Preface

The Annual Report on Exchange Arrangements and Exchange Restrictions has been published by the IMF since 1950. It draws on information available to the IMF from a number of sources, including that provided in the course of official staff visits to member countries, and has been prepared in close consultation with national authorities.

This project was coordinated in the Monetary and Capital Markets Department under the guidance of Annamaria Kokenyne by a staff team led by Salim M. Darbar and comprising Apoorv Bhargava, Ricardo Cervantes, Pornpinun Chantapaclepong, Gergana Gencheva, Ingibjoerg Gudbjartsdottir, Thorvardur Tjoervi Olafsson, Gurnain Kaur Pasricha, Svetlana Popova, Hanqing Ye, and Viktoriya Zotova (external consultant), with overall supervision by Gaston Gelos. It draws on the specialized contributions of that department (for specific countries), with assistance from staff members of the IMF’s five area departments, together with staff of other departments. The report was edited and produced by Rumit Pancholi, David Appleman, and Lucy Scott Morales of the Communications Department.

Overview

This is the 71st issue of the Annual Report on Exchange Arrangements and Exchange Restrictions (AREAER), which provides a yearly description of the foreign exchange arrangements, exchange and trade systems, and capital controls of all IMF member countries.1 The AREAER reports on restrictions in effect under Article XIV, Section 2, of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement in accordance with Section 3 of Article XIV, which mandates annual reporting on such restrictions.2 It also provides information relating to paragraph 25 of the 2012 Integrated Surveillance Decision, which restates the obligation of each member country under the IMF’s Articles of Agreement to notify the IMF of the exchange arrangement it intends to apply and any changes in that arrangement.3

The AREAER provides a description of global exchange and trade systems. It covers restrictions on current international payments and transfers and multiple currency practices (MCPs) subject to the IMF’s jurisdiction in accordance with Article VIII, Sections 2(a) and 3, in addition to those maintained under Article XIV of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement.4 The report also provides information on the operation of foreign exchange markets, controls on international trade, controls on capital transactions, and measures implemented in the financial sector, including prudential measures. In addition, the AREAER reports on exchange measures imposed by member countries solely for national and/or international security reasons, including those reported to the IMF in accordance with relevant decisions by the IMF Executive Board.5

The AREAER provides information, relating to paragraph 25 of the 2012 Integrated Surveillance Decision, on exchange rate arrangements of member countries: the de jure arrangements as described by the countries and the de facto arrangements, which are classified into 10 categories (Table 1). This classification is based on the information available on members’ de facto arrangements, as analyzed by IMF staff, which may differ from countries’ officially announced (de jure) arrangements. The methodology and the characteristics of the categories are described in the Compilation Guide included in this report.

Note: This methodology became effective February 2, 2009, and reflects an attempt to provide greater consistency and objectivity of exchange rate classifications across countries and to improve the transparency of the IMF’s bilateral and multilateral surveillance in this area. For further details, see IMF Working Paper 09/211.

1 In addition to the 189 IMF member countries, the report includes information on Hong Kong SAR (People’s Republic of China) as well as Aruba, Curaçao, and Sint Maarten (all in the Kingdom of the Netherlands). Andorra, which is the 190th member country, joined the IMF on October 16, 2020, and is not included in the 2020 AREAER.

4 The information on exchange restrictions and MCPs consists of verbatim quotes from each country’s most recent published IMF staff report as of December 31, 2019. In cases in which the information is drawn from IMF staff reports that have not been made public, the quotes have been included with the express consent of the member country. In the absence of such consent, the relevant information is reported as “not publicly available.” Any changes to these restrictions and MCPs implemented after the relevant IMF report has been issued will be reflected in the subsequent issue of the AREAER that covers the year during which the IMF staff report with information on such changes is issued.

5 The information on exchange measures imposed for security reasons is based solely on information provided by country authorities.
Several tools help navigate and interpret the findings of this report. A single table compares the characteristics of the exchange and trade systems of all IMF member countries: Summary Features of Exchange Arrangements and Regulatory Frameworks for Current and Capital Transactions in IMF Member Countries. The Country Table Matrix lists the categories of data reported for each country, and the Compilation Guide includes definitions and explanations used to report the data.

The AREAER is available online. Starting January 1, 2020, access to AREAER Online is freely available to all; previously a subscription was required. The AREAER Online database includes the overview and detailed information for each of the 189 member countries and separately for a few of their territories. In addition, AREAER Online contains data published in previous issues of the AREAER and is searchable by year, country, and category of measure; it also allows cross-country comparisons for time series.

In general, previous vintages of the AREAER published in a particular year included a description of exchange and trade systems as of the end of December of the previous year, with some reporting data through part of the publication year and de facto exchange rate arrangements as of April of the publication year. Exceptionally, the 2020 AREAER includes a description of exchange and trade systems as of June 30, 2020, for virtually all members; some report developments through August 31, 2020. Nevertheless, in keeping with past AREAERs, information on member countries’ de facto exchange rate arrangements in this report are as of April 30, 2020.

Overall Developments

In 2019, the trend in liberalizing foreign exchange transactions continued despite subdued economic growth. Global GDP slowed to 2.9 percent, compared with 3.6 percent in 2018, as a consequence of policy uncertainty mainly owing to trade tensions, idiosyncratic factors causing macroeconomic strain in several emerging market economies, and low productivity growth in advanced economies. Against the backdrop of weakening economic activity, monetary conditions were eased across the globe, including in the United States, where policy rates were cut twice by a total of 50 basis points. Given the low-interest-rate environment, investors searched for higher yields. In particular, the easing in financial conditions in advanced economies supported a pickup in portfolio flows to emerging markets in 2019, reversing the trend seen during the fourth quarter of 2018. However, given the policy uncertainty during the year, portfolio flows remained volatile.

The severe economic shock to global activity from the COVID-19 pandemic in 2020 was reflected in the trend in actions taken by countries regarding foreign exchange transactions. In the first quarter of 2020, there was an immediate deterioration in the economic outlook worldwide, and emerging market economies experienced unprecedented portfolio outflows. In response to the pandemic, sizable and swift actions both in the fiscal and monetary sphere were taken by advanced and emerging market economies. Emerging market and developing economies responded to the capital outflows and the outlook for a severe recession, including by permitting exchange rates to depreciate, intervening in the foreign exchange market, and tightening administrative controls on foreign exchange transactions. Since the onset of the pandemic, a large number of member countries have resorted to IMF financing through its emergency lending facilities to shore up their international reserves. In addition, some countries imposed capital controls to protect reserves in anticipation of a severe downturn in economic activity, particularly economies dependent on travel and tourism.

6 Aruba, Curacao and Sint Maarten (all in the Kingdom of the Netherlands; information for Curacao and Sint Maarten is reported together as they have a common central bank) and Hong Kong SAR (People's Republic of China). Hence, detailed information is available for 192 jurisdictions.

8 The number of yearly changes reported by each country can be compared directly with the previous three reporting periods but not with years before that because of the update to the format of the yearly changes table, which was introduced with the 2017 publication (see 2017 AREAER).

9 The date of the latest reported development is indicated as the position date for each country in the country chapters in the AREAER Online database. A few countries reported developments beyond August 2020. Data for Syria and Venezuela are as of the end of 2018 and the end of May 2019, respectively.
The 2020 AREAER documents the following major trends and significant developments:

- There was no significant shift in de facto exchange rate arrangements during the reporting period, with about the same number of economies moving toward more flexibility as those moving toward reduced flexibility. These changes are more a reflection of individual country circumstances than any global shock. The onset of the pandemic in early 2020 resulted in increased volatility in financial markets and significant interventions by a number of central banks in their foreign exchange markets; however, the impact of this volatile period on the de facto classification reported in this AREAER is limited since the cutoff date for the classifications is April 30, 2020.

- In contrast to the previous period, the share of countries that target a monetary aggregate decreased as some countries moved to the “other monetary framework” category. The number of member countries following an inflation-targeting framework increased slightly, and those anchored to a composite of currencies remained unchanged.

- More countries reported using derivatives as an alternative instrument to intervene in the foreign exchange market. Among the instruments most frequently used were options, nondeliverable forwards, and interventions through swaps triggered when the exchange rate moves above or below a specified range with respect to the previous day’s closing rate.

- Foreign exchange market activities continued to expand. In a number of countries, market structure became more sophisticated through the inclusion of new instruments in the central bank’s toolkit or liberalization in the forward exchange market. Several countries tightened controls on exchange rate flexibility in the interbank- and retail markets because of COVID-19–related volatility and stress. On the other hand, countries also implemented a variety of measures to support market liquidity and allow greater flexibility for market participants to manage their foreign exchange exposure.

- The number of IMF member countries accepting the obligations of Article VIII, Sections 2(a), 3, and 4 and members that make use of the transitional arrangement under Article XIV remained unchanged at the end of 2019: 172 and 17, respectively. Of these 17 Article XIV members, 3 maintain no restrictions but have not yet decided to accept the obligations under Article VIII.

- The number of countries maintaining restrictive exchange measures fell from 50 in 2018 to 48 at the end of 2019. Four members removed all previously identified restrictive measures, while in two other members whose exchange system had previously been free of restrictions and MCPs a few such measures were identified in 2019. Overall, the number of restrictive exchange measures decreased by 1 in 2019—mostly in Article VIII countries. Developments in restrictive exchange measures during the pandemic in 2020 will be reflected in the next report.

- Restrictive actions dominated the current account in 2019, amid an increased number of measures. Trade-related tightening measures reached a record high, reflecting the subdued global economic conditions and an uncertain political outlook. The strong liberalization trend in payments and proceeds for invisible transactions and current transfers observed in 2018 reversed in 2019, with slightly more tightening than easing measures. However, the overall trend appears to have turned in 2020, albeit based on partial data, in part because countries responded to the pandemic by easing restrictions on imports of essential goods.

- The liberalization trend related to capital transactions seen in the previous three years slowed significantly in 2019 and may have reversed in 2020. The share of tightening actions increased markedly in 2019 compared with 2018, reflecting in part the slowdown in global growth, political uncertainty, and idiosyncratic factors. Emerging market and developing economies, followed by low-income developing countries, undertook virtually all of the tightening measures in 2019, with outflow tightening measures outnumbering those on inflows.10 Both advanced and emerging market and developing economies took more liberalizing than tightening measures in 2019, unlike low-income developing countries, which exhibited the opposite trend. Reflecting the large shock and stress of the global pandemic, the trend in 2020, based on partial data, 10 References to country income groups are based on IMF World Economic Outlook (WEO) country groupings: advanced economies; emerging market and developing economies (excluding low-income developing countries); and low-income developing countries. Of the 192 economies covered in the AREAER, 36 are advanced economies, 97 are emerging market and developing economies, and 59 are low-income developing countries.

switched, with the majority of measures consisting of a tightening action. Emerging market and developing economies took the bulk of total tightening actions in 2020, more than half of which were on outflows. Tightening measures by advanced economies were exclusively on limiting inflows, particularly on foreign direct investment (FDI).

- Overall regulatory developments in the financial sector continued to show an easing trend in the reporting period. While easing measures on commercial banks indicate in part some scaling back of reforms following the global financial crisis, there was a marked increase in tightening measures on institutional investors, reflecting a combination of increased momentum on strengthening regulations governing their operations and regulatory responses to COVID-19 in 2020. To address the financial stability challenges posed by the pandemic, reserve requirements and liquidity coverage or asset ratio requirements were eased, supplying liquidity to banks to facilitate the provision of credit. On the other hand, capital outflow measures were tightened, particularly, by a few countries, on institutional investors, in the face of expected decline in capital inflows as a consequence of tightening global financial conditions and the sharp slowdown in global activity.

The remainder of this overview highlights the major developments covered in the individual country chapters that are part of this report.

Developments in Exchange Arrangements

This section documents major changes and trends in the following related areas: exchange rate arrangements, intervention, monetary anchors, and the operation and structure of foreign exchange markets. It also reports on significant developments with respect to exchange taxes, exchange rate structures, and national currencies. There are five tables in this section. Table 2 highlights changes in the reclassification of the de facto exchange rate arrangements between May 1, 2019, and April 30, 2020. Table 3 breaks down countries’ de facto exchange rate arrangements for 2011–20. Table 4 summarizes the detailed descriptions in the country chapters by reporting each IMF member country’s monetary policy framework as indicated by country officials and the classification of their de facto exchange rate arrangements. Table 5 outlines IMF member countries’ monetary policy frameworks as reported by country authorities and exchange rate anchors for 2011–20, and Table 6 reports the foreign exchange market structure among the membership for 2016–20.

Exchange Rate Arrangements

In 2019, developments in exchange rates in many emerging market economies reflected the strengthening US dollar during the year, political uncertainty in various parts of the world, and expectations of lower economic growth at the global level. Other factors that affected the dynamics of exchange rates include the behavior of prices for various commodities and idiosyncratic factors. In contrast to the previous reporting period, which indicated a slight move toward more flexible exchange rate regimes, changes in de facto exchange rate arrangements during this reporting period were more balanced, with almost the same number of countries moving from less to more flexible exchange rate arrangements than in the opposite direction. Of the 15 countries whose exchange rate arrangement was reclassified as of April 2020,12 (see Table 2), 7 countries (47 percent) were reclassified to a more flexible arrangement (compared with 15 of 27 countries, or 55 percent, during the previous reporting period); 8 countries (53 percent) were classified to a more managed arrangement (compared with 11 of 27 countries, or 41 percent, during the previous reporting period).13

The sharp currency movements generally reflect the capital outflow pressure emerging markets faced and a rapidly worsening global economic environment during the reporting period. A number of central banks increased their participation in the foreign exchange market through interventions to reduce the pace of depreciation of their currency amid high uncertainty associated with the global spread of COVID-19 and concerns regarding its potential impact on health and the economy, which generated exceptionally high volatility in financial markets. Global financial market volatility spiked at the onset of the pandemic in March 2020. The policy responses, particularly in advanced economies, eased global financial market uncertainty and reduced the intensity of capital outflows from emerging market and developing economies, dampening pressure on their exchange rates. The impact of the COVID-19 crisis on the de facto classifications is not captured in this AREAER since the peak of depreciation pressure occurred mostly during March and April 2020—only one month or less before the cutoff date of classifications, April 30, 2020. Since at least six months of observation are needed for a reclassification, these movements will be captured in the next AREAER.

² The exchange rate arrangement was reclassified retroactively, overriding a previously published classification for the entire reporting period or part of the period.

³ Cells in the column “Previous arrangement” are blank if there was a subsequent reclassification during the reporting period.

The number of reclassifications (as of April 30, 2020) was significantly lower (15) than during the previous reporting period (27) and more balanced (Figure 1). The share of countries whose exchange rate arrangement was reclassified to a soft peg fell by only 1 percentage point, from 59 percent in the previous period. Similarly, trivial adjustments took place in other categories as well: reclassifications to the residual, other managed category rose by 1 percentage point, from 26 percent, while the floating category had a modest decrease of 2 percentage points, from 15 percent in the previous AREAER. With these changes, the trend of an increasing move to soft pegs observed from 2016 to 2018 reversed in 2019 and then stabilized in 2020.

(Percent of total reclassifications as of April 30)

The changes in individual categories are as follows:

• Soft pegs—The total number of countries with soft pegs increased by 1, to 90, compared with the previous reporting period. This group had the largest share of reclassifications from May 2019 through April 2020, with most of the changes in crawl-like and stabilized arrangements. Countries with soft pegs continue to make up the single largest type of exchange rate arrangement, accounting for 46.4 percent of all members (Table 3).

  • Crawl-like arrangements—The number of countries with crawl-like arrangements grew by 5, to 23 (Figure 2; Table 4). This category had the same changes within the soft peg group; having stayed on an increasing trend since 2018, this year it reached the highest number of countries of the past decade, surpassing the previous record registered in 2015 (20). Seven countries were added: 4 were reclassified from a stabilized arrangement (Democratic Republic of the Congo, Egypt, Guinea, Romania), 2 from "other managed" (Cambodia, Mongolia), and 1 from floating (Costa Rica). Two countries exited this classification: both moved to a stabilized arrangement (Sri Lanka, Tanzania). One country was reclassified twice during this reporting period, reverting to a crawl-like arrangement (Paraguay) following a temporary reclassification to "other managed." Countries adopting stabilized and crawl-like arrangements often adjust their exchange rates in response to external events, including differences in inflation across countries, capital flow pressures, and new trends in world trade. As a result, they are often reclassified to other categories within the soft peg group.

14 Guinea was reclassified retroactively to "crawl-like" from "stabilized" in June 2018. Retroactive changes are reflected as of January 1, 2019, corresponding to the first day of the period covered in this year’s AREAER.

15 Sri Lanka was reclassified twice—to "other managed" in January 2019 and to "stabilized" in April 2019.

16 Paraguay was reclassified twice—to "other managed" in May 2019 and back to "crawl-like" in July 2019.

17 Armenia was reclassified twice—to "crawl-like" in January 2019 and back to "stabilized" in August 2019.

18 Malawi was reclassified twice—to "other managed" in March 2019 and back to "stabilized" in August 2019.
o Conventional pegs—The number of countries in this category dropped by 1, to 41. Kuwait left the group for “other managed” because the composition of its currency basket could not be confirmed. The conventional peg arrangement holds the largest share among soft pegs, with 45.6 percent; it has been decreasing gradually since April 2016 from its peak of 58 percent.

o Pegged exchange rates within horizontal bands—There are no countries in this category, as Tonga was reclassified to “other managed.” Three countries have de jure pegged exchange rates within horizontal bands, but two have a de facto stabilized arrangement (Maldives, Morocco), and one has a de facto other managed arrangement (Syria).

- Other managed arrangements—The number of countries in this residual category rose by 2, to 15. There were six changes from May 2019 through April 2020. Two countries abandoned this category and were reclassified to crawl-like arrangement (Cambodia, Mongolia). In contrast, four countries were added: two were reclassified from a floating arrangement (Argentina, Zimbabwe), one from a conventional peg arrangement (Kuwait), and one from a pegged exchange rate with horizontal bands (Tonga). One country was reclassified twice during this reporting period, reverting to “other managed” (Angola19). The percentage of countries in this category increased by 1 percentage point to 7.8 percent.

- Floating arrangement—The number of countries classified as floating dropped by 3, to 32, with five changes in the group’s composition. Four abandoned this category: 2 were reclassified to other managed arrangement (Argentina, Zimbabwe), 1 to crawl-like arrangement (Costa Rica), and 1 to free floating (Czech Republic20). One country was added (Chile, from free floating). One country was reclassified twice during this reporting period, reverting to a floating arrangement (Switzerland21).

- Free floating—The number of countries with free-floating arrangements remained at 31. There were two changes in this category: one left the group (Chile), and one country was added (Czech Republic22).

- Hard pegs (no separate legal tender and currency boards)—The number of countries in this category remained unchanged at 24. Changes in this category are rare, because countries with such arrangements tend to maintain their exchange rate policies unless their economies undergo large structural changes that result in an exit.

19 Angola was reclassified twice—to “crawl-like” retroactively in December 2018 and back to “other managed” in October 2019. Retroactive changes are reflected as of January 1, 2019, corresponding to the first day of the period covered in this year’s AREAER.

20 The Czech Republic was reclassified retroactively to “free floating” from “floating” in April 2017. Retroactive changes are reflected as of January 1, 2019, corresponding to the first day of the period covered in this year’s AREAER.

21 Switzerland was reclassified twice—to “crawl-like” retroactively in October 2018 and back to “floating” in September 2019. Retroactive changes are reflected as of January 1, 2019, corresponding to the first day of the period covered in this year’s AREAER.

22 The Czech Republic was reclassified to free floating from floating retroactively as of April 2017. Retroactive changes are reflected as of January 1, 2019, corresponding to the first day of the period covered in this year’s AREAER.

Table 4. De Facto Classification of Exchange Rate Arrangements, as of April 30, 2020, and Monetary Policy Frameworks

The classification system is based on the members’ actual, de facto arrangements as identified by the IMF staff, which may differ from their officially announced, de jure arrangements. The system classifies exchange rate arrangements primarily on the basis of the degree to which the exchange rate is determined by the market rather than by official action, with market-determined rates being on the whole more flexible. The system distinguishes among four major categories: hard pegs (such as exchange arrangements with no separate legal tender and currency board arrangements); soft pegs (including conventional pegged arrangements, pegged exchange rates within horizontal bands, crawling pegs, stabilized arrangements, and crawl-like arrangements); floating regimes (such as floating and free floating); and a residual category, other managed arrangements. This table presents members’ exchange rate arrangements against alternative monetary policy frameworks to highlight the role of the exchange rate in broad economic policy and illustrate that different exchange rate regimes can be consistent with similar monetary frameworks. The monetary policy frameworks are as follows:

Exchange rate anchor

The monetary authority buys or sells foreign exchange to maintain the exchange rate at its predetermined level or within a range. The exchange rate thus serves as the nominal anchor or intermediate target of monetary policy. These frameworks are associated with exchange rate arrangements with no separate legal tender, currency board arrangements, pegs (or stabilized arrangements) with or without bands, crawling pegs (or crawl-like arrangements), and other managed arrangements.

Monetary aggregate target

The monetary authority uses its instruments to achieve a target growth rate for a monetary aggregate, such as reserve money, M1, or M2, and the targeted aggregate becomes the nominal anchor or intermediate target of monetary policy.

Inflation-targeting framework

This involves the public announcement of numerical targets for inflation, with an institutional commitment by the monetary authority to achieve these targets, typically over a medium-term horizon. Additional key features normally include increased communication with the public and the markets about the plans and objectives of monetary policymakers and increased accountability of the central bank for achieving its inflation objectives. Monetary policy decisions are often guided by the deviation of forecasts of future inflation from the announced inflation target, with the inflation forecast acting (implicitly or explicitly) as the intermediate target of monetary policy.

Other

The country has no explicitly stated nominal anchor; rather, it monitors various indicators in conducting monetary policy. This category is also used when no relevant information on the country is available.

Note: If the member country's de facto exchange rate arrangement has been reclassified during the reporting period, the date of change is indicated in parentheses (month, year).

CEMAC = Central African Economic and Monetary Community; ECCU = Eastern Caribbean Currency Union; EMU = European Economic and Monetary Union; WAEMU = West African Economic and Monetary Union.

1 Includes countries that have no explicitly stated nominal anchor, but rather monitor various indicators in conducting monetary policy.
2 The member participates in the European Exchange Rate Mechanism (ERM II).
3 Within the framework of an exchange rate fixed to a currency composite, the Bank Al-Maghrib adopted a monetary policy framework in 2006 based on various inflation indicators, with the overnight interest rate as its operational target to pursue its main objective of price stability.
4 The country maintains a de facto exchange rate anchor to a composite.
5 The country maintains a de facto exchange rate anchor to the US dollar.
6 The country maintains a de facto exchange rate anchor to the euro.
7 The central bank is in transition toward inflation targeting.
8 The authorities reported that their monetary policy framework is referred to as inflation targeting "lite."
9 The exchange rate arrangement or monetary policy framework was reclassified retroactively, overriding a previously published classification.
10 The exchange rate arrangement was reclassified twice during this reporting period.
11 Currently the Central Bank of Somalia does not have a monetary policy framework.
Monetary Anchors

The exchange rate remained the anchor for monetary policy for fewer than half of member countries—41.7 percent (Table 5). There were five changes in official monetary anchors, compared with two in the previous reporting period. Four countries moved from the group of countries with a monetary aggregate target (22): three to “other monetary framework” (47) and one to inflation-targeting framework (43). One country reported targeting inflation during 2019, switching from the “other monetary framework” classification (see Table 4).

1 Includes 189 member countries and the following territories: Aruba, Curacao and Sint Maarten (all in the Kingdom of the Netherlands: information for Curacao and Sint Maarten is reported together as they have a common central bank) and Hong Kong SAR (People's Republic of China).

2 Includes countries that have no explicitly stated nominal anchor but instead monitor various indicators in conducting monetary policy.

3 Does not include South Sudan, which became an IMF member on April 18, 2012.

4 Includes Nauru, which became an IMF member on April 12, 2016.

5 Does not include Andorra, which became an IMF member on October 16, 2020.

Fifty-two member countries report an officially announced fixed exchange rate policy—either a currency board or a conventional peg—which implies the use of the exchange rate as the unique monetary anchor, with two exceptions. Although the official (de jure) exchange rate regime of both Samoa and the Solomon Islands is a peg against a basket of currencies, the monetary policy framework was reported to comprise a mix of anchors, including the exchange rate. Among the 63 countries with de facto floating exchange rate arrangements—floating or free floating—the monetary anchor varies among monetary aggregates (2), inflation targeting (35), and other (26, including the 19 European Economic and Monetary Union [EMU] countries). Thirteen countries implementing soft pegs, seven countries in other managed arrangements, and two countries in a floating arrangement target monetary aggregates. Countries with either stabilized or crawl-like arrangements (46) report reliance on a variety of monetary frameworks, including monetary aggregates and inflation-targeting frameworks. Other managed arrangements are split among exchange rate anchors (2), monetary aggregate targets (7), and other monetary policy frameworks (6).

- The share of IMF members with the exchange rate as the main policy target remained unchanged at 41.7 percent. Countries with hard pegs and soft pegs make up 97.5 percent of this group. Three currency unions—the Central African Economic and Monetary Community, Eastern Caribbean Currency Union, and West African Economic and Monetary Union—have exchange rate anchors for their respective common currency.

23 Monetary anchors are defined as the main intermediate target the authorities pursue to achieve their policy goals (which, overwhelmingly, is price stability). The inventory of monetary anchors is based mainly on members’ declarations in the context of the yearly AREAER update or Article IV consultations and is not necessarily consistent with the de facto exchange rate arrangement.
• The US dollar maintained its position as the dominant exchange rate anchor at 19.8 percent. Following a steady decrease from 26.5 percent in 2010 to 19.8 percent in 2018, the number of countries using this anchor has stabilized, with no changes in this group from April 2018 to April 2020.

• The share or composition of countries using an exchange rate anchored to the euro remained unchanged at 13.0 percent. Countries whose currencies are anchored to the euro generally have historical ties with European countries—for example, the Communauté Financière d’Afrique (CFA) franc area countries—are part of the European Union, or have strong trade relations with western Europe, including central and eastern European countries—for example, Bulgaria, Montenegro, and North Macedonia.

• Nine countries maintain an exchange rate anchored to another single currency. Three of these countries (Kiribati, Nauru, Tuvalu) use the Australian dollar as their legal tender, and one (Brunei Darussalam) has a currency board arrangement with the Singapore dollar. The remaining five have conventional pegged arrangements: three (Eswatini, Lesotho, Namibia) with the South African rand and two (Bhutan, Nepal) with the Indian rupee. Half the countries in this group are landlocked, bordering either partially or exclusively the country whose currency they use as their exchange rate anchor. The anchor currency is typically freely usable in the country and is often legal tender.

• Eight countries reported having a monetary policy framework with the exchange rate anchored to a currency composite. Two track special drawing rights (SDRs) as the sole currency basket (Libya, Syria) and one the SDR and the rand (Botswana). Vietnam anchors to a broader reference basket and additionally specified that the dong may fluctuate within a daily transaction band of ±3 percent against the US dollar. Singapore is anchored to its nominal effective exchange rate. Morocco tracks a euro and US dollar basket. The Fiji dollar is anchored to a basket of four currencies (US dollar, Australian dollar, New Zealand dollar, Japanese yen). Kuwait does not disclose the composition of its reference currency basket.

Most IMF member countries, representing the overwhelming share of global output, are split among monetary aggregate targeting, inflation targeting, and “other” (which includes monetary policy not committed to a specific target).

• The number of countries targeting a monetary aggregate fell by 4, to 22, compared with the previous reporting period. Three countries switched from monetary aggregate targeting to “other monetary framework” (Argentina, Malawi, Rwanda), and one country moved to “inflation-targeting framework” (Seychelles). This category does not include any country with a free-floating exchange rate arrangement. In fact, monetary aggregates are often the choice of economies with less-developed financial markets and managed exchange rates. The objective of the arrangement is to influence consumer prices and, eventually, asset prices through the control of monetary aggregates. Reserve money is often used as the operational target to control credit growth through the credit multiplier.

• The number of countries that reported targeting inflation increased by 2, to 43. One country moved from targeting monetary aggregates (Seychelles) and one country from “other monetary framework” (Sri Lanka). As in the previous AREAER, Jamaica described its monetary policy framework as inflation targeting “lite” during this reporting period. Similarly, Sri Lanka reported having a “flexible inflation-targeting framework.” The countries in this group are mostly middle income but include some advanced economies as well. Of these, 35 have either a de facto floating or free-floating exchange rate arrangement.25 The central bank is responsible for setting the inflation target for 21 of the 43 countries in this category, and in 17 countries the central bank and the government jointly set the targets. More than half of the countries (25) have a target with a tolerance band, with only 4 countries targeting core inflation. Most of the countries report having inflation-targeting regime commitments to transparency and accountability, 43 and 38 countries, respectively.

24 Inflation targeting “lite” is viewed as a transitional regime that countries use before obtaining a legal mandate to operate a full-fledged inflation-targeting regime.

25 Inflation targeting aims to address the problem of monetary aggregates that do not have a stable relationship with prices, making intermediate monetary targets less suitable for inflation control.
• The “other monetary policy framework” category total grew by 2 to 47. The number of countries that are not committed to a specific target (the “other” column in Table 4) was affected by four changes during the reporting period: three countries (Argentina, Malawi, Rwanda) moved here from the monetary aggregate targeting group, and one country (Sri Lanka) moved from “other monetary policy framework” to an inflation-targeting framework. A few countries in this category are in transition to an inflation-targeting framework (Egypt, Kenya, Mongolia, Mozambique, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Tunisia, Uzbekistan). This category includes many of the largest economies, such as the euro area and the United States. It is also used as a residual classification for countries for which no relevant information is available and for those with alternative monetary policy frameworks not categorized in this report.

Foreign Exchange Interventions

IMF staff regularly assess whether the frequency of foreign exchange intervention is consistent with the de facto free-floating arrangements or whether classification as a soft peg is appropriate (see the Compilation Guide). These assessments draw on information that is publicly available, information reported to the IMF by member countries, market reports, and other sources, including information obtained during official staff visits to member countries.

Intervention purpose

Market conditions were volatile during 2019 amid concerns about trade tensions and economic growth, and many emerging market economies managed these pressures by allowing the exchange rate to adjust or by leaning against the wind with interventions. During the first half of 2019, a few currencies depreciated rapidly (Haiti, Liberia, Pakistan, Venezuela). Of these, two (Haiti and Venezuela) continued to depreciate during the second half of 2019, albeit at a reduced pace in the case of Haiti, and two experienced a trend reversal and saw their currency appreciate (Liberia, Pakistan). Some countries’ currency depreciated sharply during the second half of 2019 (Angola, Argentina). Costa Rica and Switzerland intervened in the foreign exchange market to reduce appreciation pressure or increase foreign exchange reserves during the first three quarters of 2019.

In general, central banks intervene to build reserves or to dampen excessive market volatility, but they may also intervene in the foreign exchange market to fight depreciation pressure on the country’s currency. During the first quarter of 2020, a number of central banks increased their participation in the foreign exchange market through interventions to reduce the pace of depreciation of their local currency in response to the high uncertainty associated with the global spread of COVID-19. This intervention contributed to reduced reserves in emerging market and developing economies during the first quarter of 2020. The COVID-19 pandemic affected global financial markets as uncertainty spiked in March and April 2020, when many members’ currency depreciated rapidly—most notably, Angola, Armenia, Brazil, Colombia, Eswatini, Iceland, Lesotho, Mexico, Namibia, Norway, Russia, Seychelles, South Africa, Turkey, and Zambia.

Intervention techniques

IMF members typically conduct foreign exchange interventions in the spot foreign exchange market, either by directly contacting market participants (all or only a selection—for example, market makers) or through foreign exchange auctions (for more information on auctions, see the Foreign Exchange Markets section of this report). However, foreign exchange interventions occasionally also take place in the forward- or options markets or through verbal interventions. Some countries may also intervene in the foreign exchange market to maintain the exchange rate at a certain target level or range, or within a fluctuation band with respect to a central rate (Croatia, Guatemala).

26 Sri Lanka refers to its monetary policy framework as a “flexible inflation-targeting framework.”
Preannounced programs of future purchases and sales of foreign exchange typically are counted as one intervention in the foreign exchange market for the purpose of the de facto classification, with the assumption that the market prices the new information on the day the program is announced.27 To avoid influencing market expectations about the exchange rate, the program of interventions should indicate in advance the nature, frequency, and size of the central bank’s foreign exchange transactions. Among the mechanisms currently used in preannounced intervention programs, countries may accumulate reserves following a preannounced calendar of auctions (Albania) or conduct purchases and sales of foreign exchange for the government pension fund (Norway). Similarly, a preannounced program is used by Russia, which bases its volume of intervention on the difference in the projected and actual amount of oil and gas revenue in the federal budget. The projected revenue is calculated using separate benchmark prices for oil and gas, respectively. As long as the actual oil and gas revenue exceeds the amount projected, the Ministry of Finance purchases foreign exchange through the Central Bank of Russia equal to the amount of additional oil and gas revenue. If actual oil and gas revenue drops below the projected level, the Ministry of Finance sells foreign exchange equal to the amount of the resulting shortfall in oil and gas revenue. A benchmark Urals oil price of US$40 a barrel (in real 2017 terms, adjusted for US inflation) is used in this framework. In addition, in 2020 the central bank introduced a new mechanism for sales of foreign exchange, which it received from the National Wealth Fund (NWF) in connection with the NWF’s purchase of Sberbank shares. Specifically, in response to the decline in proceeds from oil exports, oil products, and natural gas, it sells foreign exchange in the market if the Urals crude oil price falls below US$25 a barrel. The size of these operations is announced at the beginning of every month, and purchases are evenly distributed within the month.

Some countries use derivatives as an alternative instrument to intervene in the foreign exchange market. In January 2019, the National Bank of Georgia introduced foreign exchange put options to accumulate reserves, which are sold via auctions. In November 2019, the Central Bank of Chile implemented a program of interventions in the foreign exchange spot market and in exchange hedging instruments through nondeliverable forwards. The Central Bank of Mexico uses nondeliverable forwards with maturities of up to 12 months and settled in pesos. Similarly, the Central Bank of Colombia can intervene in the foreign exchange market through (1) direct uniform price auction sales of put or call options, (2) direct uniform price auctions (with three minutes of bids) or discriminatory price auction sales of foreign exchange (with three minutes of bids),
(3) spot sales of foreign exchange by means of foreign exchange swap contracts at rates set by the central bank in auctions or over the counter, and (4) since March 2020, forward dollar sales through forward contracts.
The Bank of Korea can also intervene in the market with its funds and funds from the Foreign Exchange Equalization Fund when it is deemed necessary for market stability. The Central Reserve Bank of Peru can intervene through dollar-indexed bonds, foreign exchange swaps, and repurchase agreements. The Central Bank of Brazil intervenes mainly in the derivatives market using foreign exchange swaps. Other countries, including Albania, Armenia, Denmark,28 New Zealand, the Philippines, and Tunisia, have also reported foreign exchange swaps as an intervention method.

Official Exchange Rates

The vast majority (167) of IMF member countries report that they publish official exchange rates. This includes not only countries that have officially determined exchange rates; but by definition, also those countries that report a reference or indicative exchange rate that is computed and/or published by the central bank (see the Compilation Guide). The calculation of these exchange rates is often based on market exchange rates, such as those used in interbank market transactions or in a combination of interbank and bank-client transactions in a specified observation period. The published exchange rate is used as a guide for market participants in their foreign exchange transactions, for accounting and customs valuation purposes, in exchange transactions with the government, and sometimes mandatorily in specific exchange transactions.

During the 2019–20 reporting period, several countries adopted new methods for calculating their official exchange rates (Honduras, Myanmar, Paraguay, Tunisia, Ukraine, Venezuela). Countries from all income levels and various geographic regions are represented among the 25 members that report no official or reference exchange rates; about half (12) are countries with no separate legal tender, 3 are soft pegs, 7 are floating or free floating, and 3 have the residual other managed de facto exchange rate arrangement. Among the countries that do not compute an official exchange rate, some, including Japan, Peru, and Singapore, publish the market-determined rates on their monetary authority’s website to promote information transparency.

Foreign Exchange Markets

The liberalization of foreign exchange markets continued during 2019 and through August 2020.29 Changes in the structure and operation of members’ foreign exchange markets are summarized in Table 6. Foreign exchange market practices remained largely similar overall to those during the previous reporting period.

Member countries reported 119 changes related to foreign exchange markets, slightly more than in the previous reporting period. Measures easing constraints on the operation of foreign exchange markets (47, or 39.5 percent) were almost double the number of tightening measures (24, or 20.2 percent); the remainder were neutral measures (48). In the previous reporting period, member countries reported 99 changes related to foreign exchange markets, of which 57.5 percent were easing measures and 15.2 percent were tightening measures. Although easing measures continued to exceed tightening measures among member countries, the pace of liberalization has slowed, along with an increase in restrictions in foreign exchange markets. Compared with the previous reporting period, member countries implemented greater liberalization in foreign exchange auctions, while more restrictions have been introduced in the interbank market. The liberalization of forward exchange market continued across countries.

1 Includes 189 member countries and the following territories: Aruba, Curacao and Sint Maarten (all in the Kingdom of the Netherlands; information for Curacao and Sint Maarten is reported together as they have a common central bank) and Hong Kong SAR (People’s Republic of China). Andorra, which became a member of the IMF on October 16, 2020, is not included in this report.

2 The years in this table represent the publication year of the AREAER and cover developments during the previous year and through part of the publication year (for example, the 2020 report has full-year data for 2019 and partial data for 2020).

Of the tightening measures, slightly more than half are attributable to five countries: Serbia (3), Angola (2), Argentina (2), Iraq (2), and Zimbabwe (2). Of the easing measures, six countries account for nearly half of the changes: Malaysia (7), Morocco (4), Angola (3), India (3), Serbia (3), and Colombia (2). In Malaysia, which reported the largest number of changes, liberalization in the derivatives market and revamped hedging rules aimed at deepening the foreign exchange market. Serbia reported equal numbers of tightening and easing changes in this reporting period: in 2019, the exchange rate spreads and commissions were tightened for the public postal operator, and since the onset of COVID-19, the central bank has applied favorable rates in its foreign exchange swap auctions to ease pressure in the foreign exchange market. Across countries, foreign exchange market easing measures helped facilitate trading in the foreign exchange market by loosening restrictions on setting prices, broadening market participation, and for hedging purposes.

Foreign exchange standing facility, allocations, auctions, and fixing

The number of countries that reported some type of official central bank facility increased by 1, to 120, compared with the previous reporting period. Central banks may provide foreign exchange access to market participants through a standing facility, allocation to certain market participants, or the purchase and sale of foreign exchange through auctions or fixing sessions.

• Foreign exchange standing facilities—Sixty-nine countries reported standing facilities in their jurisdictions. When a country has a foreign exchange standing facility it means that the central bank typically stands ready to buy or sell foreign exchange to banks, thus providing a maximum and minimum exchange rate for their currency for a given day. Such facilities are usually instrumental in maintaining a hard or soft peg arrangement. Compared with the previous issue of the AREAER, the number of countries reporting a standing facility increased by one as Trinidad and Tobago indicated that it operated a foreign exchange standing facility. A relatively stable pattern has been observed in recent years: the number of countries operating standing facilities has either declined by one or two or remained steady from year to year.

The countries with foreign exchange standing facilities include all those with currency boards (11); all conventional pegs, except Iraq, and São Tomé and Príncipe (39); all crawling pegs, except Honduras (2); countries with crawl-like arrangements (4); countries classified as stabilized arrangements (8); and countries with other managed arrangements (3). The credibility of such arrangements depends largely on the availability of foreign exchange reserves backing the facility. Two countries with flexible exchange rates reported that they had foreign exchange standing facilities, similar to last year’s report. These countries are Turkey (floating) and Russia (free floating).

• Foreign exchange auctions—The number of countries reporting official foreign exchange auctions remained unchanged at 41. The composition of countries that conducted auctions remains largely similar to the previous year except for four countries: Albania indicated that foreign exchange auctions were used by the central bank for intervention purposes; Zimbabwe introduced a foreign exchange trading system in which the central bank regularly sells a given amount of foreign exchange through a bidding process and buys foreign exchange in the intervening periods at the previous auction-determined rate; Liberia, on the other hand, discontinued foreign exchange auctions in the context of the newly introduced interest-rate-targeting monetary policy framework; and Trinidad and Tobago reported that it is not conducting official foreign exchange auctions. In a significant majority (34 of 41) of countries foreign exchange auctions are the only mechanism operated by the central bank. More than a third (14) have de facto exchange rate regimes that are floating, including 2 that are free floating. Foreign exchange auctions can be used to intervene in the foreign exchange market and influence the exchange rate, support price discovery, and manage foreign exchange reserves.

