’s website as well as the Access2Markets portal.

Controls apply to (1) investment in airlines established in the country that must be majority owned and effectively controlled by EU countries and/or nationals of EU countries, unless otherwise provided for through an international agreement to which the EU is a signatory; (2) ownership of the Netherlands flag vessels, unless the investment is made by shipping companies incorporated under Netherlands law, established in the Netherlands, and whose actual place of management is in the Netherlands; and (3) the extent that under EC Directive No. 85/611/EEC, a UCITS depository must have its registered office either in the same EU country as that of the company or be established in the EU country if its registered office is in another EU country.

Regulation (EU) No. 2019/452 of March 19, 2019, established an EU-wide framework for FDI screening and for the European Commission and the Member States to coordinate their actions on foreign investments.

Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices
No.

Exchange measures imposed for security reasons
Yes.

In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51)
Yes. Measures have been taken to prohibit dealing with or making available to any personal assets of the Taliban or of other designated individuals and organizations associated with terrorism, in accordance with the relevant UNSC resolutions.

Other security restrictions
Yes. Dealing with or making available to any personal assets of the former government of Iraq, except for transfers to the Development Fund for Iraq or as authorized by the minister of foreign affairs and trade, is prohibited.

As a UN Member State, New Zealand is required to implement UN Sanctions against a range of individuals and entities. UN Sanctions can include a variety of measures, including asset freezes. In New Zealand, UN sanctions are implemented by regulations made under the UN Act 1946 and, in some cases, through the Terrorism Suppression Act (TSA) 2002. New Zealand can also separately designate entities associated with terrorism under the TSA. Under the TSA, it is an offense to deal with property of a designated terrorist entity.

Effective March 18, 2022, under the Russia Sanctions Act and Regulations 2022, New Zealand has enacted a number of measures on individuals and entities connected with Russia’s illegal invasion of Ukraine that have impacts on international payments and transfers. This includes prohibitions on dealing with assets and securities of sanctioned persons (that is, asset freezes) and prohibitions on dealing with services in relation to sanctioned persons, including financial services. Individuals and entities sanctioned include President Putin, political, economic, and military elites, financial institutions including banks, state-owned enterprises, defense entities, and disinformation and malicious cyber actors. Under the Russia Sanctions Act, it is an offense to knowingly or recklessly breach a sanction without lawful justification or reasonable excuse.

Exchange Arrangement

Currency
Yes. The currency of New Zealand is the New Zealand dollar.

Other legal tender
No.

Exchange rate structure
The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The exchange rate is determined on the basis of supply and demand in the foreign exchange market. The Reserve Bank of New Zealand (RBNZ) may intervene if the exchange rate is exceptionally high or low, if that rate is not justified by economic fundamentals, and if there is a material prospect that the intervention will influence the exchange rate. Interventions may not be used as an attempt to influence the long-term trend of the exchange rate. The RBNZ publishes information on its foreign currency assets and liabilities, including its foreign currency intervention capacity (stock of reserves available for intervention) and foreign exchange swap position, on its website but does not publish data on its direct intervention. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating.

The RBNZ publishes a reference exchange rate for statistical purposes, sourced from the New Zealand Financial Markets Association. The New Zealand Financial Markets Association publishes reference rates for the New Zealand dollar at 2:00 p.m. (also known as the WM/Reuters New Zealand dollar 2:00 p.m. fixes), based on internationally accepted best practice calculation methods.

Government and Central Bank

Under the RBNZ Act 2021 (Sections 10(1)(a)(i) and 117), the RBNZ, acting through the MPC, has the function of formulating a monetary policy directed to the economic objectives of achieving and maintaining stability in the general level of prices over the medium term and supporting maximum sustainable employment.

The operational objectives for monetary policy are set out in a remit that is issued by the Minister of Finance or in a remit made by a legislative instrument (Order in Council).

Effective March 1, 2021, the RBNZ (Replacement of Remit for MPC) Order 2021 (Order) requires the MPC to assess the effect of its monetary policy decisions on the government’s policy to support more sustainable house prices, in addition to its previous operational objectives. The Order will be revoked on February 13, 2024. The next remit is likely to be issued by the Minister of Finance following public, non-binding advice from the Reserve Bank. Previously, the remit specified the MPC’s operational objectives as follows: (1) keep future annual inflation between 1% and 3% over the medium term, with a focus on keeping future inflation near the 2% mid-point, and (2) support maximum sustainable employment.

The MPC operates under a charter that includes requirements to promote transparency and accountability in connection with the performance of the MPC’s functions and the MPC’s decision-making procedures. The current MPC Charter has been in place from March 2, 2021, and was agreed between the Minister of Finance and the Governor. All future charters will be agreements between the Minister of Finance and the MPC. The Minister and MPC can agree to review the charter at any time, and it must be reviewed whenever the remit is reviewed (every five years). The MPC consists of between 5 and 7 members, comprising the Governor, 2–3 other employees or officers of RBNZ, and 2–3 individuals external to the RBNZ. The Governor is Chair of the MPC.

The MPC Charter states that the MPC is to aim to reach consensus on decisions, but that when consensus cannot be reached the decision will be by vote (simple majority).

Inflation target

Point target

The MPC’s operational objective is to keep future annual inflation between 1% and 3% over the medium term, with a focus on keeping future inflation near the 2% mid-point.

The target is defined in terms of the All Groups CPI published by Statistics New Zealand. This records the change in the price of a weighted “basket” of goods and services purchased by an “average” New Zealand household. The percentage change of this index is typically referred to as “CPI inflation.” The contents of the basket are defined by Statistics New Zealand, which periodically reviews and re-weights them, using data obtained from its annual Household Economic Survey.

The policy rate is the Official Cash Rate (OCR). The CB pays interest on settlement account balances for daily interbank transactions, and charges interest on overnight borrowing, at rates related to the OCR.

The RBNZ appears before the Select Committee, the Finance and Expenditure Committee, on the day following the release of each quarterly Monetary Policy Statement.

The charter states that the MPC must aim to reach decisions by consensus. However, in the event consensus cannot be reached, a vote will be taken, and the record of this vote is published with the summary record of meeting. The votes will be unattributed.

A summary record of meeting must be published following each meeting of the MPC. The points this record must contain are outlined in the charter, and discussions are not attributed to individuals.

The thinking behind the Reserve Bank’s setting of the OCR is published four times a year in an accountability document known as the Monetary Policy Statement.

ADs may freely determine their exchange rates and commissions in foreign exchange transactions with their clients.

There is no foreign exchange licensing regime in New Zealand.

Import taxes and/or tariffs
Yes. Tariffs apply mainly to imported manufactured products that compete with domestic production. Most primary products that compete with domestic production are admitted duty-free. In 2009, all remaining tariff rates were reduced to either 10% or 5%. Import tariffs will remain at their current levels until at least June 2021. Tariffs on clothing, footwear, carpets, ambulances, and motor homes are set at 10%. There are multilateral, bilateral, and regional preferential tariffs. On December 30, 2018, the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP) entered into force among Australia, Canada, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, and Singapore. Under reciprocal free trade agreements, tariffs on goods originating from the following countries or territories have either been removed or are being reduced for eventual elimination.
Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Canada, Chile, China, Hong Kong SAR, Japan, Korea, Malaysia, Mexico, Singapore, Taiwan Province of China, Thailand, and ASEAN member countries. The ASEAN-Australia-New Zealand Free Trade Agreement (AANZFTA) is in effect between Australia, Brunei Darussalam, Cambodia, Indonesia, Lao P.D.R., Malaysia, Myanmar, New Zealand, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, and Vietnam. Goods from least developed countries and Pacific island economies are duty-free under nonreciprocal free trade arrangements. Eligible imports from the UK and developing economies are also given tariff preference. In August 2017, the government decided to keep import tariffs unchanged until at least July 31, 2021, except where they are being reduced through trade agreements. The Tariff (Concessions) Amendment Order 2014 went into effect, introducing temporary tariff concessions on residential building materials to assist Canterbury earthquake rebuilding and Auckland housing demand. This tariff concession was reviewed in October 2018 and will remain in place. It is due for review in 2023.