Among various changes reported, Angola eliminated a 2 percent band around the average exchange rate of winning bids of the previous auction for auction bids, effectively eliminating the previously allowed maximum depreciation of the exchange rate of 2 percent per auction. It lowered the threshold for the size of bids for foreign exchange auctions but tightened requirements on the size of bids relative to an individual bank’s capital. Chile introduced a foreign currency sales program in December 2019 to smooth foreign exchange volatility but suspended it in January 2020 as conditions stabilized. Colombia broadened participation in auctions to include stock brokerages whose capital meets the minimum required for the establishment of a financial corporation and introduced various instruments, such as US dollar swaps and nondeliverable forwards, in auctions to strengthen foreign exchange liquidity and smooth exchange rate volatility. Georgia introduced foreign exchange options as a new instrument sold via auctions. Honduras tightened the band around which bids for foreign exchange purchases can be submitted. The COVID-19 crisis prompted central bank actions with respect to foreign exchange auctions: Mexico conducted auctions under the US dollar liquidity swap line to support foreign exchange... liquidity and smooth volatility. It added to its toolkit the possibility of selling non-deliverable forwards settled by differences in US dollars and traded when Mexican markets are closed, to provide orderly operating conditions in the Mexican peso–US dollar exchange market, particularly during trading hours in Asia and Europe. Serbia applied favorable rates in both its fixed-method swap auctions and for purchases and sales of foreign exchange and foreign cash with residents who have foreign exchange accounts with the National Bank of Serbia. This was done to support the domestic financial system in response to COVID-19.

• Foreign exchange allocation systems—Twenty countries reported having a foreign exchange allocation system. This was an increase of one compared with the previous period as Papua New Guinea reported that it operated an allocation system. More than half of the countries (11) with allocation systems also rely on other mechanisms, mainly standing facilities or auctions. Virtually all of them have a de facto soft peg arrangement. Foreign exchange allocation is often used to provide foreign exchange for strategic imports, such as oil or food, when foreign exchange reserves are scarce. For instance, this facility is used to bolster exports (Bangladesh) and finance priority sector projects (Ethiopia) and strategic imports (Sudan and Suriname).

• Fixing sessions—This arrangement is characteristic of the early stage of foreign exchange market development, when price discovery may be difficult. Fixing sessions allow the central bank to organize sessions in which market participants can submit buying and selling bids. The central bank uses these bids to find the market clearing exchange rate. The number of countries that reported operating fixing sessions remained at five: the Islamic Republic of Iran, Mauritania, Mozambique, Syria, and Uzbekistan. Except for Iran, all rely solely on fixing sessions to intervene in the foreign exchange market. For example, Mauritania and Uzbekistan used this mechanism to determine the exchange rate based on the supply of and demand for foreign currency.

Interbank and retail foreign exchange markets

The number of countries that reported having a foreign exchange interbank market stood at 173. The 19 jurisdictions that do not have an interbank market are typically countries where either security concerns made the operation of a foreign exchange market difficult in recent years, such as Somalia, South Sudan, Venezuela, and Yemen; countries where the central bank maintains a conventional peg or currency board; or jurisdictions where there is no separate legal tender. The latter two groups of countries consist of Aruba, Belize, Bhutan, Dominica, Eritrea, Kiribati, Lesotho, Libya, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Montenegro, Nauru, Palau, Timor-Leste, and Tuvalu. In most cases, these countries are small, and the size of the territory naturally limits the number of potential participants in the foreign exchange market.

For countries that have an interbank market, the main types were over-the-counter markets, brokerage arrangements, and market-making arrangements. Thirty-two members allow all three types of systems.

• Over-the-counter operations—These account for most of the world’s interbank markets. The number of countries in this group has grown nearly every year since 2013, when it comprised 127 countries, and now stands at 146. There was a net gain of one compared with the previous reporting period due to revised reporting by Iraq; despite no formal interbank foreign exchange market in St. Kitts and Nevis and St. Vincent and the Grenadines, banks in these countries can trade freely with one another. Although this type of foreign exchange market appears to be gaining popularity among IMF members, 27 countries with interbank markets still report that they do not engage in over-the-counter operations. These countries do not share any particular characteristic in terms of size, income level, or financial market sophistication.

• Brokerage arrangements—50 countries reported having a brokerage system. Compared with the previous reporting period, Spain revised its reporting and indicated that there is a brokerage system in place.

• Market-making agreements—71 countries reported having market-making agreements, similar to the previous reporting period. In general, this group has been fairly stable in recent years.

Most member countries report a framework for the operation of foreign exchange bureaus; the majority impose some type of licensing requirement. Since the previous AREAER, Uzbekistan eased restrictions on exchange bureaus and allowed them to sell foreign exchange in cash to resident individuals. Previously, sales of foreign exchange to resident individuals was cashless and took place through credit to their international bank cards. On the other hand, several countries tightened restrictions on the operation of exchange bureaus. Following the elimination of limits on the margin between exchange bureaus’ buying and selling rates of US dollar and euro banknotes in January 2019, Kazakhstan reintroduced the limits in March 2020 in the context of the COVID-19 crisis. In Morocco, the emigration allowance provided through foreign exchange bureaus was discontinued. Argentina, as part of its introduction of tighter controls on foreign exchange transactions in response to a balance of payments crisis, tightened the scope of activities that can be carried out by exchange bureaus. Previously, exchange bureaus could participate in public offerings of securities subject to relevant legal provisions; now they may only carry out foreign exchange transactions related to tourism and sales of travel tickets.

Most members refrain from restricting exchange rate spreads and commissions in the interbank market. Among countries that maintain such restrictions, Morocco increased the flexibility of the dirham exchange rate further, by relaxing the limits for the exchange rate fluctuation bands around the central rate to ±5 percent from ±2.5 percent and the limit for the exchange of foreign banknotes against the dirham to ±7.5 percent from ±5 percent around the central rate. In contrast, Malawi tightened the maximum spreads between buying and selling exchange rates to 2 percent for telegraphic transfer (TT) and 3 percent for cash, effective September 2019 (previously the maximum spreads were 3 percent for TT and 6 percent for cash). Serbia limited the allowable spread set by the postal operator and authorized dealers: the buying (selling) rate per euro cannot be more than 1.25 percent lower (higher) than the official midrate of the dinar against the euro. In addition, the commission for purchases of foreign cash may not exceed 1 percent (previously 3 percent) of the value of the banknotes involved.

Other Measures

Most of the changes in other measures during the reporting period refer to forward operations, exchange rate structure, other legal tender, and taxes on foreign exchange transactions.

• Forwards—12 easing measures and no tightening measures were reported on forward transactions across countries in this year’s AREAER. During the reporting period, Colombia allowed entities supervised by the Superintendencia Financiera (SF) to enter into credit default swaps issued by authorized foreign agents without the prior approval of the SF. Ukraine allowed banks to perform forward transactions with residents for the purpose of hedging debt operations in addition to export and import payments allowed previously. Malaysia took steps to further deepen its foreign exchange market by liberalizing derivatives transactions for hedging purposes: in August 2019, residents and nonresidents were allowed to hedge against their foreign currency current account obligations, and entities were allowed to hedge on behalf of their clients for any permissible underlying transactions. In April 2020, residents and nonresidents were allowed to cancel or unwind their forward positions except for hedges on portfolio investments; previously, such transactions required the prior approval from Bank Negara Malaysia. Other countries implemented measures that allowed market participants to manage their foreign exchange exposure more flexibly during the COVID-19 crisis. India allowed residents and nonresidents to enter into derivatives contracts to hedge anticipated or contracted exposure; users can now freely cancel and rebook derivatives contracts. Korea raised the limits on foreign exchange derivatives contracts as a share of banks’ capital in response to possible volatility in the foreign exchange market due to the COVID-19 crisis.

• Exchange rate structure—There were several changes in the number of countries maintaining a dual or multiple exchange rate structure. Currently, 23 countries are classified as having more than one exchange rate, of which 12 are dual and 11 are multiple. This is mainly a result of specific exchange rates applied to certain transactions or because of actual or potential deviations of more than 2 percent between official and other exchange rates and hence resulting in multiple currency practices under Article VIII (see next section). During this reporting period, the exchange rate structure of Tajikistan was reclassified from unitary to multiple because of the potential deviation of more than 2 percent between the prevailing market exchange rate and the official exchange rate, which is used for certain transactions and the somoni-Russian ruble exchange rate used for mandatory surrender of rubles. Although Sudan continued to have a multiple exchange rate structure, the Central Bank of Sudan ceased intervening to determine the gold exchange rate; previously, the multiple exchange rate regime included a gold exchange rate used by the central bank for gold transactions. Similarly, The Bahamas continued to have a dual structure but allowed residents to negotiate the exchange rate of investment currency through authorized dealers instead of the central bank, as the Central Bank of The Bahamas stopped buying from or selling investment currency to the general public. Venezuela continued to have a multiple exchange rate structure, but individuals and private companies can buy and sell foreign currency through local commercial banks and exchange houses with no constraints on prices or amounts.

• Other legal tender—16 countries officially allow the use of another legal tender in their territory. Compared with the previous reporting period, Zimbabwe allowed any person to pay for goods and services chargeable in Zimbabwe dollars in foreign currency, using “free funds” (funds lawfully held or earned in foreign currency by any person) at the prevailing rate on the date of payment, beginning in March 2020, despite the declaration in June 2019 that the Zimbabwe dollar is the sole legal tender. The Democratic Republic of the Congo revised its reporting and indicated that the Congo franc is the only official legal tender. However, the central bank publishes exchange rates daily for certain listed and admitted currencies.

• Taxes and subsidies on foreign exchange transactions—Overall, 34 countries report taxing or subsidizing foreign exchange transactions during the reporting period, which is similar to the previous reporting period. The composition of the countries that report having an exchange tax or subsidy remains the same as in the previous reporting period. CEMAC countries eased the limit on transfer fees that may be charged on transfers of funds with the rest of the world. Libya reduced the surtax on sales of foreign currency for commercial or personal purposes beginning in August 2019.

Member Countries’ Obligations and Status under Articles VIII and XIV

This section provides an overview of the status of IMF members’ acceptance of the obligations of Article VIII, Sections 2(a), 3, and 4, of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement and of the use of the transitional arrangements of Article XIV. It also describes recent developments in restrictive exchange measures—namely, exchange restrictions and MCPs subject to IMF jurisdiction under Articles VIII and XIV and measures imposed by members solely for national and/or international security reasons.

In accepting the obligations of Article VIII, Sections 2(a), 3, and 4, members agree not to impose restrictions on payments and transfers for current international transactions or engage in discriminatory currency arrangements or MCPs, except with IMF approval. If Article XIV members introduce exchange restrictions or MCPs after joining the IMF, these restrictive measures are considered to have been imposed under Article VIII.

Status under Articles VIII and XIV

The number of countries that had accepted Article VIII status remained unchanged (Figure 3) at 172 in 2019. The share of Article VIII members increased in the first half of the decade 2000–10 and has remained flat at about 90 percent of total members in recent years. Since 2000, there has been some progress in Article VIII acceptance among countries that have availed themselves of the transitional provisions of Article XIV. Their number had dropped from 34 in 2000 to 17 by the end of 2018 and remained unchanged in 2019. Progress was most notable during 2000–05, when 15 Article XIV countries accepted Article VIII obligations. Since 2000, three countries have joined the IMF, simultaneously accepting Article VIII obligations (Montenegro, 30 Countries that have accepted the obligations under Article VIII are referred to as “Article VIII members” or “Article VIII countries”; in contrast, those that continue to avail themselves of the transitional provisions of Article XIV are referred to as “Article XIV members” or “Article XIV countries” in this report.
Nauru, Timor-Leste), while four other countries (Kosovo, Serbia, South Sudan, Tuvalu) joined the IMF availing themselves of the temporary provisions of Article XIV. Three of the four countries (Kosovo, Serbia, Tuvalu) meanwhile accepted Article VIII obligations.

As of December 31, 2019, many members in Article XIV status continue to maintain restrictions subject to IMF jurisdiction under Article VIII. Among the 17 members in Article XIV status, 3 do not maintain restrictions but have not yet decided to accept the obligations under Article VIII. Four countries maintain both original or adapted Article XIV exchange measures and Article VIII restrictions. The remaining 10 Article XIV countries maintain exchange measures under Article VIII only.

Restrictive Exchange Measures

The first section below describes recent developments in exchange restrictions—measures that limit the availability and use of foreign currency for payments and transfers for current international transactions—and MCPs subject to IMF jurisdiction under Articles VIII and XIV. In particular, changes in 2019 to exchange restrictions and MCPs are indicated as reported in the latest IMF staff reports as of December 31, 2019. The subsequent section describes developments in measures imposed by members solely for national or international security reasons during 2019.

31 As of December 31, 2019, the member countries that make use of the transitional arrangements under Article XIV are Afghanistan, Angola, Bhutan, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Eritrea, Ethiopia, Iraq, Liberia, Maldives, Myanmar, Nigeria, São Tomé and Príncipe, Somalia, South Sudan, Syria, and Turkmenistan.
Exchange restrictions and multiple currency practices

The number of countries maintaining restrictive exchange measures decreased by 2 in 2019, and their composition has also changed (Table 7). Article VIII members maintained a few more restrictive exchange measures in 2019 (67 measures) than Article XIV members (63 measures).

In 2019, four Article VIII members removed all previously identified restrictive measures and now maintain an exchange system free of exchange restrictions and MCPs: Greece (three exchange restrictions), Mauritius (one MCP), Montenegro (one exchange restriction), Sri Lanka (three exchange restrictions). On the other hand, four exchange restrictions and two MCPs were identified in two other Article VIII members that previously maintained an exchange system free of restrictions. As a result, the overall number of Article VIII countries and Article XIV members that maintain restrictive exchange measures decreased by 2, to 48 members in 2019.

The overall number of restrictive exchange measures decreased by 1 in 2019, including 2 measures by Article VIII members, while the number of such measures by Article XIV countries increased by 1. In 2019, 14 restrictive measures (11 exchange restrictions and 3 MCPs) were reported to have been eliminated, while 13 measures (8 exchange restrictions and 5 MCPs) were newly identified. Article VIII members account for 9 of the 13 new measures (6 exchange restrictions and 3 MCPs) and 11 of the 14 removals (8 exchange restrictions and 3 MCPs).

New restrictive measures were identified in 6 countries in 2019; for example, in Ecuador (one exchange restriction), Honduras (one MCP), Pakistan (one exchange restriction and two MCPs). In contrast, 6 countries eliminated some restrictive measures, but not all—Angola (one exchange restriction), the Democratic Republic of the Congo (one MCP), Honduras (one MCP), Iraq (one exchange restriction), Myanmar (one exchange restriction), and Tunisia (one exchange restriction)—while 4 other countries removed all their restrictive measures (see above).

Although the overall number of restrictive measures maintained by Article XIV countries was lower than in Article VIII members in 2019, given the relatively small number of Article XIV members, they continued to maintain significantly more restrictions and MCPs per country than Article VIII countries. The average number of measures per country increased to 4.50 from 4.43 for Article XIV countries and to 1.97 from 1.92 for Article VIII countries. The overall average number of such measures grew to 2.71 from 2.62 per country in 2019.

The types of newly identified exchange restrictions vary in nature. For example, in Ecuador, one new exchange restriction was identified arising from the SUCRE (Sistema Unitario de Compensación Regional de Pagos) regional payment arrangement, under which the period for settlement for current payments exceeds three months. Pakistan introduced an exchange restriction on advance payment for imports against letters of credit to support the balance of payments at a time of heightened volatility. Amid foreign exchange market imbalances in South Sudan, the central bank prioritizes foreign exchange allocation for external government payments and for certain essential commodities.

32 Countries maintaining exchange restrictions or multiple currency practices whose IMF staff reports are unpublished are not mentioned in this section unless the authorities have consented to publication. However, their restrictive measures are included in the numbers.
33 The AREAER does not indicate whether the Executive Board of the IMF has approved such measures.
34 Both the introduction and removal of these measures in Sri Lanka were reflected in IMF staff reports as of December 31, 2019.
35 This section does not reflect changes in members’ restrictive measures eliminated in 2019 but whose removal is reflected in the IMF staff reports issued after December 31, 2019.
36 Unitary System of Regional Compensation of Payments.
37 This exchange restriction was imposed in 2018; its introduction was reflected in the IMF staff report as of December 31, 2019.
The elimination of exchange restrictions also affected different types of transactions. Angola eliminated restrictions arising from the operation of a priority list. Greece removed three exchange restrictions arising from (1) limits and discretionary approval of foreign exchange purchases for some current international transactions; (2) discretionary approval of transfers for the repayment of external loans and of income from investments; and (3) limits on withdrawal of cash from bank accounts in Greece. In Iraq, an exchange restriction arising from an Iraqi balance owed to Jordan under an inoperative bilateral payment agreement has been eliminated. In Montenegro, with the redemption of government bonds in compensation for pre-1992 blocked foreign currency savings accounts, an exchange restriction with respect to these accounts ceased to exist. Myanmar removed the tax certification requirement for transfers of net investment income abroad. Sri Lanka eliminated three exchange restrictions introduced in 2018 arising from measures aimed at restricting payments for certain imports by imposing cash margins on letters of credit and imports under documents-against-acceptance terms, and by restricting foreign exchange conversion for advance payments. Tunisia stopped banning trade credits for imports that were deemed nonessential.

Most newly identified MCPs in 2019 were the result of application of different exchange rates for certain transactions. For example, in Honduras, an MCP was identified because in some exchange transactions, the previous days’ official exchange rates (TCR) can be used, which could potentially deviate by more than 2 percent from the TCR and the interbank market rate of the current day. Two MCPs were identified in South Sudan arising from a spread exceeding 2 percent between the official (indicative) rate and commercial banks’ (market) rate and the parallel market rate, respectively.

Three different MCPs were reported to have been eliminated in 2019. In the Democratic Republic of the Congo, an MCP related to a fixed exchange rate in a bilateral payments agreement with Zimbabwe was removed. Honduras eliminated a potential MCP arising from a deviation of more than 2 percent between successful bids within the foreign exchange auction. Mauritius eliminated an MCP by discontinuing the Exchange Rate Support Scheme, which was implemented in 2017 to provide a temporary subsidy to exporters in light of the depreciation of the US dollar.

Table 8 provides the description of restrictive exchange measures as indicated in the latest IMF staff reports as of December 31, 2019. Excluded from Table 8 are member countries that have not consented to the publication of such measures described in unpublished IMF staff reports.

Exchange measures maintained for security reasons

Several member countries maintain measures solely for national and/or international security reasons, which could give rise to exchange restrictions under IMF jurisdiction if applied to payments and transfers for current international transactions. These restrictions, like others, require prior IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a). However, because the IMF does not provide a suitable forum to discuss the political and military considerations that lead to measures of this kind, it established a special procedure for such measures to be notified to and approved by the IMF. In total, 119 member countries reported in 2019 to the IMF that they maintained measures solely for security reasons, including 17 members that reported introducing or changing such measures in 2019. The majority of the restrictions are financial sanctions to combat the financing of terrorism or financial sanctions against certain governments, entities, and individuals in accordance with United Nations Security Council resolutions, EU regulations, or decisions adopted by members on their own initiative.

38 Both introduction and removal of these measures were reflected in the IMF staff report as of December 31, 2019.
39 This MCP was removed in March 2018; its removal was reflected in the IMF staff report as of December 31, 2019.

The measures maintained pursuant to Article XIV are: (1) limits on the availability of foreign exchange for invisible transactions, i.e. travel expenses; and (2) limits on unrequited transfers to foreign-based individuals and institutions. In addition, Angola maintains two exchange restrictions subject to IMF jurisdiction under Article VIII, Section 2(a) resulting from (1) the discriminatory application of the 0.1% stamp tax on foreign exchange operations by natural persons; and (2) a special tax of 10% on transfers to nonresidents under contracts for foreign technical assistance or management services. Angola also maintains three multiple currency practices that are subject to approval under Article VIII, Section 3 arising from the lack of a mechanism to prevent potential spreads in excess of 2% emerging (1) between successful bids within the BNA’s foreign exchange auction; and (2) for transactions that take place at the reference rate in place and the rate at which transactions take place in the foreign exchange auction on that day; and (3) the discriminatory application of the 0.1% stamp tax on foreign exchange operations by natural persons. (Country Report No. 19/371) The IMF staff report for the Second Review of the Extended Arrangement Under the Extended Fund Facility, Requests for a Waiver of Nonobservance of Performance Criteria, Modifications of Performance Criteria, and Financing Assurances Review with Angola states that effective November 25, 2019, the exchange restriction arising from the operation of a priority list was eliminated. <tr>
<td>The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Ghana states that, as of November 21, 2019, Ghana maintained one exchange restriction and an MCP subject to IMF approval. The exchange restriction arises from the limitation/prohibition in purchasing and transferring foreign exchange for import transactions by importers who have not submitted to the commercial bank customs entry forms for any past foreign exchange transactions related to imports, and which are unrelated to the underlying transaction. An MCP also arises because the Bank of Ghana (BOG) requires the use of its internal rate (that is, the previous day's weighted average interbank exchange rate) for government transactions and the surrender of foreign exchange proceeds from cocoa exports funded through the cocoa syndicated loan without having a mechanism in place to ensure that, at the time of the transaction, this exchange rate does not differ from the rate prevailing in the market rate (that is, the interbank exchange rate) and the rates used by banks in their transactions with their customers by more than 2%. <td>Honduras</td>
<td>The IMF Staff Report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation and Request for a Stand-By Arrangement and an Arrangement under the Standby Credit Facility, states that, as of June 21, 2019, maintained two multiple currency practices subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3: (1) One MCP arises because there is no mechanism to prevent a potential deviation of more than 2% between the Reference Exchange Rate (TCR) of the day at which certain transactions take place and the exchange rates at which foreign exchange is sold at the foreign exchange auction or the foreign exchange interbank market at that day. A second MCP arises from the possible use of previous days' official exchange rates (TCR) in certain exchange rate transactions (e.g. in foreign exchange sales by authorized dealers to the Central Bank of Honduras (BCH) of amounts bought from customers or amounts that exceed the limits set by the BCH for such dealers) which rates may potentially deviate by more than 2% from the TCR and the interbank market rate on the day when foreign exchange rate transactions take place. <tr>
<td>The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Islamic Republic of Iran states that, as of March 7, 2018, Iran maintained MCPs and an exchange restriction subject to IMF jurisdiction under Article VIII, Sections 2(a) and 3: (1) An MCP and an exchange restriction arise from the establishment of an official exchange rate for use in some exchange transactions, which in practice differs by more than 2% from the rate used by foreign exchange bureaus. (2) An MCP arises from the differences of more than 2% between the current official and exchange bureaus rates and the preferential rates for certain imports for which foreign exchange commitments were made through LCs opened prior to March 21, 2002, under the previous multiple exchange rate system. (3) An MCP arises from the differences of more than 2% between the current official and exchange bureaus rates and the preferential rates for certain imports for which foreign exchange payment commitments were made through LCs or bank drafts prior to July 24, 2012. <tr>
<td>Iraq</td>
<td>The IMF staff report for 2019 Article IV Consultation with Iraq states that, as of July 3, 2019, Iraq continues to avail itself of the transitional arrangements under Article XIV, Section 2, but no longer maintains any exchange restrictions or MCPs subject to Article XIV, Section 2, and currently maintains one MCP subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3. The MCP arises from the lack of a mechanism to ensure that the exchange rate at the Central Bank of Iraq (CBI) foreign exchange window and the market rates (retail exchange rates of commercial banks and exchange bureaus for the sale of foreign currency from sources other than the CBI foreign exchange window) do not deviate from each other by more than 2%. A previously identified exchange restriction arising from an Iraqi balance owed to Jordan under an inoperative bilateral payment agreement has been eliminated. (Country Report No. 19/248)</td>

<td>The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Maldives, states that, as of April 30, 2019, Maldives continues to avail itself of the transitional provisions of Article XIV but no longer maintains any measures under this provision, and has not yet accepted the obligations of Article VIII, Sections 2, 3, and 4. It maintains an exchange restriction subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement arising from a shortage of foreign exchange at the official rate which leads to the Maldives Monetary Authority (MMA) rationing its supply of foreign exchange to commercial banks. This results in a channeling of foreign exchange transactions for current international transactions to the parallel market where transactions take place at an exchange rate that deviates by more than 2% from the prevailing market exchange rate. The greater than 2% spread gives rise to multiple currency practice subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3 and also to an exchange restriction, given the additional cost involved for obtaining foreign exchange. The extent of rationing has been eased over the past two years by increasing the amounts provided to commercial banks and adjusting amounts in line with seasonal patterns. The official exchange rate used by the MMA for government transactions is calculated based on the midpoint of the weighted average of the buying and selling rates of foreign exchange transactions conducted by commercial banks one day earlier. The lack of a mechanism to prevent the spread between this official exchange rate used by the MMA for government transactions and the prevailing market exchange rate from deviating by more than 2% gives rise to a multiple currency practice subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3. <td>Mongolia</td>
<td>The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation, with Mongolia states that, as of August 2, 2019, Mongolia maintained two MCPs subject to IMF jurisdiction. First, the modalities of the multi-price auction system give rise to an MCP because there is no mechanism in place that ensures that exchange rates of accepted bids at the multi-price auction do not deviate by more than 2%. In addition, Mongolia has an official exchange rate (reference rate) that is mandatorily used for government transactions (as opposed to the commercial market rate). Therefore, by way of official action, the authorities have created market segmentation. While Order #699 of the Bank of Mongolia (BOM) issued on December 3, 2010, sets forth that the reference rate is determined based on the weighted average of market rates used from 4 p.m. of the previous day to 4 p.m. of the current day, staff are of the view that this Order does not eliminate the market segmentation and the multiplicity of effective rates arising from it. Accordingly, in the absence of a mechanism to ensure that the commercial rates and the reference rate do not deviate by more than 2%, the way the reference rate is used in government transactions gives rise to an MCP subject to IMF approval. <td>Myanmar</td>
<td>The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Myanmar states that, as of February 25, 2019, Myanmar continues to avail itself of transitional arrangements under Article XIV, although it has eliminated all Article XIV restrictions. Myanmar has made significant progress toward satisfying Article VIII obligations. However, Myanmar maintains an MCP subject to the IMF’s jurisdiction under Article VIII, Section 3. The authorities have removed the exchange restriction arising from the tax certification requirement for transfers of net investment income abroad by revising the relevant provision in the new investment law and rules and by confirming that the practice conforms to the new provision. <td>The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Nepal states that as of January 24, 2019, the Industrial Enterprises Act places a 75% limit on the conversion and transfer to foreign currency of salaries of nonresidents from countries where convertible currency is in circulation. Since the limit applies to amounts that may be less than net salaries, it gives rise to an exchange restriction under Article VIII. (Country Report No. 19/60)</td>

The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with South Sudan states that, as of March 13, 2019, South Sudan maintained the following exchange restrictions subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement: (1) an exchange restriction arising from the prohibition to access foreign exchange at the Nigerian foreign exchange markets for the payment of imports of 42 categories of items; (2) an exchange restriction arising from the rationing of foreign exchange in the Central Bank of Nigeria’s (CBN’s) IFEM and Secondary Market Intervention Sale (SMIS) windows, and its allocation based on the CBN’s determination of priority categories of transactions; and (3) an exchange restriction arising from existing limits on the amounts of foreign exchange available when traveling abroad (business travel allowance (BTA)/personal travel allowances (PTAs)), which cannot be exceeded even on verification of the bona fide nature of the transaction. In addition, Nigeria maintains the following MCPs subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3 of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement: (1) an MCP arising from the intervention practice of the CBN that results in the establishment of an official exchange rate for use in all official transactions, which in practice differs by more than 2% from the rate used by commercial banks in the CBN foreign exchange windows (SMIS, SME, IFEX, and Invisibles), and by money transfer operators; (2) an MCP arising from the large spread between the official exchange rate and the rates in the parallel market, caused by the CBN’s limitation on the availability of foreign exchange which channels current international transactions to such market; and (3) an MCP arising from the potential spread of more than 2% in the exchange rates at which the CBN sells foreign exchange to successful auction bidders in the SMIS window. The IMF staff report for the Request for an Extended Arrangement under the Extended Fund Facility with Pakistan states that, as of June 28, 2019, import restrictions and an MCP, which are subject to approval under Article VIII of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement, were introduced to support the balance of payments at a time of heightened volatility. Specifically, Pakistan maintains (1) a requirement to fully pre-fund LCs, imposed in early 2017; and (2) an exchange restriction on advance payment for imports against LCs, imposed in July 2018. (Country Report No. 19/212)

The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Papua New Guinea states that, as of November 9, 2018, Papua New Guinea maintained the following exchange restrictions subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement arising from the following: (1) the requirement to obtain a tax clearance certificate evidencing the payment of all taxes prior to making payments or transfers for certain current international transactions and (2) the rationing of foreign exchange and its allocation by the Bank of Papua New Guinea (BPNG) to certain priority items, which results in undue delays and arrears in current international payments. Papua New Guinea also maintains the following MCPs subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 3: (1) an MCP arising from the spread of more than 2% between the rates set by the BPNG for its foreign exchange allocations to authorized foreign exchange dealers (AFEDs) and the rates used by AFEDs in transactions with their clients and (2) an MCP arising from the potential spread of more than 2% between the rates set by the BPNG for its foreign exchange transactions with the government and embassies and the rates used by AFEDs in transactions with their clients. (Country Report No. 18/552)

The IMF staff report for the Request for a 40-month Arrangement Under the Extended Credit Facility with São Tomé and Príncipe states that, as of September 9, 2019, São Tomé and Príncipe continues to avail itself of the transitional arrangements under Article XIV, but it does not maintain restrictions under Article XIV. However, it maintains restrictions subject to IMF approval under Article VIII. One exchange restriction regarding limitations on the transferability of net income from investment arises from Article 5(g) and Article 18 of the Investment Code (Law No. 19/2016). This restriction results from the requirement that taxes and other obligations to the government have to be paid/fullfilled as a condition for transfer, to the extent the requirement includes the payment of taxes and the fulfillment of obligations unrelated to the net income to be transferred. The second exchange restriction arises from limitations on the availability of foreign exchange through rationing of foreign exchange by the Bank of São Tomé and Príncipe (BCSTP). This exchange restriction also gives rise to a multiple currency practice as the rationing has channeled bona fide current transactions to the parallel market where the exchange rate is at a spread of more than 2% from the exchange rate in the formal market. (Country Report No. 19/315)

The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation and Second Review under the Policy Coordination Instrument with Serbia states that as of June 28, 2019, Serbia maintained a system free of restrictions on payments and transfers for current international transactions, except with respect to blocked pre-1991 foreign currency savings deposits (IMF Country Report No. 02/105). (Country Report No. 19/238)

The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Serbia states that, as of June 28, 2019, Serbia maintained a system free of restrictions on payments and transfers for current international transactions, except with respect to blocked pre-1991 foreign currency savings deposits (IMF Country Report No. 02/105). Syria also maintained exchange measures that are subject to IMF approval under Article VIII: (1) prohibition against purchases by private parties of foreign exchange from the banking system for some current international transactions; (2) an MCP resulting from divergences of more than 2% between the official exchange rate and officially recognized market exchange rates; (3) a non-interest-bearing advance import deposit requirement of 75%–100% for public sector imports; and (4) an exchange restriction arising from the net debt under inoperative bilateral payments arrangements with the Islamic Republic of Iran and Sri Lanka. <td>Trinidad and Tobago</td>
<td>The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Trinidad and Tobago states that, as of August 6, 2018, Trinidad and Tobago maintained an exchange restriction and two MCPs subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a) and Section 3. The exchange restriction arises from the authorities’ restriction of the exchange rate (that is, by restricting the maximum market buying and selling rates, and prohibiting foreign exchange transactions beyond the maximum rates), while not providing enough foreign exchange (that is, through the Central Bank of Trinidad and Tobago (CBTT)’s foreign exchange interventions) to meet all demand for current transactions at that rate. The CBTT also limits sales of its foreign exchange intervention funds to meeting only “trade-related” demand, which do not include non-trade transactions that are, however, current international transactions as defined under Article XXX(d) of the IMF’s Articles of Agreement, and encourages ADs to similarly prioritize sales of foreign exchange obtained from other sources. Further, the authorities prioritize provision of foreign exchange to certain manufacturers through a special foreign exchange facility using the Export–Import Bank of Trinidad and Tobago (EximBank). These actions result in undue delays in access to foreign exchange to make payments or transfers for current international transactions and external payment arrears. The two MCPs arise from the absence of a mechanism to prevent the potential deviation of more than 2% at any given time among several effective exchange rates regulated by the authorities, for spot exchange transactions, namely: (1) the potential 2% deviation between: (a) on the one hand, the CBTT’s intervention rate and the ADs’ selling rates (the maximum of which is anchored on the intervention rate plus fixed margins), and (b) on the other hand, the ADs’ buying rates (the maximum of which is limited at the previous day’s mid-rate); (2) the potential 2% deviation between: (a) on the one hand, the buying and selling rates for foreign exchange transactions between the CBTT and the government, and (b) on the other hand, the ADs’ selling rates. (Country Report No. 18/120) The IMF staff report for the Fifth Review Under the Extended Fund Facility, and Requests for Waivers of Nonobservance and Modification of Performance Criteria and for Rephasing of Access with Tunisia states that effective December 31, 2018, the exchange restrictions introduced in 2017 (banning trade credits for imports that are deemed nonessential) was repealed. <td>Ukraine</td>
<td>The IMF staff report for the Request for Stand-By Arrangement and Cancellation of Arrangement under the Extended Fund Facility with Ukraine states that as of December 7, 2018, Ukraine maintained exchange restrictions and MCPs, but a road map is in place to gradually phase them out. The exchange restrictions arise from: (1) absolute limits on the availability of foreign exchange for certain non-trade current international transactions; and (2) a partial ban on the transfer abroad of dividends received by nonresident investors from foreign investments in Ukraine. The MCPs arise from: (1) the use of multiple price foreign exchange auctions conducted by the National Bank of Ukraine (NBU) without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the auction and market exchange rates; (2) the use of the official exchange rate for exchange transactions with the government without a mechanism to prevent a spread deviation of more than 2% between the official exchange rate and market exchange rates; and (3) the requirement to transfer any gains from the purchase of foreign exchange to the state budget if it is unused and resold. Zambia | The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Zambia states that as of August 2, 2019, Zambia maintained an exchange restriction, which is subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, arising from limitations imposed by the government on access to foreign exchange for the making of payments and transfers for current international transactions, which is evidenced by the existence of external payments arrears accumulated prior to October 4, 1985. (Country Report No. 19/263)

Zimbabwe | The IMF staff report for the 2017 Article IV Consultation with Zimbabwe states that, as of June 19, 2017, the Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe (RBZ) maintained a foreign exchange priority list to direct the allocation of foreign exchange by commercial banks to certain domestic import substitution industries, exporters, and strategic imports. This measure gives rise to an exchange restriction subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a). Staff is also monitoring the authorities’ imposition of other measures to assess whether they give rise to any exchange restriction or MCP subject to Article VIII, Section 2(a) and Section 3. Zimbabwe has also a long-standing exchange restriction subject to IMF jurisdiction arising from unsettled balances under an inoperative bilateral payments agreement with Malaysia. ### Regulatory Framework for Foreign Exchange Transactions

This section surveys the measures reported by members with respect to the regulatory framework for foreign exchange transactions from January 2019 through August 2020. The measures are divided into five major categories: trade-related measures, current invisible transactions and transfers, account transactions, capital controls, and provisions specific to commercial banks and institutional investors.

Trade-Related Measures

Members reported 302 changes related to trade from January 2019 through August 2020, significantly more than in the previous reporting period, with strikingly different trends for 2019 than 2020. In 2019, members reported significantly more tightening than easing measures (Figure 4, panel 1). The total number of changes in exchange and trade controls related to imports and exports amounted to 171, of which 75 were easing, 86 tightening—reaching a record high—and 10 neutral. However, the trend reversed in 2020 as trade liberalization measures outnumbered restrictive ones. The number of countries that implemented restrictive measures continued to rise in 2019 compared with 2018, while 2020 was dominated by liberalizing countries (Figure 4, panel 2). On average, trade-related measures were implemented mostly by emerging market and developing economies, followed by low-income developing countries and advanced economies (Figure 4, panel 3).

Imports and import payments

Thirty-five economies\(^1\) reported 122 measures related to imports and import payments (Figure 5, panel 1) in 2019, of which the number of easing measures (56) was marginally lower than that of tightening measures (60), along with 6 neutral measures.

The number of tightening and easing measures introduced was larger than in previous periods (2016–18), with a significant increase in easing measures in both 2019 and the first half of 2020. The number of countries reporting tightening or easing measures was also larger than in previous periods (2016–18). There was a dramatic increase in the number of countries reporting measures in the first half of 2020 (Figure 5, panel 2), due in part to the dire economic and health impact of the COVID-19 pandemic.

\(^1\) Note that the number of countries in Figure 5 may not add up in the text because certain countries introduced tightening measures at the same time as neutral or easing measures.

1. In 2019, members reported more tightening measures than easing ones; however, the trend reversed in 2020.

2. The number of countries that implemented restrictive measures continued to rise in 2019 compared with 2018, while 2020 was dominated by countries’ liberalizing measures.

3. On average, trade-related measures were implemented mostly by EMDEs, followed by LIDCs and AEs.

In 2019, Kuwait implemented the largest number of liberalization measures (22), followed by Sri Lanka (7), Ukraine (5), and Greece (4). Kuwait lifted temporary bans on some import products (such as, meat, live birds, shrimp, baby food, and several other food products from certain countries), and Sri Lanka reduced import taxes and tariffs and relaxed advance import deposits and advance payment requirements for imports of some products. Ukraine extended the timeline for completion of import transactions with advance payments. Greece eased restrictions on the release of foreign exchange for imports when it removed all remaining restrictions it had imposed in 2015 to fend off a crisis.

Twenty-four countries implemented 60 tightening measures in 2019, a slight increase compared with 2018 (53 measures). Sixteen of these were adopted in Kuwait, imposing a temporary ban on some import products (such as meat, live birds, live ruminants and camels, and other food products from certain countries). Mexico imposed a temporary import tariff on the steel, textile-clothing, and footwear sectors; added hazardous chemicals and pesticides to the negative list; and adjusted permission requirements for imports and exports of hydrocarbons and petroleum products. In Malaysia, antidumping duty was imposed on certain metal imports and other items originating in or exported from Thailand.

The first half of 2020 saw record high easing measures, especially in emerging market and developing economies and low-income developing countries, in part because of the COVID-19 pandemic. Of the 62 easing measures, 20 were in response to the pandemic, including the elimination of import taxes and tariffs and the relaxation of restrictions on import payments. Conditions for imports of medical supplies were relaxed by several countries: tariffs, tax, and customs duties were temporarily removed or eased (Australia, Bolivia, Canada, El Salvador, New Zealand, Pakistan, Switzerland, Zambia, Romania); authorized dealers were allowed to make advance payments (Pakistan), and letters of credit up to a certain threshold were permitted without prior approval (Libya). Tariffs were temporarily lowered by half on imports of flour and cooking oil as the authorities tried to cope with the shortage related to the COVID-19 pandemic in Somalia. Temporary relaxation of advance payment requirements for imports was introduced in South Africa.

Sixteen countries implemented 32 tightening measures in 2020. Thirteen of these measures affect import licenses and other nontariff measures in Bulgaria, the Kyrgyz Republic, Mexico, Nepal, Nigeria, Sri Lanka, and Tonga. Eight other measures tighten import taxes and tariffs on certain goods in India, Indonesia, Myanmar, Oman, and Tonga, as a safeguard measure in Costa Rica and as antidumping duties in Malaysia. The rest of the measures implement stricter documentation requirements for obtaining foreign exchange for import payments (Argentina, Kazakhstan, Libya, and Sri Lanka—the latter two in response to the pandemic).

Exports and export proceeds

There were 81 changes related to exports and export proceeds from January 2019 through August 2020: easing measures (39) were moderately higher than tightening measures (34); the remainder were neutral. The trends in 2019 and 2020 were strikingly different: among the 49 measures (Figure 6, panel 1) introduced in 2019, tightening dominated (26 tightening and 19 easing measures), while easing greatly outnumbered tightening measures in 2020 (20 and 8, respectively).

1. Tightening measures dominated in 2019, while easing measures largely outnumbered tightening ones in 2020.

2. The number of countries reporting tightening measures increased significantly in 2019 and declined in the first half of 2020.

Regulations on exports and export proceeds were eased in 11 countries and tightened in 16 countries in 2019 (Figure 6, panel 2). Seven countries relaxed repatriation and surrender requirements. For instance, to relieve the currency pressure from the sustained current account surplus, Thailand increased the threshold for the repatriation of export proceeds. Russia and Kazakhstan eased repatriation requirements under certain conditions, Sri Lanka and Ukraine extended the timeline for repatriation, and Honduras gradually reduced the share of export proceeds that must be surrendered. Barbados and Ukraine, following a gradual relaxation, terminated surrender requirements. On the tightening side, countries of the Central African Economic and Monetary Community (CEMAC) shortened the timeline for repatriation of export proceeds originating in non-CEMAC countries and for surrendering export proceeds in general. The tighter policy is part of new foreign exchange regulations, which were introduced to reduce external imbalances and to shore up foreign exchange reserves. Morocco reduced the timeline for repatriation of export proceeds from goods sold on consignment. Other countries also strengthened regulations on repatriation and surrender requirements for export proceeds, such as Argentina, Sudan, Turkey (repatriation requirements only), and Zimbabwe. Some countries introduced export levies (Argentina, Kyrgyz Republic, Zambia), tightened licensing requirements (Mexico, Montenegro), or prohibited exports (Kuwait) for certain goods.
In 2020, the number of easing measures continued to rise, while the number of tightening measures dropped dramatically. The easing measures mostly reduced or eliminated levies and taxes on exports or relaxed export licenses (Bolivia, China, Sri Lanka, Zambia). India extended the period of realization and repatriation of export proceeds of goods, software, and services in view of the pandemic. On the other hand, of the 8 tightening measures (by seven countries), 3 measures (by three countries) were temporarily introduced in the context of COVID-19. Australia temporarily introduced controls on noncommercial exports of certain goods that contribute to the control and prevention of the spread of COVID-19, including personal protective equipment, disinfectant wipes, and hand sanitizers. Similarly, the exportation of certain COVID-19–related essential goods, such as medicines, masks, and alcohol-based hand sanitizers was temporarily controlled in South Africa during the national state of disaster. Mozambique introduced surrender requirements on exports of goods to address the exceptional balance of payments needs arising from the pandemic. Non-pandemic-related measures were introduced by four other countries. The repatriation requirements on export receipts were tightened in Iran and Sudan. Mexico tightened export licensing of chemical products, and Maldives introduced a reexportation royalty on commercial reexports.

Current Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

This section discusses exchange controls on invisible transactions and transfers that are included in the current account of the balance of payments. This category includes income from investment (for example, profits, dividends, and interest); payments for travel, education, medical expenses, and subscription and membership fees; unrequited transfers (for example, remittance of nonresidents’ salaries and wages); and payments related to services. The section also covers the repatriation and surrender requirements for proceeds from current invisible transactions and current transfers.

From January 2019 through August 2020, members reported slightly more easing measures related to current invisible transactions and current transfers than restrictive ones. The total number of changes in this category amounted to 151, of which 79 were easing, 68 tightening, and 4 neutral measures. Unlike during 2016–18, when changes were predominantly easing regulations in this category (Figure 7), the number of easing measures (54) turned out to be only slightly higher than that of tightening measures (48), along with 3 neutral measures in 2019. The composition of the measures in 2020 continued to show a slightly easing trend. These changes were introduced by 26 countries in 2019 and 21 countries in 2020.

The number of tightening measures in both 2019 and 2020 far exceeded those in 2016–18.

Liberalization in this category seems to have slowed down in the reporting period. The number of tightening measures increased markedly in 2019, driven mainly by Argentina and the CEMAC countries. During 2019, of the 78 measures related to payments for current invisibles and current transfers reported by 24 countries, 41 were easing, 34 tightening, and 3 neutral, whereas in 2018 changes were overwhelmingly easing (74 out of 81).
Among the 34 tightening measures in 2019, 14 were introduced by Argentina and 12 by CEMAC member countries. Argentina imposed currency controls in September 2019 and further strengthened them in 2020 to prevent capital flight in the context of considerable balance of payments difficulties. The controls covered most payments in this category and included documentation requirements and prior approval requirements and quantitative limits. The CEMAC member countries set a single indicative limit for foreign exchange allocations to residents traveling outside the CEMAC region. The rest of the tightening measures related to introducing quantitative limits (Bhutan, Honduras, Samoa), discontinuing the immigration and emigration allowances (Morocco), and implementing certain controls on current transfers (Kazakhstan, Lebanon, Pakistan).

Of the 41 easing measures taken during 2019, 13 were implemented by Greece as it eliminated previously imposed restrictions. In particular, it eliminated quantitative limits on virtually all types of transfers in this category (trade, travel, personal and credit card use abroad) and removed prior approval requirements. Ukraine (9 measures) gradually increased and then eliminated limits on transfers of dividends abroad and the monthly limit on repatriation of funds received from liquidation of equity. In addition, the requirement to resell previously bought unused foreign exchange was eliminated for individuals. Other measures included easing constraints on trade-related payments (Bangladesh, Morocco); payments for travel (Bangladesh, Barbados, Morocco); personal payments (Morocco, Samoa, South Africa, Thailand, Uzbekistan); foreign workers’ wages (Bangladesh); credit card use abroad (Bangladesh, Morocco, Tunisia); regulations for insurance payments abroad (Fiji); and transfers (Tajikistan).

The easing trend continued in Bangladesh and Morocco in 2020, and Argentina also started to ease some exchange controls. Morocco increased limits for payments for travel and for the electronic trade allowance for individuals, and Bangladesh further liberalized trade-related payments in order to facilitate trade transactions in the context of COVID-19, in addition to other liberalization measures.

In contrast, a few countries tightened regulation in this category in 2020 in response to the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic. For instance, to preserve foreign exchange reserves amid a sharp fall in foreign currency (mainly tourism) receipts, Aruba and Curacao and Sint Maarten stopped granting new foreign exchange licenses for dividend payments and profit transfers to nonresidents. The Bahamas suspended all exchange control approval for outgoing dividend payment by domestic banks as part of the measures to strengthen the resilience of the financial sector during the pandemic.

Proceeds from current invisibles and current transfers

In 2019, the number of countries reporting changes in regulations reached a record high (15), with 14 tightening measures and 13 easing measures. Many of the measures mirrored the changes to proceeds from exports and tightened regulations on the repatriation and surrender of proceeds from current invisible transactions. Surrender requirements were introduced in Argentina and Zimbabwe—in the latter on the tourism, transportation, and telecommunications sectors—while the timeline for surrendering proceeds was shortened in the CEMAC. Seven countries continued to liberalize in 2019; namely, Bangladesh, Barbados, Honduras, Morocco, Russia, Thailand, and Ukraine. The surrender requirements for foreign currency proceeds from invisible transactions were eliminated (Barbados, Ukraine) and gradually eased (Honduras). Others continued relaxation of regulations on repatriation requirements, including gradually increasing the amount limits (Thailand), lifting regulations for certain activities (Bangladesh, Russia), allowing for extensions (Ukraine), and extending the timeline for repatriation (Morocco).

The trend in 2020 thus far shifted more toward liberalization compared with 2019. Five countries eased regulations in this category, and one country tightened them. Repatriation requirements were eased by extending the timeline (Uzbekistan), increasing the threshold (Thailand), and removing the requirement under certain conditions (Russia). Surrender requirements were eased by lowering the threshold further (Honduras) and temporarily extending the period in response to the pandemic (South Africa). In contrast, a surrender requirement was introduced in Mozambique, equivalent to 30 percent of the revenue from the exportation of services and investment income, to safeguard its balance of payments position against the backdrop of the pandemic.

Account Transactions

From January 2019 through August 2020, the overwhelming majority of changes in resident and nonresident account regulations were easing regulations (99), followed by 34 tightening and 24 neutral measures. Changes in regulations in this category were far more numerous in 2019 than in 2018. Among the 106 changes reported in 2019 by 33 countries, 73 were liberalization efforts; the remaining measures were either tightening (14) or neutral (19). The number of tightening measures increased significantly in 2020, especially with respect to resident accounts in emerging market and developing economies.

Resident accounts

Twenty-eight members reported 69 measures in 2019, of which liberalization actions (49) largely outnumbered tightening (9) and neutral (11) actions, in line with past trends (Figure 8, panel 1). The number of each type of action is higher than during each of the previous three years. The majority of the actions were taken by 18 emerging market and developing economies, followed by 7 low-income developing countries; 3 advanced economies also reported a few changes.

The majority of the changes both in 2019 and 2020 included liberalization of foreign exchange accounts for residents, about half of them related to accounts held domestically and the other half to accounts held abroad. Among advanced economies, in 2019, Greece took the most measures, 7, and completed its gradual liberalization by removing all restrictions on transfers and cash withdrawals abroad and foreign investment of insurance companies. Austria removed the previous limit on private pension funds’ foreign investment and introduced requirements for internal investment guidelines instead. Iceland lifted restrictions on cross-border movement of Icelandic króna when related to specified measures involving payment by withdrawal from an account abroad.

In 2019, among emerging market and developing economies, several countries took easing measures, led by Morocco (6); Ukraine (4); Belarus (3); 2 each by Barbados, North Macedonia, Russia, and Thailand; and 1 each by Azerbaijan, Equatorial Guinea, Gabon, India, Iraq, the Philippines, and Tunisia. For instance, Morocco removed the approval requirement for domestic foreign exchange accounts of Moroccan legal entities for certain purposes and for accounts abroad of companies with specific contracts abroad, among others. Ukraine lifted the approval requirement for the transfer of balances abroad within established limits, extended the deadline for settlement of transactions involving exports of goods, and eliminated the requirement that individuals sell unused foreign exchange.

Several low-income developing countries took easing measures in 2019, with Uzbekistan taking 6 and Bangladesh, Cameroon, the Central African Republic, Chad, Republic of Congo, and Tajikistan taking one measure each. Uzbekistan implemented sweeping measures to liberalize operations in foreign exchange accounts for residents both domestically and abroad. The CEMAC countries permitted accounts in domestic currency held abroad, and Bangladesh and Tajikistan eased regulations on certain activities related to foreign exchange accounts.
Eight countries tightened regulations on accounts in 2019. Among them the CEMAC countries prohibited resident legal entities, except credit institutions, from opening foreign currency accounts outside the CEMAC. Kazakhstan tightened the notification requirement for foreign currency bank accounts held abroad, and Argentina introduced limits on domestic currency deposits that can be converted to foreign currency.

Among the 14 tightening changes in 2020, 6 were introduced by Aruba and Curaçao and Sint Maarten, which tightened regulations on foreign exchange accounts permitted for residents in response to the pandemic. Egypt introduced temporary daily limits amid the pandemic on cash deposits and withdrawals from banks, with the daily limits on cash withdrawals increased a month later.

In contrast, other countries relaxed regulations on resident accounts in response to the pandemic. For instance, South Africa allowed government-related agencies to have foreign currency accounts to receive donations, from abroad and locally, and to retain foreign donations in these accounts for overseas payments for personal protective equipment. It temporarily extended the period for matured forward exchange contracts credited in customer foreign currency accounts as a temporary measure to help alleviate the impact of the COVID-19 crisis. To overcome the effects of the COVID-19 outbreak and to help build foreign currency reserves, Sri Lanka introduced a special (fixed) deposit account in foreign currency or local currency for Sri Lankan resident and nonresident individuals. Concurrently, the authorities temporarily tightened regulations on the use of residents’ foreign currency accounts to limit outflows.

Nonresident accounts

Eighteen members reported 37 changes in 2019, 7 more than in 2018. The changes are predominantly in the easing direction (24), which is more than in 2018 (Figure 8, panel 2). Greece alone contributed 5 liberalization measures, followed by Iceland (4), Ukraine (4), and Uzbekistan (3). Following gradual relaxation, Greece liberalized the domestic currency account for nonresidents by lifting all restrictions on transfers and cash withdrawals abroad. Iceland lifted the restriction on cross-border movement of króna for certain activities, expanded offshore króna owners’ authorization to withdraw funds from accounts subject to special restrictions, and permitted accounts subject to special restrictions to be convertible to foreign currency. Ukraine gradually increased and then eliminated limits on transfers of dividends abroad and the monthly limit on the repatriation of funds received from liquidation of equity. Uzbekistan allowed nonresident legal entities involved in trading securities to open foreign exchange, domestic currency, and convertible accounts in the country.

Only a few countries tightened regulations in this category in 2019. Argentina, as part of the comprehensive package of restrictions on foreign exchange transactions, tightened regulations on domestic currency accounts convertible to foreign currency by introducing approval requirements for purchases of foreign exchange by nonresident customers above a certain threshold. Thailand reduced the limit on the outstanding balance that nonresidents may maintain in local currency accounts, to reduce the risk of speculation against the Thai baht.

Unlike in 2019, the number of tightening and easing measures was balanced in 2020. Of 6 easing measures, 5 were introduced by Sri Lanka and 1 by Bangladesh. Sri Lanka introduced a special deposit account in foreign currency or in local currency for nonresidents. This measure aimed to overcome the effects of the COVID-19 outbreak and help build foreign currency reserves. Bangladesh liberalized the use of nonresidents’ foreign exchange accounts by allowing dividends payable to foreign shareholders to be credited to their foreign currency accounts in Bangladesh. Among the 6 tightening measures, Sri Lanka (5) limited the migration allowance amount for emigrants and reduced the withdrawal limit on foreign currency banknotes for travel purposes for personal foreign currency account holders.

Capital Controls

Trade policy uncertainty, geopolitical tensions, and idiosyncratic stress in key emerging market economies continued to weigh on global economic activity—especially manufacturing and trade—in 2019, with tentative signs of stabilization toward the end of the year. The COVID-19 crisis plunged the global economy into a severe collapse and exceptional uncertainty in 2020. Net capital inflows to emerging market and developing

AnnuAL REPORT ON EXCHANGE ARRANGEMENTS AND EXCHANGE RESTRICTIONS 2020

Economies and low-income developing countries continued to slow during 2019 and turned negative in 2020, with emerging markets experiencing the sharpest reversal of portfolio flows on record in the first quarter of 2020 (Figure 9, panel 1). Even though portfolio flows rebounded in the second half of 2020, in the October 2020 World Economic Outlook, they were expected to be negative for the full year, and net FDI inflows were expected to decline as well (Figure 9, panel 2). Against this backdrop, the number of changes in capital controls increased in 2019–20, with significantly more tightening actions—on both inflows and outflows—than in previous years.

The measures included in this section are also considered to be capital flow management measures (CFMs) as defined by the IMF’s institutional view on the liberalization and management of capital flows.43 In addition to the capital controls included in this section, prudential-type measures discussed in the next section may also be CFMs if they were designed to limit capital flows. However, the AREAER does not use this terminology, because classifying a measure as a CFM requires substantial background information and considerable judgment, which is beyond the scope of the analysis conducted in compiling the AREAER database.

1. Trend in Net Capital Inflows

Net capital inflows slowed during 2019 and reversed for EMDEs and LIDCs in 2020.

2. Composition of Net Capital Inflows

Composition of net capital inflows was broadly the same in 2019 as in 2018 for EMDEs and LIDCs, but these economies saw a decline in FDI inflows and net portfolio and net other investment outflows in 2020.

Note: EMDEs = emerging market and developing economies; FDI = foreign direct investment; LIDCs = low-income developing countries.
* Data for 2020 are WEO projections.

The number of actions in 2019 rose from the relatively low level seen in 2018 to the highest in the three years since 2016 (Figure 10, panel 1). There were 406 changes in regulations on capital transactions in 2019, compared with 257 in 2018, 384 in 2017, and 268 in 2016.44 With partial data available for 2020, in the face of the disruptions caused by COVID-19, the pace of changes in capital controls again looks set to exceed that in 2018, with 251 changes by 39 of the 190 economies that reported regulatory changes in 2020.

1. In 2019, there were more changes to controls on capital transactions than in any of the past three years. During the 2020 partial-year period, there were also many changes.

* The position date for 2020 varies by country and is less than the full year.

Of 192 economies covered in the AREAER, 190 reported regulatory changes in 2020, of which 145 economies’ reporting period ended during the second quarter, 39 during the third quarter, and 6 during the fourth quarter. Only Syria and Venezuela have reporting dates that end prior to 2020.
More economies changed capital controls in 2019 than in the previous three years, and the average economy took more actions than in 2018 (Figure 10, panels 2 and 3). The number of advanced and emerging market and developing economies reporting at least one action remained broadly the same in 2019 as in 2018, but each economy took more actions on average. More low-income developing countries changed capital controls in 2019 than in 2018, and each took more actions on average. Of the 43 economies that took action in 2019, advanced economies accounted for 8 (same as in 2018), 26 were by emerging market and developing economies (compared with 28 in 2018), and 9 were by low-income developing countries (up from 2 in 2018). Data available for the 2020 partial-year period suggest that more advanced economies adjusted capital controls in 2020 than in the previous three years. The number for emerging market and developing economies and low-income developing countries will likely remain broadly the same once all the data are available.

There was significant liberalization of capital controls in a few economies in 2019, with Greece and Iceland both implementing 30 or more liberalizing changes, and Belarus, the Philippines, and Ukraine each chalking up more than 15 measures that eased controls (Figure 10, panel 4). However, in Argentina there was a significant retreat from liberalization, with 58 tightening changes, mostly to outflow controls, as was also true in the CEMAC region, with more tightening than easing actions. The largest number of actions in 2019 by any country was reported by Argentina (58), followed by Iceland (49), Greece (46), and Ukraine (23). Among the key changes were the following:

• Argentina tightened capital controls starting in August 2019, as the country faced renewed risks to debt sustainability through peso depreciation, an increase in sovereign spreads, and a sharp decline in real GDP. Among other changes, the authorities limited nonresidents’ access to the foreign exchange market; required central bank approval of purchases of foreign exchange for residents’ investments abroad; required settlement of futures, forwards, and other derivatives in domestic currency; and required residents’ foreign debt contracted beginning September 1, 2019, to be repatriated and funds sold in the domestic market for later access to that market for principal and interest payments.

• Iceland reduced the special reserve requirement ratio from 20 percent to zero and removed several restrictions on cross-border movement of Icelandic króna. Offshore króna owners were provided the option to release their offshore króna assets previously blocked in Iceland.

• Greece lifted all restrictions on transferring proceeds from nonresident investments in Greek financial instruments abroad as well as all restrictions on fund transfers abroad for resident purchases of foreign financial instruments. Approval for capital transfers was also eliminated. Greece thus completed the gradual removal of the controls introduced in 2015 to address a renewed confidence and liquidity crisis.

• Following a road map for removing capital controls, Ukraine reduced and then eliminated the surrender requirement on foreign exchange export proceeds, removed the licensing requirement for purchases and transfers of foreign currency for investments abroad up to a limit, and allowed nonresidents to buy and transfer foreign currency for repatriation of the proceeds of sales of their investments in Ukraine up to a limit. Resident borrowers were allowed to hedge foreign borrowing through forward agreements with banks. Ukraine also eliminated the interest rate ceiling on foreign borrowing and extended the maximum maturity of commercial credit from residents to nonresidents.

The main changes in low-income developing countries in 2019 were in the CEMAC region, in the context of a persistent fragile economic situation since the 2014–16 oil price declines, prompting changes in the securities regulations. An approval requirement was instituted for residents investing in securities abroad in amounts above CFAF 20 million and residents’ direct investment in any amount (both measures constitute tightenings of outflow controls). Approval was also required for nonresidents’ purchases of domestic securities above CFAF 20 million and residents’ sale and issuance of securities abroad (both of which constitute tightening of inflow controls). On the other hand, controls were eased on nonresidents’ sale and issuance of securities within the CEMAC region for amounts between CFAF 10 million and CFAF 50 million by eliminating the previous approval requirement, an easing of outflow controls.

The liberalization trend seen in the previous three years significantly slowed in 2019 and may have reversed in 2020. Reflecting the slowdown in growth and capital flows, and the stresses of the COVID-19 pandemic, a larger share of changes to restrictions on capital transactions during 2019–20 tightened controls, particularly outflow controls, than in the previous three years (Figure 11, panel 1).46 Of the 406 changes to controls on capital transactions reported in 2019, 58 changes, or 14 percent, tightened inflow controls, compared with 7 percent or fewer in 2016–18; 84 changes, or 21 percent, tightened outflow controls in 2019, compared with 6 percent or fewer during 2016–18. In partial-year 2020, these numbers rose further: 24 percent of reported changes tightened inflow controls, and 37 percent tightened outflow controls. However, most tightening of inflow controls imposed stricter conditions on the reversal of past nonresident investments, and as such aimed at preventing net capital outflows during the crisis. When all types of liberalization are taken together, the share of easing measures in all actions fell significantly during 2019–20, to 65 percent in 2019 and 38 percent of those reported so far in 2020, compared with close to 90 percent in the previous three years (Figure 11, panel 2).

Among economies that changed controls, the average advanced economy took more outflow- and inflow easing actions than the average emerging market and developing economy in 2019, although this was driven by a large number of actions in Greece and Iceland. Other than Greece and Iceland, advanced economies that eased inflow or outflow controls in 2019 included Australia, Austria, Canada, San Marino, and the Slovak Republic. The eight advanced economies that reported changes in 2019 cited a total of 2 tightening actions, compared with 12 in 2018, and 111 easing actions, of which 59 were easing of outflow controls (Figure 12, panels 1 and 2). The 26 emerging market and developing economies reported 54 inflow easing actions and 75 outflow easing actions in 2019, for an average of 2.1 and 2.9 actions a country, respectively. However, these economies also reported an average of 2.1 outflow tightening and 1.5 inflow tightening actions a country. Both groups of economies took more liberalizing than tightening actions. Low-income countries, on the other hand, took more tightening than easing actions in 2019: the average country reported 3.3 outflow tightening and 1.9 inflow tightening actions a country, compared with 2.3 easing actions of any type. In 2020, tightening actions by emerging market and developing economies look set to increase significantly, led by outflow tightening (Figure 12, panel 3)

The majority of changes in 2019 in both advanced and emerging market and developing economies involved controls on capital and money market instruments (Figure 13, panel 1). These amounted to 65 percent of all changes in 2019, compared with 36 percent in 2018 and about 50 percent in the previous two years. Most of the measures in advanced economies in 2019 were in Greece and Iceland. Other measures included Austria’s removal of quantitative investment limits by currency for pension funds and an increase in stamp duty imposed on foreign buyers of real estate in the Australian state of Western Australia, to 7 percent from 4 percent. In emerging market and developing economies, India liberalized the rules for nonresidents’ portfolio investment in domestic securities; the Philippines removed the ceiling on residents’ purchases of foreign exchange without approval for investment in securities issued by nonresidents; and China doubled, and later removed, the overall investment limit for qualified foreign institutional investors.

In 2020, the data so far suggest a shift in the composition of changes in controls toward FDI and real-estate-investment-related measures in advanced economies. For emerging market and developing economies, most changes continue to relate to capital and money market instruments (Figure 13, panel 2). The countries reporting FDI-related restrictions effective 2020 in the current AREAER are Australia, Canada, France, Germany, Hungary, India, New Zealand, Slovenia, Spain, and the United Kingdom. The enacting or implementation of some of these measures is also part of a broader trend to enhance regulation of FDI and in some cases reflects earlier decisions with a national security or public interest motivation. For example, in March 2019, the European Union announced a new FDI regulation, setting EU-wide standards that have led to member actions. In addition, with the sudden and sharp decline in market valuations during the COVID-19 crisis, several advanced economies and a few emerging market and developing economies introduced or expanded the scope of screening or authorization for FDI in key sectors, in a couple of cases temporarily (that is, with preannounced expiration dates—France, Hungary).

For emerging market and developing economies, controls on portfolio flows made up the largest share of changes in 2020, mostly reflecting significant portfolio outflow pressure during the COVID-19 crisis. Some countries that took broad measures that tightened outflow restrictions on several categories of outflows included Argentina, Aruba, The Bahamas, Curacao and Sint Maarten, Fiji, and Sri Lanka. Although Argentina’s measures were a continuation of the policy of restricting outflows started in 2019, the other countries that tightened outflow restrictions broadly were hit hard by COVID-19–related stress, including a drop in global tourism. Sri Lanka, however, relaxed some restrictions imposed earlier in the year in June and July 2020. Other emerging markets, notably India, Indonesia, China, and Malaysia, eased inflow controls during the COVID-19 crisis. China raised the cross-border-finance macroprudential adjustment parameter for financial institutions and enterprises from 1 to 1.25, India eased restrictions on foreign portfolio investment in government and corporate bonds and on derivatives transactions, Indonesia relaxed restrictions on foreign investors’ participation in the domestic nondeliverable forwards market, and Malaysia allowed residents to issue ringgit-denominated redeemable preference shares to nonresidents for use in Malaysia.
Provisions Specific to Commercial Banks and Institutional Investors

This section reviews developments in provisions specific to commercial banks and institutional investors, with a focus on prudential measures that are also capital controls.\textsuperscript{47} This category covers some monetary and prudential measures in addition to capital controls.\textsuperscript{48} It includes, among other categories of financial institution transactions, borrowing abroad, lending to nonresidents, purchasing locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange, and establishing regulations pertaining to banks’ and institutional investors’ investments. These provisions may be similar or identical to the measures described in the respective categories of controls on accounts, capital and money market instruments, credit operations, and direct investment if the same regulations apply to commercial banks and institutional investors as to other residents. In such cases, the measure also appears in the relevant category in the sections on accounts and capital transactions.

Reported measures in the financial sector indicate member countries’ efforts to continue to strengthen the regulatory framework of commercial banks, other credit institutions, and institutional investors. The number of reported measures (352) introduced from January 2019 to August 2020 increased by roughly 15 percent compared with the previous reporting period, reflecting an increase in measures related both to commercial banks and to institutional investors. The tendency in recent years for the number of easing measures to exceed that of tightening measures continued, in particular due to easing measures implemented on commercial banks, while there was a marked increase in tightening measures on institutional investors. This reflects regulatory tightening on commercial banks following the global financial crisis, which has since seen some scaling back, while reforms on tightening restrictions on institutional investors have gained momentum.

As in the previous reporting period, the majority of the reported measures were prudential measures (209). Their share increased by 5 percentage points, to 59 percent, over the previous reporting period. The number of reported capital control measures was 143, a slight increase from the previous period. The majority of the capital controls affect institutional investors (68 percent), an increase of about 5 percentage points from the previous reporting period.

While most of the changes in capital controls eased regulatory constraints (of the 143 measures, 91 are easing), the share of tightening measures increased markedly from the previous reporting period (from 16 percent to 36 percent). As explained below, this reflects a significant rise in tightening measures on institutional investors; tighter capital controls in three regions (Aruba, Curaçao and Sint Maarten, Sri Lanka) in relation to the COVID-19 shock explain a large share of the increase. Close to half of the reported changes in capital controls are aimed at easing outflows (71), 2 measures are aimed at both inflows and outflows, and 18 measures eased inflows. A large majority of the 52 tightening measures (a strong increase from the 22 measures in the previous reporting period) were aimed at outflows (44), 5 were aimed at inflows (after having no such measures for two reporting periods in a row), and 3 were aimed at both inflows and outflows.

Easing prudential measures outweigh tightening measures, as in the case of capital controls. This tendency has strengthened since the previous reporting period (solely because of the sharp increase in easing measures on commercial banks): 125 had an easing effect, 69 a tightening effect, and 15 a neutral effect. A summary of the changes in this category is presented in Figure 14.

\textsuperscript{47} Capital controls and prudential measures are highly intertwined because of their overlapping application. For example, some prudential measures (such as different reserve requirements for deposit accounts held by residents and nonresidents) could also be regarded as capital controls because they distinguish between transactions with residents and nonresidents and hence influence capital flows.

\textsuperscript{48} Inclusion of an entry in this category does not necessarily indicate that the aim of the measure is to control the flow of capital.
Commercial banks and other credit institutions

About 58 percent of measures easing capital controls affected capital inflows (18), while 11 measures relaxed conditions for outflows, and 2 measures eased both types of flows.

- Controls on capital inflows—Many of the measures easing inflows relaxed restrictions on borrowing from abroad. China eased borrowing caps on companies’ and some financial institutions’ external borrowing. Russia reduced reserve requirements on liabilities to nonresident legal entities, Tunisia raised limits on resident credit institutions’ external borrowing, Ukraine removed interest rate ceilings on external borrowing, and Ethiopia allowed commercial banks to borrow freely in foreign currency, including from nonresidents, to grant foreign currency credit to residents. In addition, Brazil removed the need for presidential approval for foreign participation in domestic financial institutions and moved such participation to the existing framework for general participation in financial institutions in a nondiscriminatory manner.

- Controls on capital outflows—Belarus and Morocco eased restrictions on maintaining accounts abroad; the Philippines and South Africa allowed specific types of lending to certain groups of nonresidents, and China eased controls on foreign branches’ acceptance of time deposits from residents. Iceland allowed all so-called offshore króna owners to release their offshore króna assets. Oman continued relaxing restrictions on banks’ external assets, and Greece removed the need for Bank Transactions Approval Committee approval for outward capital transfers, the last remaining control imposed to fend off a crisis in 2015.

- Controls on both inflows and outflows—Morocco eased restrictions on local lending in foreign currency and allowed for such loans to fund outward investments, while El Salvador removed a financial transaction tax that was ruled to be unconstitutional.

Some 15 measures tightened capital controls, compared with 11 measures in the previous reporting period. Nine measures were related to outflows: Bolivia tightened banks’ foreign investment and long foreign currency limits. In response to the COVID-19 shock, Sri Lanka and Curaçao and Sint Maarten temporarily suspended licenses for outward capital transactions, while Oman reduced limits on banks’ external exposures. Four measures affected inflows (all pre-COVID-19): Indonesia tightened controls on banks’ external liabilities by extending the scope of the regulation on such liabilities to include so-called master risk participation agreements, Thailand reduced caps on the outstanding balance of nonresidents’ domestic currency bank accounts, Argentina introduced a surrender requirement on foreign debt, and Colombia implemented stricter hedging requirements regarding borrowing from abroad.

The 191 reported prudential measures indicate an easing of the prudential framework of banks’ operations. This is reflected in the continued trend of an increasing number of easing measures (to 119 from 68) while the number of tightening measures decreased slightly (to 59 from 60). As in the previous reporting period, there were a number of neutral measures (13).
Some of the measures that eased banks’ prudential frameworks are as follows:

- Several measures affected reserve requirements, both before the pandemic but then more forcefully as the COVID-19 shock hit as this was an important policy response to the liquidity pressures stemming from the shock.
  - Among those countries that eased reserve requirements before the pandemic shock and not during it, including for monetary purposes in some instances, were Georgia, the Kyrgyz Republic, Nicaragua, Russia (for domestic currency liabilities only), and Sri Lanka.
  - Some countries eased reserve requirements both before and during the COVID-19 shock: Bolivia, China, El Salvador, Indonesia, Jamaica, the Philippines, Tanzania, and Turkey.
  - Other countries eased reserve requirement only as a response to the pandemic (mainly in the first wave) to provide the banking system with greater available liquidity to meet liquidity pressures or provide loans. These include Aruba, Bahrain, Bangladesh, Botswana, Brazil, Cambodia, India, Lao P.D.R., Malaysia, Maldives, Moldova, Pakistan, Peru, Romania, Rwanda, Suriname, Trinidad and Tobago, and the United Arab Emirates.
- In response to the COVID-19 shock, liquid asset requirements were reduced for reasons similar to those that lowered reserve requirements; that is, to provide liquidity to banks to meet liquidity pressures and demand for loans in Aruba, Belize, Jamaica, Korea, Malaysia, and Peru, both before and after the COVID-19 shock. Georgia removed liquid asset requirements as part of a transition to using Basel III liquidity measures instead. As a response to the COVID-19 shock, Korea also temporarily relaxed the foreign exchange liquidity coverage ratio for banks, and Malaysia temporarily increased the single counterparty exposure limit for certain exposures.
- A few countries eased net open position limits (unrelated to the pandemic), including Sri Lanka, Ukraine, and Uzbekistan.

59 measures tightened prudential frameworks for commercial banks, compared to 60 in the last reporting period. The measures were aimed mainly at enhancing banks’ resilience against liquidity and exchange rate shocks and adapting domestic regulations to international standards.

- A number of countries introduced or continued to phase in the liquidity coverage ratio (LCR) and/or net stable funding ratio (NSFR); for instance, Cambodia (LCR), Malaysia (NFSR), Mauritania (LCR), Mauritius (LCR), and Ukraine (LCR). The LCR and the NSFR are part of the Basel III regulatory framework for banks and aim to address banks’ vulnerabilities regarding liquidity and funding.
- Some countries introduced or tightened measures to address foreign-exchange-related risks. Hungary temporarily tightened its foreign exchange funding adequacy framework to reduce banks’ currency and maturity mismatches even further, and Vietnam introduced specific restrictions on short-term and medium- to long-term foreign currency lending.
- Angola and Lebanon tightened interest rate controls and loan-to-deposit caps, respectively.

Neutral measures were mostly related to the implementation of new regulatory frameworks on banks’ operations and to changes in the institutional framework of bank supervision. Italy made changes to its frameworks on sanctions and anti-money-laundering procedures and provisions. India introduced prudential guidelines for external lending and borrowing by Indian banks and their branches and subsidiaries.

Institutional investors

The number of measures regarding institutional investors (115) rose by 13 from the previous period. This reflects mainly an increase in regulatory changes affecting capital controls but also a slight increase in changes in prudential measures (97 and 18 compared with 88 and 14, respectively, in the previous period). Changes easing constraints on the operations of institutional investors (66) still exceeded those tightening constraints.
(47), but the difference shrank considerably from the last reporting period because of a sharp increase in tightening measures (from 12 to 47), many of which are related to tightening capital outflow controls in a few countries as a response to the COVID-19 crisis.

Regarding capital controls, 60 of the 97 reported changes relaxed constraints. All easing measures are related to capital outflows.

Among countries easing capital controls on purchases of foreign securities were Austria, Croatia, Malaysia (for pension funds), and Thailand (for insurers). Morocco, the Philippines, and Vanuatu eased restrictions on investment abroad by investment firms and collective investment funds. Ukraine, continuing on its path to liberalize the financial account, removed the license requirement for purchases of foreign currency for outward investment, as long as a transaction does not exceed the established limits.

Some 37 measures tightened capital controls on institutional investors, compared with only 11 in the previous reporting period. Close to all of these measures tightened controls on capital outflows (35), and most of them (28) reflect broad-based COVID-19 crisis responses in only three jurisdictions (Aruba, Curaçao and Sint Maarten, Sri Lanka, with 12, 4, and 12 measures each, respectively). Unrelated to the pandemic, Bolivia, Botswana, and Lebanon tightened conditions on institutional investors’ capital outflows. In most instances, this reflected introducing or tightening caps on institutional investors’ external assets.

Six measures eased the prudential framework for operations by institutional investors. Belgium, India, and Romania eased restrictions on pension funds’ assets and India did so also for mutual funds. The Kyrgyz Republic increased limits on insurance companies’ and investment funds’ investments in financial instruments of a single issuer.

Ten measures tightened the prudential rules for institutional investors’ operations, compared with only one in the previous reporting period. Albania introduced limits on collective investment funds’ investments in terms of maturities, transferability, issuer concentrations, and so forth, in line with the EU Directive on Undertakings for Collective Investment in Transferable Securities. India tightened exposure limits on funds’ investments held locally, and Moldova introduced such restrictions. Lebanon tightened requirements on local portfolios for investment companies and collective investment funds, while Singapore raised risk weights on the foreign currency mismatch risk for insurers.

Among the reported prudential measures specific to institutional investors, 2 of the 18 were recorded as neutral. These measures reflect mainly institutional or procedural changes and cannot be linked directly to easing or tightening constraints on institutional investors’ operations. In particular, China moved toward a solvency-based supervisory framework for insurers’ investments in equity-type assets, while Romania adjusted the framework for occupational pension funds.
2020 AREAER: Compilation Guide

Status Under IMF Articles of Agreement

Article VIII
The member country has accepted the obligations of Article VIII, Sections 2, 3, and 4, of the IMF's Articles of Agreement.

Article XIV
The member country continues to avail itself of the transitional arrangements of Article XIV, Section 2.

Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices
Exchange restrictions and multiple currency practices (MCPs) maintained by a member country under Article VIII, Sections 2, 3, and 4, or under Article XIV, Section 2, of the IMF's Articles of Agreement, as specified in the latest IMF staff reports issued as of December 31, 2019. Information on exchange restrictions and MCPs or on the nonexistence of exchange restrictions and MCPs for countries with unpublished IMF staff reports are published only with the consent of the authorities. If no consent has been received, the AREAER indicates that “Information is not publicly available.” Hence, “Information is not publicly available” does not necessarily imply that the country maintains exchange restrictions or MCPs. It indicates only that the country's relevant IMF staff report has not been published and that the authorities have not consented to the publication of the information on the existence of exchange restrictions and MCPs. Because the relevant IMF staff report may refer to years before the reporting period for this volume of the AREAER, therefore, more recent changes in the exchange system may not be included here. Changes in the category “Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices” are reflected in the edition of the AREAER that covers the calendar year during which the IMF staff report including information on such changes is issued. Changes in these measures which give rise to exchange restrictions or MCPs and that affect other categories of the country tables are reported under the relevant categories in the AREAER, in accordance with the normal reporting periods.

Exchange measures imposed for security reasons
Exchange measures on payments and transfers in connection with international transactions imposed by member countries for reasons of national or international security.

In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51), which establishes the obligation of members to notify the IMF before imposing such restrictions, or, if circumstances preclude advance notification, as promptly as possible.

Other security restrictions
Other restrictions imposed for security reasons (e.g., in accordance with UN or EU regulations) but not notified to the IMF under Board Decision 144-(52/51).

Exchange Arrangement

Currency
The official legal tender of the country.

Other legal tender
The existence of another currency that is officially allowed to be used in the country.

Exchange rate structure
If there is one exchange rate, the system is called unitary. If there is more than one exchange rate that may be used simultaneously for different purposes and/or by different entities, and if these exchange rates give rise to MCPs or differing rates for current and capital transactions, the system is called dual or multiple. Different effective exchange rates resulting from exchange taxes or subsidies, excessive exchange rate spreads between buying and selling rates, bilateral payments agreements, and broken cross rates are not included in this category. Changes in measures within this category are reported in accordance with the normal reporting periods. Reclassification in cases related to changes in MCPs occurs in the edition of the AREAER, that covers the calendar year during which the IMF staff report that includes information on such changes is issued.

Classification

Describes and classifies the de jure and the de facto exchange rate arrangements.

De jure

The description and effective dates of the de jure exchange rate arrangements are provided by the authorities. By Article IV, Section 2(a) of the Fund’s Articles of Agreement and Paragraph 16 of the 2007 Surveillance Decision No. 13919-(07/51), each member is required to notify the Fund of the exchange arrangements it intends to apply and to notify the Fund promptly of any changes in its exchange arrangements. Country authorities are also requested to identify, whenever possible, which of the existing categories of exchange rate arrangements below most closely corresponds to the de jure arrangement in effect. Country authorities may also wish to briefly describe their official exchange rate policy. The description includes officially announced or estimated parameters of the exchange arrangement (e.g., parity, bands, weights, rate of crawl, and other indicators used to manage the exchange rate). It also provides information on the computation of the exchange rate.

IMF staff classifies the de facto exchange rate arrangements according to the categories below. The name and the definition of the categories describing the de facto exchange rate arrangements have been modified in accordance with the revised classification methodology, as of February 1, 2009. Where the description of the de jure arrangement can be empirically confirmed by the IMF staff over at least the previous six months, the exchange rate arrangement will be classified in the same way on a de facto basis.

Because the de facto methodology for classification of exchange rate regimes is based on a backward-looking approach that relies on past exchange rate movement and historical data, some countries are reclassified retroactively to a date when the behavior of the exchange rates changed and matched the criteria for reclassification to the appropriate category. For these countries, if the retroactive date of reclassification is prior to the period covered in this report, then the effective date of change to be entered in the country chapter and the changes section is deemed to be the first day of the year in which the decision of reclassification took place.

No separate legal tender

Classification as an exchange rate arrangement with no separate legal tender involves the confirmation of the country authorities’ de jure exchange rate arrangement. The currency of another country circulates as the sole legal tender (formal dollarization). Adopting such an arrangement implies the complete surrender by the monetary authorities of control over domestic monetary policy.

Exchange arrangements of countries that belong to a monetary or currency union in which the same legal tender is shared by the members of the union are classified under the arrangement governing the joint currency. This classification is based on the behavior of the common currency, whereas the previous classification was based on the lack of a separate legal tender. The classification thus reflects only a definitional change and is not based on a judgment that there has been a substantive change in the exchange arrangement or in other policies of the currency union or its members.

Currency board

Classification as a currency board involves the confirmation of the country authorities’ de jure exchange rate arrangement. A currency board arrangement is a monetary arrangement based on an explicit legislative commitment to exchange domestic currency for a specified foreign currency at a fixed exchange rate, combined with restrictions on the issuing authority to ensure the fulfillment of its legal obligation. This implies that domestic currency is usually fully backed by foreign assets, eliminating traditional central bank functions such as monetary control and lender-of-last-resort and leaving little scope for discretionary monetary policy. Some flexibility may still be afforded, depending on the strictness of the banking rules of the currency board arrangement.