In 2020, the government temporarily removed tariffs on all medical and hygiene imports needed for the COVID-19 response, with a view to permanently eliminate customs duties on these products. Further work is under way to voluntarily eliminate duties on vaccine-related products as part of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) Statement on COVID-19 Vaccine Supply Chains. Effective September 9, 2021, the government removed tariffs on phials, vials, medical grade refrigerators/freezers, and ultra-violet irradiation equipment needed for the COVID-19 response, by making a concession under Section 8 of the Tariff Act 1988. Legislation (a Tariff Amendment Order under the Tariff Act 1988) is currently being prepared to permanently remove the tariffs on these products.

culture (for example, on protected New Zealand objects), human life or animal life (for example, on hazardous waste, live animals); conservation of exhaustible natural resources, or support the Sanitary and Phytosanitary Agreement (for example, on certain animal products) or marketing or quality requirements (for example, kiwifruit, and horticulture). For conservation reasons, there are also restrictions on exports of various animals and plants. Certain items classified as strategic goods may be exported only if specific requirements have been met and an export permit has been issued. New Zealand administers export licenses for some agricultural products (such as beef and dairy) to comply with tariff-quota regimes of some trading partners.

into force to replace the temporary emergency notification regime on either a date appointed by the Governor-General by Order in Council, or, if not earlier brought into force, 2 years after the date on which the Act received Royal Assent (June 2, 2020).

Effective July 5, 2021, changes to inward direct investment introduced by the Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2021 (shown in Section 10 of the Overseas Investment Act 2005) replaced the old regime. The primary change to these sections is that they allow incremental investments between “ownership and control interest limits” (more than 25%, 50%, 75%, 100%) which no longer require consent.

Effective July 5, 2021, the reform also removes certain widely held bodies corporate that are both New Zealand-incorporated and New Zealand-listed from the definition of “overseas person,” as reflected in Sections 7(2) and 7(3) of the Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2021.

Effective June 7, 2021, the permanent regime was brought into force by the Overseas Investment (Commencement of Permanent Call-in Regime) Amendment Regulations 2021.

Consent is required under Section 10 of the Overseas Investment Act 2005 for overseas investments in sensitive land. Section 12 sets out that:

An overseas investment in sensitive land is the acquisition by an overseas person, or an associate of an overseas person, of all or any of the following (a Section 12 interest):

- an estate or interest in land if:
  - the land that the estate or interest relates to is sensitive land under Part 1 of Schedule 1; and
  - the estate or interest acquired is:
    - a freehold estate; or
    - if the land that the interest relates to is residential land, any interest in land (other than an exempted interest) for a total term (as calculated in accordance with Schedule 1A) of 3 years or more; or
    - if the land that the interest relates to is sensitive (but not residential) land, any interest in land (other than an exempted interest) for a total term (as calculated in accordance with Schedule 1A) of 10 years or more:
      - rights or interests in securities of a person (A) if A owns or controls (directly or indirectly) an estate or interest in land described in paragraph (a) and, as a result of the acquisition:
        - the overseas person or the associate (either alone or together with its associates) has a more than 25% ownership or control interest in A; or
        - gives the overseas person or the associate (either alone or together with its associates) any or more disproportionate access to or control of a strategically important business; or
      - or
      - A becomes an overseas person in any of the following circumstances:
        - A is a body corporate that is a New Zealand listed issuer and meets the control test in Section 7(3) (b);
A is a managed investment scheme that is a New Zealand listed issuer and meets the control test in Section 7(4) (b);
A is not a New Zealand listed issuer.
The ownership or control interest limits are as follows:
if their existing ownership or control interest in A amounts to more than 25% but less than 50%, their ownership or control interest limit is 50%;
if their existing ownership or control interest in A amounts to 50% or more but less than 75%, their ownership or control interest limit is 75%;
if their existing ownership or control interest in A amounts to 75% or more, their ownership or control interest limit is 100%.

Consent is required under Section 10 of the Overseas Investment Act 2005 for overseas investments in significant business assets. Section 13 sets out that:

An overseas investment in significant business assets is:
the acquisition by an overseas person, or an associate of an overseas person, of rights or interests in securities of a person (A) if:
as a result of the acquisition, the overseas person or the associate (either alone or together with its associates) has a more than 25% ownership or control interest in A or an increase in an existing more than 25% ownership or control interest in A of a type referred to in Section 12(1) (b) (ii); and the value of the securities or consideration provided, or the value of the assets of A or A and its more than 25% subsidiaries, exceeds $100 million or an alternative monetary threshold that applies in accordance with regulations made under Section 61A; or the establishment by an overseas person, or an associate of an overseas person, of a business in New Zealand (either alone or with any other person) if:
the business is carried on for more than 90 days in any year (whether consecutively or in aggregate); and the total expenditure expected to be incurred, before commencing the business, in establishing that business exceeds $100 million or an alternative monetary threshold that applies in accordance with regulations made under Section 61A; or the acquisition by an overseas person, or an associate of an overseas person, of property (including goodwill and other intangible assets) in New Zealand used in carrying on business in New Zealand (whether by 1 transaction or a series of related or linked transactions) if the total value of consideration provided exceeds $100 million or an alternative monetary threshold that applies in accordance with regulations made under Section 61A.

However, an overseas person that was lawfully carrying on business in New Zealand on January 15, 1996 (which was when the Overseas Investment Regulations 1995 came into force), does not require consent for an overseas investment in significant business assets described in subsection (1) (b) if the investment requires consent only because it comes within that paragraph.

The Overseas Investment Amendment Regulations 2021 also introduced an applied for exemption from the definition of overseas person for domestically incorporated non-listed bodies corporate and managed investment schemes. This exemption generally lines up with the exemption from the definition of “overseas person” for listed issuers.
“Most investments, including those in significant business assets and sensitive land, require the investor to meet an investor test.”

Consent is required under Section 57B of the Fisheries Act 1996 for the acquisition by an overseas person or associate of (1) an interest-in-fishing quota or (2) rights or interests in securities of a person (A), if A owns (directly or indirectly) an interest-in-fishing quota and as a result of the acquisition the overseas person or associate has an ownership or control interest of more than 25% in A, or A becomes an overseas person. Fishing quota investments must meet an investor and a benefit to New Zealand test.

Only New Zealanders may acquire, without the consent of the Crown, 49.9% or more of the shares of Chorus Limited or an interest in equity securities that confers 10% or more of the total voting rights in Air New Zealand Limited. Under the Overseas Investment Regulations 2005, certain securitization and underwriting arrangements are exempt from the above requirements.

A number of New Zealand’s free trade agreements, such as the Comprehensive and Progressive Trans Pacific Partnership and the New Zealand-Australia Closer Economic Relations Trade Agreement, establish higher monetary thresholds for screening of significant business assets for nongovernment investors.