Conventional peg Classification as a conventional peg involves the confirmation of the country authorities’ de jure exchange rate arrangement. For this category the country formally (de jure) pegs its currency at a fixed rate to another currency or basket of currencies, where the basket is formed, for example, from the currencies of major trading or financial partners and weights reflect the geographic distribution of trade, services, or capital flows. The anchor currency or basket weights are public or notified to the IMF. The country authorities stand ready to maintain the fixed parity through direct intervention (i.e., via sale or purchase of foreign exchange in the market) or indirect intervention (e.g., via exchange rate related use of interest rate policy, imposition of foreign exchange regulations, exercise of moral suasion that constrains foreign exchange activity, or intervention by other public institutions). There is no commitment to irrevocably keep the parity, but the formal arrangement must be confirmed empirically: the exchange rate may fluctuate within narrow margins of less than ±1% around a central rate or the maximum and minimum value of the spot market exchange rate must remain within a narrow margin of 2% for at least six months.

Stabilized arrangement Classification as a stabilized arrangement entails a spot market exchange rate that remains within a margin of 2% for six months or more (with the exception of a specified number of outliers or step adjustments) and is not floating. The required margin of stability can be met either with respect to a single currency or a basket of currencies, where the anchor currency or the basket is ascertained or confirmed using statistical techniques. Classification as a stabilized arrangement requires that the statistical criteria are met and that the exchange rate remains stable as a result of official action (including structural market rigidities). The classification does not imply a policy commitment on the part of the country authorities.

Crawling peg Classification as a crawling peg involves the confirmation of the country authorities’ de jure exchange rate arrangement. The currency is adjusted in small amounts at a fixed rate or in response to changes in selected quantitative indicators, such as past inflation differentials vis-à-vis major trading partners or differentials between the inflation target and expected inflation in major trading partners. The rate of crawl can be set to generate inflation-adjusted changes in the exchange rate (backward looking) or set at a predetermined fixed rate and/or below the projected inflation differentials (forward looking). The rules and parameters of the arrangement are public or notified to the IMF.

Crawl-like arrangement For classification as a crawl-like arrangement, the exchange rate must remain within a narrow margin of 2% relative to a statistically identified trend for six months or more (with the exception of a specified number of outliers) and the exchange rate arrangement cannot be considered as floating. Normally, a minimum rate of change greater than allowed under a stabilized (peg-like) arrangement is required. However, an arrangement will be considered crawl-like with an annualized rate of change of at least 1%, provided that the exchange rate appreciates or depreciates in a sufficiently monotonic and continuous manner.

Pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands Classification as a pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands involves the confirmation of the country authorities’ de jure exchange rate arrangement. The value of the currency is maintained within certain margins of fluctuation of at least ±1% around a fixed central rate, or the margin between the maximum and minimum value of the exchange rate exceeds 2%. It includes arrangements of countries in the ERM of the European Monetary System (EMS), which was replaced with the ERM II on January 1, 1999, for those countries with margins of fluctuation wider than ±1%. The central rate and width of the band are public or notified to the IMF.
Other managed arrangement

This category is a residual and is used when the exchange rate arrangement does not meet the criteria for any of the other categories. Arrangements characterized by frequent shifts in policies may fall into this category.

Floating

A floating exchange rate is largely market determined, without an ascertainable or predictable path for the rate. In particular, an exchange rate that satisfies the statistical criteria for a stabilized or a crawl-like arrangement will be classified as such unless it is clear that the stability of the exchange rate is not the result of official actions. Foreign exchange market intervention may be either direct or indirect, and such intervention serves to moderate the rate of change and prevent undue fluctuations in the exchange rate, but policies targeting a specific level of the exchange rate are incompatible with floating. Indicators for managing the rate are broadly judgmental (e.g., balance of payments position, international reserves, parallel market developments). Floating arrangements may exhibit more or less exchange rate volatility, depending on the size of the shocks affecting the economy.

Free floating

A floating exchange rate can be classified as free floating if intervention occurs only exceptionally and aims to address disorderly market conditions and if the authorities have provided information or data confirming that intervention has been limited to at most three instances in the previous six months, each lasting no more than three business days. If the information or data required are not available to the IMF staff, the arrangement will be classified as floating. Detailed data on intervention or official foreign exchange transactions will not be requested routinely from member countries, but only when other information available to IMF staff is insufficient to resolve uncertainties about the appropriate classification.

Official exchange rate

Provides information on the computation of the exchange rate and the use of the official exchange rate (accounting, customs valuation purposes, foreign exchange transactions with the government).

Monetary policy framework

The category includes a brief description of the monetary policy framework in effect according to the following subcategories:

Exchange rate anchor

The monetary authority buys or sell foreign exchange to maintain the exchange rate at its predetermined level or within a range. The exchange rate thus serves as the nominal anchor or intermediate target of monetary policy. These frameworks are associated with exchange rate arrangements with no separate legal tender, currency board arrangements, pegs (or stabilized arrangements) with or without bands, crawling pegs (or crawl-like arrangements), and other managed arrangements.

U.S. dollar

The U.S dollar is the nominal anchor or the only legal tender.

Euro

The euro is the nominal anchor or the only legal tender.

Composite

A currency composite consisting of two or more currencies is the nominal anchor.

Other

A currency other than the U.S dollar and the euro is the nominal anchor or the only legal tender.

Monetary aggregate target

The intermediate target of monetary policy is a monetary aggregate such as M0, M1, or M2, although the country may also set targets for inflation. The central bank may use a quantity (central bank reserves or base money) or price variable (policy rate) as operational target.

Inflation-targeting framework

This involves the public announcement of numerical targets for inflation, with an institutional commitment by the monetary authority to achieve these targets, typically over a medium-term horizon. Additional key features normally include increased communication with the public and the markets about the plans and objectives of monetary policymakers and increased accountability of the central bank for achieving its inflation objectives. Monetary policy decisions are often guided by the deviation of forecasts of future inflation from the announced inflation target, with the inflation forecast acting (implicitly or explicitly) as the intermediate target of monetary policy.
Target setting body

The official body or organizational unit responsible for setting and/or adjusting the inflation targets.

Inflation target

The numerical targets for inflation which have been publicly announced by the Central Bank. Inflation targets are generally expressed as i) a point target, ii) targets with plus minus a certain numerical limit, and iii) as a band or range. The target measure is defined in terms of end-year inflation or as average annual inflation. CPI and core CPI are based on national definitions, which may vary from country to country. Target horizon is the term in years of inflation targets as publicly announced by the Central Bank.

Operating target (policy rate)

Policy rate is used as the operating target of the monetary policy to achieve the inflation target. Short-term policy interest rate target (for example, overnight, one week, two weeks, etc.) is generally expressed as i) a point target, ii) target with a certain numerical limit above and below the target, and iii) as a band or range (upper and lower limits).

Accountability

Accountability framework that requires the central bank to explain its conduct of monetary policy in the pursuit of achieving its inflation target. For example, the governor or representatives of the central bank are required to appear before Parliament or one of its committees to explain actions and views on monetary policy and economic developments. It may also require reporting inflation targets through Open letters on monetary policy. Usually written by the Governor on behalf of the Monetary Policy Committee to the government in the event that inflation misses the inflation target by a pre-specified amount.

Transparency

The manner and level of detail how monetary policy decisions are communicated to the public. Institutional transparency is gauged by the communication vehicles employed by the central bank, including the release of inflation reports and the frequency and detail of these reports, the announcement of changes in the stance of monetary policy via press release, reviews of inflation performance and changes in monetary policy, the publication of inflation forecasting models, and the use of media and other public presentations.

Other monetary framework

The country has no explicitly stated nominal anchor, but rather monitors various indicators in conducting monetary policy. This category is also used when no relevant information on the country is available.

Exchange tax

Foreign exchange transactions are subject to a special tax. Bank commissions charged on foreign exchange transactions are not included in this category; rather, they are listed under the exchange arrangement classification.

Exchange subsidy

Foreign exchange transactions are subsidized by using separate, nonmarket exchange rates.

Foreign exchange market

The existence of a foreign exchange market.

Price determination and frequency of central bank operations. A foreign exchange standing facility allows market participants to buy foreign exchange from or sell it to the central bank at predetermined exchange rates at their own initiative and is usually instrumental in maintaining a hard or soft peg arrangement. The credibility of the facility depends to a large extent on the availability of foreign exchange reserves to back the facility.</td>
Allocation involves redistribution of foreign exchange inflows by the central bank to market participants for specific international transactions or in specific amounts (rationing). Foreign exchange allocation is often used to provide foreign exchange for strategic imports such as oil or food when foreign exchange reserves are scarce. In an allocation system, companies and individuals often transact directly with the central bank, and commercial banks may buy foreign exchange only for their clients’ underlying international transactions. Purchases of foreign exchange for the banks’ own books typically are not permitted.

Auctions are organized by the central bank, usually for market participants to buy and/or sell foreign exchange. They can take the form of multiple-price auctions (all successful bidders pay the price they offer) or single-price auctions (all successful bidders pay the same price, which is the market-clearing/cut-off price). The authorities may exercise discretion in accepting or rejecting offers, and sometimes a floor price is determined in advance, below which offers are not accepted. The frequency of auctions depends mainly on the amount or availability of foreign exchange to be auctioned and on the role the auction plays in the foreign exchange market.

Fixing sessions are often organized by the central bank at the early stage of market development to establish a market-clearing exchange rate. The central bank monitors the market closely and often actively participates in price formation by selling or buying during the session to achieve a certain exchange rate target. The price determined at the fixing session is often used for foreign exchange transactions outside the session and/or for accounting and valuation purposes.

Arrangements for Payments and Receipts

Prescription of currency requirements

The official requirements affecting the selection of currency and the method of settlement for transactions with other countries. When a country has payments agreements with other countries, the terms of these agreements often lead to a prescription of currency for specified categories of payments to, and receipts from, the countries concerned. This category includes information on the use of domestic currency in transactions between residents and nonresidents, both domestically and abroad; it also indicates any restrictions on the use of foreign currency among residents.

Payments arrangements

- Bilateral payments arrangements
  - Two countries have an agreement to prescribe specific rules for payments to each other, including cases in which private parties are also obligated to use specific currencies. These agreements can be either operative or inoperative.

- Regional arrangements
  - More than two parties participate in a payments agreement.

- Clearing agreements
  - The official bodies of two or more countries agree to offset with some regularity the balances that arise from payments to each other as a result of the exchange of goods, services, or—less often—capital.
Barter agreements and open accounts
The official bodies of two or more countries agree to offset exports of goods and services to one country with imports of goods and services from the same country, without payment.

Administration of control
The authorities’ division of responsibility for monitoring policy, administering exchange controls, and determining the extent of delegation of powers to outside agencies (banks are often authorized to effect foreign exchange transactions).

Payments arrears
Official or private residents of a member country default on their payments or transfers in foreign exchange to nonresidents. This category includes only the situation in which domestic currency is available for residents to settle their debts but they are unable to obtain foreign exchange—for example, because of the presence of an officially announced or unofficial queuing system; it does not cover nonpayment by private parties owing to bankruptcy.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion)
Separate rules for trading in gold domestically and with foreign countries.

Controls on exports and imports of banknotes
Regulations governing the physical movement of means of payment between countries. Where information is available, the category distinguishes between separate limits for the (1) export and import of banknotes by travelers and (2) export and import of banknotes by banks and other authorized financial institutions.

Resident Accounts
Indicates whether resident accounts that are maintained in the national currency or in foreign currency, locally or abroad, are allowed and describes how they are treated and the facilities and limitations attached to such accounts. When there is more than one type of resident account, the nature and operation of the various types of accounts are also described; for example, whether residents are allowed to open foreign exchange accounts with or without approval from the exchange control authority, whether these accounts may be held domestically or abroad, and whether the balances on accounts held by residents in domestic currency may be converted into foreign currency.

Nonresident Accounts
Indicates whether local nonresident accounts maintained in the national currency or in foreign currency are allowed and describes how they are treated and the facilities and limitations attached to such accounts. When there is more than one type of nonresident account, the nature and operation of the various types of accounts are described.

Blocked accounts
Accounts of nonresidents, usually in domestic currency. Regulations prohibit or limit the conversion and/or transfer of the balances of such accounts.

Imports and Import Payments
Describes the nature and extent of exchange and trade restrictions on imports.

Foreign exchange budget
Information on the existence of a foreign exchange plan, i.e., prior allocation of a certain amount of foreign exchange, usually on an annual basis, for the importation of specific types of goods and/or services. In some cases, also covers differentiations among individual importers.

Financing requirements for imports
Information on specific import-financing regulations limiting the rights of residents to enter into private contracts in which the financing options differ from those in the official regulations.

Financing requirements
Information on specific export-financing regulations limiting the rights of residents to enter into private contracts in which the financing options differ from those in the official regulations.

Documentation requirements
The same categories as in the case of imports are used.

Export licenses
Restrictions on the right of residents to export goods. These restrictions may take the form of quotas (where a certain quantity of shipment abroad is allowed) or the absence of quotas (where the licenses are issued at the discretion of the foreign trade control authority).

Export taxes
A brief description of the export tax system, including any taxes that are levied on foreign exchange earned by exporters.

Payments for Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

Describes the procedures for effecting payments abroad in connection with current transactions in invisibles, with reference to prior approval requirements, the existence of quantitative and indicative limits, and/or bona fide tests. Detailed information on the most common categories of transactions is provided only when regulations differ for the various categories. Indicative limits establish maximum amounts up to which the purchase of foreign exchange is allowed upon declaration of the nature of the transaction, mainly for statistical purposes. Amounts above those limits are granted if the bona fide nature of the transaction is established by the presentation of appropriate documentation. Bona fide tests also may be applied to transactions for which quantitative limits have not been established.

Trade-related payments
Includes freight and insurance (including possible regulations on non-trade-related insurance payments and transfers), unloading and storage costs, administrative expenses, commissions, and customs duties and fees.

Investment-related payments
Includes profits and dividends, interest payments (including interest on debentures, mortgages, etc.), amortization of loans or depreciation of foreign direct investments, and payments and transfers of rent.

Payments for travel
Includes international travel for business, tourism, etc.

Personal payments
Includes medical expenditures abroad, study expenses abroad, pensions (including regulations on payments and transfers of pensions by both state and private pension providers on behalf of nonresidents, as well as the transfer of pensions due to residents living abroad), and family maintenance and alimony (including regulations on payments and transfers abroad of family maintenance and alimony by residents).

Foreign workers’ wages
Transfer abroad of earnings by nonresidents working in the country.

Credit card use abroad
Use of credit and debit cards to pay for invisible transactions.

Other payments
Includes subscription and membership fees, authors’ royalties, consulting and legal fees, etc.

Proceeds from Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

Describes regulations governing exchange receipts derived from transactions in invisibles—including descriptions of any limitations on their conversion into domestic currency—and the use of those receipts.

Repatriation requirements
The definitions of repatriation and surrender requirements are similar to those applied to export proceeds.
Surrender to the central bank
Surrender to authorized dealers

Restrictions on use of funds
Refers mainly to the limitations imposed on the use of receipts previously deposited in certain types of bank accounts.

Capital Transactions
Describes regulations influencing both inward and outward capital flows. The concept of controls on capital transactions is interpreted broadly. Thus, controls on capital transactions include prohibitions; need for prior approval, authorization, and notification; dual and multiple exchange rates; discriminatory taxes; and reserve requirements or interest penalties imposed by the authorities that regulate the conclusion or execution of transactions or transfers; or the holding of assets at home by nonresidents and abroad by residents. The coverage of the regulations applies to receipts as well as to payments and to actions initiated by nonresidents and residents. In addition, because of the close association with capital transactions, information is also provided on local financial operations conducted in foreign currency, describing specific regulations in force that limit residents' and nonresidents' issuing of securities denominated in foreign currency or, generally, limitations on contract agreements expressed in foreign exchange.

Repatriation requirements
The definitions of repatriation and surrender requirements are similar to those applied to export proceeds.

Controls on capital and money market instruments

On capital market securities
Refers to shares and other securities of a participating nature and to bonds and other securities with an original maturity of more than one year.

Shares or other securities of a participating nature
Includes transactions involving shares and other securities of a participating nature if they are not effected for the purpose of acquiring a lasting economic interest in the management of the enterprise concerned. Investments for the purpose of acquiring a lasting economic interest are addressed under foreign direct investments.

Bonds or other debt securities
Refers to bonds and other securities with an original maturity of more than one year. The term “other securities” includes notes and debentures.

On money market instruments
Refers to securities with an original maturity of one year or less and includes short-term instruments such as certificates of deposit and bills of exchange. The category also includes treasury bills and other short-term government paper, bankers’ acceptances, commercial papers, interbank deposits, and repurchase agreements.

On collective investment securities
Includes share certificates and registry entries or other evidence of investor interest in an institution for collective investment such as mutual funds, and unit and investment trusts.
Controls on derivatives and other instruments

Refers to operations in other negotiable instruments and nonsecured claims not covered under the above subsections. These may include operations in rights; warrants; financial options and futures; secondary market operations in other financial claims (including sovereign loans, mortgage loans, commercial credits, negotiable instruments originating as loans, receivables, and discounted bills of trade); forward operations (including those in foreign exchange); swaps of bonds and other debt securities; credits and loans; and other swaps (e.g., interest rate, debt/equity, equity/debt, foreign currency, as well as swaps of any of the instruments listed above). Also included are controls on operations in foreign exchange without any other underlying transaction (e.g., spot or forward trading on the foreign exchange markets, forward cover operations, etc.).

Controls on credit operations

Commercial credits

Covers operations directly linked with international trade transactions or with the rendering of international services.

Financial credits

Includes credits other than commercial credits granted by all residents, including banks, to nonresidents or vice versa.

Guarantees, sureties, and financial backup facilities

Includes guarantees, sureties, and financial backup facilities provided by residents to nonresidents and vice versa. Also includes securities pledged for payment or performance of a contract—such as warrants, performance bonds, and standby letters of credit—and financial backup facilities that are credit facilities used as a guarantee for independent financial operations.

Controls on direct investment

Refers to investments for the purpose of establishing lasting economic relations both abroad by residents and domestically by nonresidents. These investments are essentially for the purpose of producing goods and services, in particular, investments that allow investor participation in the management of the enterprise. The category includes the creation or extension of a wholly owned enterprise, subsidiary, or branch and the acquisition of full or partial ownership of a new or existing enterprise that results in effective influence over the operations of the enterprise.

Controls on liquidation of direct investment

Refers to the transfer of principal, including the initial capital and capital gains, of a foreign direct investment as defined above.

Controls on real estate transactions

Refers to the acquisition of real estate not associated with direct investment, including, for example, investments of a purely financial nature in real estate or the acquisition of real estate for personal use.

Controls on personal capital transactions

Covers transfers initiated on behalf of private persons and intended to benefit other private persons. Includes transactions involving property to which the promise of a return to the owner with payments of interest is attached (e.g., loans or settlements of debt in their country of origin by immigrants), and transfers effected free of charge to the beneficiary (e.g., gifts and endowments, loans, inheritances and legacies, or emigrants’ assets).

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Describes regulations specific to these institutions, such as monetary, prudential, and foreign exchange controls. Inclusion of an entry in this category does not necessarily signify that the aim of the measure is to control the flow of capital. Some of these items (e.g., borrowing abroad, lending to nonresidents, purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange, investment regulations) may be repetitions of the entries under respective categories of controls on capital and money market instruments, credit operations, or direct investments when the same regulations apply to commercial banks as well as to other residents.

Examples of such controls are restrictions on investments because of rules regarding the technical, mathematical, security, or mandatory reserves; solvency margins; premium reserve stocks; or guarantee funds of nonbank financial institutions. Inclusion of an entry in this category does not necessarily signify that the aim of the measure is to control the flow of capital.</td>

Listing conventions used in the report are as follows:

- When it is unclear whether a particular category or measure exists—because pertinent information is not available at the time of publication—the category is displayed with the notation “n.a.”
- If a measure is known to exist but specific information on it is not available, the category is displayed with the notation “yes.”
- If no measure exists on any item within a category, the category is displayed with the notation “no.”
- If members have provided the IMF staff with information indicating that a category or an item is not regulated, these are marked by “n.r.”
- When relevant documents have not been published and the authorities have not consented to the publication of the information as included in the IMF staff report, the text reads “Information is not publicly available.”

Other managed arrangement
Yes.
The de jure exchange rate arrangement is managed floating. The Da Afghanistan Bank (DAB) intervenes regularly in the foreign exchange market through three-times-weekly selling auctions. The results are published on the DAB website. The DAB deals with ADs only through the auction. The primary goal of these auctions is to regulate the growth of reserve money and/or currency in circulation. Subject to meeting this goal, the DAB also seeks to minimize intra-auction exchange rate volatility. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as other managed. The DAB publishes intervention data on its website.

Floating

Free floating

Official exchange rate Yes. The DAB reports official exchange rates of the Afghani vis-à-vis ten major currencies. The DAB staff conducts an online foreign exchange rate survey of between 40 and 50 licensed exchange dealers in Kabul at the start of each business day and acquires data on buying and selling rates for the nine currencies. The DAB’s official reference rates are then determined as the average of the market rates for each currency. The official exchange rate is provided as a daily benchmark or reference point for commercial banks, private sector entities, and government agencies to use in their transactions.

Target measure
The foreign exchange market consists of commercial banks and foreign exchange dealers. Commercial banks and bureaus are free to set their exchange rates and commissions in transactions with their clients and with each other.

According to the Foreign Exchange Dealers and Money Service Providers Regulation, 2017, both foreign exchange dealers and money service providers licensed by the DAB may operate in the foreign exchange market. In addition, commercial banks and licensed foreign exchange dealers must register and pay a fee to participate in DAB auctions. There were 1,630 foreign exchange dealers and 1,567 licensed money service providers overall, as of December 2019. Money service providers, including Hawaladars, provide remittances and related services including transfer of payments, while foreign exchange dealers are only allowed to exchange currency.

The DAB conducts online foreign currency auction three times a week on a first-price basis with same-day settlement. The amount of foreign exchange offered at the auction is announced in the local press and magazines one working day in advance, and the results are published on the DAB website immediately after each auction. All bidders are required to submit their bids before 9:20 a.m. of the auction day. The Foreign Currency Auction Regulations allow bidders to set their maximum bid amounts at 3% of the total announced amount of the auction day, respectively. Bids are awarded based on the bidding prices. The auction includes commercial banks and foreign exchange dealers. There is no requirement for auction participants to finance specific international transactions with the foreign currency obtained at the auctions. Effective March 15, 2020, successful bidders who fail to settle their accounts within the same day of the auction are fined the total cash collateral of Af 500,000 (previously, Af 1,500,000). The DAB may elect to revoke the auction privileges or license of a bidder if it fails to settle.

Fixing

No.

Interbank market

Yes. The DAB does not impose restrictions on the interbank foreign exchange market, but it is not active. Most foreign exchange transactions are made between commercial banks/exchange dealers and their clients. There are 12 licensed commercial banks. Commercial banks and bureaus are free to set their exchange rates and commissions in transactions with their clients and with each other.

Floating

Yes.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The Bank of Albania (BOA) does not target any level or band for the exchange rate. The BOA interventions in the foreign exchange market are limited to the following situations: (1) avoiding harmful short-term fluctuations in the market; (2) maintaining adequate levels of foreign reserves; and (3) correcting exchange rate misalignments. In the last decade, the BOA has intervened: only twice to smooth short-term volatility, respectively, two days in June 2018 and two days in March 2020; only once to correct exchange rate misalignments amidst high deflationary risks and limited policy space.

Excess volatility in the domestic foreign exchange market is considered on a case-by-case basis by the Committee for Implementing and Advising the Monetary Policy. The BOA uses auctions only for the purpose of accumulating foreign exchange reserves. This practice has been communicated to the banks. The BOA’s plan to further increase the transparency of the process, from decision-making to individual auction announcements, has been postponed for H2 2020. When the BOA intervenes in the domestic foreign exchange market, its counterparties are the commercial banks; if necessary, it may carry out its intervention with foreign exchange bureaus. The BOA intervenes through (1) verbal intervention, in the form of press releases in the print or electronic media and/or press conferences; and (2) transactional intervention. The latter can take two forms, direct intervention and intervention via preannounced auctions. In the case of direct intervention, the exchange rate is determined by commercial banks’ quotes and the BOA’s quotes. When the intervention exchange rate is uniform for all counterparties, the BOA publishes the rate on its Reuters page and simultaneously communicates it to commercial banks that do not participate in the Reuters system and to foreign exchange bureaus with which it has contact. When different exchange rates are used, the BOA announces only the fact that it has intervened. It publishes with a three-month lag the amount of the intervention in a quarterly bulletin that summarizes its foreign exchange operations with banks and the public sector. The regulation regarding foreign exchange interventions includes the option to carry out transactional interventions via auctions announced in advance. The BOA announces the date, amount, and currency it wants to buy at least one month before the auction, and the banks submit one bid each (in an amount equal to the limit it has provided the BOA). The BOA decides how much to buy based on the rates offered and its target amount. Following the auction, the BOA publishes the amount offered by commercial banks, the amount accepted by the BOA, the range of offered bids, the range of accepted bids, and the prorate at the maximum accepted bid. The BOA aims to avoid disruptions from large and irregular demand of foreign exchange by MOF, to better manage liquidity. The Ministry of Finance and Economy (MOFE) has not conducted outright purchases of foreign exchange in the market via auctions since 2014. The BOA offers a euro/Albanian lek (EUR/ALL) swap facility for the MOFE to be able to use foreign exchange cash balances for Lek payments. The swap is priced on the basis of the interest rate differential between the foreign currency and ALL.

During 2019, the BOA had intervened in the foreign exchange market with the sole purpose of accumulating foreign reserves. The amount purchased is almost 2.6% of the total volume traded of the banking system (excluding double counting of interbank market volumes). In the last years, the BOA’s interventions to manage the level of foreign reserves are guided by a framework incorporating also an optimization model, which accounts for the macroeconomic and financial conditions and the opportunity cost of holding reserves. At the end of each year, the BOA publishes a calendar of the interventions for the upcoming year, announcing the dates and the volumes of such interventions. In tandem with this practice, the dates and amounts of scheduled foreign exchange interventions planned for 2019 were preannounced in December 2018. For 2020, only 2 out of 17 scheduled auctions were held, with the rest being cancelled after the outbreak of COVID-19, given the high uncertainty and sensitivity in the market.

Lek has appreciated against Euro in 2019, but at a considerably slower pace than a year ago. High FDI inflow, increasing exports, and tourism revenues have contributed to the exchange rate trend appreciation in the last five years. Developments in the external sector looked less benign in 2019, with current account widening by roughly 20%. However, a large part of this deficit was on account of lower electricity production and higher imports with data showing a trade deficit without energy (imports and exports) almost unchanged from 2018.

During 2019, the eur/lek developments were in line with the seasonal behavior in the recent years. The appreciation of Lek starts earlier (in April) and lasts longer, compared to the traditional seasonal appreciation in reflection of the continuous improvement of the tourism sector and the extension of the tourism season. After averaging 124.6 leks/euro in the first four months of the year, eur/lek fell to the level of 120.8 in mid-August. The appreciation was partially reversed in the following months with eur/lek closing the year at an average level of 122.2 leks/euro.

Overall, the exchange market was calm in 2019 and the trading of foreign currencies had taken place under normal conditions. Stress indicators (bid-ask spreads) and volatility have been close to their normal averages and the market converged to two-sided volatility following the strong appreciation bias in 2018.

Appreciation/depreciation bias in the market is calculated as the ratio of the number of days when Lek has appreciated to the number of days when it has depreciated, on a rolling window of 250 days. Values close to 1 indicate two-sided volatility or no appreciation of depreciation bias in the market.

Following the outbreak of coronavirus pandemic in Albania, the increase of risk perception in the market led to Lek depreciating against the euro, weakening to the level of 131 leks/euro in the end of March. The BOA intervened in the market by selling euros to prevent a possible disruption in the domestic foreign exchange market. Most of this depreciation was reversed back in April and the exchange rate level is 1.4% higher than the pre-pandemic months. The eur/lek exchange rate has fluctuated around 124 leks/euro in the following months, reflecting the low overall economic activity and lower tourism revenues. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating.
Official exchange rate

Yes. The BOA sets the official rate of the lek against the US dollar and the euro every day, based on rates quoted by the most active and prominent domestic foreign exchange market operators. Rates for other currencies are based on US dollar cross-rates observed in international foreign exchange markets. The official rate of the lek vis-à-vis the principal foreign currencies is the rate used to settle customs obligations and reevaluate the foreign exchange positions of the BOA. Participants in the domestic foreign exchange market are not required to use the official rate in their transactions; however, the BOA requires commercial banks to use the official rate to convert foreign currency positions reported in their monthly balance sheet data.

Inflation-targeting framework

Yes. BOA Supervisory Council is the highest decision-making and supervisory body of the BOA. By law, the BOA is independent in formulating and implementing the monetary policy, including setting a numerical target for inflation. The Supervisory Council has decided that the inflation target is 3.0% over the medium term. Only the Supervisory Council can change the target. The decisions are taken by a majority vote. This degree of independence is outweighed through increased transparency and accountability of its actions. The Supervisory Council meets on a regular schedule published in the beginning of every year. It conducts eight regular meetings for monetary policy decision-making. The monetary policy decisions of the BOA are guided by the deviation of the medium-term inflation forecast from the target. The inflation analysis is broadly based on the assessment of current and expected economic, monetary, and financial conditions.

Inflation target  Yes.  In quantitative terms, the BOA defines price stability as keeping the annual change in consumer prices at 3%, on average terms, and for long time periods. To achieve its objective, the BOA employs the following market-based monetary policy instruments: open-market operations, standing facilities, and reserve requirements. The main policy instrument is a repo (reverse repo) transaction with a seven-day maturity. (The credit for liquidity support is not classified as a monetary policy instrument; it is intended to address financial stability.) Since June 2010, the objective of monetary operations has been to steer and keep short-term interest rates in the interbank market near the base rate set by the BOA Governing Council and minimize their volatility. The BOA removed the target bands in early 2015.

Point target  Yes.

- Yes. The medium-term inflation forecasts are performed quarterly. Only the projected inflation for the current year and the time horizon of achieving inflation objective are published in the quarterly monetary policy report.

Other monetary framework

Exchange tax
- No.

Exchange subsidy
- No.

Foreign exchange market
- Yes. ADs are allowed to freely determine their bid-ask spreads and foreign exchange commissions with their clients.

Spot exchange market
- Yes. In addition to banks, exchange bureaus are allowed to deal in foreign exchange with the public. As of December 31, 2019, 503 foreign exchange bureaus were licensed as foreign exchange operators. The BOA is the only institution that grants such licenses. The exchange bureaus may engage in the following activities: currency trading, trading of traveler’s checks, and acting as an agent for nonbank financial institutions licensed by the BOA to conduct payment services and money transfers. Exchange bureaus are allowed to engage in operations within Albania and are subject to BOA’s supervision and regulatory framework. Their accounts are held within the country only, and there are no restrictions on the volume of their transactions. The BOA deals with exchange bureaus under its intervention policies only in exceptional circumstances, which last occurred in 1998.

Operated by the central bank
- Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility
- No.

Allocation
- No.

Auction
- Yes. The regulation regarding foreign exchange interventions includes the option to carry out transactional interventions via auctions announced in advance. The BOA uses preannounced auctions for the purpose of accumulating foreign exchange reserves. The BOA announces the date, amount, and currency it wants to buy at least one month before the auction, and the banks submit one bid each (in an amount equal to the limit it has provided the BOA). The BOA decides how much to buy based on the rates offered and its target amount. Following the auction, the BOA publishes the amount offered by commercial banks, the amount accepted by the BOA, the range of offered bids, the range of accepted bids, and the prorate at the maximum accepted bid.

Fixing
- No.

Interbank market
- Yes. Banks operate mainly through bilateral payments arrangements and use their own Reuters pages to announce some indicative rates, which usually apply to amounts of at least €50,000. According to the intervention regulation, the BOA may call on each bank to buy/sell up to a limit (trading lot) predetermined by each bank at the price the bank quotes on its Reuters page. Currently, the sum of four largest trading lots is €12 million and all other nine banks have a total limit of €3 million. There were 13 banks.

Capital Transactions

In accordance with the regulation on foreign exchange activities, the transfer of capital from abroad by residents and/or nonresidents may be carried out freely and without restrictions. Capital transfers outside Albania for account holders licensed by the BOA may be performed on the authority of their respective institutions and in accordance with the regulatory and supervisory requirements of the BOA. License holders may make transfers outside Albania for their customers with the requisite documentation in the BOA’s regulation on foreign exchange activities.

Repatriation requirements No.
Surrender requirements No.
Surrender to the central bank No.
Surrender to authorized dealers No.

Controls on capital and money market instruments Yes.

Transactions with securities and other similar instruments, and the exercise of rights arising from the latter, may be carried out only through banks and/or other institutions authorized by law, on the basis of a contract. For prudential reasons and money-laundering prevention, the FIU and the BOA monitor and review these transactions.

On capital market securities Yes.
Law No. 62/2020 “On Capital Markets” does not restrict transactions between residents and nonresidents.

Shares or other securities of a participating nature Yes.

There are no restrictions in Law No. 62/2020 “On Capital Markets,” effective September 1, 2020, on the local purchase of securities by nonresidents. Previously, local purchases by nonresidents had to be performed only by brokerage companies or banks licensed by the Financial Supervisory Authority (FSA).

Purchase locally by nonresidents No.

No person may make an offer to subscribe or purchase securities in the Republic of Albania, unless such offer is made through a prospectus or any such other document issued in terms of the regulations by the Authority for the purposes of solicitation of funds from the public. The prospectus or any such other document prepared by a person making an offer, whether it is made to the public prior to a listing on an exchange, or by way of private placement, must comply with the regulations of the Albanian Financial Supervisory Authority (AFSA).

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents Yes.

Pursuant to Article 247 of Law No. 62/2020 “On Capital Markets,” effective September 1, 2020, (1) An issuer outside the Republic of Albania may offer securities in the Republic of Albania by having a prospectus or an offering memorandum, which is first registered with the competent authority of the home country in accordance with its legal framework, under the condition that the competent authority of the home country has signed a cooperation agreement on information exchange with AFSA in the frame of International Organization of Securities Commissions’ (IOSCO’s) Multilateral Memorandum of Understanding (MMoU).

(2) If it is not one of the countries signatory to the IOSCO MMoU, an issuer outside of the Republic of Albania may issue securities in the Republic of Albania only through an investment firm in the Republic of Albania, which is responsible and guarantees the accuracy and the authenticity of the information given in the prospectus, and is subject to administrative penalties in the case of noncompliance.

Previously, a foreign issuer could issue securities in Albania through a public offering solely through a licensed issuing agent. The FSA could approve publication of the foreign issuer’s prospectus and publication of a prospectus of a foreign issuer making a public offering simultaneously in Albania and in an EU member country or the USA, if publication in that EU country was approved by the relevant authority, or the FSA could condition approval on supplementation of the prospectus with additional information as prescribed by law.

Purchase abroad by residents

Yes. The Law on Capital Markets does not restrict purchases abroad by residents.

Pursuant to the Law on Banks, No. 9662 of December 18, 2006, as amended, banks may invest in the purchase of shares of commercial companies which are not banks or financial institutions or may be a partner of a commercial company, for an amount not exceeding 10% of the capital of that company, but the investment at any time may not exceed 15% of the regulatory capital of the bank. The maximum allowed investment of a bank in several commercial companies which are not banks or financial institutions or the maximum holdings as a partner in such commercial companies may not exceed 60% of the regulatory capital of a bank.

Pursuant to Regulation No. 1 of January 28, 2010, as amended, the assets of a pension fund may not be invested more than (1) 30% in shares or units in investment funds licensed in an EU Member State, and (a) the assets of which are invested in the following indices: CAC 40, DAX, FTSE 100, S&P 500, Dow Jones Industrial Average, Nikkei 225 (Japan), Sensex (India), All Ordinaries (Australia), and Hang Seng Index (Hong Kong); or (b) the assets of which are invested in bonds, treasury bills, and other securities issued or guaranteed by EU Member States; (2) 100% in bonds, treasury bills, or other securities issued or guaranteed by the ECB, the EIB, and the World Bank; (3) 100% in bonds, treasury bills, and other securities issued or guaranteed by EU Member States or OECD countries or by the relevant CBs, but (a) no more than 30% in a single issuer. The ceiling may be increased to 100% in a single issuer, after receiving approval by the FSA, based on the arguments provided for such an investment policy.

Sale or issue abroad by residents

No. There is no restriction for residents to sell or issue abroad since March 27, 2008 by the entry into force of the Law No. 9879 dated February 21, 2008. This law ceased to be in force and is now replaced by Law No. 62/2020 on Capital markets.

Bonds or other debt securities

Yes. The rules on shares transactions apply.

Purchase locally by nonresidents

No. The rules on shares transactions apply.

There are no restrictions in Law No. 62/2020 “On Capital Markets,” effective September 1, 2020, on the local purchase of securities by nonresidents. Previously, local purchases by nonresidents had to be performed only by brokerage companies or banks licensed by the FSA.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents  Yes. The rules on shares transactions apply. No person must make an offer to subscribe or purchase securities in the Republic of Albania, unless such offer is made through a prospectus or any such other document issued in terms of the regulations by the Authority for the purposes of solicitation of funds from the public. ### Insurance companies
Yes.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents
Yes. The Insurance Law, No. 52 (Articles 97 and 103), specifies permissible investments and limits for investment of assets covering... technical or mathematical provisions. Assets covering technical provisions, or mathematical provisions, may, with FSA approval, be invested in (1) long-term bonds and long-term securities issued by an EU member country or an OECD member country; (2) long-term bonds and long-term securities issued by a nongovernmental entity in an EU member country or an OECD member country; (3) shares issued by a foreign joint-stock company that are traded on a regulated capital market in an EU member country or an OECD member country; and (4) units/shares of collective investment undertakings that are traded in an EU member country or an OECD member country. Before acquiring a qualified holding in another foreign (member or nonmember country) insurance company or financial institution, an insurance company must inform the FSA in writing. Insurance companies must also inform the FSA in writing of subsequent holdings equal to or exceeding 20%, 33%, 50%, or 75% of the voting rights or participation in the capital of a foreign financial institution (Article 50, Law No. 52). Regulation No. 19 (Article 4, Point 2) of April 28, 2015, “On the Assets Covering Technical Provisions and the Types of the Permitted Investments of These Assets” stipulates additional requirements, other than limits, regarding the permissible investments of assets covering technical provisions mentioned above. On Albania’s accession to the EU, insurance companies will be allowed to invest their assets covering technical provisions and mathematical provisions in an EU or an OECD member country, as specified in the insurance law (Article 263, Law No. 52).

The Insurance Law, No. 52 (Articles 97 and 103), specifies permissible investments and limits for investment of assets covering technical or mathematical provisions. Assets covering technical provisions, or mathematical provisions, may, with FSA approval, be invested in (1) long-term bonds and long-term securities issued by an EU member country or an OECD member country; (2) long-term bonds and long-term securities issued by a nongovernmental entity in an EU member country or an OECD member country; (3) shares issued by a foreign joint-stock company that are traded on a regulated capital market in an EU member country or an OECD member country; and (4) units/shares of collective investment undertakings that are traded in an EU member country or an OECD member country. Insurance companies must also inform the FSA in writing of subsequent holdings equal to or exceeding 20%, 33%, 50%, or 75% of the voting rights or participation in the capital of a foreign financial institution (Article 50, Law No. 52). Regulation No. 19 (Article 4, Point 2) stipulates additional requirements, other than limits, regarding the permissible investments of assets covering technical provisions mentioned above. On Albania’s accession to the EU, insurance companies will be allowed to invest their assets covering technical provisions and mathematical provisions in an EU or an OECD member country, as specified in the insurance law (Article 263, Law No. 52).

There is no limit on investments held locally. Insurance companies may invest 100% of their technical and mathematical provisions in Albania as long as the restrictions regarding investment type and diversification are met. Insurance companies may invest their technical and mathematical provisions in treasury bills and notes, as well as in other market instruments issued by the central government of Albania.
Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition

Yes. The Insurance Law, No. 52 (Article 98), requires insurance companies to appropriately match the amount of investment of assets covering technical and mathematical provisions which are exposed to risk of potential losses because of changes in interest rates, exchange rates, and other market risks with its liabilities from insurance contracts dependent on the same changes. When investing assets covering technical and mathematical provisions, insurance companies must take into consideration the maturity of the liabilities under individual insurance contracts. Insurance companies must match no less than 80% of the assets covering mathematical provisions with the liabilities under insurance contracts dependent on changes in foreign exchange rates.

Yes. Regulation No. 1 of January 28, 2010, as amended, specifies the restrictions on investment of the assets of pension funds in securities issued abroad, including limits based on debt securities ratings, issuing financial institutions, issuing countries, such as EU or OECD countries, concentration on single issuers, etc.