On August 22, 2018, the Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2018 received Royal assent. As a result of these amendments, from October 22, 2018, “residential land” is a category of “sensitive land” in the Act. As such, overseas persons must generally obtain consent to acquire residential land. Consent may be granted in circumstances where the applicant is: committing to reside and become tax resident, in New Zealand (that is, spending at least 183 days of every year in New Zealand living in the residence for which consent to purchase was received); committing to increase the stock of residential housing on a piece of land (either by building a new, or expanding an existing, residential development or long-term accommodation facility); or to convert to a non-residential use (that is, establishing business operations on the site). Consistent with the Protocol on Investment to the New Zealand–Australia Closer Economic Relations Trade Agreement and the New Zealand–Singapore Closer Economic Partnership, Australian and Singaporean investors are not subject to screening of residential (but not otherwise sensitive) land. Consent may also be granted for overseas persons to acquire residential land subject to an exemption certificate; however, there are still restrictions on their use of the land under such circumstances – including a requirement that they cannot reside at the property. The Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2018 also narrows the existing exemptions for profits à prendre. In particular, from October 22, 2018, consent is required for an overseas person to obtain an interest in forestry-related profits à prendre of 1000 hectares or greater a year and other regulated profits à prendre of five hectares or more. At the same time as the range of land interests for which consent is required to conduct forestry activities was expanded, the pathways to obtain consent to acquire forestry assets (whether freehold, leasehold, profits à prendre, or through a forest registration right) were streamlined through the introduction of “the special benefits test relating to forestry activities.” Under this test, investors may obtain consent to acquire forestry assets if they satisfy the criteria specified in the Overseas Investment Regulations 2005.
Effective July 5, 2021, the latest reforms (Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2021) have generally liberalized the regime, seeking to decrease the amount of low-risk investments being screened under the regime. New Zealand Treasury officials have estimated that the reforms have reduced the number of transactions that are subject to screening by approximately 30%.

Foreign investment in certain types of land must meet an investor test and generally must benefit New Zealand or a group of New Zealanders. If sensitive land is farm land, the benefit must be substantial and identifiable. Consent is required for acquisitions of the following: nonurban land exceeding five hectares; land adjoining a marine and coastal area, lakebed, conservation land and reserves, regional parks, national parks, and some land significant to Māori. As a result of these amendments, from October 22, 2018, “residential land” is a category of “sensitive land” in the Act. As such, overseas persons must generally obtain consent to acquire residential land. Consent may be granted in circumstances where the applicant is: committing to reside, and become tax resident, in New Zealand (that is, spending at least 183 days of every year in New Zealand living in the residence for which consent to purchase was received); committing to increase the stock of residential housing on a piece of land (either by building a new, or expanding an existing, residential development or long-term accommodation facility); or to convert to a non-residential use (that is, establishing business operations on the site). Consistent with the Protocol on Investment to the New Zealand–Australia Closer Economic Relations Trade Agreement and the New Zealand–Singapore Closer Economic Partnership, Australian and Singaporean investors are not subject to screening of residential (but not otherwise sensitive) land. Consent may also be granted for overseas persons to acquire residential land subject to an exemption certificate; however, there are still restrictions on their use of the land under such circumstances – including a requirement that they cannot reside at the property.

The Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2018 also narrows the existing exemptions for profits à prendre. In particular, from October 22, 2018, consent is required for an overseas person to obtain an interest in forestry-related profits à prendre of 1000 hectares or greater a year and other regulated profits à prendre of five hectares or more. At the same time as the range of land interests for which consent is required to conduct forestry activities was expanded, the pathways to obtain consent to acquire forestry assets (whether freehold, leasehold, profits à prendre, or through a forest registration right) were streamlined through the introduction of “the special benefits test” for forestry. Under this test, investors may obtain consent to acquire forestry assets if they satisfy the criteria specified in the Overseas Investment Amendment Regulations 2018.

The Overseas Investment (Urgent Measures) Amendment Act 2020 permanently removed screening requirements for Fundamentally New Zealand entities acquiring sensitive New Zealand assets.

On April 2, 2020, the Reserve Bank placed a complete restriction on bank dividends and banks were not allowed to redeem non-CET1 capital instruments. This was in response to the COVID-19 pandemic to support financial stability and provision of credit in the economy. Effective March 31, 2021, the dividend restrictions were eased to allow banks to pay up to 50% of their earnings as dividends to shareholders, and the restriction on redeeming non-CET1 capital instrument was removed. The dividend restrictions were fully lifted effective July 1, 2022.

On April 2, 2020, the minimum requirement for the core funding ratio was reduced from 75% to 50% to support banks' lending during COVID. Effective January 1, 2022, the limit was returned to 75%.

As per announcement on March 18, 2020, the Reserve Bank delayed or slowed down most of its regulatory initiatives. The Reserve Bank deferred the start date of the increased capital requirements for banks by 12 months, which it expects will enable banks to provide additional credit.

On March 27, 2020, the Reserve Bank issued regulatory guidance to facilitate banks offering loan deferrals to their customers. This guidance enabled banks to temporarily treat deferred loans as performing (non-defaulted) for a period of up to six months, which was further extended by another six months.

On May 1, 2020, the Reserve Bank removed the mortgage loan-to-value ratio restrictions for 12 months. The decision was made to ensure loan-to-value ratio restrictions did not have an undue impact on borrowers or lenders in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. These were reinstated effective March 1, 2021, and were further tightened effective November 1, 2021.

From April 30, 2020, to November 11, 2020, the Reserve Bank set out expectations that insurance institutions would not unnecessarily reduce capital through the use of dividends or similar payments. This was in response to the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Overseas Investment Act 2005 governs superannuation scheme investments if the superannuation scheme’s trustee is an “overseas person” and the investment is in “sensitive land, significant business... assets or fishing quota,” as defined in the law.
The requirement for consent does not apply to the extent that giving effect to a transaction has the effect of the acquisition of property by or on behalf of an overseas person that is the supervisor or manager of a retirement scheme (RS) (within the meaning of Section 6(1) of the Financial Markets Conduct Act 2013) from the investment of all or part of the assets of the scheme for the benefit of members at least 75% of whom are New Zealand citizens or persons ordinarily resident in New Zealand. This is pursuant to Regulation 44, introduced by the Overseas Investment Amendment Regulations 2018, which effectively exempts RSs from the definition of an overseas person. The difference between the new position and the old position is that investments (a New Zealand company, for instance) downstream from the RS are no longer required to count the RS’s holdings when determining whether they are an overseas person, as the RS is exempt from the definition of overseas person.

The Overseas Investment Act of 2005 governs investments by investment firms and funds if the investment firm or fund is an “overseas person” and the investment is in “sensitive land or significant business assets,” as defined in the law. Portfolio investors may apply for an exemption that results in their interest in a target entity not contributing to that entity being deemed to be an overseas person. To qualify for this exemption the investment by the portfolio investor must generally be less than 10% and not grant control over the target entity.

Changes during 2021 and 2022

Exchange Measures

Under the Russia Sanctions Act and Regulations 2022, New Zealand has enacted a number of measures on individuals and entities connected with Russia’s illegal invasion of Ukraine that have impacts on international payments and transfers. This includes prohibitions on dealing with assets and securities of sanctioned persons (that is, asset freezes) and prohibitions on dealing with services in relation to sanctioned persons, including financial services. Individuals and entities sanctioned include President Putin, political, economic, and military elites, financial institutions including banks, state-owned enterprises, defense entities and disinformation and malicious cyber actors. Under the Russia Sanctions Act, it is an offense to knowingly or recklessly breach a sanction without lawful justification or reasonable excuse.

Government and Central Bank

03/01/2021  The Reserve Bank of New Zealand (Replacement of Remit for MPC) Order 2021 requires the MPC to assess the effect of its monetary policy decisions on the government’s policy to support more sustainable house prices, in addition to its previous operational objectives. The Order will be revoked on February 13, 2024. Previously, the remit specified the MPC’s operational objectives as follows: (1) keep future annual inflation between 1% and 3% over the medium term, with a focus on keeping future inflation near the 2% mid-point, and (2) support maximum sustainable employment.

Imports and Import Payments

Import taxes and/or tariffs

09/09/2021  The government removed tariffs on phials, vials, medical grade refrigerators/freezers, and ultra-violet irradiation equipment needed for the COVID-19 response, by making a concession under Section 8 of the Tariff Act 1988. Legislation (a Tariff Amendment Order under the Tariff Act 1988) is currently being prepared to permanently remove the tariffs on these products.