The assets of a pension fund may not be invested more than (1) 30% in shares or units in investment funds licensed in an EU Member State, and (a) the assets of which are invested in the following indices: CAC 40, DAX, FTSE 100, S&P 500, Dow Jones Industrial Average, Nikkei 225 (Japan), Sensex (India), All Ordinaries (Australia), and Hang Seng Index (Hong Kong); or (b) the assets of which are invested in bonds, treasury bills, and other securities issued or guaranteed by EU Member States; (2) 100% in bonds, treasury bills, or other securities issued or guaranteed by the ECB, the EIB, and the World Bank; (3) 100% in bonds, treasury bills, and other securities issued or guaranteed by EU Member States or OECD countries or by the relevant CBs, but (a) no more than 30% in a single issuer. The ceiling may be increased to 100% in a single issuer, after receiving approval by the FSA, based on the arguments provided for such an investment policy.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally

No. Regulation No. 1 of January 28, 2010, as amended, stipulates that 100% of assets of pension funds may be invested in notes, treasury bills, and other government papers issued and backed by the Republic of Albania. However, there are limits regarding bank deposits and concentration of investment in a single issuer.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition

No. There is no currency-matching regulation.

Investment firms and collective investment funds

Yes.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents

Yes. Articles 139 and 140 of the Law on Collective Investments, No. 56/2020 of June 20, 2020, stipulate restrictions on publicly offered investment funds’ holdings. These include the maturities, transferability, investments in EU countries only (except with FSA permission), issuer concentration, etc. The restrictions are expressed as a percentage of the fund’s total assets. The limits are the same as in the UCITS IV directive.

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad

Yes. The Law on Collective Investments, No. 56/2020 of June 20, 2020, states that there are no limits on the percentage of investments held abroad. However, Articles 139 and 140 stipulate restrictions on publicly offered investment of funds’ assets. There are restrictions on maturities, transferability, investments in EU countries only (except with FSA permission), issuer concentration, etc. The restrictions are expressed as a percentage of the fund’s total assets. Effective June 20, 2020, pursuant to Law No. 56/2020 “On Collective Investment Undertakings,” the limits on maturities, transferability, issuer concentration, etc. are the same as in the UCITS IV Directive.

Effective June 20, 2020, pursuant to Law No. 56/2020 “On Collective Investment Undertakings,” the limits on maturities, transferability, issuer concentration, etc. are the same as in the UCITS IV Directive.

There is no minimum on the investment portfolio held locally. Articles 139 and 140 of the Law on Collective Investments, No. 56/2020 of June 20, 2020, restrict the types of assets, maturities, transferability, etc.

There is no currency-matching regulation.

There are no restrictions in Law No. 62/2020 “On Capital Markets” on the local purchase of securities by nonresidents. Previously, local purchases by nonresidents had to be performed only by brokerage companies or banks licensed by the Financial Supervisory Authority. Pursuant to Article 247 of Law No. 62/2020 “On Capital Markets,” (1) An issuer outside of the Republic of Albania may offer securities in the Republic of Albania by having a prospectus or an offering memorandum, which is first registered with the competent authority of the home country in accordance with its legal framework, under the condition that the competent authority of the home country has signed a cooperation agreement on information exchange with AFSA in the frame of International Organization of Securities Commissions’ (IOSCO’s) Multilateral Memorandum of Understanding (MMoU). (2) If it is not one of the countries signatory to the IOSCO MMoU, an issuer outside of the Republic of Albania may issue securities in the Republic of Albania only through an investment firm in the Republic of Albania, which is responsible and guarantees the accuracy and the authenticity of the information given in the prospectus, and is subject to administrative penalties in the case of noncompliance. Previously, a foreign issuer could issue securities in Albania through a public offering solely through a licensed issuing agent. The Financial Supervisory Authority (FSA) could approve publication of the foreign issuer’s prospectus and publication of a prospectus of a foreign issuer making a public offering simultaneously in Albania and in an EU member country or the USA, if publication in that EU country was approved by the relevant authority, or the FSA could condition approval on supplementation of the prospectus with additional information as prescribed by law.

<td>The de jure exchange rate arrangement is managed floating. The Bank of Algeria (BA) does not announce the path of the exchange rate. The external value of the dinar is determined in the interbank foreign exchange market, in which the BA is the main seller. This is because of inflows related to commodity exports, including hydrocarbons, which, under current law, must be surrendered to the BA. The BA manages the dinar with reference to a basket of currencies, and the rate of the dinar relative to the currencies in the basket is based on balance of payments data. The BA has not set a</td>

Monetary aggregate target Yes. The monetary policy framework adjusts to reflect the developments of the economic environment caused by oil price fluctuations. Since 2003, base money has been the main intermediate instrument of monetary policy, and liquidity management tools dominated the monetary policy toolkit. In March 2017, the BA introduced open market operations for the first time. Until November 2017, open market lending operations served as the main policy tool. With the introduction of monetary financing in October 2017, excess liquidity reappeared and the BA reintroduced liquidity absorption facilities in January 2018. At present, the decline in liquidity has led to greater use of bank refinancing instruments, particularly through open market operations.

The exchange rate policy targets a real effective exchange rate in line with its fundamental value but has occasionally been used to contain price pressures.

Exchange tax  No.

Exchange subsidy  No.

Foreign exchange market  Yes. Authorized exchange bureaus may not freely determine their bid-ask spread. Their rates may vary by no more than 1% from the rate used by the BA (Article 10 of Instruction No. 08-96 of December 18, 1996). Exchange bureaus may charge a commission in dinars, which must be posted, on foreign exchange purchases and sales (Article 1 of Instruction No. 08-96 of December 18, 1996).

Spot exchange market  Yes. The governor of the BA issues licenses to banks and financial institutions to engage in banking operations, including foreign exchange transactions. These licenses are conditional on authorization from the Council on Money and Credit (CMC, a monetary authority). As of December 31, 2019, 19 banks and 4 financial institutions, all authorized intermediaries, participated in the interbank foreign exchange market. Exchange bureaus must obtain a license from the BA (Instruction No. 08-96). As of December 31, 2019, the BA had granted licenses to 45 exchange bureaus, but only 7 bureaus were active. Exchange bureaus may only buy and sell banknotes and traveler’s checks denominated in freely convertible foreign currencies against dinars. Exchange bureaus may sell foreign currency to authorized banks and financial institutions or to the BA, but they may not buy foreign currency from the BA, and they may not hold accounts abroad. They may not make payments or transfers in foreign currency for the accounts of their customers.

Operated by the central bank  Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility  Yes.  The BA intervenes in the foreign exchange market directly by proposing its own rates and by making foreign exchange available to banks at their request. The BA sets the buying and selling rates of the dinar against the US dollar in this market within a margin of 0.015 dinar. The BA sells foreign exchange only to authorized banks and financial institutions. The government and other public institutions do not deal directly with the CB. They deal with financial institutions operating in the interbank foreign exchange market.

Allocation  No.

Auction  No.  The BA allocates foreign exchange at the request of authorized banks and financial institutions.

Fixing  No.

Interbank market  Yes.  No margin limits are imposed on the buying and selling exchange rates in the interbank foreign exchange market. As of December 31, 2019, 19 banks had been licensed to engage in banking operations, including foreign exchange transactions; they therefore participate in the interbank foreign exchange market. The governor of the BA issues the licenses, which are conditional on authorization from the CMC.

Over the counter  Yes.  The exchange rates applicable to OTC trades are set on the basis of the interbank market exchange rate.

Brokerage  No.

Market making  Yes.  Transactions take place between traders (market makers), all of which are authorized banks and financial institutions that are directly and exclusively authorized to operate in the system, and negotiations take place by mutual agreement. The BA continuously quotes buying and selling prices to the other market participants. These transactions are conducted under a BA instruction organizing the foreign exchange market (Instruction No. 79/95 of December 27, 1995, on the foreign exchange market).

Forward exchange market  Yes.  Authorized banks and financial institutions may provide forward cover to clients. Banks are authorized to carry out interbank borrowing and lending operations in freely convertible foreign currency and make deposits in freely convertible foreign currency at the BA. These borrowing and lending operations in foreign currency must be performed exclusively on the forward exchange market (Instruction No. 04-2011 of October 19, 2011). However, foreign exchange forward hedging transactions are still rarely performed. Regulation No. 17-01 of July 10, 2017, concerning interbank forward exchange market and instruments for hedging foreign exchange risks, and Instruction No. 06-2017 of November 26, 2017, concerning the functioning of the market, apply.

Provisions specific to institutional investors | Yes. | There are no specific exchange control provisions applicable to institutional investors. Reinsurance operations, which are equated with purchases of services, are authorized, provided a minimum number of these services are purchased from local reinsurance agencies. Investments by nonresidents in insurance activities are subject to authorization by the Insurance Supervision Commission, the regulatory authority for the insurance sector. Foreign ownership...
of resident firms is limited to 49% of capital.

FDI by insurance companies is governed by the same rules that apply to other companies: outward transfers of capital are authorized for financing activities abroad that are complementary to the company’s production of goods and services in Algeria. The CMC determines the applicable conditions and grants authorization under these conditions (Article 126 of the Law on Money and Credit). Under Article 8 of Regulation No. 07-01, residents are not allowed to hold monetary, financial, and real estate assets abroad.

There are no private pension funds in Algeria. Public pension funds may only invest in domestic securities. Outward transfers of capital to finance the investment of pension funds abroad are only authorized if these investments are supplementary to the pension fund’s activities in Algeria and approved by the currency board.

These funds have no foreign currency liabilities or assets.

There are no exchange control provisions specific to investment firms and collective investment funds. Collective investment funds are not yet subject to exchange control in Algeria.

Collective investment funds are not yet subject to exchange control in Algeria.

Collective investment funds are not yet subject to exchange control in Algeria.

The IMF staff report for the Second Review of the Extended Arrangement Under the Extended Fund Facility, Requests for a Waiver of Nonobservance of Performance Criteria, Modifications of Performance Criteria, and Financing Assurances Review with Angola referencing the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Angola (Country Report No. 18/156) states that, as of November 25, 2019, Angola maintained restrictions on the making of payments and transfers for current international transactions under the transitional arrangements of Article XIV, Section 2. The measures maintained pursuant to Article XIV are: (1) limits on the availability of foreign exchange for invisible transactions i.e. travel expenses; and (2) limits on unrequited transfers to foreign-based individuals and institutions. In addition, Angola maintains two exchange restrictions subject to IMF jurisdiction under Article VIII, Section 2(a) resulting from (1) the discriminatory application of the 0.1% stamp tax on foreign exchange operations by natural persons; and (2) a special tax of 10% on transfers to nonresidents under contracts for foreign technical assistance or management services. Angola also maintains three multiple currency practices that are subject to approval under Article VIII, Section 3 arising from the lack of a mechanism to prevent potential spreads in excess of 2% emerging (1) between successful bids within the BNA’s foreign exchange auction; and (2) for transactions that take place at the reference rate in place and the rate at which transactions take place in the foreign exchange auction on that day, and (3) the discriminatory application of the 0.1% stamp tax on foreign exchange operations by natural persons. (Country Report No. 19/371)

The IMF staff report for the Second Review of the Extended Arrangement Under the Extended Fund Facility, Requests for a Waiver of Nonobservance of Performance Criteria, Modifications of Performance Criteria, and Financing Assurances Review with Angola states that effective November 25, 2019, the exchange restriction arising from the operation of a priority list was eliminated. Exchange Arrangement

The currency of Angola is the Angolan kwanza.

No.

Exchange rate structure

Unitary

Dual

Multiple
Yes. The exchange rate structure is considered multiple because there is a lack of a mechanism to prevent potential spreads in excess of 2% emerging (1) between successful bids within the BNA’s foreign exchange auction; and (2) for transactions that take place at the reference rate in place and the rate at which transactions take place in the foreign exchange auction on that day.

Other managed arrangement
Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating; however, the BNA closely monitors exchange rate fluctuations, possibly to try to maintain price stability in the economy, and frequently intervenes in the foreign exchange market by holding foreign exchange auctions. The BNA receives foreign exchange from the taxes paid by oil companies to the government, and buys foreign exchange from oil companies that make payments to residents for services provided to them in kwanza. In 2018, the BNA adopted a regime of (unannounced) bands for the fluctuation of the kwanza against the euro, and conducted two auctions under the system that led to significant depreciation of the kwanza. To stem exchange rate overshooting, the BNA then set a new foreign exchange auction system in which bids could fluctuate within a plus/minus 2 percentage point band around the average exchange rate of winning bids of the previous auction, de facto capping the maximum depreciation of the exchange rate at 2% per auction. This cap has been abandoned in December 2018, but the BNA can still limit the daily changes in the exchange rate through arbitrarily classifying certain bids in auctions as “speculative” and removing that bid from the auction. From December 2018, the exchange rate has followed a depreciating trend within a 2% band against the US dollar, with one realignment in May 2019, and increased its flexibility (while still being managed) since October 2019. Accordingly, the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified twice: (1) retroactively to “crawl-like” from “other managed,” effective December 17, 2018, and (2) back to “other managed” from “crawl-like,” effective...

Exchange tax Yes. Foreign exchange operations are subject to a stamp duty of 0.1%. Traveler’s checks are exempt from this duty. Presidential Legislative Decree No. 02/15 of June 29, 2015, establishes the Special Contribution for Current Invisible Foreign Exchange Operations regime, imposing a special contribution of 10% on transfers carried out under contracts for foreign technical assistance or management services governed by Presidential Decree No. 273/11 of October 27, 2011.

Exchange subsidy No.

Foreign exchange market Yes. Banks may deal in foreign exchange at freely established rates (not exceeding 2% of the reference rate set by the BNA) among themselves, with the public, and in secondary market operations. [Foreign exchange bureaus must be licensed by the BNA and may deal only in banknotes and traveler’s checks, at freely established rates with individuals and banks. As of end-2019, there were about 89 authorized foreign exchange bureaus in operation, 47 were licensed to perform cash transaction as well as remittance operations, while another 42 were authorized only to perform cash transactions. Exchange bureaus may participate in BNA’s auctions to purchase foreign exchange through commercial banks and may also participate in the secondary market. Besides the exchange bureaus, there are also money transfer bureaus, which may send money abroad. Some exchange bureaus also offer this service. The money transfer bureaus depend on the primary market. There are currently about 25 authorized money transfer bureaus in operation.]

Operated by the central bank Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility No.

Allocation No. Between April 21 and October 2, 2009, the BNA sold US dollars to banks at a fixed rate for the payment of current account transactions after verification of supporting documentation. No fixed-rate allocation of US dollars has taken place since October 2, 2009. Currently, the BNA has two channels of selling foreign exchange: (1) “price” auctions to banks and (2) direct sales of LCs (through commercial banks) to satisfy the demand for foreign currency for certain types of operations.

Auction Yes. The BNA conducts a selling foreign exchange auction that follows the principles of a multiple price auction. Effective January 2, 2019, the BNA implemented new auction rules that removed the 2 percentage band. Previously, bids could fluctuate within a plus/minus 2 percentage point band around the average exchange rate of winning bids of the previous auction, de facto capping the maximum depreciation of the exchange rate at 2% per auction. The frequency of the auctions is determined by the BNA. Currently, it is planned to hold twice a week for “price” auctions and once a month for LC auctions. All transactions are processed electronically. Participants, under the coordination of the BNA, may freely buy and sell foreign exchange on their own behalf or on behalf of their customers. The BNA, as a participant, may also purchase and sell foreign exchange. Purchasing bids, ranked from the highest to the lowest price, must be honored until the foreign exchange amount announced for sale has been exhausted. Sales are conducted at actual bid prices. The BNA has the discretionary power to deem certain bids speculative and remove them from the auction, effectively limiting the variation of the exchange rate. Only commercial banks are eligible to participate in the auctions and must comply with the following requirements: (1) comply with the domestic currency reserve requirement, the foreign exchange position limit, and the regulatory capital ratio; (2) submit all required information to the BNA within the established deadline; (3) have internal controls in place to ensure the observance of the legislation and regulations to trading foreign currency; (4) submit to the BNA information on foreign currency needs by the last business day of the previous week; and (5) submit to the BNA information on the sale of the foreign currency previously purchased and the amount to be returned to the BNA in case of no sale by the 10th business day following each auction or direct sale. The BNA announces electronically through the Foreign Exchange Market Management System (the SGMC—Sistema de Gestão de Mercado Cambial) or by other means the amount of foreign exchange for sale in each auction. Banks may submit up to four different bids through the SGMC with volumes and respective prices up to thirty minutes after the auction is opened. According to new auction instructions which became effective January 2, 2019, each bid’s value cannot be for less than US $250,000 or the equivalent in the currency used in the auction (previously, the limit was €500,000). Banks may bid no more than 15% of their individual capital. In case of auctions to sell foreign exchange to specific sectors, banks must demonstrate their foreign exchange need for those sectors. The BNA may also carry foreign exchange auctions specifically for LCs (quantitative auctions). According to the auction instructions which became effective January 2, 2019, the BNA must commit to selling foreign exchange up to a predetermined ceiling, as per the following modalities: (1) selling on the auction date, an amount to be determined (previously, the limit was 10%) on the basis of the prevailing spot exchange rate, which can be used to settle advance payments or to build collateral and (2) the remaining at the prevailing spot exchange rate, up to five days before the payment of each shipment. The BNA can also commit to sell foreign exchange to cover LCs at a forward exchange rate. Funds allocated in the LC auctions need to be used to open LCs within 45 days, and any unused funds must be canceled. Banks can only bid at the next LC auction if they have opened LCs for a minimum of 50% of the funds allocated to them at the previous LC auction (previously, only LCs for differed payments with maturity dates of at least 60 days from the date of presentation of the documents relating to each shipment were allowed). At the end of the process, information on the auction results is available to all participants in the SGMC; the results are also posted on the BNA.
The BNA may conduct auctions to buy foreign exchange from commercial banks. However, no such auctions have taken place as of May 2018. The BNA may buy from each bank up to 25% of the total announced. The amounts sold or bought are settled in D+2 through the real-time gross settlement system and by debt or credit to the bank reserve account of each bank with the BNA.

Fixing
- No.

Interbank market
- Yes.
  - Banks and exchange bureaus may deal in foreign exchange among themselves and with their customers at freely negotiated rates (commercial bank rates cannot exceed 2% of the reference rate set by the BNA). All active commercial banks may participate in the interbank market, but the volume is small because banks generally deal with their customers and/or with the BNA through auctions.

Over the counter

No.

Barter agreements and open accounts

No.

Administration of control

Yes. The BNA is the exchange authority of the Republic of Angola.

Payments arrears

Yes. Guidelines were defined to regularize arrears up to December 31, 2017.

Official

Yes. Some public debt from the 1980s and 1990s remains to be settled—namely, that owed to Portugal and Eastern European countries, where the identification of credible creditors has hampered negotiations.

Private

Yes. Guidelines were defined to regularize arrears up to December 31, 2017.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion)

Yes. Under the Foreign Exchange Law, control of trade in gold is exclusively incumbent on the BNA.

On domestic ownership and/or trade

Yes. Residents are permitted to hold and trade gold only in the form of jewelry. In 2014, the Gold Agency was created to execute, monitor, control, and manage gold sales and pricing policies. The Agency is also responsible for guaranteeing the purchase of gold on the artisanal market and reselling it on the domestic and international markets.

On external trade

Yes. Imports and exports of gold in the form of coins and bullion are subject to a BNA monopoly.

Controls on exports and imports of banknotes

Yes. Banks are permitted to import/export banknotes without authorization from the BNA.

On exports

Yes. Banks are authorized to export banknotes without authorization from the BNA.

Domestic currency

Yes. Exports of domestic currency are under the exclusive authority of the BNA.

Foreign currency

Yes. Banks are authorized to import/export banknotes without authorization from the BNA.

Resident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted

Yes. Foreign exchange residents are permitted to open accounts in foreign exchange subject to the conditions applicable to their transactions (Notice No. 03/09 of June 5, 2009).

Held domestically

Yes. Individuals' accounts may be credited with foreign currency deposits in cash or other instruments generally accepted in the international financial market and with accrued interest. These accounts may be debited by the withdrawal or sale of foreign currency and the issuance of any generally accepted instrument for settlement of transactions involving merchandise imports, current invisibles, and capital, carried out by the depositor in accordance with existing foreign exchange regulations. Legal entities’ accounts may be credited with foreign currency deposits in cash or other generally accepted instruments derived from their business activity and with accrued interest. These accounts may be debited in accordance with the licensing regulations for goods, invisibles, and capital transactions and the withdrawal or sale of foreign currency.

Approval required

Yes. Withdrawals of foreign currency by residents are de facto restricted in some commercial banks. Customers of some commercial banks may only withdraw foreign currency from their account if traveling, and this also depends on the bank’s foreign currency availability. Commercial banks have set monthly or weekly limits on the withdrawal of foreign currency.

Held abroad

Yes. Individuals may have these accounts without BNA approval. Legal entities may open foreign exchange accounts abroad, with BNA approval, which may be credited with export receipts and debited with payments for imports of goods and services and debt-service payments. Diamond and other mineral companies may, with BNA approval, open escrow accounts in banks abroad as security for foreign borrowing.

Approval required

Yes. Legal entities may open foreign exchange accounts abroad with BNA approval. Individuals may hold such accounts without BNA approval.

Accounts in domestic currency held abroad

No. As the kwanza is not a convertible currency, accounts in kwanzas cannot be opened abroad.

Accounts in domestic currency convertible into foreign currency

No. Accounts in kwanzas cannot be converted to foreign currency.

This information can be found at the AREAER ONLINE database: http://www.elibrary-areaer.imf.org/Pages/Reports.aspx.

Nonresident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted

Yes. These accounts may be credited with foreign currency imported from abroad and with the accrued interest. They may be debited for sales of foreign currency, payments to residents in domestic currency, foreign currency expenditures abroad, interbank transfers to resident entities belonging to the same group, the use of international credit and debit cards, and/or the repatriation of amounts authorized by the BNA.

Approval required

No.

Domestic currency accounts

Yes. Before 2009, nonresidents may open two types of domestic currency accounts: type A and type B. Type A accounts may be credited with the proceeds from the sale of resources from foreign exchange accounts and, with BNA authorization, with receipts from nonresidents’ activities in Angola. These accounts may be debited for payments of local expenses and against the purchase of foreign currency to be deposited in a foreign exchange account held by the same entity. Type B accounts may be credited only with receipts from nonresidents’ activities in Angola (when authorized by the BNA) and may be debited for payments of local expenses. These types of accounts were canceled in accordance with Notice No. 03/09 of June 5, 2009. The balance of type A account was converted and transferred to the foreign exchange accounts of nonresidents. Type B accounts were reclassified as domestic currency accounts for Banks must also verify that the foreign exchange operation complies with the applicable legislation and should request all the necessary documentation to confirm it. The required documentation will also depend on the type of payment. Under the terms of the Notice, there are four payment mechanisms: documentary credit, advance payment, remittance, and documentary collection. To improve the competitiveness of the economy and expedite the import process, a “Simplified Regime” was approved, in which companies do not have to submit the documentation supporting import operations to the banks, but instead are required to submit to the BNA, through commercial banks, certain documents such as audited financial statements for the last three fiscal years and letters of engagement from the management administration/body.</td>

Imports of arms and ammunition are subject to authorization by the Ministry of the Interior. Imports for specific purposes may be exempt from customs tariffs.

Open general licenses No. Foreign trade is not subject to foreign exchange licensing; however, it is recorded in a computer system, SICOEX (Sistema Integrado de Comércio Exterior)—Integrated System of Foreign Trade, Ministry of Commerce—for the licensing, registration, and control of operations.

Licenses with quotas Yes. Under the quota system, three provinces (Cabinda, Cunene, and Cuando Cubango) are each allowed to import 150,000 tons of cement a year.

Other nontariff measures Yes.

Import taxes and/or tariffs Yes. Presidential Legislative Decree No. 10/13 of November 22, 2013, approves the new tariff schedule, the full text of which was republished January 30, 2014. The tax system consists of eight rates: 1%, 2%, 5%, 10%, 20%, 25%, 30%, and 35%.

Taxes collected through the exchange system Yes. A tax stamp of 0.1% (the percentage under the previous law was 0.001% for foreign exchange operations) is collected through the foreign exchange system.

State import monopoly Yes. Petroleum products may be imported only by the public oil company. Arms and ammunition for warfare may be imported only by the government.

Exports and Export Proceeds

Repatriation requirements Yes. All revenue in foreign exchange deriving from each export operation must be deposited in a bank account in foreign exchange held by the exporter. Under Notice No. 5/18, the exporter must sell, five days from the date the resources enter the country, to the bank that brokered the operation, 50% of the foreign exchange revenue deriving from the export at the exchange rate negotiated with the bank on the execution date of the transaction. They should be used primarily to pay for imports. On the other hand, they must be converted to domestic currency for payments to resident entities. Diamond companies may retain export proceeds in Angolan banks to pay for imports of goods and services. They may also retain part of their receipts abroad in escrow accounts, with BNA authorization, as security for foreign borrowing.

Surrender requirements Yes. Under Notice No. 5/18, the exporter must sell, five days from the date the resources enter the country, to the bank that brokered the operation, 50% of the foreign exchange revenue deriving from the export at the exchange rate negotiated with the bank on the execution date of the transaction. They should be used primarily to pay for imports. On the other hand, they must be converted to domestic currency for payments to resident entities. Diamond companies may retain export proceeds in Angolan banks to pay for imports of goods and services. They may also retain part of their receipts abroad in escrow accounts, with BNA authorization, as security for foreign borrowing.

With BNA approval, foreign companies may retain their export receipts abroad for payment of imports of goods and services, transfer of interest and profits, and the amortization of capital. These companies must use funds from abroad for the payment of royalties, taxes, and local expenses. According to Law No. 2/12 of January 13, 2012, the foreign exchange law for the oil sector, foreign companies in the oil sector may retain export proceeds in foreign accounts for deposit of balances after payment of current expenses, profits and dividends, incentives and other capital remuneration, and the amount of investment amortization. The BNA issued a normative instruction (No. 7/2014) reversing the previous decision that allowed foreign companies in the oil sector to retain export proceeds in foreign accounts for deposit of balances after payment of current expenses, profits and dividends, incentives and other capital remuneration, and the amount of investment amortization.

Surrender to the central bank Yes. Tax payments by oil companies must be surrendered to the BNA from deposits on account with financial institutions in Angola. The BNA issued a normative instruction (No. 7/2014) reversing the previous decision that allowed foreign companies in the oil sector to retain export proceeds in foreign accounts for deposit of balances after payment of current expenses, profits and dividends, incentives and other capital remuneration, and the amount of investment amortization.

Surrender to authorized dealers Yes. All revenue in foreign exchange deriving from each export operation must be deposited in a bank account in foreign exchange held by the exporter. Under Notice No. 5/18, the exporter must sell, five days from the date the resources enter the country, to the bank that brokered the operation, 50% of the foreign exchange revenue deriving from the export at the exchange rate negotiated with the bank on the execution date of the transaction. The available resources in their accounts in foreign exchange must be used first to settle any imports. By contrast, the funds must be converted to kwanzas to make payments to resident entities. Diamond enterprises may retain export revenue in local bank accounts to make payments for imports of goods and services. With authorization from the BNA, they may also retain some of the revenue abroad in escrow accounts to guarantee loans arranged abroad.

Financing requirements No.

Documentation requirements Yes. This is one of the payment mechanisms provided in the regulatory texts.

Letters of credit Yes.

Guarantees No.

Domiciliation Yes.

Preshipment inspection No.

Instruction No. 4/2019 on the Granting of Credit, effective April 26, 2019, defines the following rules for credits unrelated to international payment cards:

(1) Banks must apply differentiated interest rates to their customers, defined to reflect the specific risk rating of each operation, determined based, inter alia, on the level of risk attributed to each customer, the features of the instrument, and the collateral provided.

(2) In the cases of loans with variable interest rates, banks should preferably use the indexing factor that is generally used for credit agreements in the currency in question, and a margin may be added to or subtracted from this factor to reflect the level of risk associated with each operation determined based on the factors referred to in item 1.1 (a) of Instruction No. 4/2019.

(3) For credits denominated in domestic currency with variable interest rates, banks should preferably apply the Luibor as an indexing factor.

(4) The term of the indexing factor should correspond to the interest payment period.

Article 4 (Classification of credits)

(1) Financial institutions are required to classify risk positions mentioned in Article 1 of this Notice in accordance with the specific regulatory texts, on methodologies for the establishment of provisions, in increasing order of risk level.

(2) The individual classification of the risk position should take into account the operating risks and characteristics of the borrower, in observance of at least (a) the application of the resources by operating type or mechanism; (b) the debtor’s predominant activity; (c) whether or not borrowing operations are involved; (d) guarantees received from the debtor; (e) currency, index factor, and term of the operation; (f) full, accurate identification of the borrower and the economic group to which it belongs.

(3) The individual classification of the risk position with the corresponding level of risk is incumbent on the institution holding the credit and must be carried out based on an estimate of possible loss calculated using consistent, verifiable criteria, with supporting information from internal and external sources, supplemented at least with the following:
(a) With relation to the debtor and its guarantees: (1) Economic and financial situation. (2) Management capacities and quality of internal controls. (3) History of timely or late payments. (4) Contingencies. (5) Economic sector. (6) Geographic area of activity. (7) Credit limit. (b) With relation to the operation: (1) Nature and type of transaction. (2) Features of the guarantees, particularly those concerning the sufficiency of liquidity. (3) Value.

The institutions should ensure that the methodologies and processes applied in determining the individual classification of risk positions by risk level are adequately established.

Since September 7, 2016.

Article 6 (Solvency assessment)

(1) Before entering into credit agreements, institutions are required to assess the customer’s solvency through the verification of the information the customer has provided and by consulting the Credit Risk Information Center (CIRC) as provided in Notice No. 02/2010 of November 18, 2010.

(2) In addition to the assessment provided in the foregoing paragraph, the institution may also consult other databases considered useful in the assessment of the solvency of their customers.

Article 14 (Credit restructuring)

(1) When default has been verified in connection with credit agreements, institutions must make arrangements to contact the customer to determine the reasons for the default.

(2) It is incumbent on the customer to provide evidence of the financial difficulties it is experiencing underlying its failure to meet its financial commitments.

(3) The institutions must inform the customers and the BNA of the credit agreements subject to restructuring and must give preference to the extrajudicial regularization of such arrangements. The customer must be given one or more adequate proposals to regularize the financial situation.

(4) In the analysis of the customer’s financial situation, institutions must consider its overall liabilities, and not only commitments undertaken with the institution. (5) When changes to the agreements are justified as a result of the customer’s financial difficulties, the institutions may not increase the credit charges, specifically by raising the interest or fees charged, or any expenses related to the restructuring of the loan.

Since April 26, 2019.
LTV

The ratio between the total amount of the credit agreements guaranteed with a given real property asset and the lowest purchase price or assessed value of the property provided as a guarantee for home loans at the date the loan is granted must not exceed:

(a) 90% for permanent owner-occupied housing;
(b) 80% for purposes other than owner-occupied housing;
(c) 100% for the purchase of real properties held by the banks themselves;
(d) 100% for real property leases.

Institutions cannot undertake large risks with one counterparty or group of related counterparties when the value exceeds 25% of their regulatory capital.

The limit referred to in numeral 1 above is reduced to 10% of regulatory capital when the large risks involve institutions with qualified holdings or if the shareholders include a group of related counterparties, except when the qualified holdings are in one institution.

The total of the top 20 large risk exposures cannot exceed 300% of regulatory capital.

Update of prudential limits since June 2017.

Institutions may not directly or indirectly hold stakes or shares in a nonfinancial enterprise or group of related nonfinancial enterprises if the amount exceeds 15% of the regulatory capital of the participating institution.

The total amount of the stakes or shares directly or indirectly held in nonfinancial enterprises cannot exceed 40% of the investing institution’s regulatory capital.

Institutions may not hold, for periods exceeding three years, continuously or intermittently, directly or indirectly, shares or stakes exceeding 25% of the capital in a nonfinancial enterprise.

Amounts exceeding the limits provided in Notice No. 9/2016 can be deducted from regulatory capital.

Foreign exchange market

Spot exchange market
The Bank of Angola implemented new auction rules that removed the 2 percentage band. Previously, bids could fluctuate within a plus/minus 2 percentage point band around the average exchange rate of winning bids of the previous auction, de facto capping the maximum depreciation of the exchange rate at 2% per auction.

According to new auction instructions, each bid’s value cannot be for less than US$250,000 or the equivalent in the currency used in the auction (previously, the limit was €500,000).

Banks may bid no more than 15% of their individual capital. In case of auctions to sell foreign exchange to specific sectors, banks must demonstrate their foreign exchange need for those sectors.

The BNA may carry foreign exchange auctions specifically for LCs (quantitative auctions). The BNA must commit to selling foreign exchange up to a predetermined ceiling, as per the following modalities: (1) selling on the auction date, an amount to be determined (previously, the limit was 10%) on the basis of the prevailing spot exchange rate, which can be used to settle advance payments or to build collateral and (2) the remaining at the prevailing spot exchange rate, up to five days before the payment of each shipment.

The BNA can commit to sell foreign exchange to cover LCs at a forward exchange rate. Funds allocated in the LC auctions need to be used to open LCs within 45 days, and any unused funds must be cancelled.

Banks can only bid at the next LC auction if they have opened LCs for a minimum of 50% of the funds allocated to them at the previous LC auction (previously, only LCs for differed payments with maturity dates of at least 60 days from the date of presentation of the documents relating to each shipment were allowed).

Total cost of credit granted by international payment cards at the annual nominal rate of interest and fees cannot exceed 7.5% per annum. Banks may apply fixed or variable interest rates, and the latter must be indexed to the Luibor less a margin, although it should be ensured at all times that the total cost of credit granted does not exceed 7.5% per annum. The Luibor rate to be applied should correspond to the periodicity of the interest payments.

Banks are required to apply differentiated interest rates to their customers, defined to reflect the specific risk rating of each operation, determined based, inter alia, on the level of risk attributed to each customer, the features of the instrument, and the collateral provided.

In the cases of loans with variable interest rates, banks should preferably use the indexing factor that is generally used for credit agreements in the currency in question, and a margin may be added to or subtracted from this factor to reflect the level of risk associated with each operation determined based on the factors referred to in item 1.1 (a) of Instruction No. 4/2019.

For credits denominated in domestic currency with variable interest rates, banks should preferably apply the Luibor as an indexing factor. The term of the indexing factor should correspond to the interest payment period.

Changes during 2019 and 2020

No significant changes occurred in the exchange and trade system.
Status under IMF Articles of Agreement

- Date of membership: September 20, 1956.
- Article VIII: Yes. Date of acceptance: May 14, 1968.
- Article XIV:

Exchange Measures

- Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices: Yes. The IMF staff report for the Fourth Review under the Stand-By Arrangement, Request for Waivers of Applicability and Modification of Performance Criteria, and Financing Assurances Review with Argentina states that, as of July 3, 2019, the retention of the multiple currency price auction put in place in June 2018 that staff has assessed gives rise to the multiple currency practice. (Country Report No. 19/232)

- Exchange measures imposed for security reasons: Yes. Argentina notified the IMF that it maintains restrictions in accordance with UNSC resolutions on preventing the financing of terrorism.

- Other security restrictions: Yes. The Central Bank of the Argentine Republic (BCRA) has established that financial and exchange institutions are subject to the provisions of Law Nos. 25.246 and 26.734 as amended and supplemented, Decree No. 918/12, and FIU Resolution No. 12/11 as amended, 30-E/2017, and FIU Resolution No. 29/2013. Under these laws, decrees, and resolutions, regulated institutions must follow the regulatory guidelines of the FIU for the prevention of money laundering, financing of terrorism, and other unlawful activities “without delay,” including Argentine Executive Branch decrees regarding UNSC resolutions on combating terrorism and resolutions (and their annexes) of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Worship. Article 1 of Executive Decree No. 918/12 regulates the measures and procedures for the administrative freezing of goods linked to the criminal activities specified in Article 306 of the Criminal Code (financing of terrorism), as well as the procedure for inclusion and exclusion from the lists established in accordance with UNSC resolutions.

- Com. “A” 6244, now Para. 5.5 of the TO de EyC (Com. A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions), retained the minimum information that ADs must verify when funds are transferred to and from abroad, including the messages that pertain to these transfers (as well as various control mechanisms) to include:
  - the payer’s and recipient’s information,
  - having procedures to detect information missing in transfers and, in such cases, keeping them pending settlement until omissions are remedied.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is floating. The exchange rate of the peso is determined in the Free Foreign Exchange Market (now the MLC) by market forces and applies to all transactions in foreign exchange and foreign currency banknotes (under Para. 1.3 of the TO de EyC (Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions)).

In October 2018, the BCRA adopted a new monetary-exchange scheme and defined Zones of intervention and non-intervention, within which the peso could float freely. Initially, the non-intervention zone limits were defined at $34 and $44 per dollar, adjusted daily at a rate of 3% per month until the end of 2018. If the exchange rate were above the upper limit, the BCRA could intervene through bids for the sale of dollars for a fixed daily amount, while if the exchange rate breached the lower limit, bids for the purchase of dollars for a fixed daily amount could be made. During the first quarter of 2019, the non-intervention zone limits were updated daily at a monthly rate of 2%, using the existing limits as of December 31, 2018, as a benchmark. During January and much of February, the exchange rate operated close to the lower limit of the non-intervention zone, falling below it on several occasions. This led the CB to make foreign exchange purchases from the market for US$978 million between January 10 and February 13, in accordance with the mechanism established in the monetary regime. The adjustment of the non-intervention zone limits was 1.75% per month in the first half of April. Effective April 16, 2019, it was decided that the adjustment would be 0% for the rest of the year (keeping the lower and upper limits constant at 39.755 and 51.448 pesos per dollar, respectively), and effective April 29, 2019, it was established that, because of the increase in exchange volatility, discretionary interventions could be made within what would become known as the Reference Zone (between 39.755 and 51.448 pesos per dollar) and that, if the exchange rate were above the upper limit, a total of US$250 million could be sold, maintaining the possibility of increasing this amount if deemed necessary. Additionally, the BCRA decided that it would not buy foreign exchange if the exchange rate breached the lower limit of the Reference Zone until July.
A managed floating foreign exchange arrangement is an appropriate instrument for avoiding large fluctuations in the exchange rate, which adversely affect competitiveness, domestic prices, and income distribution. The exchange policy will also promote the preventative accumulation of international reserves, based actual foreign currency revenues from the external sector. The severe balance of payments crisis in 2019, which led to a sizable depreciation of the domestic currency, resulted in the termination of the previous floating arrangement with full capital mobility as of September 2019. From this date forward, a series of exchange regulations were issued that were ratified and regularly updated, including in particular the mandatory repatriation of export proceeds on the local foreign exchange market (MULC) and limits on the formation of external assets using local resources. At the same time, by sanction of the Law on Social Solidarity and the Reactivation of Production in the Context of the Public Emergency, the National Government established a tax on the purchase of foreign exchange intended for hoarding and the payment of foreign travel and tourism services. Capital controls made it possible to limit exchange volatility and avoid its impact on prices, economic activity and financial stability. Under the managed floating arrangement, the exchange rate gradually rose over the remainder of the year to preserve competitiveness, moderating its impact on prices. The exchange regulations also helped to prioritize the use of the international reserves at times when sources of foreign currency financing were scarce owing to conditions on the global capital market and the restructuring of the public debt.

Because the exchange rate followed a depreciating trend within a 2% band against the US dollar from September 2019, with a short period of stability (from November 2019 to January 2020), the de facto exchange rate arrangement was reclassified to “other managed” from “floating,” effective September 4, 2019.

Exchange rate intervention data can be consulted in the Daily Monetary Report, which is available on the BCRA’s website. This report publishes intervention data on net purchases from the private sector and the National Treasury on a daily basis with a 3-day lag (business days) because of the time required for appropriate processing of the information prior to its dissemination.

Floating operations are carried out at the exchange rate that is freely agreed between the parties (Para. 1.3 of the TO de EyC, contained in Com. A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions).

The reference exchange rate (TCR) is not an official exchange rate. It is calculated as specified in Communication A 3500, used for information purposes only, and is intended to reflect the wholesale market price based on average buying and selling rates.

In light of the economic and social emergency, which was deepened by the COVID-19 pandemic, and a critical situation in terms of access to the voluntary foreign credit market, the National Government adopted a series of measures intended to deal with the effects of the crisis and undertook to restore public debt sustainability, while the Executive Branch decided to delay presentation of the 2020 National Budget.

Bearing in mind these limitations, the BCRA deemed it prudent, for 2020, to move ahead with the establishment of a series of guidelines to help with the formation of the expectations of the various economic agents:

Monetary aggregates: The degree of monetization of the Argentine economy was at historically low levels prior to the pandemic, and it is hoped that reasonable levels will be maintained through to the end of the year. The monetary policy should promote prudent expansion of the monetary aggregates, avoiding imbalances that directly or indirectly affect the inflationary process. The BCRA will use all of the tools at its disposal to handle potential liquidity surpluses that could emerge in the coming months. Until now, the BCRA has mainly used BCRA Liquidity Bills (LELIQs) and repos, with an average rate of around 33%.

Credit: Domestic credit intermediation is at relatively very low levels and is expected to expand to meet the needs of households and production, on a strategic path that will cover not just the short term but also the medium and long terms.

Interest rate: The BCRA deems that the real interest rate should protect the external and financial stability of the economy and should be compatible with the financing of production and the construction of a longer-term yield curve, promoting domestic currency savings. The latter assumes management of interest rates to avoid them falling to negative real levels.