Capital Transactions

Controls on capital transactions

Controls on direct investment

Inward direct investment

07/05/2021  The new rules, pursuant to the Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2021, also remove certain widely held bodies corporate that are both New Zealand-incorporated and New Zealand-listed from the definition of “overseas person.”

07/05/2021  Changes to inward direct investment introduced by the Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2021 (shown in Section 10 of the Overseas Investment Act 2005) replaced the old regime. The primary change to these sections is that they allow incremental investments between “ownership and control interest limits” (more than 25%, 50%, 75%, 100%) which no longer require consent.

07/07/2021  The permanent national security and public order risks management regime was brought into force by the Overseas Investment (Commencement of Permanent Call-in Regime) Amendment Regulations 2021.

Controls on real estate transactions

Purchase locally by nonresidents

07/05/2021  Changes to inward direct investment introduced by the Overseas Investment Amendment Act 2021 generally liberalized the regime, seeking to decrease the amount of low-risk investments being screened under the regime. New Zealand Treasury officials have estimated that the reforms have reduced the number of transactions that are subject to screening by approximately 30%.

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions

03/01/2021  The Reserve Bank reinstated the mortgage loan-to-value ratio restrictions, which had been suspended for 12 months because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

03/31/2021  Dividend restrictions on banks, which had been in place since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, were eased to allow banks to pay up to 50% of their earnings as dividends to shareholders. Moreover, the restriction on redeeming non-CET1 capital instruments was removed. Previously, since April 2, 2020, the Reserve Bank had placed a complete restriction on banks redeeming non-CET1 capital.
The Reserve Bank further tightened the reinstated mortgage loan-to-value ratio restrictions.

The minimum requirement for the core funding ratio was returned to 75%. Previously, it had been reduced, on April 2, 2020, from 75% to 50% to support banks’ lending during COVID.

Dividend restrictions on banks, which had been in place since the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, were fully removed. Previously, the Reserve Bank placed a complete restriction on bank dividends and banks were not allowed to redeem non-CET1 capital instruments.

  - Multiple
- Classification
  - No separate legal tender
  - Currency board
  - Conventional peg
  - Stabilized arrangement
- Crawling peg: Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is a crawling peg. The Central Bank of Nicaragua (BCN) publishes aggregated monthly data pertaining to BCN foreign exchange transactions with the banks and the government. The crawling peg of the córdoba against the US dollar has been 2% annually since November 2020 (Resolution No. 2747-2022 ANNUAL REPORT ON EXCHANGE ARRANGEMENTS AND EXCHANGE RESTRICTIONS).
The official exchange rate of the córdoba is determined and preannounced by the BCN. The official exchange rate is calculated daily using the formula \((1 + 0.02)^{1/365}\). The official exchange rate is used for BCN purchases of US dollars from the banks and the government and is used to calculate the exchange rate for BCN US dollar sales to these agents. The official exchange rate is used as a reference for the settlement of foreign exchange contracts payable in local currency, such as BCN bonds, and as an anchor for fixing market exchange rates.

The monetary policy framework is an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis the US dollar. Monetary operations are aimed at maintaining an adequate level of international reserves to support the crawling peg regime. Open market operations are the CB’s primary monetary policy tool and are conducted to absorb a target volume of liquidity consistent with the desired level of reserve accumulation. In addition, the BCN buys and sells foreign exchange in accordance with banking system demand.

Exchange Measures

The IMF staff report for the 2021 Article IV Consultation with Nigeria states that, as of December 14, 2021, Nigeria maintained the following exchange restrictions subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement: (1) an exchange restriction arising from the prohibition to access foreign exchange at the Nigerian foreign exchange markets for the payment of imports of 42 categories of items; (2) an exchange restriction arising from the rationing of foreign exchange by the Central Bank of Nigeria (CBN) in different foreign exchange windows, and its allocation based on the CBN’s determination of priority categories of transactions; and (3) an exchange restriction arising from existing limits on the amounts of foreign exchange available when traveling abroad (business travel allowance (BTA)/personal travel allowances (PTAs)), which cannot be exceeded even on verification of the bona fide nature of the transaction. In addition, Nigeria maintains the following MCPs subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3 of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement: (1) an MCP arising from the practice of the CBN that results in the establishment of an exchange rate for use in official (government) transactions and some other transactions, which may differ by more than 2% from the rate used by commercial banks in other CBN foreign exchange windows (Secondary Market Intervention Sale (SMIS), small and medium enterprise (SME), Investors’ and Exporters’ Foreign Exchange (IEFX), and Invisibles); (2) an MCP arising from the large spread between exchange rates used by the CBN in its foreign exchange windows and the rates in the parallel market, caused by the CBN’s limitation on the availability of foreign exchange which channels current international transactions to such market; and (3) an MCP arising from the potential spread of more than 2% in the exchange rates at which the CBN sells foreign exchange to successful auction bidders in the SMIS window. Exchange rate structure

©International Monetary Fund. Not for Redistribution
There is a multiple exchange rate structure as a result of MCPs as per Country Report No. 2022/033, as follows: (1) an MCP arising from the practice of the CBN that results in the establishment of an exchange rate for use in official (government) transactions and some other transactions, which may differ by more than 2% from the rate used by commercial banks in other CBN foreign exchange windows (SMIS, SME, IEFX, and Invisibles); (2) an MCP arising from the large spread between exchange rates used by the CBN in its foreign exchange windows and the rates in the parallel market, caused by the CBN’s limitation on the availability of foreign exchange which channels current international transactions to such market; and (3) an MCP arising from the potential spread of more than 2% in the exchange rates at which the CBN sells foreign exchange to successful auction bidders in the SMIS window.

The CBN made efforts to unify exchange rates in different foreign exchange market segments, and as of July 26, 2022, the exchange rates were as follows: (1) The exchange rate at the CBN’s official window (Interbank Foreign Exchange Market – IFEM) was N415.80/$ (used mainly for monetization, government LCs transactions, and purchases of oil proceeds from oil companies and oil services companies). Effective May 10, 2021, the previously existing facility for banks to have access to US$50,000 a day on a rotating basis at the official exchange rate was eliminated; (2) the Investors and Exporters’ foreign exchange (IEFX) window exchange rate was around N425.00/$–N430.00/$; (3) the approved rate for invisibles (PTA/BTA transactions) was around N425.00/$–N430.00/$, mainly derived from the IEFX window rate; (4) the exchange rate through the SME window (where the CBN intervenes to ensure payment for eligible imports by SMEs with a limit of US$20,000 a customer in a quarter) was around N425.00/$–N430.00/$ mainly derived from the IEFX window rate; and (5) exchange rates on the SMIS retail sales by the CBN were around N400.00/$–N550.00/$. In March 2020, the CBN suspended sales to banks for wholesale SMIS window, while SMIS retail is still functional for critical sectors.

The CBN has directed the banks to pay beneficiaries of International Money Transfer Operators (IMTOs) remittances in foreign currency cash or paid into their domiciliary account.

- Yes.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The CBN explicitly aims to maintain an exchange rate principally driven by market forces, but intervenes to reduce volatility and to counteract speculative attacks on the national currency. The CBN publishes its intervention data, and this is also reported weekly by various news agents across the nation. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as stabilized.

Official exchange rate  Yes. The official exchange rate is determined by the market. The official exchange rate is the rate at the IEFX. The IEFX is the main market in which investors and exporters trade among themselves. The official exchange rate is the rate used for monetization, tax, and duty payments, other accounting purposes as well as in all official transactions.

The monetary policy rate was set at, effective July 19, 2022, 14% (previously, effective September 22, 2020 – at 11.5%). The MPC set the asymmetric corridor for the CBN’s lending and deposit facilities at +100 basis points and −700 basis points around the monetary policy rate and the cash reserve requirements (CRR) and liquidity ratio (LR) to manage liquidity at 27.5% and 30.0%, respectively.