For this purpose, twice weekly, the monetary policy rate, which is the rate on LELIQs, is established by auction. It should be noted that since February 4 LELIQs have a term of 28 days and that the Board of Directors of the BCRA determines the minimum interest rate on these instruments, which has stood at 38% since March 10. As well, the BCRA took a series of measures to improve the yield on fixed-term deposits in pesos and thus protect domestic currency savings. In April, a minimum interest rate equivalent to 70% of the LELIQ rate was established for fixed-term deposits for individuals, up to $4 million. This was extended to all term deposits of the private sector in mid-May. Later, in early June, this was raised to 79% of the LELIQ rate and as of August it was increased for investments of up to $1 million by individuals to 87% of the LELIQ rate.

Exchange tax No.
Exchange subsidy No.
Foreign exchange market Yes. Under the provisions of Article 132 of Law No. 27444 (repealing Article 188 of Decree No. 27/18), which replaced Article 1 of Decree No. 260/2002 and Para. 1.2 of Communication “A” 6244 and Supplementary Provisions, all foreign exchange operations had to be carried out in the MLC. The exchange rate is determined by market forces. ADs freely set their bid-ask spreads and the commissions on foreign exchange transactions with their customers.
Until August 31, 2019, Communication A 6244 governed foreign exchange operations by the provisions included in its Annex, replacing all foreign exchange regulations that had until that time governed such operations and were established on the basis of the Consolidated Text on External Affairs and Foreign Exchange. The framework established that all individuals and legal entities, and certain trusts and other estates could operate freely on the foreign exchange market through authorized institutions, without distinction by type of operation and/or residence of the customer.

Since September 9, 2019, Decree No. 609/2019, amended by Art. 1 of Decree No. 91/2019 (Boletín Oficial (B.O.) December 28, 2019), establishes:

Article 1 – The equivalent value of the exports of goods and services must be repatriated in foreign exchange and/or traded on the foreign exchange market under the conditions and terms established by the BCRA.

Article 2 – The BCRA, in accordance with its Charter, will establish the circumstances in which access to the foreign exchange market for the purchase of foreign exchange and minted precious metals and transfers abroad will require prior approval, based on objectives guidelines established in accordance with prevailing conditions on the foreign exchange market and distinguishing between the situations of individuals and legal entities.

Article 3 – The BCRA is authorized to establish regulations to prevent practices and operations that are intended to circumvent, through the use of public securities or other instruments, the provisions of this measure. Article 3 authorizes the BCRA to establish regulations to prevent practices and operations that are intended to circumvent, through the use of public securities or other instruments, the provisions of this measure. [sic]

The indicated provision was regulated by Com A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions, which are now found in the TO de EyC (Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions).

Para. 1.1 of the TO de EyC establishes that financial institutions or exchange dealers authorized to deal in foreign exchange by the BCRA must intervene in all foreign exchange operations, swaps, and/or arbitrage on the foreign exchange market.

The MULC (now the MLC) operates on a spot basis, and transactions are settled within 48 hours (Communication A 6244, Para. 4.3, now Para. 6.3 of the TO de EyC).

It is the only formal mechanism for foreign exchange transactions (Communication A 6244, Para. 1.2, now Para. 1.1 of the TO de EyC).

As of December 31, 2019, [79] financial institutions were licensed to operate and [241] exchange dealers were registered. By law, the BCRA is responsible for authorizing the operation of these institutions and for establishing their operating powers and reporting requirements.
Foreign exchange institutions (foreign exchange bureaus and agencies) may operate on the foreign exchange market. As of December 31, 2019, [27] exchange bureaus and [214] agencies were registered.

Foreign exchange bureaus may carry out all the operations provided for in the rules on “External Affairs and Foreign Exchange.” Effective April 30, 2020, exchange bureaus may simultaneously carry out only activities related to tourism and sales of travel tickets. Previously, they could also participate in public offerings of securities, subject to the relevant legal provisions.

Exchange agencies may buy and sell foreign currency banknotes and coins; buy foreign currency traveler’s checks, which may be sold only to financial institutions authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions; and buy and sell gold coins and good delivery gold bars. They may use only local funds received through transactions with their customers, ADs, and exchange bureaus or agencies for their operations. Effective April 30, 2020, exchange agencies may simultaneously carry out only activities related to tourism and sales of travel tickets. Previously, they may simultaneously carry out any commercial, industrial, or other type of activity, in accordance with the corresponding legal provisions.

The retail exchange rates offered in Buenos Aires by institutions in the system may be consulted at the BCRA’s website. The information includes “reference retail exchange rates” calculated on the basis of the rates announced by institutions. These rates are intended to provide information regarding quotations in the MULC – currently the MLC (Communication “B” 9791). Communication A 3500 established the mechanisms for calculating the TCR on each bank business day for wholesale operations that can be settled in pesos and US dollars on the quotation date.

Operated by the central bank

Foreign exchange standing facility
No.

Allocation
No.

Auction
Yes.

The BCRA may conduct foreign exchange auctions in accordance with the following guidelines: (1) announcement of the auction: by BCRA press release and SIOPEL press release; (2) total amount of the auction: will be established by the BCRA in each case; (3) time of auction: variable (the BCRA will establish the time and duration); (4) number of bids: up to a maximum of three bids per dealer; (5) amount of each bid: minimum of 1 million and no maximum; (6) award system: bids may be awarded at multiple prices or a single price; in both cases an apportionment system will be used if necessary; and (7) settlement: spot.

The most recent auction was conducted on October 25, 2019. Auctions are currently not being held, but the regulation remains in effect.

Fixing
No.

Interbank market
Yes.

At end-2019, a total of 64 banks operated on the interbank market. To operate as a financial institution, institutions must have the prior authorization of the BCRA. In 2019, the BCRA authorized three new institutions (two banks and one financial company).

Foreign exchange market transactions comprise the transactions of ADs with their customers, with each other, and with the BCRA.
Customer foreign exchange transactions must involve an authorized institution. Foreign exchange transactions between authorized institutions must be conducted through the SIOPEL when agreed to directly between the parties.

Purchases and sales of foreign exchange outside this system are allowed between authorized institutions when one or both parties are not authorized to operate in the SIOPEL and provided the transactions do not involve exchange brokers and do not exceed the equivalent of US$8,00,000 a day, calculated as the sum of each institution’s purchases and sales (Communication A 6244, Para. 3.6, now Para. 5.11 of the TO de EyC (Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions)). The BCRA conducts its foreign exchange transactions with authorized institutions through the SIOPEL.

The CB does not use market makers and intervenes directly with market participants at their quoted rates, or through auctions on the market (Communication A 6527).

At end-2019, 55 banks operated in foreign exchange.

Foreign exchange transactions between authorized institutions must be conducted through the SIOPEL when agreed to directly between the parties.

Buying and selling of foreign exchange is also permitted between institutions authorized outside of the SIOPEL, when one or both parties is/are not authorized to operate within this system, in a daily amount not to exceed the equivalent of US$8,00,000, considering the total of both items in each institution (Communication A 6244, Para. 3.6, now Para. 5.11 of the TO de EyC (Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions)).

The BCRA operates on the futures market for monetary policy purposes. At the end of 2019, the most relevant futures market was Rofex de Rosario (Rosario Futures Exchange), which had a participation rate of 96%. On August 1, 2019, this market began to operate under the name of Matba Rofex S.A. following its merger with the Buenos Aires Futures and Options Exchange (Mercado a Término de Buenos Aires – Matba). Transactions are settled by daily netting in domestic currency. The foreign exchange futures market uses the TCR published by the BCRA.

Controls on the use of domestic currency No. There are no restrictions on the currency used. International payments are not normally settled in domestic currency.

For current transactions and payments No. Foreign transactions are settled in a freely usable currency.

For capital transactions No.
Transactions in capital and money market instruments  No.
Transactions in derivatives and other instruments  No.
Credit operations  No.
Use of foreign exchange among residents  Yes.

Foreign exchange purchased by residents in accordance with the foreign exchange regulations is freely available as long as they do not have a specific subsequent application.

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 9 of Com A 6770, now Para. 3.6 of the TO de EyC, prohibits access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of debt and other foreign currency obligations between residents with the following exceptions:

- foreign currency financing granted by local financial institutions, including payments for foreign currency consumer purchases via credit cards (Para. 3.6.1);
- foreign currency debts between residents taking the form of public instruments or entries in registries as at August 30, 2019 (Para. 3.6.2);
- new issues of debt securities intended to refinance debt included in Para. 3.6.2 and involving an increase in the average term of the obligations (Para. 3.6.3);
- issues of debt securities by residents with public registration in Argentina as from November 29, 2019, denominated and subscribed in foreign currency and the capital and interest of which are payable in Argentina in foreign currency, as long as all of the funds obtained have been sold on the foreign exchange market in accordance with the provisions of Para. 2.5 of the TO de EyC.

Previously, all individuals, legal entities, equity concerns, and other estates may operate freely on the foreign exchange market through authorized institutions without making the distinction by type of operation and/or residence of the customer.

Payments arrangements  Yes.
Bilateral payments arrangements  Yes.
Operative  Yes. The domestic currency payments system (Sistema de Monedas Locales – SML) is voluntary and intended for trade-related transactions between Argentina and Brazil and between Argentina and Uruguay (Para. 2.3 of Communication A 6244, since December 5, 2019, Para. 4.3 of the TO de EyC established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions). It allows importers and exporters from both countries to make and collect payments in their respective currencies. These transactions are channeled into the financial system, and the CBs clear the balances on a daily basis through correspondents.

Inoperative  Yes. The BCRA has a reciprocal payments and credit arrangement with the National Bank of Cuba. In accordance with BCRA Communication A 2284, collections for any purpose must be made in freely available foreign exchange, while payments for any purpose must on a mandatory basis be made through the arrangement. Although the arrangement is in force, it is inactive as it has not been used to carry out any transactions for at least two decades.

Regional arrangements  Yes. Within the framework of the multilateral clearing system of the LAIA or in Spanish: ALADI, payments between Argentina and other LAIA countries are settled voluntarily under payments agreements.
and a reciprocal credit mechanism.

Clearing agreements No.
Barter agreements and open accounts No.
Administration of control Yes. Exchange regulations are established by the BCRA in accordance with the applicable laws. Exchange transactions must be carried out through specifically authorized institutions, including banks, exchange agencies, and exchange bureaus, which are subject to separate regulations (Para. 1.1 of the TO de EyC). In all cases, intervening institutions are subject to all applicable rules for the identification and recording of transactions and verification of compliance with the general provisions and, if appropriate, any specific provisions on the topic in question in the consolidated text and are subject to the rules on the prevention of money laundering, terrorism financing, and other unlawful activities. Transactions that do not have access under the foreign exchange regulations may request prior approval from the BCRA via a financial institution (Para. 1.8 of the TO de EyC). In general, institutions must also exercise due diligence in the identification of customers.

Payments arrears Yes. Effective September 1, 2019, Com A 6770, which regulated Decree No. 609/2019, amended by Art. 1 of Decree No. 91/2019, establishes new foreign exchange regulations. Para. 13. Allows access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of debts due or payable on demand for imports of goods from related companies abroad up to the equivalent of US$2 million per month per resident customer and establishes the requirement of the prior approval of the BCRA for higher amounts. These provisions are found in Para. 10.3.2.5 of the TO de EyC. Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no inflow of funds to the foreign exchange market has taken place and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Previously, there were no restrictions in the foreign exchange regulations on the payment of financial debts abroad, whether public or private.

Official No.
Private No.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion) Yes. Sales of gold coins and good delivery gold bars are subject to the foreign exchange regulations as they are instruments transacted on the foreign exchange market pursuant to Paras. 6.1.3 and 6.1.4 of Communication A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

On domestic ownership and/or trade Yes. There are no restrictions on imports of gold bars. Imports of gold by industrial users are subject to a statistical duty of 0.5% and sales tax. Exports of coins and minted precious metals exceeding US$10,000 must be made through entities subject to supervision by the Superintendency of Financial and Exchange Institutions. Article 133 of Law No. 27.444 (repealing Article 189 of Decree No. 27/18), which replaced Article 7 of Decree No. 1570/01, eliminated the prior approval of the BCRA for the export of foreign currency banknotes and coins and minted precious metals, in accordance with the regulatory provisions issued by the BCRA.

Para. 5.13 of the TO de EyC (Com A688 and Supplementary Provisions) provides that entities may conduct transactions that involve exporting domestic currency provided the counterparties are listed in Para. 5.13 (foreign branch or agency of an official local bank or a foreign financial institution that is wholly or majority owned by a foreign government; or a foreign financial institution or exchange agency not established in countries or territories that do not apply or insufficiently apply the Recommendations of the Financial Action Task Force; or a foreign company that is dedicated to the purchase and sale of banknotes from specific countries and/or minted precious metals or good delivery bars, whose head office is located in a member country of the Basel Banking Supervision Committee).

As well, it is established that the sale of foreign exchange remitted to the local institution by the counterparty for the purchase of domestic currency banknotes is exempt from the provisions of the first paragraph of Para. 2.7 (credit of the proceeds of the sale of the foreign exchange to a local account) as long as there is a commitment from the counterparty that said funds will be used to meet tourism and travel demand and export will take place no more than 30 calendar days following the date of foreign exchange contract.

Exports of foreign currency exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 must be made through entities subject to the supervision of the Superintendency of Financial and Exchange Institutions. Exports of foreign currency exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 must also be reported to the federal tax agency.

Article 133 of Law No. 27.444 (repealing Article 189 of Decree No. 27/18), which replaced Article 7 of Decree No. 1570/01, eliminated the prior approval of the BCRA for the export of foreign currency banknotes and coins and minted precious metals, in accordance with the regulatory provisions issued by the BCRA.

Para. 5.13 regulates foreign swap and arbitrage operations, which institutions may enter into as long as the counterparty is one of those listed in Para. 5.12 of the Consolidated Text.

The importing of domestic currency implies a foreign currency sale to a nonresident, which requires the prior approval of the BCRA under the provisions of Para. 3.12 to the TO de EyC (Com A6844 and Supplementary Provisions).

As well, Para. 5.13 requires fulfillment of the requirements regarding the counterparties listed in Para. 5.12 of the aforementioned Consolidated Text.

Imports of foreign currency exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 must be reported to the Federal Public Revenue Administration (Administración Federal de Ingresos Públicos – AFIP).

As well, Para. 5.13 requires fulfillment of the requirements regarding the counterparties listed in Para. 5.12 of the aforementioned Consolidated Text.
Foreign exchange accounts permitted

- Yes.

Held domestically

- Yes.

Banks are authorized to accept funds in: (1) US dollar and euro term deposits; (2) deposits in US dollar and euro savings accounts; and (3) deposits in US dollars and euro public and private securities and term investments.

Appropriate identification is required in all cases to prevent money laundering, the financing of terrorism, and other unlawful activities, among other reasons.

Approval required

- Yes.

Authorization required for funds on a fixed-term basis and deposits in savings funds in other foreign currencies (other than US dollar and euro) subject to authorization from the BCRA.

Held abroad

- Yes.

There are no restrictions in the exchange regulations on residents opening and maintaining foreign exchange accounts abroad. The funds held abroad are freely available to the customer.

In the event that the resident decides to repatriate these funds, for amounts exceeding US$2 million per month, the transactions are covered by Decree No. 616/05, Article 3, with the requirement to credit the proceeds from the sale of the foreign exchange to a local account (Communication A 6244, Item 2.9).

Regarding the remaining provisions of Article 4 of the aforementioned decree, Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in para. (c) of said article to 0, and Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (Para. 2.9 of Com. “A”6244 found in Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Approval required

- No.

Accounts in domestic currency held abroad

- Yes.

There are no Argentine peso accounts held with entities abroad.

However, they are not prohibited under the foreign exchange regulations.

Accounts in domestic currency convertible into foreign currency

- Yes.

Effective September 1, 2019, Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions added various regulations to the previously existing regulations. Previously, domestic currency funds deposited in Argentina could be converted to foreign currencies without any limit.

Para. 5 established prior approval of the BCRA for access to the foreign exchange market by legal entities, local governments, mutual funds, and certain trusts and other estates established in Argentina for the constitution of foreign assets (purpose codes A01, A02, A03, A04, A06, A07, A08, A09, A14, A16, and A17) and for the establishment of any type of guarantee related to the contracting of derivative transactions.

Para. 6 established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance, and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 per month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved in relation to these items exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening institution, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Subsequently, Communication A6815 of October 28, 2019, amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the first amount for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance, and derivative operations as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for transactions up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

These regulations for individuals are now found in Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC and those applicable to legal entities in Para. 3.10.

Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC establishes that residents may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO), that the transaction takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for transactions up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2), that the customer has not exceeded the indicated limits in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.3), that the intervening institution noted in the online system used by the BCRA that the customer is authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions as they have not reached the indicated limits for the calendar month or did not exceed them in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.4), and that the institution has an affidavit from the customer indicating that the funds purchased are not intended for the purchase of securities on the secondary market within 5 business days following the date of settlement of the foreign exchange transaction (Para. 3.8.6).

This situation was changed and new requirements were established indicating that as of June 30, 2020, beneficiaries of the loans at subsidized rates indicated in Communications A 6993, 7006, and 7082 may not access the foreign exchange market to conduct such transactions until payment in full of the loans.

In addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, effective May 28, 2020, Com. A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the institution must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

Nonresident Accounts

| Foreign exchange accounts permitted | Yes. |

Banks can accept funds in: (1) US dollar and euro term deposits; (2) deposits in US dollar and euro savings accounts; and (3) deposits in US dollars and euro public and private securities and term investments.

Appropriate identification is required in all cases to prevent money laundering, the financing of terrorism, and other unlawful activities, among other reasons.
Approval required: Yes.

Authorized banks may accept funds at fixed terms and deposits in savings accounts in other foreign currencies (other than US dollars and euro) with the prior approval of the BCRA.

Domestic currency accounts

Yes.

Authorized banks may accept funds from foreigners not yet established in Argentina in demand accounts (savings and current accounts) and peso term deposits as well as deposits in peso public and private securities and term investments. In addition, they may open special investment accounts and special current accounts for legal entities, exclusively for the acquisition of public and private securities and BCRA monetary regulation instruments.

Appropriate identification is required to prevent money laundering, the financing of terrorism, and other unlawful activities. Accounts opened with temporary documentation require final documentation by the established deadline for further operations. Bank current accounts require a special domicile in Argentina, which is taken into consideration for legal and regulatory purposes associated with the operation of the account, including check-related disputes.

Convertible into foreign currency

Yes.

In accordance with the foreign exchange regulations until August 31, 2019, all individuals, legal entities, and certain trusts and other estates could operate freely on the foreign exchange market through authorized institutions, without any distinction by type of operation and/or residence of the customer.

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com. A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers in amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for purchases of foreign exchange, with the exception of international organizations, institutions acting as official export credit agencies, diplomatic and consular offices and diplomatic staff accredited to Argentina by means of transfers conducted in the exercise of their duties, and offices in Argentina of Tribunals, Authorities or Offices, Special Missions, Bilateral Agencies or Commissions established by International Treaties or Agreements to which the Argentine Republic is a party, to the extent that the transfers are conducted in the performance of their functions.

Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com. 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100, with the additional exception of transfers abroad on behalf of individuals that receive pensions from the National Social Security Administration (Administración Nacional de la Seguridad Social – ANSES), up to the pension amount received in the calendar month and as long as the transfer is conducted via a bank account held by the beneficiary in his/her registered country of residence.

Said provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Com A 6855 of December 27, 2019, eliminated the exemption of transfers abroad on behalf of individuals that receive pensions from the ANSES and established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Effective December 27, 2019, Para. 3.12 of the TO de EyC establishes that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange will require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.
Imported and Import Payments

Foreign exchange budget

No.

Financing requirements for imports

Yes.

There were no restrictions on the various means used for import payments nor was approval required from the BCRA to make payments.

Minimum financing requirements

No.

There are no exchange regulations covering this topic.

Advance payment requirements

Yes.

The various methods of payment for imports of goods are permitted.

Effective September 1, 2019, advance payments for imports of goods are allowed with the submission of supporting documentation, on condition that it is demonstrated that the goods enter the country within 180 days of access to the foreign exchange market. Previously, there were no restrictions on the various means used for import payments nor was approval required from the BCRA to make payments.

Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 reduced the period for demonstrating registration of the customs entry of the goods to 90 days in the case of advance payments for imports to suppliers not connected with the importer and the prior approval of the BCRA for advance payments for imports to suppliers connected with the importer.

Effective November 7, 2019, Com A 6825 sets the period for demonstrating registration of customs entry at 270 days for advance payments on capital goods and at 90 days for other goods.

Under Para. 10.2.4.6, these periods may be extended with the authorization of the BCRA and under Para. 10.5.5 by the institution, for reasons of force majeure.

Importers that have made demand and/or advance payments and have not demonstrated the entry of the goods within the required period, nor have they requested an extension or repatriation of the foreign exchange via the MUC, may not make further advance payments until the pending operations have been regularized. The public sector and trusts established with national public sector contributions, as well as legal entities responsible for the supply of critical medicines that are brought in by Specific Request are exempt from this provision.

Advance import deposits

No.

There are no foreign exchange regulations covering this topic.

Documentation requirements for release of foreign exchange for imports

Yes.

Effective September 1, 2019, under Para. 1.2 of the TO de EyC, the institution must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the import operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose. Previously, in foreign exchange matters, no documentation was required to make payments for imports using the various methods of payment.

Sections 10 and 11 establish the specific provisions for operations for the import of goods.
Section 10 establishes the requirements for access to the foreign exchange market, including documentation for: (a) payment of the import formalizations included in the Import Payments Tracking System (SEPAIMPO) (Para. 10.3.2); (b) payments for imports of goods brought in under an Specific Request or by Courier that are not shown in SEPAIMPO (Para. 10.3.3); (c) additional requirements for payments for imports of secret military supplies (Para. 10.3.4); (d) payments for imports of goods entering from free zones with customs transfer of ownership from the exporter to the importer (Para. 10.3.5); (e) payments for imports using LCs or guaranteed drafts issued or granted by local financial institutions (Para. 10.3.6); (f) advance payment for imports (Para. 10.4.2); (g) payments for commercial debts or debts payable on demand against the presentation of the shipping documents (Para. 10.4.4); and (h) payment of commercial guarantees for imports of goods granted by local financial institutions (Para. 10.4.4).

On May 28, 2020, requirements were added for access to the foreign exchange market for payments for imports of goods or principal payments on debts originating in the import of goods, that is, the prior approval of the BCRA unless the institution has an affidavit from the customer indicating that the payments made in 2020 (including the payment being requested) do not exceed the amount of formalizations between January 1, 2020, and the day prior to the access to the foreign exchange market, or that the operation meets one of the conditions set out in Paras. 2.2 through 2.7 of Com A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions.

Payments for imports by LCs or guaranteed drafts issued or granted by local financial institutions are also authorized under Para. 10.3.6 of the TO de EyC, and the institution may access the foreign exchange market as long as they demonstrate customs registration of the goods, regardless of whether the remaining requirements established in the regulation are met. LCs are not required for the release of foreign exchange for imports.

No prior import license is required for access to the foreign exchange market; only the customs documentation giving access for the transaction is required.

Para. 10.3 of Section 10 of the TO de EyC indicates the transactions that are considered Import Payments for Goods with registration of customs entry, establishing the requirements for access to the foreign exchange market, which include, among the documents required, evidence of registration of the customs entry into Argentina of the goods for which the payment is to be made for: (a) payment of the import formalizations included in the SEPAIMPO (Para. 10.3.2); (b) payments for imports of goods under Specific Requests or by Courier not included in the SEPAIMPO (Para. 10.3.3); (c) additional requirements for payments for imports of secret military supplies (Para. 10.3.4); (d) payments for imports of goods entering from free zones with customs transfer of ownership from the exporter to the importer (Para. 10.3.5); and (e) payments for imports using LCs or guaranteed drafts issued or granted by local financial institutions (Para. 10.3.6).

Effective May 28, 2020, requirements were added for access to the foreign exchange market for payments for imports of goods or principal payments on debt originating in the import of goods, that is, the prior approval of the BCRA unless the institution has an affidavit.

Exports and Export Proceeds

Repatriation requirements

Yes. Effective September 1, 2019, under Decree No. 609/2019, regulated by Com A 6770, the equivalent in foreign exchange of exports with shipping licenses formalized effective September 2, 2019, up to the invoiced value, depending on the agreed terms of sale, must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market within the periods established in Para. 1 of Com A 6770.

Regardless of these periods, Com A 6770 established that export proceeds must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market within 5 business days of the date of receipt or disbursement abroad or in Argentina.

The same period is established for exports formalized prior to September 2, 2019, that are pending payment as of the date in question, as well as new advance payments and prefinancing (Para. 2).

The periods indicated in Para. 1 of Com A 6770 are amended by Para. 1.1 of Com A 6776, Para. 1.1 of Com A 6780, Para. 1 of Com A 6788, and Para. 1 of Com A 6805 and Com A 6882.

Com A 6788 establishes that operations for the export of goods are regulated by the provisions set out in its Annex. Para. 1.1 of the Annex of said Communication establishes that the periods for the repatriation and sale of export proceeds and foreign exchange amounts resulting from payments on claims under contracted coverage, to the extent that they cover the value of the exported goods, are covered by this requirement.

The aforementioned provisions are found in Para. 7.1.1 of the TO de EyC.

The periods indicated (15, 30, 60, and 180 [days]) depend on the type of good exported, whether operations between related companies are involved (in the case of operations between related companies it also depends on the type of merchandise exported), and the volume of exports recorded by the exporter in the previous year.

For exports under the “Simple Export” procedure, regardless of the type of good exported, the period is 365 days.

Extensions may be granted to the period for the repatriation and sale of the foreign exchange when the oversight entities note specific situations (when there is a minimum period for the financing of the import in the destination country, exports entirely prefinanced locally or abroad through the term of the financing, licenses for which the funds are held in accounts associated with the financial debts, operations with related counterparties eligible for an extension, uncompleted or in collection management or delinquent debtor), [and] cases that do not meet these requirements, with the approval of the BCRA only.

Advance payments, prefinancing, and post-financing abroad must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market with 5 business days of the date of receipt or disbursement abroad.

Prefinancing, post-financing, and financing for foreign importers granted by local financial institutions must be sold on the foreign exchange market at the time of disbursement.

Broadly speaking, the provisions regulating operations for exports of goods and their tracking are found in Sections 7, 8, and 9 of the TO de EyC.

Sale on the foreign exchange market of the foreign exchange from...
exports will not be required when the funds repatriated within the period provided for the operation are credited to foreign exchange accounts held by the customer with local financial institutions and are simultaneously applied to operations regarding which the foreign exchange regulations allow access to the foreign exchange market in exchange for domestic currency, bearing in mind the limits established for each purpose and the tax neutral use of this mechanism (Para. 2.6, TO de EyC).

Decree No. 793/2018 established the application of an export duty to all Common Nomenclature of MERCOSUR (NCM) goods until December 12, 2020. The duty to apply is 12% up to a maximum of 4 pesos on each dollar of the taxable value including the amount resulting from the application of the tax rate stipulated therein, or the official f.o.b. price, as applicable. Likewise, if the goods are included in Annex 1 of the aforementioned Decree, the maximum limit to be applied is 3 pesos on each dollar of the taxable value. In the case of goods whose export has already been taxed, the new export duty must be added.

In addition, effective January 1, 2019, Decree No. 1201/2018 applies an export duty to the provision of services covered by Article 10(2) (c) of Law No. 22.415 (Customs Code) until December 31, 2020. The duty to apply is 12% up to a maximum of 4 pesos on each dollar of the taxable value. Micro and small enterprises that export less than US$600,000 annually are exempt from the payment, as long as they are registered with the Small and Medium-sized Enterprises (SME) Registry of the Ministry of Productive Development.

Effective December 23, 2019, Law No. 27.541 on “Solidarity and the Reactivation of Production” eliminated the export duty ceilings of 4 pesos and 3 pesos per dollar exported, while a general tax rate of 12% remained in effect for all goods, with the exception of certain products such as soy-based products (33%), biodiesel (30%), peanuts, wheat flour and sunflower (7%), and peas, beans, chickpeas, lentils, sunflower oil, and sunflower seeds for human consumption (5%).

As well, Law No. 27.541 on “Solidarity and the Reactivation of Production” establishes a universal export duty of 5% effective until December 31, 2021, on exports of services, repealing Article 2 of Decree No. 1.201 of December 28, 2018, which established the limit of 4 pesos per dollar, but maintaining the exemption for SMEs exporting less than US$600,000. AFIP Resolution No. 4.666/20 establishes that the amount of the duty is calculated on the amount resulting from the class “E” electronic invoice issued for the operation for the export of services.

Payments for Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

Controls on these transfers

Yes.

Until August 31, 2019, under Communication A 6244, payments for goods or services provided by nonresidents or purchases of nonfinancial nonproduced assets were not subject to any restrictions, nor was any authorization from the BCRA required to make the payments.

In addition to the specific requirements established for outflow operations for each purpose, since May 28, 2020, Communication A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that, for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval the BCRA, the institution must have an affidavit from the customer regarding their holdings of foreign assets in Argentina and abroad (Para. 1) and indicating that they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

For debts, Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Under Para. 1.2 of the TO de EyC, the institution must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose.

Trade-related payments

Yes.

Prior approval

Yes.

Para. 3.2 of the TO de EyC (Communication A6844 and Supplementary Provisions) allows access for the payment of debts for services, conditional on verification that the operation was declared, if appropriate, in the most recent “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.”

Effective December 6, 2019, prior approval of the BCRA is required for access to the foreign exchange market for the prepayment of debts for services and for service payments to related counterparties abroad, with the exception of:

- Credit card issuers by transfers for tourism and travel as long as they do not correspond to operations that require the prior approval of the BCRA, such as participation in gambling and betting and/or the transfer of funds to accounts with Payment Services Providers.
(PSPs) and/or to investment accounts with investment managers established abroad and/or for foreign exchange operations abroad and/or the purchase of cryptoassets, as set out in Para. 4.1.4;
- Local agents collecting funds in Argentina for services provided by nonresidents to residents;
- Expenditures paid by entities to entities abroad for regular operations;
- Payments of reinsurance premiums abroad, with the transfer abroad having to take place in the name of the foreign beneficiary approved by the National Superintendency of Insurance;
- Transfers by traveler assistance companies for payments of health coverage claims originating in services provided abroad by third parties to their resident customers;
- Payments of services related to the operational leasing of ships, subject to conditions, added as Para. 3.2.6 by Com A 6972.

Effective December 6, 2019, under Para. 3.3 of the TO de EyC, prior approval of the BCRA is required to access the foreign exchange market for the prepayment of interest on commercial debts for the import of goods and services.

Effective May 28, 2020, in addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, Communication A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that, for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval the BCRA, the institution must have an affidavit from the customer regarding their holdings of foreign assets in Argentina and abroad (Para. 1) and indicating that they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

For debts, Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Effective September 1, 2019, under Para. 1.2 of the TO de EyC, the institution must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose.

Investment-related payments

Yes.

Effective January 17, 2020, access is authorized for transfers of foreign exchange abroad to nonresident shareholders for profits and dividends under the conditions set out in 3.4.1 through 3.4.6 of Para. 3.4 of the TO de EyC. Other cases require the prior approval of the BCRA to access the foreign exchange market for transfers abroad for these purposes.

For foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for later access to that market for principal and interest payments. In the case of institutions, the provisions of the previous paragraph are considered to be met when the funds are included in the General Exchange Position (PGC).

Effective May 28, 2020, in addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, Communication A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that, for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval the BCRA, the institution must have an affidavit from the customer regarding their holdings of foreign assets in Argentina and abroad (Para. 1) and indicating that they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

For debts, Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 6 of Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 per month in all institutions authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved for these items exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening institution, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Effective October 28, 2019, Communication A 6815 amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the first amount indicated as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

Effective May 28, 2020, in addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, Com. A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the institution must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

Currently, the provisions of Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC establish that residents may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO), that the operation takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2), that the customer did not exceed the limits indicated in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.3), that the intervening institution notes in the online system used by the BCRA that the customer is authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions as they have not reached the indicated limits for the calendar month or did not exceed them in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.4) and that the institution has an affidavit from the customer indicating that the funds purchased are not intended for the purchase of securities on the secondary market within 5 business days following the date of settlement of the foreign exchange transactions (Para. 3.8.6).

Effective June 30, 2020, this situation was changed, with new requirements established indicating that beneficiaries of the loans at subsidized rates indicated in Com A 6993, 7006, and 7082 may not access the foreign exchange market to conduct these operations until payment in full of the loans.

Effective October 28, 2019, Communication A 6815 established and was later incorporated in Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC that residents may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO) and that the operation takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2).

Effective January 30, 2020, Com A 6883 established that nonresidents may purchase up to a maximum equivalent to US$100 from all entities for tourism and travel without prior approval from the BCRA, on the condition that the entity has verified in the BCRA online system that the customer has paid an amount equal to or exceeding the amount they wish to purchase within the previous 90 calendar days.

Effective September 1, 2019, under Para. 1.2 of the TO de EyC, the entity must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose.

The use of credit cards abroad is allowed, with some conditions set effective October 31, 2019, by Com A 6823 and Supplementary Provisions, which establishes:

Para. 1. Financial institutions and other local card issuers must have the prior approval of the CB to access the foreign exchange market for payments abroad relating to the use of credit, debit or prepaid cards issued in Argentina, when said payments result directly or indirectly from the use of international payment networks in the following operations: participation in specific types of gambling and betting and/or transfers of funds to PSPs and/or transfers of funds to investment accounts with investment managers established abroad and/or for foreign exchange operations abroad and/or for the purchase of various types of crypto assets.

Para. 2. Financial institutions and other local credit or charge card issuers may grant cash advances to cardholders abroad up to a maximum of US$50 per transaction. Effective March 28, 2020, Com A 6948 increased that limit to US$200 per transaction for cash withdrawals in countries not bordering on Argentina.

Transactions using credit, charge, debit, and prepaid cards are governed by Para. 4.1 of the TO de EyC, supplemented by Com A 6948.

Para. 4 of Com A 6815 establishes that, since October 28, 2019, cash withdrawals abroad using local debit cards had to be debited from the local foreign currency accounts of the customer. Subsequently, Para. 4 of Com A 6948 of March 28, 2020, allows cash withdrawals abroad using local debit cards with debit from local peso accounts of customers, said withdrawal being considered a formation of foreign assets by the resident and included in the limits set in Para. 3.8, with the institution being required to first verify in the online system indicated in Para. 3.8.4 and record the operation as a purchase of foreign currency banknotes (code A09).

Prior approval   Yes.

Com A 6244 did not place restrictions on the use of debit or credit cards abroad.

Consumer purchases and withdrawals of cash from automated teller machines abroad could be carried out by debiting the customer’s local accounts in foreign exchange or in Argentine pesos. Effective October 31, 2019, Para. 1 of Com A 6823 provides that financial institutions and other local card issuers must have the prior approval of the BCRA to access the foreign exchange market to make payments abroad relating to the use of credit, debit or prepaid cards issued in Argentina, resulting directly or indirectly from the use of international payment networks in the following transactions: participation in specific types of gambling and betting and/or transfers of funds to PSPs and/or transfers of funds to investment accounts with investment managers established abroad and/or foreign exchange operations abroad and/or the purchase of various types of crypto assets.

Consumer purchases abroad may be made by debit to the customer’s local foreign currency or peso accounts. Para. 4 of Com A 6948 of March 28, 2020, establishes that financial institutions must give their customers the option to remotely select and change the account associated with their debit card, to which the debits will be applied, with the primary account by default being the customer’s foreign exchange account, should the customer have such an account.

These provisions are found in Para. 4.1 of the TO de EyC and supplementary provisions.

Quantitative limits   Yes.

Effective October 31, 2019, Para. 2 of Com A 6823 establishes that financial institutions and other local credit or debit card issuers may grant cash advances to cardholders abroad up to a maximum of US $50 per transaction. Effective March 28, 2020, Com A 6948 increased that limit to US$200 per transaction for cash withdrawals in countries not bordering on Argentina. These provisions are found in Para. 4.1 of the TO de EyC.

Indicative limits/bona fide test   Yes.

Effective September 1, 2019, under Para. 1.2 of the TO de EyC, the entity must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose.

Other payments   No.

Prior approval   No.

Quantitative limits   No.

Indicative limits/bona fide test   No.

Capital Transactions

Controls on capital transactions

Yes. Broadly speaking, as indicated in Art. 1 of Decree No. 616/05, regardless of whether there is repatriation on the foreign exchange market or not, any borrowing operation by residents that implies a future payment in foreign exchange to nonresidents must be registered with the BCRA, and, in accordance with Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC, the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities” must be completed, even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of the foreign exchange must be credited to a local account.

For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of the aforementioned decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616 as amended to 0 days, are applicable (now found in Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Repatriation requirements

Yes. Since September 1, 2019, Para. 1.7 of Com A 6780 establishes that the receipt by residents of foreign currency amounts from sales to nonresidents of nonproduced nonfinancial assets must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market within 5 business days of the date of receipt of the funds abroad or in Argentina or their credit to accounts abroad (found in Para. 2.3 of the TO de EyC). Effective September 1, 2019, foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market as a prerequisite for subsequent access to the market for principal and interest payments. Com A 6776 of September 5, 2019, provides that, in the case of institutions, this requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC. These provisions are found in Para. 2.4 of the TO de EyC.

Effective November 28, 2019, Para. 1 of Com A 6838 establishes that issues of debt securities by residents that are registered in Argentina as from November 29, 2019, denominated and subscribed in foreign currencies and the capital and interest of which are payable in Argentina in foreign currencies, must be sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for subsequent access to the market for principal and interest payments. In the case of legal entities, the requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC (Para. 2.5 of the TO de EyC).

Para. 2.6 allows exceptions to sale on the foreign exchange market under certain conditions.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (now found in Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Under Paras. 1.1 and 1.2 of the TO de EyC, local financial institutions intervene in cases in which sale of the foreign exchange on the foreign exchange market is required.

Controls on capital and money market instruments

| On capital market securities | Yes. |
| Shares or other securities of a participating nature | Yes. |
| Purchase locally by nonresidents | Yes. |

There are no limitations on purchase by nonresidents of shares or other securities of a participating nature in the local market. For direct investment or portfolio investment by a nonresident, the foreign exchange regulations do not establish a requirement for the sale of the foreign exchange. Under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC, entities may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers in the case of the repatriation of foreign exchange from abroad and allow these operations to be credited to accounts opened by the customer in foreign exchange, as long as these are not operations covered by the requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market.

Under Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC, the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities” must be completed.

Portfolio investments are operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No.
616/05, under which the proceeds from the sale of the foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (now found in Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of the foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100.

These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Under the CNV regulations, foreign and Argentine issuers must meet the same requirements for public offerings of securities in Argentina. Foreign issuers must establish a permanent representative office and a domicile in Argentina to receive notices. Foreign issuers must state whether the securities are also being offered to the public in their country of origin and indicate all initial and periodic reporting requirements applicable to them. If the CNV determines that the regulations in the country of origin properly protect local investors and ensure an adequate flow of information, it may relax the requirements for those issuers. The CNV may authorize foreign issuers on a case-by-case basis to submit only such information as they would periodically submit to the corresponding authority in their jurisdiction of origin. Issuers of securities offered publicly in Argentina and abroad must submit all information required by the entities authorizing the foreign public offering and listing to the CNV in Spanish.

The financial statements at the close of the fiscal year, in all cases, must be presented to include supplementary information to reconcile the effects on net equity and net earnings of accounting mechanisms other than those current in the Republic of Argentina, stating the exchange rate used to convert the items mentioned to Argentine pesos. Where the annual financial information is concerned, and for intermediate periods, publications may be issued without the indicated reconciliation. In such case, it should be clearly stated that the information was prepared in accordance with the current accounting standards in the country of origin, and that they are presented without being reconciled with Argentina's accounting standards.

Nonresidents are subject to the same conditions as residents with regard to the sale or issue of shares or other equity securities.

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of the foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100. These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 4.2.1 authorizes the transfer of foreign exchange abroad by individuals from their local foreign currency accounts to their own bank accounts abroad, on presentation to the institution of an affidavit by the customer that they have not sold securities with local settlement in foreign exchange over the previous 5 business days.

The foreign exchange regulations do not establish a repatriation requirement for direct and portfolio investment sales operations abroad by residents.

In the case of operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05 (operations exceeding US$2 million by residents), the proceeds of the sale of the foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (now found in Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

The foreign exchange regulations do not establish a requirement for the sale of the foreign exchange for portfolio investments by nonresidents.

Under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC, entities may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers in the case of the repatriation of foreign exchange and allow credit of the proceeds of these operations to the foreign currency accounts of the customer, as long as these are not operations covered by the requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market.
Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.”

Portfolio investments are operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, that is, the proceeds of the sale of the foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of the foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100.