ADs are not allowed to have a bid-ask spread exceeding 50 kobo. The commission charged by the ADs is guided by the provisions of the Guide to Bank Charges, which is reviewed periodically by the CBN. According to the revised CBN’s Guide to Charges by Banks, Other Financial and Nonbank Financial Institutions (revised) (January 1, 2020), the commissions are (1) 1% of the value involved—flat (or as determined from time to time by the CBN) for purchases from the CBN and (2) negotiable subject to a maximum spread of 50 kobo per US dollar for interbank purchases. The rate for spot purchases from customers is the interbank rate. However, for purchases at the IEFX market, ADs are not allowed to have a bid-ask spread exceeding N1.00.

Spot exchange market

Yes.

The CBN established a single market structure through the autonomous/interbank market, that is, the IFEM with the CBN participating in the foreign exchange market through interventions directly in the interbank market or through “SMISs.” It is used by banks to transact among themselves for proceeds from export and personal transfers. The IEFX window is used to provide liquidity to investors and exporters, in a bid to boost liquidity in the system and reduce the corridor between the official and bureau de change (BDC) market.

The market participants in the foreign exchange market are as follows: banks (commercial, merchant, and non-interest banks) and BDCs licensed by the CBN.

As of December 31, 2021, there were 29 deposit money banks (DMBs), 34 primary mortgage banks, 882 licensed microfinance banks, and 5,392 eligible BDCs.

BDC operators may only deal in banknotes and coins, buying and selling traveler’s checks, and other business as approved by the CBN. They may not engage in foreign business or foreign correspondence relationships, or directly or indirectly in any form of outward or inward foreign currency transfers or credit card services. BDCs are not allowed to maintain accounts abroad.

IMTOs are only licensed to conduct international money transfers. Their customers include individuals and businesses. IMTO remittances are to be paid to beneficiaries in cash (USD) or directly into their Domiciliary accounts.

The CBN made efforts to unify exchange rates in different foreign exchange market segments, and as at July 26, 2022, the exchange rates were as follows: (1) The exchange rate at the CBN’s official window (IFEM) was N415.80/$ (used mainly for monetization, government LCs transactions and purchase of oil proceeds from oil companies and oil services companies). In March 2020, the CBN suspended sales to banks for wholesale SMIS window, while SMIS retail is still functional for critical sectors.

Other windows are SMIS, IEFX, SME, Invisible, and BDC.

In March 2020, the CBN suspended sales to banks for wholesale SMIS window, while SMIS retail is still functional for critical sectors. Sales to BDCs by the CBN are conducted by allocation to eligible BDCs.

Effective July 30, 2021, foreign exchange sales by the CBN to the BDC segment were suspended, and part of their allocations was channeled to banks for effective utilization and monitoring.

The CBN sells foreign exchange to the banks according to the availability and demand of foreign exchange and documented needs of customers of the participating banks. Funds not used by banks within 72 hours of the value date must be returned to the CBN for repurchase at the funds purchases rate. Effective May 10, 2021, the previously existing facility for banks to have access to US$50,000 a day on a rotating basis at the official exchange rate was eliminated. Windows through which the CBN sells foreign exchange through allocation are Invisible, SME, IEFX, and BDCs. Sales to BDCs by the CBN are conducted by allocation to eligible BDCs.

Effective July 30, 2021, foreign exchange sales by the CBN to the BDC segment were suspended, and part of their allocations was channeled to banks for effective utilization and monitoring.

There is no predetermined spread in SMIS. There is a limit of 1% of the total on offer to single customers on the SMIS retail. All sales to end users must be trade backed. All DMBs (commercial banks) with authorized dealership licensed can participate in the auction.

In March 2020, the CBN suspended sales to banks for wholesale SMIS window, while SMIS retail is still functional for critical sectors.

Funds purchased from the CBN but not used by banks within 72 hours of the value date are to be returned to the CBN for repurchase at the fund-buying rate. As of July 26, 2022, the foreign exchange markets had 33 ADs participating with licenses acquired from the CBN.

In line with the 2008–2012 Tariff Book, in a second attempt to harmonize Nigeria’s tariff regime with the ECOWAS CET, there are five categories of customs duties: (1) category 0 (0%): necessities such as most educational materials; (2) category 1 (5%): primary raw materials; (3) category 2 (10%): intermediate products—for example, CKD refrigerators and televisions; (4) category 3 (20%): finished goods not produced locally and that do not require protection—for example, televisions, refrigerators, generators, etc.; and (5) category 4 (35%): finished goods that are manufactured locally and therefore require some protection in the interest of promoting local industries. Tariff protection is high for finished goods. In addition, the following import surcharges apply: a 5% port development surcharge, a 1% raw materials and development council surcharge, a 0.02% freight rate stabilization surcharge earmarked for the Nigeria Shippers’ Council, and an ECOWAS levy of 0.5%. The exportation of African antiques, works of art, and objects used in African ceremonies is prohibited, except under certain conditions. Exports of timber (rough and sawed), raw hides and skins, scrap metal, unprocessed rubber latex and rubber lumps, palm kernels, and yam tubers are prohibited. Production and exports of petroleum are handled by the NNPC and marginal field operators. Licensing the production of petroleum products and unrefined gold does not imply the licensing of their exports. However, they are exportable items in Nigeria. These transactions may be conducted through ADs, subject to documentation requirements.

Foreign exchange may not be acquired in the foreign exchange market for purchases of shares denominated in foreign currency (CBN Circular TED/FEM/FPC/GEN/01/010). Purchases of such securities are not prohibited, provided the purchaser uses their own funds without recourse to the Nigerian foreign exchange markets. In addition, prior CBN approval is required for equity investments abroad by banks for prudential purposes.

Residents may sell to nonresidents any security payable in naira without approval.

The debt management office regulates the purchase of selected Nigerian foreign debt instruments (mainly CBN promissory notes arising from past consolidation of unsecured trade credit arrears) at a discount, and the disposition of the naira proceeds on the conversion of such debt.

No controls apply to purchases by nonresidents of debt instruments. There is no minimum holding period requirement for such bonds.

Foreign exchange may not be acquired in the foreign exchange market for purchases of Eurobonds or foreign currency bonds (CBN Circular TED/FEM/FPC/GEN/01/010). Purchases of such securities are not prohibited, provided the purchaser uses their own funds without recourse to the Nigerian foreign exchange markets.

Foreign nationals and entities may invest in Nigeria in money market instruments such as commercial paper, negotiable certificates of deposit, bankers’ acceptances, and treasury bills. The proceeds of foreign investment in money market instruments must be sold in the market for naira, for which the investor is issued a Certificate of Capital Importation (CCI) as evidence of the investment to facilitate repatriation of capital or profits.

The FMF approval is not required for nonresident individuals or companies (other than banks) registered in Nigeria that are controlled directly or indirectly from outside Nigeria. Licensed banks in Nigeria may grant loans and permit overdrafts for periods of up to 14 days and may increase the amount of any advance or overdraft by the amount of loan interest or bank charges payable thereon. Loans, bank overdrafts, and other credit facilities may also be arranged to finance Nigerian imports and exports.

The FMF approval is not required for individuals, firms, companies, or branches resident in Nigeria to borrow abroad. However, official agencies and government-controlled corporations need the FMF approval to borrow abroad. Government-controlled corporations and agencies also require the FMF approval for supplier credits abroad.

For prudential purposes, banks are required to obtain the CBN approval prior to the acquisition of equity interests in financial, commercial, or other banks (domestic or foreign). The type of banking license/authorization issued to the bank is also a determining factor. Only commercial banks with international authorization may obtain the CBN approval to open/invest in foreign branches or subsidiaries.

There are no ceilings for foreign capital participation in the equity capital of enterprises in various sectors of the economy. The Nigerian Investment Promotion Commission deals with all matters relating to registration and the prescription of applicable incentives for direct capital investment in priority areas. ADs must issue a CCI within 24 hours of receipt of the capital. Nonresident investors are required to register their investment with the Nigerian Investment Promotion Commission for statistical purposes.

The Nigerian Investment Promotion Commission Act allows foreigners to repatriate their capital proceeds and all dividends 100%

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions: Yes.

- Borrowing abroad: Yes.

  Documentation is required as described in BSD/DIR/GEN/LAB/07/037 on Prudential Regulation for the Management of Foreign Exchange Risks of Banks. The aggregate foreign currency borrowing of a bank excluding intergroup and interbank (Nigerian banks) borrowing should not exceed 125% of its shareholders’ funds unimpaired by losses.

- Maintenance of accounts abroad: No.

  Documentation is required.

- Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits): No.

  The CBN regulations do not preclude banks from extending credit facilities to nonresident individuals or companies. Each bank is expected to carry out appropriate due diligence and ensure that such credits are in line with its risk management policy and practices. Lending to nonresidents, including overdraft facilities, is given the same treatment as lending to residents, as provided in the CBN Prudential Guidelines. Licensed banks in Nigeria may grant loans and permit overdrafts for periods of up to 14 days and may increase the amount of any advance or overdraft by the amount of loan interest or bank charges payable thereon.
Documentation is required. There are no credit restrictions for nonresident individuals or companies (other than banks) registered in Nigeria that are controlled directly or indirectly from outside Nigeria. Lending is subject to the single obligor limit of 20% of shareholders’ funds unimpaired by losses.

The CBN introduced some policy measures in response to the COVID-19 outbreak and its spillover effects. This included granting a forbearance to banks to allow them to provide temporary and time-restricted restructuring of the tenor and loan terms of facilities (to residents or nonresidents) granted to sectors impacted by the pandemic.

Lending locally in foreign exchange  Yes. The aggregate foreign currency borrowing of a bank excluding intergroup and interbank (Nigerian banks) borrowing should not exceed 125% of its shareholders’ funds unimpaired by losses. The 125% limit supersedes the 200% specified in Section 6 of the 2001 Guidelines for Foreign Borrowing for On-Lending by Nigerian Banks.

Banks should borrow and lend in the same currency (natural hedging) to avoid currency mismatch associated with foreign currency risk. The basis of the interest rate for borrowing should be the same as that of lending; that is, there should be no mismatch in floating and fixed interest rates, to mitigate basis risk associated with foreign borrowing interest rate risk.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange  Yes. Foreign exchange may not be acquired in the foreign exchange market for purchases of Eurobonds, foreign currency bonds, or foreign currency share purchases (CBN Circular TED/FEM/FPC/GEN/01/010). Purchases of such securities are not prohibited, provided the purchaser uses their own funds without recourse to the Nigerian foreign exchange markets.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange  Yes. Liquid asset requirements are not applied to foreign exchange deposits. Banks are expected to meet a minimum LR requirement (ratio of specified liquid assets to current liabilities), which is currently set at 30%. Foreign exchange deposits are not included in the computation of the LR. The liquidity requirements are specified in BSD/DO/CIR/GEN/VOL.02/044 of January 29, 2009.

Reserve requirements  No. Credit controls  No.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts held by nonresidents  No. Investment regulations  Yes.

Interest rate controls  No. Abroad by banks  Yes. For prudential purposes, the CBN approval is required for banks prior to the acquisition of equity interests in financial, commercial, or... other banks (domestic or foreign). The type of banking license/authorization issued to the bank is also a determining factor. Only commercial banks with international authorization may obtain the CBN approval to open/invest in foreign branches or subsidiaries.

The inflow of funds is subject to the provisions of the Money-Laundering (Prohibition) Act and the CBN AML/CFT Regulations for Banks.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. Under the Law on Foreign Exchange Operations (Article 33), the denar exchange rate is freely determined on the basis of supply and demand in the foreign exchange market. This arrangement is still in place under the current legislation.

However, the National Bank of the Republic of North Macedonia (NBRNM) participates in the foreign exchange market (Article 34), to achieve the goals determined with the monetary and the foreign exchange policies. The NBRNM is implementing the monetary strategy of targeting the nominal exchange rate against the euro, the intermediary objective of the monetary policy being the maintenance... of the denar exchange rate stability. Thus, the NBRNM maintains a stable exchange rate within a narrow fluctuation band of bid-ask exchange rates determined by the Committee for Operational Monetary Policy. Size and direction of the interventions are published on a regular quarterly basis, in the Quarterly Report of the NBRNM (Balance of Payments section, Financial Account subsection, in the part commenting on the developments of the foreign exchange reserves). The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a stabilized arrangement.

Yes. On the basis of the daily quotes of the market makers, the NBRNM determines the nominal denar exchange rate against the euro. This rate is determined at the end of each business day as the average of the daily bid-ask quotes for euros among the market makers in the interbank foreign exchange market. According to the Law on Foreign Exchange Operations, the official exchange rate is used for accounting and balance of payments statistics. The denar exchange rate is published daily on the NBRNM website.

U.S. dollar

Euro Yes. Beginning October 1995, the NBRNM implemented a monetary policy strategy of targeting the denar exchange rate against the German mark until 2002 and thereafter against the euro. This monetary policy strategy stems from the importance of the exchange rate of the domestic currency for a small open economy as a transparent nominal anchor for credible monetary policy. Accordingly, the monetary policy framework is using an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis the euro.

According to the Law on Foreign Exchange Operations, foreign exchange sales and purchases must take place in the foreign exchange market. The exchange market operates at two levels: wholesale (companies, commercial banks, and NBRNM) and retail (transactions of natural persons with foreign exchange bureaus and commercial banks). The wholesale market is also divided into two segments: (1) transactions between clients and banks and (2) interbank market transactions. Banks freely set the exchange rate in transactions with their clients, in accordance with supply and demand.
Spot exchange market: Yes. Banks buy and sell foreign exchange on their own account and on behalf of third-party accounts. Savings houses buy and sell foreign exchange only with a NBRNM license for foreign exchange operation. They may buy and sell foreign exchange on their own behalf only with banks licensed by the NBRNM to deal in the foreign exchange market. Other entities may purchase and sell foreign exchange on their own behalf only with entities (banks and foreign exchange bureaus) approved by the NBRNM. Foreign exchange bureaus have accounts with domestic banks and may engage in transactions, as legal entities, with those banks. Residents other than banks and foreign exchange bureaus, may purchase foreign exchange for payments abroad and sell foreign exchange collected from abroad in the foreign exchange market. Resident natural persons may purchase and sell foreign exchange in the market for other purposes as well. Residents other than natural persons, may not purchase or sell foreign exchange through foreign exchange bureaus. As of December 31, 2021, 247 entities were licensed for foreign exchange operations (12 banks, 1 savings house, and 233 foreign exchange bureaus). As of June 30, 2022, 241 entities were licensed for foreign exchange operations (13 banks, 1 saving house, and 227 foreign exchange bureaus). The foreign exchange bureaus cannot deal directly with the NBRNM. They may purchase foreign currency cash and checks from foreign and domestic natural persons and sell foreign currency cash to domestic and foreign natural persons. Foreign exchange bureaus are not allowed to open and maintain accounts abroad. Their operations are limited to the purchase and sale of banknotes, where they may sell foreign currency cash to foreign natural persons in the same way as they sell it to domestic natural persons. Automated teller machines (ATMs) with a function for foreign exchange operations are available to banks. The NBRNM participates in the foreign exchange market to maintain a stable exchange rate. The frequency of intervention depends on the conditions in the market. The NBRNM intervenes only through banks (market makers). The NBRNM intervenes through market makers on its own initiative or on that of the market makers. The NBRNM bid-ask quotes are published daily on the market makers’ segment of the electronic trading platform. When the NBRNM intervenes on its own initiative, it does so at the quotes of the market makers. When the NBRNM intervenes on the market makers’ initiative, the NBRNM bid-ask quotes are used. In case there are larger imbalances between supply and demand in the foreign exchange market, the NBRNM may buy and sell foreign currency with all banks.