These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Under the CNV regulations, foreign and Argentine issuers must meet the same requirements for public offerings of securities in Argentina. Foreign issuers must establish a permanent representative office and a domicile in Argentina to receive notices. Foreign issuers must state whether the securities are also being offered to the public in their country of origin and indicate all initial and periodic reporting requirements applicable to them. If the CNV determines that the regulations in the country of origin properly protect local investors and ensure an adequate flow of information, it may relax the requirements for those issuers. The CNV may authorize foreign issuers on a case-by-case basis to submit only such information as they would periodically submit to the corresponding authority in their jurisdiction of origin. Issuers of securities offered publicly in Argentina and abroad must submit all information required by the entities authorizing the foreign public offering and listing to the CNV in Spanish.

The financial statements at the close of the fiscal year, in all cases, must be presented to include supplementary information to reconcile the effects on net equity and net earnings of accounting mechanisms other than those current in the Republic of Argentina, stating the exchange rate used to convert the items mentioned to Argentine pesos. In such case, it should be clearly stated that the information was prepared in accordance with the current accounting standards in the country of origin, and that they are presented without being reconciled with Argentina’s accounting standards.

Nonresidents are subject to the same conditions as residents with regard to the sale or issue of bonds or other debt securities.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents Yes.
Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for any purpose, including the repatriation of investments, in amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100. These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO de EyC established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 4.2.3 of the TO de EyC allows transfers of foreign exchange abroad by local offices of securities depositaries in the case of foreign currency funds received for principal and interest payments on National Treasury securities, the operations of which forms part of the payment process at the request of depositary abroad.

Purchase abroad by residents

Yes.

Portfolio investments by residents abroad are subject to the provisions of Paras. 3.8 and 3.10, that is, effective October 28, 2019, Communication A 6815 established that for resident individuals there is a limit of US$200 per month with all entities, the remaining requirements established in the aforementioned paragraph must be met, and amounts above this limit are subject to prior approval. Legal entities require prior approval.

Para. 4.2 authorizes the transfer of foreign exchange abroad by individuals from their local foreign currency accounts to their own bank accounts abroad, on presentation to the institution of an affidavit by the customer that they have not sold securities with local settlement in foreign exchange over the previous 5 business days.

Sale or issue abroad by residents

Yes.

Portfolio investment sales abroad by nonresidents are not subject to a repatriation requirement. If the funds are repatriated, under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC, institutions may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers and allow credit of the funds from these operations to the foreign currency accounts of the customer, as long as they do not correspond to operations covered by the requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market.

Effective September 1, 2019, in the case of issues of debt securities, Com A 6770 establishes that foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and the funds sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for later access to that market for purposes of principal and interest payments. Com A 6776 of September 5, 2019, provides that, in the case of institutions, this requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC. These provisions are found in Para. 2.4 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 1 of Com A 6838 establishes that issues of debt securities by residents that are registered in Argentina as from November 29, 2019, denominated and subscribed in foreign currencies and the capital and interest of which are payable in Argentina in foreign currency, must be sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for subsequent access to the market for principal and interest payments. In the case of legal entities, the requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC (Para. 2.5 of the TO de EyC).

Para. 2.6 allows exceptions to sale on the foreign exchange market under certain conditions.

Para. 3.5 of the TO de EyC establishes that entities may have access to the foreign exchange market for principal and interest payments on foreign financial debt as long as the following conditions are met: The funds disbursed as from September 1, 2019 are repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market. This requirement is not applicable to foreign debts originating as from September 1, 2019, that do not generate disbursements as they consist of refinancing of foreign financial debts that would have had access under the applicable regulations, as long as the refinancing does not occur prior to the maturity of the original debt. The operation is declared, if appropriate, on the most recent “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.” Access to the foreign exchange market by residents, including entities, for prepayments of principal and interest more than 3 business days prior to their due date will require the prior approval of the BCRA, unless all of the following conditions are met: The prepayment will be made simultaneously with the settlement of the funds from a new financial debt disbursed as from that date. The average term of the new debt is greater than the average residual term of the debt being prepaid. The due date of the first principal payment on the new debt is not prior to the due date of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid. The amount of the first principal payment of the new debt is not greater than the amount of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid.

Institutions may give access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of principal and/or interest to trusts established in Argentina by a resident to guarantee principal and interest payments on their liability, as long as it is verified that the debtor had had access for payments in their name through compliance with the applicable regulatory provisions (Para. 3.7 of the TO de EyC).

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

The foreign exchange regulations do not establish a requirement for the sale of the foreign exchange for portfolio investments by nonresidents.

Under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC, institutions may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers in the case of the repatriation of foreign exchange and allow credit of the proceeds of these operations to the foreign currency accounts of the customer, as long as these are not operations covered by the requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.”

Portfolio investments are operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, that is, the proceeds of the sale of the foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of the foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100.

These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

CNV approval is required for public offerings, including both the issuance and sale of securities (CNV 2013 Consolidated Regulations, Title II, Chapter V, Section I). Issues of commercial paper must have a minimum maturity of seven business days.

In addition to what is described in the previous items in connection with stocks and bonds or other debt securities (as applicable in this case), branches of stock companies established abroad pursuant to Article 118 of Law No. 19.550 may apply to the Commission to be listed in a special register to establish global programs for the issue of debt securities having amortization terms of up to one year, to be offered publically, exclusively for qualified investors.

The same requirements are applicable to nonresidents as for issuers that are resident in Argentina with respect to the sale or issuance of money market instruments.

Nonresidents are effectively authorized to issue debt instruments denominated both in foreign currency and in pesos, with the same scope and under the same rules to which residents are subject to.

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers in amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresidents to US$100.
These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Portfolio investments by residents abroad are subject to the provisions of Paras. 3.8 and 3.10, that is, effective October 28, 2019, Communication A 6815 established that for resident individuals there is a limit of US$200 per month with all institutions, the remaining requirements established in the aforementioned paragraph must be met, and amounts above this limit are subject to prior approval. Legal entities require prior approval.

Para. 4.2 authorizes the transfer of foreign exchange abroad by individuals from their local foreign currency accounts to their own bank accounts abroad, on presentation to the institution of an affidavit by the customer that they have not sold securities with local settlement in foreign exchange over the previous 5 business days.

The foreign exchange regulations do not establish a repatriation requirement for sales operations abroad for portfolio investments by residents. If the funds are repatriated, under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC entities may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers and allow credit of the proceeds of these operations to the foreign currency accounts of the customer, as long as these are not operations covered by the requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market.

Effective September 1, 2019, in the case of issues, Com A 6770 establishes that foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and the funds sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for later access to that market for principal and interest payments. Com A 6776 of September 5, 2019, provides that, in the case of institutions, this requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC. These provisions are collected in Para. 2.4 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 2.6 allows exceptions to sale on the foreign exchange market under certain conditions.

Para. 3.5 of the TO de EyC establishes that entities may have access to the foreign exchange market for principal and interest payments on foreign financial debt as long as the following conditions are met: The funds disbursed as from September 1, 2019, are repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market. This requirement is not applicable for foreign debts originating as from September 1, 2019, that do not generate disbursements as they consist of refinancing of foreign financial debts that would have had access under the applicable regulations, as long as the refinancing does not occur prior to the maturity of the original debt. The operation is declared, if appropriate, in the most recent “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.” Access to the foreign exchange market by residents, including entities, for prepayments of principal and interest more than 3 business days prior to their due date will require the prior approval of the BCRA, unless all of the following conditions are met: The prepayment will be made simultaneously with the settlement of funds from a new financial debt disbursed as from that date. The average term of the new debt is greater than the average residual term of the debt being prepaid. The due date of the first principal payment of the new debt is not prior to the due date of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid. The amount of the first principal payment of the new debt is not greater than the amount of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

On collective investment securities  Yes.

Purchase locally by nonresidents  Yes.  The foreign exchange regulations do not establish a requirement for the sale of the foreign exchange for portfolio investments by nonresidents.

Under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC, entities may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers in the case of the repatriation of foreign exchange and allow credit of the proceeds of these operations to the foreign currency accounts of the customer, as long as these are not operations covered by the requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.”

Portfolio investments are operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, that is, the proceeds of the sale of the foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (now Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of the foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100. These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

CNV approval is required for public offerings of the following securities, including current issues and previous issues to be offered for sale: (1) negotiable securities (CNV Consolidated Regulations, Title II, Chapter VIII); (2) financial trusts (Title V, Chapter IV); and (3) mutual funds (Title V, Chapters I, II, and III).

Collective investment securities that wish to be issued from outside Argentina must follow the following provisions set out in Chapter VIII of Title II, Sections I and II of the CNV Regulations. If they wish to be incorporated in the country, they are not subject to conditions different from those required of residents (Title V of the CNV Regulations for Mutual Funds and Financial Trusts).

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers in amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100.

These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Portfolio investments by residents abroad are subject to the provisions of Paras. 3.8 and 3.10, that is, effective October 28, 2019, Communication A 6815 established that for resident individuals there is a limit of US$200 per month with all entities, the remaining requirements established in the aforementioned paragraph must be met, and amounts above this limit are subject to prior approval. Legal entities require prior approval.

Para. 4.2 authorizes the transfer of foreign exchange abroad by individuals from their local foreign currency accounts to their own bank accounts abroad, on presentation to the institution of an affidavit by the customer that they have not sold securities with local settlement in foreign exchange over the previous 5 business days.

The foreign exchange regulations do not establish repatriation requirement sales operations for portfolio investments abroad by residents. If the funds are repatriated, under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC, institutions may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers and allow credit of the proceeds of these operations to the foreign currency accounts of the customer, as long as these are not operations covered by the requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market.

Effective September 1, 2019, in the case of issues, Com A 6770 establishes that foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and the funds sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for later access to that market for principal and interest payments. The average term of the new debt is greater than the average residual term of the debt being prepaid. The due date of the first principal payment on the new debt is not prior to the due date of the next principal payment on the debt being prepaid. The amount of the first principal payment of the new date is not greater than the amount of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Under Para. 4.4.1 of the TO de EyC, all settlements of futures, forwards, options, and any other type of derivative contracted in Argentina by entities as from September 11, 2019, must take place in domestic currency.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (now Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of the foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Subsequently, effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100.

These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Derivatives may be traded for hedging, speculation, or arbitrage purposes. In the case of speculation and arbitrage, exposure of the underlying assets is not necessary.

CNV approval is required. Specifically, in the case of futures and options contracts (standardized derivatives), the requirements set out. Article 22, Section IX, Chapter V, Title VI of the consolidated text of the CNV Regulations (N.T. 2013, as amended) must be met for CNV approval and subsequent trading on the authorized markets.

In the case of derivatives between national and/or foreign counterparties not traded in markets authorized by the CNV, Art. 189 of Law 27.440 established that the CNV will require registration, indicating that the contracts in question will be enforceable against third parties and will have a specific date as from the date of their registration. Article 10 bis of Section V, Chapter V, Title VI of the CNV Regulations (N.T. 2013 as amended) establish that Entities for the Registration of Derivative Operations or, in their absence, Markets and/or Clearinghouses must register bilateral derivative contracts entered into outside the authorized markets. It provides that the parties required to register are entities under the jurisdiction of the Commission and agents registered with the Commission. Registration is voluntary for third parties, that is, for any individual or legal entity not under the jurisdiction of the Commission, which may register the contract, final settlement, and cancellation of bilateral derivative contracts outside the markets authorized by the CNV.

Purchase abroad by residents

Yes. Effective October 17, 2019, Para. 3 of Com A 6814 allows access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of premiums, constitution of guarantees, and settlements corresponding to interest rate hedging contracts on foreign obligations of residents that have been declared and validated, if appropriate, in the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” as they do not cover risks exceeding the foreign liabilities registered by the debtor at the interest rate for which the risk is covered in said contracts.

A customer accessing the foreign exchange market using this mechanism must appoint an entity to track the operation and sign an affidavit in which they commit to repatriating and selling the funds payable to the local customer as a result of said operation or as a result of the release of the guarantee funds, within 5 business days.

The remaining financial derivatives operations that are to be conducted by means of access the foreign exchange market by residents that are not entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange must comply with the conditions set out in Paras. 3.8 (Individuals) and 3.10 (Legal Entities) or, failing this, have the prior approval of the BCRA.

Yes. Effective October 17, 2019, Para. 3 of Com A 6814 allows access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of premiums, constitution of guarantees, and settlements corresponding to interest rate hedging contracts on foreign obligations of residents that have been declared and validated, if appropriate, in the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” as they do not cover risks exceeding the foreign liabilities registered by the debtor at the interest rate for which the risk is covered in said contracts.

A customer accessing the foreign exchange market using this mechanism must appoint an entity to track the operation and sign an affidavit in which they commit to repatriating and selling the funds resulting payable to the local customer as a result of said operation or as a result of the release of the guarantee funds, within 5 business days.

The remaining financial derivatives operations that are to be conducted by means of access the foreign exchange market by residents that are not entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange must comply with the conditions set out in Paras. 3.8 (Individuals) and 3.10 (Legal Entities) or, failing this, have the prior approval of the BCRA.

Controls on credit operations

Yes.

Commercial credits

Yes. Access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of interest on debts for imports of goods and services is authorized as long as the institution verifies that the operation has been declared, if appropriate, in the most recent “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.” The prior approval of the BCRA is required for the prepayment of interest on commercial debts for imports of goods and services (Para. 3.3 of the TO de EyC).

In addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, effective May 28, 2020, Communication A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that, for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval the BCRA, the entity must have an affidavit from the customer regarding their holdings of foreign assets in Argentina and abroad (Para. 1) and indicating that they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4). Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

These operations are governed by the regulations on the formation of assets. Effective September 1, 2019, Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions added various provisions to the regulations then in effect.

Para. 5 requires prior approval from the BCRA for access to the foreign exchange market by legal entities, local governments, mutual funds, and certain trusts and other estates established in Argentina for the formation of foreign assets (purpose codes A01, A02, A03, A04, A06, A07, A08, A09, A14, A16, and A17) and for the establishment of any type of guarantee related to derivatives operations.

Para. 6 established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance, and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 per month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved for these purposes exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening entity, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 of October 28, 2019, amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the first amount for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

These regulations for individuals are now found in Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC, and those applicable to legal entities in Para. 3.10.

Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC establishes that residents may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO), that the operation takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2), that the customer has not exceeded the indicated limits in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.3), that the intervening institution notes in the online system used by the BCRA that the customer is authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions as they have not reached the indicated limits for the calendar month or did not exceed them in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.4) and that the entity has an affidavit from the customer indicating that the funds purchased are not intended for the purchase of securities on the secondary market within 5 business days following the date of settlement of the foreign exchange transactions (Para. 3.8.6).

This situation was changed, with new requirements established indicating that as of June 30, 2020, beneficiaries of the loans at subsidized rates indicated in Com A 6993, 7006, and 7082 may not access the foreign exchange market to conduct these operations until payment in full of the loans.

In addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, effective May 28, 2020, Com. A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the entity must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

Effective September 1, 2019, Com A 6770 establishes that foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for subsequent access to the market for principal and interest payments. Com A 6776 of September 5, 2019, provides that, in the case of institutions, this requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC. These provisions are found in Para. 2.4 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 2.6 allows exceptions to sale on the foreign exchange market under certain conditions.

Para. 3.5 of the TO de EyC establishes that entities may provide access to the foreign exchange market for principal and interest... payments on foreign financial debt to the extent that the following conditions are met: Funds disbursed as from September 1, 2019 were repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market. This requirement is not applicable to foreign debt originated as of September 1, 2019, which does not generate disbursements as they consist of refinancing of foreign financial debts that would have had access under the applicable regulations, as long as the refinancing does not occur prior to the maturity of the original debt. The operation is declared, if appropriate, in the most recent statement “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.” Access to the foreign exchange market by residents, including entities, for the prepayment of capital and interest on debt more than 3 business days prior to their due date will require the prior approval of the BCRA, unless all of the following conditions are met: The prepayment will be made simultaneously with the settlement of funds from a new financial debt disbursed as from that date. The average term of the new debt is greater than the average residual term of the debt being prepaid. The due date of the first principal payment of the new debt is not prior to the due date of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid. The amount of the first principal payment of the new debt is not greater than the amount of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Guarantees, sureties, and financial backup facilities

- By residents to nonresidents: Yes.

Entities may give access to the foreign exchange market for principal and/or interest payments to trusts established in Argentina by a resident to ensure the capital and interest payments on its liability, as long as it verifies that the debtor had access for payments in its name to comply with the applicable regulatory provisions (Para. 3.7 of the TO de EyC).

Under Para. 3.11.1 of the aforementioned TO, entities may give access to the foreign exchange market to residents with foreign debts or trusts established in Argentina to ensure capital and interest payments on such debt, for the purchase of foreign exchange to establish guarantees for the amounts owed under debt contracts when: (a) it involves commercial debts for the import of goods and/or services to a foreign financial entity or official export credit agency or foreign financial debts to unrelated creditors that under the regulations have access to the foreign exchange market for their repayment, the contracts of which provide for the credit of the funds to guarantee accounts for future debt service on foreign debts; (b) the funds purchased will be deposited in accounts opened with local financial institutions under the conditions established in the contracts. The establishment of guarantees in accounts opened with foreign financial institutions will only be allowed when it is the only and exclusive option provided in the debt contracts entered into prior to August 31, 2019; (c) cumulative guarantees in foreign currencies that will be used for service payments do not exceed the amount to be paid on the next service payment due; (d) the daily excess amount does not exceed 20% of the amount indicated in (c); (e) the intervening entity has verified the foreign debt documentation of the debtor and has the information needed to ensure that access is taking place under the conditions established in these provisions.

The foreign currency funds not used for the settlement of contracted debt service payments must be sold on the foreign exchange market within 5 business days following the due date.

In addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, effective May 28, 2020, Com. A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the entity must have an affidavit from the customer regarding their holdings of foreign assets in Argentina and abroad (Para. 1) and indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

To residents from nonresidents No.

If appropriate, the provisions of Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC applicable to certain foreign debts and repatriations by nonresidents must be met.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Controls on direct investment Yes.

Direct investments are exempt from the provisions of Articles 2 through 4 of Decree No. 616/05 and Supplementary Provisions and are not subject to the repatriation requirement.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Outward direct investment Yes.

These operations are governed by the regulations on the formation of assets. Effective September 1, 2019, Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions added various provisions to the regulations then in effect.

Para. 5 requires prior approval from the BCRA for access to the foreign exchange market by legal entities, local governments, mutual funds, and certain trusts and other estates established in Argentina for the formation of foreign assets (purpose codes A01, A02, A03, A04, A06, A07, A08, A09, A14, A16, and A17) and for the establishment of any type of guarantee related to derivatives operations.

Para. 6 established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 per month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved for these purposes exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening entity, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by residents as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

These regulations for individuals are now found in Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC, and those applicable to legal entities in Para. 3.10.

Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC establishes that residents may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO), that the operation takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2), that the customer has not exceeded the indicated limits in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.3), that the intervening institution notes in the online system used by the BCRA that the customer is authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions as they have not reached the indicated limits for the calendar month or did not exceed them in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.4) and that the entity has an affidavit from the customer indicating that the funds purchased are not intended for the purchase of securities on the secondary market within 5 business days following the date of settlement of the foreign exchange transactions (Para. 3.8.6).

This situation was changed, with new requirements established indicating that as of June 30, 2020, beneficiaries of the loans at subsidized rates indicated in Com A 6993, 7006, and 7082 may not access the foreign exchange market to conduct these operations until payment in full of the loans.

In addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, effective May 28, 2020, Com. A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the entity must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

Inward direct investment

Inward direct investment Yes.

The foreign exchange regulations do not establish a requirement for sale on the foreign exchange market for direct investments by nonresidents.

Under Para. 4.2.1 of the TO de EyC, entities may conduct swaps and arbitrage with customers in the case of the repatriation of foreign exchange from abroad and allow the credit of these operations to accounts opened by the customer in foreign exchange.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.”

nonresidents under Para. 7 of Com A 6770 in amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices.

Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount indicated to US$100.

These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

The rules governing direct investment apply. Direct investment encompasses real estate investments.

These operations are governed by the regulations on the formation of assets. Effective September 1, 2019, Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions added various provisions to the regulations then in effect.

Para. 5 requires prior approval from the BCRA for access to the foreign exchange market by legal entities, local governments, mutual funds, and certain trusts and other estates established in Argentina for the formation of foreign assets (purpose codes A01, A02, A03, A04, A06, A07, A08, A09, A14, A16, and A17) and for the establishment of any type of guarantee related to derivatives operations.

Para. 6 established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 per month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved for these purposes exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening institution, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the first amount indicated as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

These regulations for individuals are now found in Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC, and those applicable to legal entities in Para. 3.10.

Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC establishes that residents may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO), that the operation takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for... operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2), that the customer has not exceeded the indicated limits in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.3), that the intervening institution notes in the online system used by the BCRA that the customer is authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions as they have not reached the indicated limits for the calendar month or did not exceed them in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.4), and that the entity has an affidavit from the customer indicating that the funds purchased are not intended for the purchase of securities on the secondary market within 5 business days following the date of settlement of the foreign exchange transactions (Para. 3.8.6).

This situation was changed, with new requirements established indicating that as of June 30, 2020, beneficiaries of the loans at subsidized rates indicated in Com A 6993, 7006, and 7082 may not access the foreign exchange market to conduct these operations until payment in full of the loans.

In addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, effective May 28, 2020, Com. A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the entity must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

Purchase locally by nonresidents  Yes.

Direct investments are exempt from the provisions of Articles 2 through 4 of Decree No. 616/05 and Supplementary Provisions, and are not subject to the repatriation requirement.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Sale locally by nonresidents  Yes.

Effective September 1, 2019, Para. 7 of Com A 6770 established that the liquidation of direct investments by nonresidents in amounts exceeding US$1,000 would require the prior approval of the BCRA for the purchase of foreign exchange, with various exceptions including international organizations, official export credit agencies, and diplomatic and consular offices. Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended Para. 7, reducing the amount indicated to US$100.

These provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Effective December 27, 2019, Com A 6855 eliminated the exemption and provided that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange would require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Controls on personal capital transactions  Yes.

Loans  Yes.

By residents to nonresidents  Yes.

These operations are governed by the regulations on the formation of assets. Effective September 1, 2019, Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions added various provisions to the regulations then in effect.

Para. 5 requires prior approval from the BCRA for access to the foreign exchange market by legal entities, local governments, mutual funds, and certain trusts and other estates established in Argentina for the formation of foreign assets (purpose codes A01, A02, A03, A04, A06, A07, A08, A09, A14, A16, and A17) and for the establishment of any type of guarantee related to derivatives operations.

Para. 6 established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 per month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved for these purposes exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening institution, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Effective October 28, 2019, Com A 6815 amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the first amount indicated as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

These regulations for individuals are now found in Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC, and those applicable to legal entities in Para. 3.10.

Para. 3.8 of the TO de EyC establishes that residents may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO), that the operation takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2), that the customer has not exceeded the indicated limits in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.3), that the intervening institution notes in the online system used by the BCRA that the customer is authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions as they have not reached the indicated limits for the calendar month or did not exceed them in the previous calendar month (Para. 3.8.4) and that the entity has an affidavit from the customer indicating that the funds purchased are not intended for the purchase of securities on the secondary market within 5 business days following the date of settlement of the foreign exchange transactions (Para. 3.8.6).

Effective September 1, 2019, Com A 6770 establishes that foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019 must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for subsequent access to the market for principal and interest payments. Com A 6776 of September 5, 2019 provides that, in the case of institutions, this requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC. These provisions are found in Para. 2.4 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 2.6 allows exceptions to said sale under specific conditions.

Para. 3.5 of the TO de EyC establishes that entities may provide access to the foreign exchange market for principal and interest payments on foreign financial debt as long as the following conditions are met: Funds disbursed as from September 1, 2019 were repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market. This requirement is not applicable to foreign debts originated as from September 1, 2019, which do not generate disbursements as they consist of refinancing foreign financial debts that would have had access under the applicable regulations, as long as that the refinancing does not occur prior to the maturity of the original debt. The operation is declared, if appropriate, in the most recent statement “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities.” Access to the foreign exchange market by residents, including entities, for the prepayment of capital and interest on debt more than 3 business days prior to the due date will require the prior approval of the BCRA, except if all of the following conditions are met: the prepayment takes place simultaneously with the settlement of funds from a new financial debt disbursed as from that date. The average term of the new debt is greater than the average residual term of the debt being prepaid. The due date of the first principal payment of the new debt is not prior to the due date of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid. The amount of the first principal payment of the new debt is not greater than the amount of the next principal payment of the debt being prepaid.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no funds have been repatriated on the foreign exchange market and/or future access to this market is not planned.

In the case of the operations covered by Art. 3 of Decree No. 616/05, the proceeds from the sale of foreign exchange must be credited to a local account. For the remaining requirements set out in Art. 4 of said decree, the provisions of Resolution No. 3/15 of the former Ministry of the Treasury and Public Finance, which reduced the percentage of the deposit indicated in paragraph (c) of this article to 0, and the provisions of Resolution No. 1/17 of the Ministry of Finance, which reduced the term indicated in Articles 2 and 4(a) of Decree No. 616, as amended, to 0 days, are applicable (currently Para. 2.7 of the TO de EyC).

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions Yes. On foreign exchange aspects, effective September 1, 2019, Com A 6770 establishes that foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and the funds sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for later access to that market for principal and interest payments. Com A 6776 of September 5, 2019, provides that, in the case of institutions, this requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the PGC. These provisions are collected in Para. 2.4 of the TO de EyC.

Maintenance of accounts abroad No.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits) Yes. Only financial intermediaries are permitted to grant credit assistance to residents in the country to finance investment, production, marketing, or consumption of goods and services for domestic consumption or export, or outward foreign direct investment by enterprises resident in the country. Financial assistance will only be granted to residents abroad if this general criterion is met and in certain specific cases (credit facilities to foreign banks, whether or not they are correspondents, for the purpose of facilitating local exports, credits to residents abroad corresponding to lags in the payment of operations involving quoted foreign currencies or securities, inter alia).

Lending locally in foreign exchange Yes. Lending capacity based on foreign exchange deposits and other liabilities through financial intermediation in foreign exchange (with the exception of inward commercial credit facilities) may be applied to the following: (1) prefinancing and financing of exports directly or through principals, trustees, or other brokers; (2) other financing for exporters expecting future foreign currency income streams and demonstrating, in the year prior to when the financing is granted, invoices reasonably comparable to the amount of financing; (3) financing of investment projects, working capital, or goods that increase the value of or are related to the production of goods to be exported; (4) financing for the producers of goods to be exported, whether as is or as part of other goods, by third-party purchasers, provided they have total assurances or guarantees in foreign currency from those third parties and/or firm sales contracts in foreign currency and/or in exportable goods; (5) financing for providers of goods and/or services that are part of the production process for fungible goods regularly and customarily quoted in foreign currency in domestic or foreign markets and widely disseminated and easily known to the public, provided they have firm sales contracts for those goods and/or services in foreign currency and/or in those goods; (6) commercial financing for commercial portfolio customers that is treated as consumer or housing loans – in accordance with the provisions established in the regulations on “Borrower Classification” – for the purpose of importing capital goods (“BK” in accordance with the MERCOSUR Common Nomenclatures as indicated in Annex I to Decree No. 690/02 and other supplementary provisions) that increase the production of goods intended for the domestic market; (7) loans made from one financial institution to another; (8) foreign currency debt securities or financial trust investment certificates publicly quoted with CNV authorization whose underlying assets are securities acquired by the trust and guaranteed by reciprocal guarantee companies, to finance export transactions; (9) financing of producers, processors, or storage operators, provided they have contracts for the outright sale of the goods to an exporter at a price set or to be set in foreign currency that is customary in local or foreign markets and is widely published and easily accessible to the public; (10) other financing included in the credit program referred to in Inter-American Development Bank (IADB) Loan No. 1192/OC-AR, not to exceed 10% of borrowing capacity; (11) letters and notes of the BCRA denominated in US dollars; (12) direct investments abroad by companies resident in Argentina, the purpose of which is to develop productive activities in goods and/or nonfinancial services, whether through contributions or through purchases of shares in companies, provided they are established in countries or territories considered cooperative for purposes of fiscal transparency based on the provisions of Article 1 of Decree No. 589/13 and Supplementary Provisions; (13) financing of investment projects, including working capital, that allow increased production in the energy sector and have firm sales contracts and/or total assurances or guarantees in foreign currency; (14) primary subscription of foreign currency debt instruments of the National Treasury, up to an amount equal to one-third of the applications made; (15) financing of investment projects focusing on cattle ranching, including working capital, not to exceed 5% of the institution’s deposits in foreign exchange; (16) financing of foreign importers for the acquisition of goods and/or services produced in the country, directly or through credit facilities to external banks; (17) financing to residents in the country guaranteed with standby LCs issued by foreign banks or multilateral development banks having investment grade international risk ratings, provided these credit portfolios are unrestricted and that the funds are credited immediately on the simple request of the beneficiary.

For purposes of such financing, whatever the source of the funds, financial institutions must verify that customers have sufficient payment capacity. To that end, they must consider at least two scenarios involving significant fluctuations in the exchange rate of different magnitudes within up to one year.

There are currently no limits on bank holdings of securities from a particular issuer.

Foreign Exchange Portion.

Effective September 1, 2019, entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange may freely determine the level of their PGC (Para. 5.9.1). Under Para. 5.9.3 of the TO de EyC, entities may not purchase securities on the secondary market with settlement in foreign exchange and may not use funds from their PGC to make payments to local suppliers (Para. 5.9.4 of said TO).
Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange

Yes.

Reserve requirements

Yes.

Saving deposits including payroll/social security and special deposits are subject to a minimum cash requirement of 45% effective February 1, 2019 (previously 28%), or 20% (previously 26%) (based on the category of financial institution), or 25% for such deposits denominated in pesos or foreign currency, respectively.

Fixed-term deposits are subject to a requirement that differs for pesos and foreign currencies (and based on the type of institution) and decreases according to the residual term.

For fixed-term deposits with maturities of up to 29 days: The minimum cash requirement is 32% or 11% for peso deposits depending on the type of institutions and 23% for foreign currency deposits.

For fixed-term deposits with maturities from 30 to 59 days: The minimum cash requirement is 22% or 7% for peso deposits depending on the type of institutions and 17% for foreign currency deposits.

For fixed-term deposits with maturities from 60 to 89 days: The minimum cash requirement is 4% or 2% for peso deposits depending on the type of institutions and 11% for foreign currency deposits.

For fixed-term deposits with maturities 90 days or more: The minimum cash requirement is 0% for peso deposits.

Effective February 1, 2019, Communication A 6616 amended the method for calculating the reserve requirements, which until then were based on the category of the financial entity according to the municipality, replacing it with a method based on the group to which the financial institutions belong, according to their assets compared to the total assets in the financial system.

Communication A 6857: effective January 1, 2020, the limit on the deduction of the minimum cash requirement based on financing granted under the “AHORA 12” program was increased from 1% to 1.5% (with the possibility of an additional 1%) of the items subject to the requirement.

Communication A 6858: effective February 1, 2020, a new deduction from the minimum cash requirement was established for entities in Group A, equivalent to 30% of the sum of peso financing to micro, small and medium enterprises (MSMEs) granted at a maximum annual nominal fixed interest rate of 40% with a limit of 2% of the items in peso subject to the requirement.

Communication A 6871 specifies, effective February 1, 2020, the way in which the residual term of deposits with a prepayment option in Unidad de Valor Adquisitivo (UVAs) updatable on the basis of the Coeficiente de Establización de Referencia (CER) should be calculated – Law 25.827 (“UVA”).

Communication A 6884: effective February 1, 2020, the minimum cash requirement was reduced based on the special treatment provided for financing in UVAs updatable on the basis of the CER—

Open foreign exchange position limits Yes. The net global foreign exchange position comprises total assets and liabilities from financial intermediation in foreign currencies and foreign currency securities (spot and forward transactions), including gold coins and good delivery gold bars; foreign currency banknotes; demand deposits in banks abroad; derivatives contracts related to these items; deposits in the currency held in accounts at the BCRA; and BCRA notes in US dollars. Also included are forward operations entered into under framework agreements within authorized markets in Argentina in which settlement is by netting, without physical delivery of the underlying asset. The position in currencies other than US dollars is expressed in the currency in question by applying the exchange rate published by the BCRA. Assets deductible for purposes of determining regulatory capital (responsabilidad patrimonial computable – RPC) and items recorded by financial institutions in their branches abroad are not included.

The positive net global foreign exchange position may not exceed 5% of regulatory capital but may reach up to 30% of regulatory capital if under certain conditions National Treasury Notes denominated in US dollars (Paras. 6 and 7 of Communications “A” 6526 and Communications “A” 6699 and 6735) are included. The positive net global foreign exchange position must be measured on a daily basis instead of as the monthly average of daily balances. There is also a limit on the positive spot position, which, measured daily, may not exceed the amount of US$2,500,000 or 4% of regulatory capital, whichever is higher.

The negative net global foreign exchange position, expressed as a monthly average of the daily balances, should not exceed 30% of the financial institution’s regulatory capital for the previous month. Overruns are subject to a charge equivalent to 1.5 times the accrued annual nominal interest rate resulting from auctions of BCRA instruments in Argentine pesos.

ADs may freely determine the level and use of their PGC, under Para. 5.9.1 of the TO de EyC.

The PGC includes all of the institution’s liquid external assets, net of debit balances of correspondents deriving from foreign exchange market transactions. It also includes buying and selling arranged on the foreign exchange market and pending settlement. The following, inter alia, are considered institutions’ liquid external assets: banknotes and coins in foreign exchange, good delivery holdings in monetary gold or gold bars, correspondents’ credit balances (including transfers to third parties without arranged settlement), other demand deposits with foreign financial institutions, investments in external public securities, and time certificates of deposit. PGCs do not include foreign direct investment, third-party external assets under custodianship, forward buying and selling of foreign exchange or foreign assets, deposits with the BCRA in foreign exchange in accounts in the name of the institution, and other local assets in foreign exchange, under Para. 6.7 of the TO de EyC.

Provisions specific to institutional investors

| Insurance companies | Yes. |

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents

| Yes. |

All investments and funds of insurance companies must be located in Argentina. For this purpose, local investments are defined as those issued and transacted domestically as detailed in Item 35.5 of the General Insurance Regulations implementing Law No. 20.091, for each particular instrument.

The Superintendency of Insurance may grant its authorization for the maintenance of an operating account abroad for the sole purpose of...
expediting business operations. This account may not hold more than the minimum amount required for operational purposes, nor may it be operated to make any form of profit.

Specialist reinsurers and branches of foreign reinsurance companies established in Argentina may hold investments and funds abroad not exceeding 50% of the capital to be credited.

For purposes of meeting the institutions’ operational commitments, the special report of the acting auditor must verify the existence of available funds in the foreign bank accounts that can be used to make the payment requested.

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad

Yes.

All investments and funds of insurance companies must be located in Argentina.

For this purpose, local investments are defined as those issued and transacted domestically as detailed in Item 35.5 of the General Insurance Regulations implementing Law No. 20.091, for each particular instrument.

The Superintendency of Insurance may grant its authorization for the maintenance of an operating account abroad for the sole purpose of expediting business operations. This account may not hold more than the minimum amount required for operational purposes, nor may it be operated to make any form of profit.

Specialist reinsurers and branches of foreign reinsurance companies established in Argentina may hold investments and funds abroad not exceeding 50% of the capital to be credited.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally

Yes.

The minimum for reinsurance companies is determined by the parameters in the previous Item.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition

Yes.

The nature of the liabilities and the currency in which they were assumed: Insurers and reinsurers must maintain the investments portfolio based on the currency of the commitments assumed.

There is a single public pension regime, the Argentine Integrated Pension System (“SIPA”), established by Law No. 26.425 of December 4, 2008.

Law No. 27.260, Article 30 supersedes Article 74 of Law No. 24.241. Authorized investments of the Sustainability Guarantee Fund (Fondo de Garantía de Sustentabilidad – referred to either as the “FGS” or as the “Fund”):

Article 30. Article 74 of Law No. 24.241 as amended must be superseded with the following text:

Article 74: The assets of the FGS of the Argentine Integrated Pension System (SIPA) must be invested according to the criteria of adequate returns and security in compliance with the limits established under this law and the regulatory texts. The FGS may invest in:

(a) Public credit operations as a result of which Argentina becomes a debtor via the Finance Secretariat of the Ministry of Economy are permitted, whether they involve public securities, treasury bills, or loans, up to 50% of the Fund’s total assets. This may be raised to 100% net of the ceilings, provided in this Article, as long as the surplus funds involve either resources intended specifically to enable their fulfillment of collateral or guarantees granted by international organizations or entities of which Argentina is a member. Holdings of securities representing Argentina’s public debt that were received in swaps by retirement and pension fund administrators in the context of the restructuring of public debt under the terms of Article 65 of Law No. 24.156 as amended and Article 62 of Law No. 25.827 as amended are excluded from the ceiling established in this paragraph, independently of their not having the guarantees indicated therein.

Transitionally, until December 31, 2023, up to 70% of the portfolio of the FGS of the Argentine Integrated Pension System may be held in public securities, with or without guarantees, and at the end of this period the holdings of these assets must be regularized to comply with the limits set in the previous paragraph (Text amended by Art. 57 of Law 27.541).

(b) Securities issued by provinces, the Autonomous City of Buenos Aires, municipalities, the BCRA, other autonomous national and municipal government bodies, and national, provincial, and municipal government-owned companies are permitted up to 30% of the Fund’s total assets.

(c) Corporate bonds, debentures, and other debt securities issued by domestic stock companies, financial institutions, cooperatives and civil associations, and branches of foreign companies, if authorized for public offering by the CNV, are authorized up to 40% of the Fund’s total assets.

(d) Fixed-term deposits with financial institutions governed by Law 21.526 as amended, up to 30% of the Fund’s total assets;

(e) Shares and/or negotiable bonds that can be converted to shares in domestic quasi-governmental or private stock companies, if authorized for public listing by the CNV and that are listed in markets authorized by the CNV, the purpose of which is to organize operations with negotiable securities that are offered publicly, for a minimum of 7% and up to a maximum of 50% of the Fund’s total assets.

Operations in shares include futures and options on these securities, subject to the limits stipulated in the regulations. Transfers and/or any other act or action that limits, alters, eliminates, or changes the purpose, interest, ownership, or nature of the assets indicated in this paragraph are prohibited, provided the result is Fund holdings lower than established in the first paragraph of the present section, without the express prior approval of the National Congress, with the following exceptions:

1. START Tender offers directed to all those holding such assets at a fair price authorized by the CNV, under the terms of Chapters II, III, and IV of Title III of Law No. 26.831.
2. Swaps of shares for other shares in the same or another corporation within the context of corporate mergers, splits, or reorganizations.

(f) Shares of government-held corporations and stock companies with majority government participation up to 20% of the Fund’s total shares;

(g) Shares of open or closed capital mutual funds authorized by the CNV for up to 20% of the Fund’s total assets;

(h) Contracts traded on futures and options markets as determined by the Executive Committee of the Argentine Integrated Pension System FGS, up to 10% of the Fund’s total assets;

(i) Mortgage-backed securities, mortgage-covered bonds, and other securities secured by a mortgage or those whose service is guaranteed through holdings in mortgage loans and authorized for public offering by the CNV, up to 25% of the Fund’s total assets;

(j) Securities representing participation shares in direct investment funds of a fiduciary and singular nature, whose public offering is authorized by the CNV, up to 10% of the Fund’s total assets;

(k) Securities issued by financial trusts not included in Paragraphs (9) or (j), up to 30% of the Fund’s total assets;

(l) Debt securities, certificates of participation, shares, assets, or other securities and loans intended to finance medium- and long-term production, real estate, or infrastructure projects in Argentina are authorized. A minimum of 5% and a maximum of 50% of the Fund’s total assets should be allocated to these investments;

(m) Financing to recipients of the SIPA up to 20% of the Fund’s total assets, subject to the terms and conditions established by the ANSES.

Prohibitions:
Law 27.260, Article 31: Article 75 of Law No. 24.241 as amended must be superseded with the following text:
Article 75: Assets of the FGS of the Argentine Integrated Pension System (FGS) may not be invested in shares of investment fund management companies, whether mutual or direct funds, trusts, or special funds, nor may they invest in shares in risk rating companies.