Foreign exchange standing facility: No.
Allocation: No.
Auction: No.
Fixing: No.

Interbank market: Yes. An electronic trading platform is used for quotes and interbank trading. All 13 banks licensed to deal in the foreign exchange market participate in the interbank market. The bid-ask spread is limited to MKD 0.25 in the interbank market.

Over the counter: Yes. The foreign exchange market, both among banks and between banks.
As of June 30, 2022, five banks are market makers in the interbank market. The NBRNM introduced market makers to decrease its presence in the foreign exchange market and to enable banks to satisfy foreign exchange liquidity needs among themselves when demand and supply are in broad equilibrium. The Market Makers’ Agreement as amended in 2014 is in effect. Market makers have the exclusive right to trade with the NBRNM; they must also continuously quote bid-ask rates with a predefined spread. The maximum bid-ask spread on quotes with each other is MKD 0.05 per euro, and the minimum transaction between a market maker and the NBRNM in the foreign exchange market maker segment is €0.5 million. Market makers must quote a bid-ask spread of MKD 0.25 with other banks. No commission is charged on foreign exchange transactions apart from the bid-ask spread.

Outright forward and foreign exchange swap transactions are allowed in the foreign exchange market, but this segment of the market is in the early phase of development, with sporadic transactions.

The Macedonian Interbank Payment System offers cross-border payments in euros through Trans-European Automated Real-time Gross settlement Express Transfer system (TARGET2) for domestic banks payments. Furthermore, correspondent banking arrangements of domestic banks with foreign banks are used for commercial payments, and correspondent arrangements of the NBRNM with foreign CBs or commercial banks are used for payments of government agencies and budget entities.

All settlements must be in denars, except (1) purchases and sales of foreign exchange by natural persons from authorized foreign exchange bureaus, (2) principal and interest earnings on resident based on foreign exchange deposit accounts, (3) denomination of contractual obligations among residents, and (4) granting and collection of credit from authorized banks to residents under conditions determined by the NBRNM.

Reserve requirements

Yes.

The reserve requirement (RR) ratio on foreign currency liabilities is, effective August 10, 2022, 18% (previously 15%); for domestic currency liabilities with a foreign exchange clause, it is 50%; and for domestic currency liabilities, it is, effective August 10, 2022, 5% (previously 8%). For banks’ short-term liabilities to nonresident financial companies with contractual maturity up to one year, the RR is 13%. In addition, the RR ratio of 0% is applied to the following categories: (1) liabilities to natural persons in domestic currency with contractual maturity over one year as well as to all liabilities to natural persons (in domestic currency with foreign exchange clause and in foreign currency), with contractual maturity of over two years; (2) liabilities based on repo transactions in domestic currency; (3) liabilities based on issued debt securities in domestic currency and original maturity of at least two years, in the amount of the nominal value; (4) liabilities to nonresidents—financial institutions in domestic currency, in domestic currency with foreign exchange clause and in foreign currency, with contractual maturity of over one year and liabilities to nonresidents in domestic currency, in domestic currency with foreign exchange clause and in foreign currency, with contractual maturity of over two years. The NBRNM charges remuneration on RR in euro at a rate equal to, effective August 10, 2022, the lower rate of 0% and the interest rate on the ECB’s overnight deposit facility applicable as of the last day of the reserve maintenance period (previously, it was the interest rate on the ECB’s overnight deposit facility applicable as of the last day of the reserve maintenance period). If the average daily outstanding amount of bank’s funds allocated to the foreign exchange account in euro in the domestic payment system exceeds 5% of the calculated RR in euro for the entire reserve maintenance period, remuneration is charged on the excess allocated funds at a rate equal to, effective August 10, 2022, the lower rate of 0% and the interest rate on the ECB’s overnight deposit facility applicable as of the last day of the reserve maintenance period less 0.15 percentage points (previously, it was the interest rate on the ECB’s overnight deposit facility applicable as of the last day of the reserve maintenance period less 0.15 percentage points).

Yes. The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as free floating; the krone floats freely and independently against other currencies. The exchange rate is determined on the basis of supply and demand in the foreign exchange market. The Norges Bank (NB) does not normally intervene to influence the exchange rate of the krone; however, it may intervene in the foreign exchange market on short notice if the krone deviates substantially from the level the NB considers reasonable in relation to fundamentals and if exchange rate developments weaken the prospect of achieving the inflation target. The NB may also intervene in response to pronounced short-term fluctuations in the krone when liquidity in the foreign exchange market falls to a very low level.

Foreign exchange purchases or sales on behalf of the Government are publicly preannounced on the CB website. In terms of interventions, the aggregated transacted volumes are published in the NB liquidity statistics on a weekly basis. In extraordinary circumstances, the NB may provide foreign exchange liquidity via collateralized operations. This was done between September 2008 and July 2009.

Data on interventions is made publicly available by the publication of statistics for bank liquidity in Norway on every Monday and Thursday. The data have a two-day lag and therefore data on interventions are made publicly available with a two-to-four-day lag.

Yes. The NB’s exchange rates are middle rates (that is, the midpoint between buying and selling rates in the interbank market at a given time). Rates are usually determined at 2:15 p.m. local time. On July 1, 2016, the NB changed the publication time of the daily exchange rate to around 4:00 p.m. local time. The change was made as a result of the change in publication time by the ECB of the euro foreign exchange reference rates. The exchange rates are intended to serve only as an indication and are not binding on the NB or other banks, but they are often used as a reference and for historical comparisons.

The objective of monetary policy has been laid down by the government and submitted to the Storting (parliament). The responsibility for the conduct of monetary policy is delegated to the NB pursuant to the NB Act and appurtenant regulation. NB’s most important monetary policy instrument is the key policy rate, which is the interest rate on banks’ deposits up to a quota in the NB. NB’s Monetary Policy and Financial Stability Committee is responsible for NBs’ role as the executive and advisory monetary policy authority and for the use of policy instruments to attain the monetary policy objectives. The Committee is appointed by the King in Council and consists of the Governor, the two Deputy Governors, and two external members. The Committee functions as a unified group and the members are collectively responsible for the Bank’s decisions. NBs’ Monetary policy assessment includes voting records of monetary policy meetings.

Inflation target | Yes. |
|----------------|------|

Target number | Yes. |

Point target | Yes. |

The point target is set as the annual consumer price inflation of close to 2% over time. It was revised to 2% through Royal Decree, on March 2, 2018, pursuant to Section 2, third paragraph, of Act No. 28 of May 24, 1985, on NB and the Monetary System, etc. (NB Act).

Target with tolerance band

Band/Range

Target measure | Yes. |

Monetary policy must maintain monetary stability by keeping inflation low and stable. The operational target of monetary policy must be annual consumer price inflation of close to 2% over time. Inflation targeting must be forward-looking and flexible so that it can contribute to high and stable output and employment and to countering a build-up of financial imbalances.

CPI | Yes. |

The operational target of monetary policy is annual consumer price inflation of close to 2% over time. The NB uses the CPI defined and published by Statistics Norway.

Core inflation

Target horizon | Yes. |

NB sets the interest rate with the aim of stabilizing inflation around the target in the medium term. The horizon will depend on disturbances to which the economy is exposed and the effects on the outlook for inflation and the real economy. In its conduct of monetary policy, NB takes into account indicators of underlying consumer price inflation.

Operating target (policy rate) | Yes. |

Policy rate | Yes. |

NB’s most important monetary policy instrument is the key policy rate, which is the interest rate on banks’ deposits up to a quota in NB.
This interest rate is also called the sight deposit rate.

The key policy rate is the midpoint in an interest rate corridor with a width of 200 basis points. The lower limit is equal to the reserve rate. Each bank with an account at the NB is assigned an individual quota for reserves (in nominal Norwegian krone (NOK) terms). Reserves within the quota are remunerated at the key policy rate. Reserves in excess of the quota are remunerated at the reserve rate, which is equal to the sight deposit rate minus 100 basis points. The upper limit in the interest rate corridor is equal to the D-loan rate, which is the interest rate on NB’s standing lending facility. The D-loan rate is equal to the sight deposit rate plus 100 basis points.

Target corridor band  Yes.

The governor of the NB provides an assessment of the monetary policy in an open hearing each year before the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs in connection with the Storting deliberations on the Financial Markets Report.

The content of the minutes is included in the Monetary Policy assessment in the Monetary Policy Report.

Publication of minutes  Yes.

The Monetary Policy Report with financial stability assessment is published four times a year, in connection with four of the monetary policy meetings. The Report presents the assessments on which the interest rate setting is based and includes projections of developments in the Norwegian economy.

Controls on direct investment:
Controls apply to (1) establishment of branches of foreign financial enterprises; (2) establishment of branches of securities brokerage firms and collective investment fund management companies; (3) airlines, which may be granted an operating license only within the EEA, provided EEA member states and/or nationals of EEA member states own more than 50% of the enterprise and effectively control it, directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediate enterprises, except as indicated in an agreement with a third country in which the EU and Norway participate; (4) nonresident investment in the accounting sector exceeding 49% and in the legal sector; (5) ownership of Norwegian flag vessels, except (a) through a partnership or joint-stock company with at least 60% of the share capital owned by EEA nationals and (b) by registering the vessel in the Norwegian International Ship Register under the applicable conditions; and (6) investment in a registered fishing vessel bringing foreign ownership above 40%; (7) nonresident investors seeking to acquire control of Norwegian businesses that have crucial role in supporting or delivering critical national services. The National Security Act entered into force on January 1, 2019, and states that anyone who wants to acquire a qualified ownership in a business that is subject to the Act is obliged to notify the relevant ministry. When the business is not covered by any ministry’s area of responsibility, the notification must be addressed to the Norwegian National Security Authority. A qualified ownership means that the acquisition directly or indirectly will result in the acquirer achieving: (1) at least one-third of the share capital, shares, or votes in the business; (2) the right to become the owner of at least one-third of the share capital or shares; or (3) significant influence over the management of the company in other ways. Within 60 working days, as a general rule, the relevant ministry or the National Security Authority must inform the notifier of whether the acquisition has been approved, or whether the case must be dealt with by the King in Council. If the King in Council considers that an acquisition under Section 10-1 may entail a not insignificant threat to national security interests, the King in Council may deny the execution of the acquisition, or determine criteria for the execution.

The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are floating. Exchange rate is determined by market forces, that is, demand and supply of foreign exchange (FE). The State Bank of Pakistan (SBP) does not explicitly or implicitly commit to an exchange rate target or path. The SBP intervenes in the market to curb speculative pressures for ensuring smooth functioning of the markets. Banks are free to quote and trade at any exchange rate. Pakistan adopted a market-based flexible exchange rate system where interventions are limited to safeguarding financial stability and preventing disorderly market conditions (DMCs). Under the market-determined flexible exchange rate mechanism, the PKR moved in tandem with changes in the country’s trade balance and foreign inflows. In line with the reduction in the current account deficit during initial months of 2021, the PKR started to appreciate. This was further supported by gradual resumption in private flows. However, as the economy rebound strongly from the pandemic, the current account balance deteriorated during the second half of 2021 and the PKR reflected these developments. In addition, common seasonal factors such as budget utilization and foreign repatriation at the end of each financial and calendar years also have a temporary impact on the PKR exchange rate. The SBP does not publish data related to market intervention.
The SBP adopted an interest rate corridor framework in August 2009. Over time, the framework has undergone many changes and in May 2015, the SBP introduced a policy target rate for effective signaling. As of August 04, 2022, the policy target rate is set at 15.00%, SBP’s reverse repo rate (that is, ceiling rate) is currently at 16.00%, and SBP’s repo rate (that is, floor rate) is at 14.00%.

The SBP’s monetary policy framework is characterized by an emphasis on anchoring inflation expectations to the medium-term inflation target range announced by the government. It can be termed as a regime in transition toward flexible inflation targeting (FIT).

An independent MPC examines various indicators from the real, external, financial, and fiscal sectors, along with their model-based forecasts and stakeholder surveys, to assess the inflation outlook as well as the state of the output gap and financial stability. On the basis of this information, the MPC decides on the policy rate that would be appropriate to manage inflation expectations, while promoting growth and safeguarding financial stability. The government has shifted from announcing an annual inflation target to a medium-term target range since July 1, 2019, which is currently 5–7%.

From early 2021 to early 2022, the MPC provided forward guidance through its monetary policy statements which helped arrest uncertainty and provide confidence to businesses decision making, particularly during the challenging times associated with COVID-19.

Foreign exchange market

Banks may determine their own rates of exchange, both for ready and forward transactions for the public, subject to the condition that the margin between the buying and selling rates should not exceed 50 paisa per US dollar or its equivalent in other currencies. There are no SBP restrictions on bid-ask spreads of interbank transactions.

For exchange companies (ECs) and Exchange Companies of “B” category (ECBs), the spread between the buying and selling rates of US dollar, pound sterling, euro, Saudi Arabian riyal, and U.A.E. dirham may not exceed 1% of their buying rate. For all other foreign currencies, the ECs/ECBs need to ensure maintenance of a competitive spread.

Yes.

SBP issues licenses to banks to operate as ADs to deal in FE. Notably, not all of the banks have the status of ADs. As of August 31, 2022, the number of ADs was 29. SBP also issues licenses to ECs to deal in foreign currency notes, coins, postal notes, money orders, bank drafts, traveler’s checks, and remittance transfers and licenses to ECBs under the prescribed criteria. ECBs may purchase and sell foreign currency notes and coins only. ECs/ECBs deal with individuals only.

Hotels with a three-star rating or higher may also buy foreign currency from their customers. As of August 31, 2022, 27 full-fledged ECs, 21 ECBs, and 29 (restricted authorized) hotels were operational. ECs may make outward remittances in accordance with the regulations. Importers, exporters, and businesses may shop around with ADs for the best rates without recourse to SBP. Individuals may purchase FE from or sell it to ECs/ECBs at freely negotiated rates in accordance with the regulations. Banks are limited to a spread of 50 paisa in all foreign currency quotes to customers. For ECs/ECBs, the spread between the buying and selling rates of US dollar, pound sterling, euro, Saudi Arabian riyal, and U.A.E. dirham may not exceed 1% of their buying rate. For all other foreign currencies, the ECs/ECBs need to ensure to maintain a competitive spread (FE Circular No. 06 of May 12, 2015). ECs/ECBs may not make trade-related remittances on behalf of their customers. To focus ECs on their primary function of promoting home remittances, ECs may make outward remittances on behalf of bona fide customers for permissible transactions for up to 75% of the home remittances they handled in the preceding month. ECs must report remittances in the prescribed format by the fifth day of every month (FE Circular No. 04 of 2008). Some government FE transactions (for example, debt-service payments) are conducted directly by the SBP, at interbank market rates.

Effective February 3, 2022, ECs are required to surrender 100% of foreign currency received on account of inward home remittances, in the interbank market on the same day.

Effective December 19, 2021, ECs may sell foreign currency to individuals only up to a daily/annual limit of USD 10,000/100,000.