Limits:
Law 27.260, Article 32: Article 76 of Law No. 24.241 as amended must be superseded with the following text:
Article 76:
The investments of the Argentine Integrated Pension System (FGS) will be subject to the following limits:
(a) Risk rating. The following assets or institutions must have a rating granted by a duly authorized risk rating agency:
1. The assets in Paragraph (b) of Article 74, except for securities issued by the BCRA.
2. The assets in Paragraphs (c), (i), and (k) of Article 74.
3. Financial institutions in which the investments indicated in Paragraph (d) of Article 74 are made or that maintain assets indicated in Article 77.
4. Negotiable bonds that can be converted to shares as set out in Paragraph (e) of Article 74.
5. The assets in Paragraph (g) of Article 74, when the purpose of the mutual investment fund involved is primarily to invest in.
(b) Other investments. The Executive Committee of the Argentine Integrated Pension System FGS may establish additional minimum requirements that must be met by each of the investments indicated in Article 74 to be subject to investment by the Argentine Integrated Pension System FGS.
(c) Guarantees. When the Argentine Integrated Pension System FGS engages in securitized operations with its assets or financial operations that require that its assets be pledged or encumbered, it may only do so up to a maximum of 20% of the Fund’s total assets.
The Fund’s resources must be invested in Argentine financial assets, including, among others, Argentine interest-bearing accounts and the purchase of government securities or local securities recognized as solvent.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents
Yes.

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad
Yes. The Fund’s resources must be invested in Argentine financial assets, including, among others, Argentine interest-bearing accounts and the purchase of government securities or local securities recognized as solvent.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally
No.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition
No.

Investment firms and collective investment funds
Yes. The FGS has no liabilities. The Fund’s resources must be invested in Argentine financial assets, including, among others, Argentine interest-bearing accounts and the purchase of government securities or local securities recognized as solvent.

The following limitations apply to stock exchange transactions by local market intermediaries involving foreign exchange operations:
Sale of negotiable securities with settlement in foreign exchange. Minimum holding period.
Article 3. – To conduct operations for the sale of negotiable securities with settlement in foreign exchange, or transfers of such securities to depositary entities abroad, said negotiable securities must be held in the portfolio for a minimum period of 5 business days from the time of their credit to the depositary agent.

This minimum holding period will not be applicable to:
(i) purchases of negotiable securities in foreign exchange and sale of said securities in foreign exchange when the jurisdiction for the settlement is the same as for the purchase;
(ii) purchases of negotiable securities with settlement in a foreign jurisdiction and sales in foreign exchange in the local jurisdiction, except under the circumstances covered by the provisions contained in Article 1 of this Chapter.

Settlement and Clearing Agents and Trading Agents must demonstrate compliance with the aforementioned minimum holding period for negotiable securities.

Transfers received. Minimum period.

Article 4. – Negotiable securities credited to the Central Depositary Agent for Negotiable Securities (ADCVN) by depositary agencies abroad may not be applied to the settlement of transactions on the local market with settlement in foreign exchange until 5 business days have passed following credit to a subaccount or subaccounts with the aforementioned local custodian.

Contracting and settlement of transactions in domestic currency.

Article 5. – The contracting and settlement of transactions in domestic currency with negotiable securities accepted for listing and/or trading in the Argentine Republic, from subaccounts in the own portfolio of the registered agents and other parties subject to the oversight of the CNV, may only take place on authorized markets and/or clearinghouses registered with the CNV.

Registered agents. Own portfolio.

Article 6. – When, in the local contracting of transactions with settlement in “blue” foreign exchange (moneda extranjera cable) and in the contracting of transactions on foreign markets as a customer, conducted through subaccounts held by Registered Agents, the amount of registered forms of a negotiable security exceeds the amount purchased, resulting in an excess of funds, the agent must apply a minimum of 90% of said surplus on the day of trading to purchase operations for negotiable securities in “blue” foreign exchange contracted on the local regulated market and/or purchases on foreign markets as customer.

When said compensation includes purchase and sale operations as customer in foreign markets, the Registered Agents must, by means of a weekly affidavit for each of the subaccounts involved, report the details of the date of the contract/settlement, counterparty, currency, amount and price, broken down and grouped by contract date, justifying that at the close of each weekly period, the net amount resulting from the sales with settlement in “blue” foreign exchange plus sales abroad as customer, do not exceed purchases with settlement in “blue” foreign exchange on the local market plus purchases of negotiable securities abroad. Said supporting documentation must be submitted to the CNV by the Markets and provided in a timely manner for oversight of Registered Agents.

Interpretational criterion CNV No. 70:
Purchase and sale operations with settlement in “blue” foreign exchange and those contracted on foreign markets as customer through the subaccounts owned by the Registered Agents referred to in Art. 6 of Chapter V of Title XVIII of the CNV Regulations (N.T. 2013 as amended) may only be conducted with the following negotiable securities:
(a) negotiable securities that are offered publicly and listed and/or with authorized trading on Markets regulated by the CNV;
(b) Depositary certificates (ADRs) representing negotiable securities issued by entities with public offering authorized in Argentina and listed and/or authorized trading on the Markets regulated by the CNV;

(c) negotiable securities issued by foreign issuers applicable as underlying assets for Argentine Certificates of Deposit (CEDEARs) with authorization for public offerings and listing and/or trading authorized on the Markets regulated by the CNV.

In the context of the operations referred to in Art. 6. above, when the amount of the registered forms of a negotiable security sold in a single day exceeds the amount purchased of the same on that day, the amount to be paid for the purchases may not be less than 90% of the total sales on local and foreign markets. Any surplus that results must be applied to purchases of the negotiable securities indicated in the previous paragraph. At the close of the week, the total cumulative amount of sales may not exceed the total cumulative amount of purchases of the instruments indicated. For all calculations, the final net amounts of purchases/sales must be considered, including transaction costs and/or conversion of the types involved.

Title XI. Payment methods and control procedures for the receipt and delivery of funds from and to customers.

Article 3. – Settlement and Clearing Agents and individuals and/or legal entities registered with the Commission that act in the placement of mutual funds and other collective investment products authorized by the Commission will abide by the following for the receipt of funds from and delivery of funds to customers:

(a) Cash
i. Received from customers. Only the value in pesos or its equivalent in foreign exchange established in Article 1 of Law No. 25.345 may be received per client and per day in cash.

ii. Paid to customers. Only the value in pesos or its equivalent in foreign exchange established in Article 1 of Law No. 25.345 may be paid per client and per day in cash.

When the funds received or paid, per client and per day, for these items exceed the amount established in the above-mentioned law, delivery by the customer or payment to the customer must be take one of the forms indicated below:

(b) Checks
i. Received from customers. Must be paid from current accounts opened with financial institutions in Argentina authorized by the BCRA, held or jointly held by the customer. As well, as long as irrefutable documentation is provided by the customer, the checks may be paid in favor of the customer, with full endorsement.

ii. Payments to customers. Checks used to pay customers must be crossed checks paid to the order of the customer for deposit in the account or include the words “not to order.” For (a) and (b) together, the regulated parties indicated may make no more than two payments of funds per customer per day.

(c) Transfers in Argentina
i. Received from customers. These must be made from sight bank accounts held or jointly held by the customer, opened with institutions in Argentina authorized by the BCRA or using the Uniform Virtual Key (CVU) of the Unique Tax Identification Code (CUIT) of the customer as long as it allows identification and traceability of the transfers of funds from sight accounts opened with institutions in Argentina authorized by the BCRA belonging to a PSP.

ii. Payments to customers. These must be made to sight bank accounts held or jointly held by the customer, opened with institutions in Argentina authorized by the BCRA or to the CVU of the Unique Tax Identification Code of the customer as long as it allows identification and traceability of the transfers of funds to sight accounts opened with institutions in Argentina authorized by the BCRA belonging to a PSP.

As well, Settlement and Clearing Agents and individuals or legal entities registered with the Commission that act in the placement of Mutual Funds or other collective investment products authorized by the Commission, may make transfers, on the account and by order of their customers, to sight bank accounts held by one of the aforementioned regulated parties for credit to the subaccount that the same issuer has opened with the regulated party receiving the funds. Similarly, the receiver of the funds may credit the transfer to the customer’s account when it comes from sight bank account held by another of the regulated parties mentioned in this article and is transferred on account and by order of the same customer.

Without prejudice to the above, foreign investors subject to special due diligence, in accordance with provisions established by the FIU in the special regulations on this topic, may:

(d) Receive and send bank transfers to and from institutions regulated by the BCRA that act as local custodian for said investors. For this purpose, said foreign investors must issue a special or permanent instruction to the Settlement and Clearing Agents with the data on the account opened with the local custodian.

(e) Receive and send bank transfers to and from institutions regulated by the BCRA that act as local custodian of a foreign institution that participates as a “Foreign Bank/Financial Institution” for such investors, as defined in the specific FIU regulation on this topic. For this purpose, said foreign investors must provide the Settlement and Clearing Agents with a special or permanent instruction containing the data on the account opened with a local custodian – entity regulated by the BCRA – in the name of the foreign institution that participates as a “Foreign Banks/Financial Institution” for such investors, as defined in the specific FIU Resolution on this topic.

Section III
Transactions conducted by foreign investors.

Article 4. – The regulated parties contemplated in Article 20(4), (5), and (22) of Law No. 25.246, as amended, may only conduct transactions under public offerings of negotiable securities, term contracts, futures or options of any kind and other financial products and instruments when they are made or ordered by regulated parties constituted, domiciled or residing in associated dominions, jurisdictions, territories or states that are not considered Non-Cooperative or High Risk by the Financial Action Task Force (FATF). The regulated parties contemplated in Article 20(4) and (5) of Law No. 25.246, as amended, may apply special due diligence measures for identification to foreign investors in the Argentine Republic at the time of the remote opening of special investment accounts, in accordance with the provisions of the specific Resolution on this topic issued by the FIU.

Article 32. FIU Resolution No. 21/2018 – Customers supervised abroad.
Customers that carry out financial activities that are authorized, regulated and supervised adequately from an Anti-Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing standpoint in accordance with the FATF recommendations in the home country jurisdiction, as long as this jurisdiction is not considered to be non-cooperative or high risk by FATF, are subject to authorization and/prudential oversight by their respective specific oversight authorities, and have Cooperation Agreements or Memoranda of Understanding in effect signed with the CNV and/or with the BCRA, may be subject to a special identification procedure as follows:
(a) they must obtain documentation from the customer or reliable sources to:
(1) identify the customer under the terms of Articles 23 and 24 of said law, indicating in an affidavit their primary activity for purposes of identifying the lawful origin of the funds.
(2) determine their respective authorization and registration by the supervisory authorities, specific authorization and/or oversight abroad, as well as their due oversight from an anti-money laundering and terrorist financing standpoint (AML/CFT).
(b) determine the existence of Cooperation Agreements or Memoranda of Understanding in effect, signed between the authorization agency and/or prudential oversight authority of the customer and the CNV or with the BCRA.
Regulated Entities must, in these cases, monitor and track the operations throughout the relationship with their customer with a risk-based focus, in accordance with the terms of Article 33(d). The documentation indicated in the above paragraphs may be sent electronically or by courier.

Open-Ended Mutual Funds:
There is a 25% limit on mutual fund portfolio investments in securities issued by nonresidents. Exceptions to this limit include negotiable securities issued pursuant to authorization in a MERCOSUR member country or Chile. The aforementioned exception does not apply in the case of Mutual Funds whose currency is legal tender in the Argentine Republic.

Closed-Ended Mutual Funds:
Closed-Ended Mutual Funds must invest directly and/or indirectly in assets located, established, originating, issued and/or based in Argentina, not resulting from the application of the provisions of the final part of the fifth paragraph of Article 6 of Law No. 24.083 as amended. This requirement will not be applied in the case of Closed-Ended Mutual Funds intended for financing technological innovation projects developed by companies established in Argentina with the potential for regional or international expansion by virtue of their activity.

When at least 75% of a Fund’s investment portfolio consists of assets authorized for open-ended mutual funds, it will be exempt from the requirement in the previous paragraph regarding their investments in these assets.

Open-Ended Mutual Funds:
There is a 25% limit on mutual fund portfolio investments in securities issued abroad. Exceptions to this limit include negotiable securities issued pursuant to authorization in a MERCOSUR member country or Chile. The aforementioned exception does not apply in the case of Mutual Funds whose currency is legal tender in the Argentine Republic.

Closed-Ended Mutual Funds:
Closed-Ended Mutual Funds must invest directly and/or indirectly in assets located, established, originating, issued and/or based in Argentina, not resulting from the application of the provisions of the final part of the fifth paragraph of Article 6 of Law No. 24.083 as amended. This requirement will not be applied in the case of Closed-Ended Mutual Funds intended for financing technological innovation projects developed by companies established in Argentina with the potential for regional or international expansion by virtue of their activity.
activity.

When at least 75% of a Fund’s investment portfolio consists of assets authorized for open-ended mutual funds, it will be exempt from the requirement in the previous paragraph regarding their investments in these assets.

Open-Ended Mutual Funds:
Mutual funds must invest a minimum of 75% in assets issued and negotiated in Argentina. Assets issued in Argentina are defined as negotiable securities authorized to be issued in a MERCOSUR member country and in the Republic of Chile. In the event that the currency of the Fund is legal tender in the Argentina Republic, at least 75% of the capital of said Fund must be invested in negotiable securities and financial instruments issued in Argentina, exclusively in that currency.

Closed-Ended Mutual Funds:
Closed-Ended Mutual Funds must invest directly and/or indirectly in assets located, established, originating, issued and/or based in Argentina, not resulting from the application of the provisions of the final part of the fifth paragraph of Article 6 of Law No. 24.083 as amended. This requirement will not be applied in the case of Closed-Ended Mutual Funds intended for financing technological innovation projects developed by companies established in Argentina with the potential for regional or international expansion by virtue of their activity.

When at least 75% of a Fund’s investment portfolio consists of assets authorized for open-ended mutual funds, it will be exempt from the requirement in the previous paragraph regarding their investments in these assets.

Arrangements for Payments and Receipts

Prescription of currency requirements

Use of foreign exchange among residents

Access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of debt and other foreign currency obligations is prohibited between residents with the following exceptions:

- foreign currency financing granted by local financial institutions, including payments for foreign currency consumer purchases via credit cards (Para. 3.6.1);
- foreign currency debts between residents taking the form of public instruments or entries in registries as of August 30, 2019 (Para. 3.6.2);
- new issues of debt securities intended to refinance debt included in Para. 3.6.2 and involving an increase in the average term of the obligations (Para. 3.6.3);
- issues of debt securities by residents with public registration in Argentina as from November 29, 2019, denominated and subscribed in foreign currency and the capital and interest of which are payable in Argentina in foreign currency, as long as all of the funds obtained have been sold on the foreign exchange market in accordance with the provisions of Para. 2.5 of the TO de EyC.

Previously, all individuals, legal entities, equity concerns, and other estates may operate freely on the foreign exchange market through authorized institutions without making the distinction by type of operation and/or residence of the customer.

Payments arrears

Access to the foreign exchange market for the payment of debts due or payable on demand for imports of goods from related companies abroad is limited up to the equivalent of US$2 million per month per resident customer; higher amounts require the prior approval of the BCRA. These provisions are found in Para. 10.3.2.5 of the TO de EyC.

Para. 1.9 of the TO de EyC requires completion of the “Survey of External Assets and Liabilities,” even when no inflow of funds to the foreign exchange market has taken place and/or future access to this market is not planned.

Previously, there were no restrictions in the foreign exchange regulations on the payment of financial debts abroad, whether public or private.

Resident Accounts

Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions added various regulations to the previously existing regulations. Previously, domestic currency funds deposited in Argentina could be converted to foreign currencies without any limit.

Para. 5 established prior approval of the BCRA for access to the foreign exchange market by legal entities, local governments, mutual funds, and certain trusts and other estates established in Argentina for the constitution of foreign assets (purpose codes A01, A02, A03, A04, A06, A07, A08, A09, A14, A16, and A17) and for the establishment of any type of guarantee related to the contracting of derivative transactions.

Para. 6 established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US$10,000 per month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved in relation to these items exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening institution, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Communication A 6815 amended the aforementioned Para. 6 of Communication A 6770, establishing the first amount for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance, and derivative operations as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for transactions up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

For access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the institution must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities.

Nonresident Accounts

Domestic currency accounts

Convertible into foreign currency

Para. 7 of Com. A 6770 established that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers in amounts exceeding US$1,000 required the prior approval of the BCRA for purchases of foreign exchange, with the exception of international organizations, institutions acting as official export credit agencies, diplomatic and consular offices and diplomatic staff accredited to Argentina by means of transfers conducted in the exercise of their duties, and offices in Argentina of Tribunals, Authorities or Offices, Special Missions, Bilateral Agencies or Commissions established by International Treaties or Agreements to which the Argentine Republic is a party, to the extent that the transfers are conducted in the performance of their functions.

Previously, all individuals, legal entities, and certain trusts and other estates could operate freely on the foreign exchange market through authorized institutions, without any distinction by type of operation and/or residence of the customer.

Com. 6815 of October 28, 2019, amended Para. 7, reducing the amount of access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers to US$100, with the additional exception of transfers abroad on behalf of individuals that receive pensions from the National Social Security Administration, up to the pension amount received in the calendar month and as long as the transfer is conducted via a bank account held by the beneficiary in his/her registered country of residence.

Said provisions are found in Para. 3.12 of the TO established by Com A 6844 and Supplementary Provisions.

Para. 3.12 of the TO de EyC establishes that access to the foreign exchange market by nonresident customers for the purchase of foreign exchange will require the prior approval of the BCRA, with the exceptions indicated in Paras. 3.12.1 through 3.12.6 of the aforementioned TO.

For access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the entity must have an affidavit from the customer regarding their holdings of foreign assets in Argentina and abroad (Para. 1) and indicating that they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

The entity must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose.

Prior approval

Para. 6 of Communication A 6770 and Supplementary Provisions established prior approval for access to the foreign exchange market by resident individuals for the constitution of foreign assets, family assistance and derivative operations exceeding the equivalent of US $10,000 per month in all institutions authorized to deal in foreign exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved for these items exceeds the equivalent of US $1,000 per month in the intervening institution, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

Communication A 6815 amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the first amount indicated as US$200 per month and allowing the use of domestic currency cash for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

In addition to the general requirements established for outflow operations, Com. A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the institution must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

New requirements were established indicating that beneficiaries of the loans at subsidized rates indicated in Com A 6993, 7006, and 7082 may not access the foreign exchange market to conduct these operations until payment in full of the loans.

Resident may access the market for the purchase of foreign currency banknotes for the purposes indicated without the prior approval of the BCRA under certain conditions, including that they do not exceed the equivalent of US$200 per calendar month in all entities and for all of the purposes indicated (Para. 3.8.1 of the TO) and that the operation takes place by debiting the accounts of the customer with local financial institutions, with the use of domestic currency cash allowed for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities (Para. 3.8.2).

Nonresidents may purchase up to a maximum equivalent to US$100 from all entities for tourism and travel without prior approval from the BCRA, on the condition that the entity has verified in the BCRA online system that the customer has paid an amount equal to or exceeding the amount they wish to purchase within the previous 90 calendar days.

The entity must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose.

Para. 1. Financial institutions and other local card issuers must have the prior approval of the BCRA to access the foreign exchange market for payments abroad relating to the use of credit, debit or prepaid cards issued in Argentina, when said payments result directly or indirectly from the use of international payment networks in the following operations: participation in specific types of gambling and betting and/or transfers of funds to Payment Services Providers and/or transfers of funds to investment accounts with investment managers established abroad and/or for foreign exchange operations abroad and/or for the purchase of various types of crypto assets.

Para. 2. Financial institutions and other local credit or charge card issuers may grant cash advances to cardholders abroad up to a maximum of US$50 per transaction.

Limit on cash advances to cardholders abroad was raised from US$50 to US$200 per transaction for cash withdrawals in countries not bordering on Argentina.

Financial institutions and other local card issuers must have the prior approval of the BCRA to access the foreign exchange market to make payments abroad relating to the use of credit, debit or prepaid cards issued in Argentina, resulting directly or indirectly from the use of international payment networks in the following transactions: participation in specific types of gambling and betting and/or transfers of funds to Payment Services Providers and/or transfers of funds to investment accounts with investment managers established abroad and/or foreign exchange operations abroad and/or the purchase of various types of crypto assets.

Financial institutions and other local credit or debit card issuers may grant cash advances to cardholders abroad up to a maximum of US$50 per transaction.

Com A 6948 increased that limit to US$200 per transaction for cash withdrawals in countries not bordering on Argentina.

The entity must have all of the documentation needed to demonstrate the genuine nature of the operation and its appropriate classification under the declared purpose.

exchange and for all of the purposes indicated above. As well, when the amount involved for these purposes exceeds the equivalent of US$1,000 per month in the intervening institution, the operation must be conducted by debit to local accounts.

10/28/2019 Com A 6815 amended the aforementioned Para. 6, establishing the first amount indicated as US$200 per month and allowing the use domestic currency cash for operations up to the equivalent of US$100 per calendar month in all entities authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

05/28/2020 Com A 7030 and Supplementary Provisions established that for access to the foreign exchange market without the prior approval of the BCRA, the entity must have an affidavit from the customer, indicating they have not conducted certain operations in securities (Para. 4).

To residents from nonresidents 09/01/2019 Com A 6770 establishes that foreign financial debts disbursed as from September 1, 2019, must be repatriated and sold on the foreign exchange market as a requirement for subsequent access to the market for principal and interest payments. Com A 6776 of September 5, 2019, provides that, in the case of institutions, this requirement is deemed to be met when the funds are included in the General Exchange Position. These provisions are found in Para. 2.4 of the TO de EyC.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange
09/01/2019 Under Para. 5.9.3 of the TO de EyC, entities may not purchase securities on the secondary market with settlement in foreign exchange and may not use funds from their PGC to make payments to local suppliers (Para. 5.9.4 of said TO).

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange

Reserve requirements
02/01/2019 Saving deposits including payroll/social security and special deposits are subject to a minimum cash requirement of 45% (previously 28%) or 20% (previously 26%) (based on the category of financial institution), or 25% for such deposits denominated in pesos or foreign currency, respectively.

01/01/2020 The limit on the deduction of the minimum cash requirement based on financing granted under the “AHORA 12” program was increased from 1% to 1.5% (with the possibility of an additional 1%) of the items subject to the requirement.

02/01/2020 A new deduction from the minimum cash requirement was established for entities in Group A, equivalent to 30% of the sum of peso financing to MSMEs granted at a maximum annual nominal fixed interest rate of 40% with a limit of 2% of the items in peso subject to the requirement.

The way in which the residual term of deposits with a prepayment option in UVAs updatable on the basis of the CER should be calculated – Law 25.827 (“UVA”).
The minimum cash requirement was reduced based on the special treatment provided for financing in UVAs updatable on the basis of the CER – Law 25.827 (“UVA”), to which a limit on the increase in the value of the installments to be paid is applied.

The currency of Armenia is the Armenian dram.

The exchange rate is classified as dual because of the agreement between the MOF and CBA to settle some budgetary transactions at Under Article 28 of the AML/CFT Law, reporting entities and customs authorities are required to freeze the assets of persons designated under respective UNSC Resolutions or under lists established by the CBA. It is prohibited to make any property, economic resources, or financial or other related services available, directly or indirectly, wholly or jointly, to or for the benefit of terrorism-related or proliferation-related persons. Further specificities on applicable restrictions are provided under Guidance on Freezing of Property of Persons and Entities Related to Terrorism or Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction, Providing Access to Frozen Property and Related Actions approved by the Decision of the Chairman of the CBA No. 1/435 – A of June 26, 2018. Decision of the Chairman of the CBA No. 1/434 – A of June 26, 2018, approved the Rules for Proposing Persons or Entities for Designation under the Lists published by or in accordance with the UNSC Resolutions and for Designating Persons or Entities under the Lists published by the CBA.

Financial transactions are restricted and accounts are frozen if they involve persons or entities designated under the lists of persons and entities related to terrorism pursuant to (1) the UNSC Resolutions 1373 and 1267 and (2) the list of current organizations associated with terrorism designated by the US Secretary of State.

There are no other security restrictions.

an agreed accounting exchange rate throughout the fiscal year.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The CBA intervenes in the foreign exchange market only to smooth excessive exchange rate volatility, defined as short-term, high-frequency exchange rate movements caused by speculative or trend following elements rather than underlying macroeconomic fundamentals. The CBA intervenes anonymously mainly via auctions of foreign exchange, or openly in the interbank market, or through the stock exchange. The CBA publishes weekly intervention data through the stock exchange only on its website every Monday and publishes daily foreign exchange auction results on the local interbank platform.

The exchange rate of Armenian dram was relatively stable during 2019. The exchange rate was exposed to mainly appreciation pressures, caused by favorable developments in current account balance, mostly driven by exports of goods and services. Given the balance of payments (BOP) developments and taking into account the policy advice for reserve accumulation from IMF, CB intervened in foreign exchange market by purchasing US$565.6 mln in 2019 on net basis.

Because the exchange rate has appreciated within a 2% band against the US dollar from mid-February 2019, and stabilized from August 2019 to March 2020, the de facto exchange arrangement was reclassified twice: (1) to crawl-like from stabilized, effective January 2, 2019, and (2) to stabilized from crawl-like, effective August 12, 2019.

Every day the CB publishes official exchange rates. The official exchange rate against the US dollar is set as the weighted average of the buying and selling rates in the foreign exchange market. For other currencies, except for the SDRs of IMF, the official average exchange rates of Armenian dram are set as cross-rates using US dollar’s official exchange rate against corresponding currencies and official exchange rate of Armenian dram against US dollar published by the CBA. The official exchange rate is used for accounting purposes and for treasury operations connected with external debt service or to create new external obligations. All economic agents use the official exchange rate for bookkeeping and revaluation purposes.

The headline CPI is used as a target measure, which is calculated and published by the Statistical Committee of the Republic of Armenia. The inflation target is expressed in terms of 12-monthly inflation three years (12 quarters) ahead.

Core inflation

Target horizon Yes.

The CBA makes decisions regarding its monetary policy to meet the inflation target in the upcoming 12 quarters.

Operating target (policy rate) Yes.

The policy rate of the CBA is the refinancing rate, which is the lower bound for 7-day repo agreement auctions by the CBA. During 2019–2020, the refinancing rate was decreased from 5.75% to 4.5%. The refinancing rate was set at 5.75% as of January 29, 2019; 5.5% as of September 10, 2019; 5.25% as of March 17, 2020; and 5% as of April 28, 2020. As of June 16, 2020, the refinancing rate was decreased by 0.5pp to 4.5% The operational target of the CBA under the inflation-targeting regime is the short-term (1–7 days) interbank...
Target corridor band: Yes.

The target corridor band was steadily decreased during 2019–2020. The target corridor band was set at 4.25%–7.25% as of January 29, 2019; 4%–7% as of September 10, 2019; 3.75%–6.75% as of March 17, 2020; 3.5%–6.5% as of April 28, 2020; and 3%–6% as of June 16, 2020. The lower level of the band is the rate for Deposit facility and the upper level of the band is the rate for Lombard Repo agreement. The rates for both Deposit facility and Lombard Repo agreement are set as +1.5% and 1.5% from the policy rate. The short-term target of the CBA in IT framework is that short-term interest rates to be close to policy rate and not the target corridor band. The band is set only to limit excessive volatilities of interest rate in tail events.

Accountability: Yes.

Open letter: No.

Parliamentary hearings: Yes. According to the Law on the Central Bank, every year but no later than May 1, the CBA must present to the Parliamentary hearings the yearly statement of the CBA’s activity, which includes the report about the monetary policy program of first quarter of the current year and the report about implementation of monetary policy during the previous year.

Transparency: Yes.

Publication of votes: No.

Publication of minutes: Yes. The CBA publishes the press release on the CBA Interest Rates that contains a brief summary of discussions at the CBA Board meeting covering interest rates and the refinancing rate (repo interest rate) eight times a year. The Summary Minutes of the CBA Board Meeting on CBA Interest Rates, which are published within the next nine working days, contain the following information: the main trends of economic development, inflation, and financial markets; a summary of discussions held at the CBA Board meeting relative to the setting of the CBA Interest Rates; a decision on the interest rates of the monetary policy instruments. Effective June 30, 2020, the Governor of the CBA holds press conferences on the day of interest-rate decision explaining the main factors underlying the decision. The first press conference was held June 30, 2020, whereas the first press conference on the day of the decision making was held July 28, 2020.

Publication of inflation forecasts: Yes. The CBA publishes quarterly inflation reports, where it monitors the actual quarterly inflation in comparison with the projected one, explains the main underlying factors of any possible deviations, and discusses policy implications of bringing the inflation back to its projected path.

Other monetary framework

Exchange tax: No.

Exchange subsidy: No.

Foreign exchange market: Yes. Foreign exchange transactions take place in the interbank, intrabank, and stock exchange markets. The CBA participates mostly in the interbank market via quick tender; it may also participate in the stock exchange market. Commercial banks, foreign exchange dealers, and credit institutions may freely set the exchange rate (as well as any commissions) in transactions with their clients.

Effective April 15, 2020, according to the amendment of March 25,
Regulation and Currency Control, the foreign exchange dealer trading is eliminated from the legislation of Armenia. (At the moment of the amendment, notwithstanding the existing legislation, there was no one licensed foreign exchange dealer.)

As of December 31, 2019, 17 commercial banks, 13 investment companies, 5 investment fund managers, 43 credit institutions, 7 insurance companies, 3 insurance brokers, 8 pension funds, and 211 foreign exchange bureaus were licensed by the CBA and were in operation. Foreign exchange entities carry out foreign exchange transactions by freely setting their own buying and selling rates for major currencies against the dram. The operations of foreign exchange bureaus are limited: They are authorized to purchase and sell foreign currency banknotes at freely determined rates only with individuals. They may not make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients. Foreign exchange bureaus may have accounts abroad.

Spot exchange market

Yes.

Purchases and sales of foreign currency may take place through foreign exchange entities licensed by the CBA, including banks, foreign exchange dealers investment companies, credit institutions, and foreign exchange bureaus or, in the case of the government, through the CBA, which acts as the government’s financial agent.
The CBA intervenes in the stock exchange only as a common market participant.

Effective April 15, 2020, according to the amendment of March 25,
Regulation and Currency Control, the foreign exchange dealer trading is eliminated from the legislation of Armenia. (At the moment of the amendment, notwithstanding the existing legislation,
there was no one licensed foreign exchange dealer.)

Operated by the central bank

Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility

No.

Allocation

No.

Auction

Yes. The CBA conducts foreign exchange transactions in the interbank market via quick tender, announcing either the bid-ask rate or volume. The underlying regulation is the CBA Monetary Policy Indirect Instruments and Application Mechanisms – approved by CBA Board Decree No. 7A of January 24, 2014. A master agreement between the CBA and commercial banks governs sales and purchases of foreign exchange, currency swaps, and currency cash and noncash conversions. The auction has the following characteristics: (1) preannouncement of either the exchange rate or volume; (2) no predetermined frequency; (3) penalty of 0.5% of the transaction in drams for banks that default on a foreign exchange transaction; (4) no requirement to finance-specific international transactions with the foreign exchange proceeds (retail auction); (5) purchases and sales conducted with commercial banks that participate in the master agreement; and (6) foreign exchange auction results published on the local interbank platform.

Fixing

No.

Interbank market

Yes. Interbank foreign exchange transactions take place both on the stock exchange and over the counter. All 17 banks licensed by the CBA (as of December 31, 2019) may freely participate in the interbank market both over the counter and on the stock exchange. There are no limits on bid-ask spreads and commissions for market participants, and there are no market makers in the foreign exchange market. As of December 31, 2019, ten banks were participating in the interbank market. The CBA does not intervene directly with market participants at their quoted rates. The CBA participates mostly in the interbank market via quick tender: announcing either fixed or variable tender. It may also participate in the stock exchange market.

The foreign exchange market operates both on the stock exchange and over the counter.

Armenia is a member of the EEU with Belarus, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyz Republic, and Russia. There are no customs procedures within EEU member countries. Products imported from CIS countries are exempt from import tariffs. Imports from third countries are subject to import tariffs in accordance with the EEU Decree No. 54 of July 16, 2012. However, Armenia applies the tariffs that were used prior to joining the EEU on imports for more than 800 products based on the agreed schedule. Meanwhile, according to the Membership Agreement, Armenia secured customs duty preferences for imports to Armenia for a list of products.

The CBA reserves the right to impose capital controls to maintain the stability of the financial system and prevent money laundering and financing of terrorism, and for statistical purposes.

On capital market securities

Under the Republic of Armenia Law “On Securities Market,” the public sale of securities (including shares or other equity securities) of nonresidents must be handled by a local investment services provider (agent).

This requirement refers only to nonresident issuers with the aim of local investor protection. In particular, considering the fact that local investment services providers are under the CBA supervision, this legal provision gives the CBA a tool of effective control over the sale or issue of a nonresident securities.

The control measures over such sale or issue are implemented mostly through the prospectus and/or other sale (issue) documents, which are submitted to the CBA for approval prior to the sale or issue of such securities. Moreover, if the securities are admitted to trading on the regulated market, additional control measures are implemented by both CBA and regulated market operator via the listing procedures, as well as periodic and ongoing reporting requirements.

Reserve requirements

Yes.

The minimum reserve requirement is 2% for funds attracted in drams under the CBA Resolution No. 299-N of December 24, 2013. Effective June 8, 2019, under the CBA Resolution No. 75-N of June 7, 2019, the minimum reserve requirement for foreign currency funds is 18%, 16% of which is held in Armenian drams and the other 2% for funds attracted in EUR is held in euros, for funds attracted in US dollar and other foreign currencies is held in US dollar. (Previously, under the CBA Resolution No. 146-N of September 20, 2016, the minimum reserve requirement was 18% for foreign currency funds, which is fully held in drams.) The reserve requirement for residents’ and nonresidents’ deposits is not remunerated. If the funds come from bonds issued by the bank, meet certain requirements, and have a contractual maturity of at least two years, the minimum reserve requirement is reduced by 2%.
requirement is 0% for funds in drams and 0% or 4.5% of funds in foreign currency (CBA Resolution No. 44-N of February 24, 2015). If the funds come from bonds issued by the bank, meet certain requirements, and have a contractual maturity of at least four years, the minimum reserve requirement is 0% for funds in drams and 0%, 2.25%, or 4.5% of funds in foreign currency (CBA Resolution No. 236-N of November 10, 2015). If the funds are attracted from certain international financial institutions and the period prior to repayment of attracted resource is not less than two years, the minimum reserve requirement is 0% for funds in drams and 4.5% for funds in foreign currency (CBA Resolution No. 44-N of February 24, 2015). If the funds are attracted from certain international financial institutions and the period prior to repayment of attracted resource is not less than four years, the reserve requirement is 0% for funds in drams and 2.25% for funds in foreign currency (CBA Resolution No. 236-N of November 10, 2015).

Liquid asset requirements

Yes.

CBA Resolution No. 168-N of June 26, 2012, specifies the foreign exchange liquidity ratio requirements. For the total liquidity ratio of highly liquid assets to total assets, the floor is 4% for assets in one of the following: SDRs, US dollars, euros, pounds sterling, Japanese yen, Swiss francs, Canadian dollars, Swedish kronor, Danish kroner, Australian dollars, and monetary gold. If liabilities in another currency exceed 5% of total liabilities on a monthly basis, a special general liquidity ratio applies, which includes assets in that particular currency and US dollars and euros. The floor of the special ratio is 4%. For the current liquidity ratio of highly liquid assets to demand liabilities, the floor is 10% for assets and liabilities in one of the following: SDRs, US dollars, euros, pounds sterling, Japanese yen, Swiss francs, Canadian dollars, Swedish kronor, Danish kroner, Australian dollars, and monetary gold. If liabilities in another currency exceed 5% of total liabilities on a monthly basis, a special current liquidity ratio applies, which includes assets and liabilities in that particular currency and US dollars and euros. The floor of the special ratio is 10%. The total liquidity ratio and current liquidity ratio are 15% and 60%, respectively, for all currencies; no special liquidity ratio is required for domestic currency.

Investment regulations

Yes.

Investment transactions of banks operating in Armenia are regulated by Article 35 of the Law on Banks and Banking, which applies to transactions in Armenia and abroad. Under Article 35 of the Law on Banks and Banking, unless permitted by the CBA, bank operations may not lead to (1) acquisition of 4.99% or more participation in the statutory fund of any other person; (2) acquisition of equity interest in the statutory fund of one person exceeding 15% of the bank’s total capital; or (3) acquisition of equity interest in the statutory funds of

Abroad by banks

Yes.
other persons exceeding 35% of the bank’s total capital. CBA consent is required for transactions that result in a bank’s participation in the statutory fund of another or the same person exceeding 9%, 15%, 25%, 35%, 50%, or 70% or leading to 100%.

In banks by nonresidents

Under Article 18 of the Law on Banks and Banking, significant ownership in banks by residents or nonresidents must be approved by the CBA. Under Article 9 of this law and other laws regulating banking activity, significant participation in a legal entity means (1) ownership of 10% or more of voting stocks (shares) of the legal entity or (2) ownership of less than 10% of voting stocks (shares) or ownership with no voting power but in the opinion of the CB able to determine the decisions of management, exercise significant influence over decision making and application of decisions, or determine the targets and spheres of a legal entity’s activity through participation, directly or indirectly, business reputation, and standing. According to this law and other laws regulating banking activities, significant interest means that a legal entity is able to determine the decisions of management, influence decision making or application, or determine the targets and spheres of a legal entity’s activity.

According to the point 5 of the Article 18 of the Law on Banks and Banking, physical entities permanently residing or acting in offshore zones, as well as legal entities or entities with no legal status determined or incorporated there and parties related with them may acquire participation in the statutory capital of a bank (regardless of the extent of the participation) through one or a number of transactions only through the procedure outlined in this Article, after securing preliminary consent of the CB.

The legal entities determined with participation of parties listed in this article or parties related with them may acquire participation in the statutory capital of a bank (regardless of the extent of the participation) only through the procedure outlined in this Article, after securing preliminary consent of the CB.

The described regulations are of a prudential nature and not a form of a capital control.

Open foreign exchange position limits

The limits on open foreign exchange positions are calculated with and without including derivatives. A limit of 7% of capital applies on open foreign exchange positions of individual currencies, and a limit of 10% of capital applies on aggregate gross foreign exchange positions of all currencies. For the purpose of calculation, currencies are grouped into two categories: (1) SDR, US dollar, euro, Japanese yen, pound sterling, Swiss franc, Swedish krona, Danish koruna, Australian dollar, Canadian dollar, and bank gold and (2) all other currencies. Derivatives contracts with international organizations (for example, ECB, IMF, World Bank), multilateral development banks, sovereigns, CBs, and foreign commercial banks rated at least A+ (A1) are included in the calculation of limits on open foreign exchange positions, which exclude derivatives.

On resident assets and liabilities

There is no differentiated approach between resident and nonresident assets and liabilities when calculating open foreign exchange position. The limits on open foreign exchange positions are calculated with and without including derivatives. A limit of 7% of capital applies on open foreign exchange positions of individual currencies, and a limit of 10% of capital applies on aggregate gross foreign exchange positions of all currencies. For the purpose of the calculation, currencies are grouped into two categories: (1) SDR, US dollar, euro, Japanese yen, pound sterling, Swiss franc, Swedish krona, Danish koruna, Australian dollar, Canadian dollar, and bank gold and (2) all other currencies. Derivatives contracts with international organizations (for example, ECB, IMF, World Bank), multilateral development banks, sovereigns, CBs, and foreign commercial banks rated at least A+ (A1) are included in the calculation of limits on open foreign exchange positions, which exclude derivatives.

On nonresident assets and liabilities

Yes. There is no differentiated approach between resident and nonresident assets and liabilities when calculating open foreign exchange position. The limits on open foreign exchange positions are calculated with and without including derivatives. A limit of 7% of capital applies on open foreign exchange positions of individual currencies, and a limit of 10% of capital applies on aggregate gross foreign exchange positions of all currencies. Provisions specific to institutional investors

Yes. The only institutional investors in Armenia are insurance companies, investment companies, and pension funds. As of December 31, 2019, there were seven insurance companies, 13 investment companies, 29 investment funds, and eight pension funds in operation.

Insurance companies

Yes. The insurance companies are regulated according to the Law on Insurance and Insurance Activity and other legal acts.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents

No. There are no limits specifically targeted toward securities issued by nonresidents.

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad

No. There are no limits specifically targeted toward investment portfolios held abroad.

However, under CBA Resolution No. 311-N of October 2, 2007, on approval of CBA Regulation No. 3/02 concerning prudential standards of insurance companies, there are limits regarding the asset composition of technical reserves. The maximums are (1) 3% on cash holdings; (2) 100% on Armenian government securities, CBA securities, and deposits in the CBA; (3) 5% for a single issuer and 40% for all issuers of state and corporate securities and bank accounts and deposits by issuers rated A+, A1, or A or higher by Standard & Poor’s, Fitch, Moody’s, A.M. Best; and nongovernmental bonds issued by the EBRD, ECB, EIB, and other international organizations (where Armenia has a membership) (CBA Resolution No. 176-N of June 23, 2013); (4) 10% for a single issuer and 40% for all issuers of securities, issued by financial organizations, operating in Armenia, securities from issuers rated A, B, or C by the CBA (CBA Resolution No. 225-N of August 12, 2014); (5) 20% for a single issuer and 100% for all issuers for accounts and deposits in banks operating in and lending to banks operating in Armenia; (6) 5% for a single issuer and 20% for all issuers for loans to insurance companies, investment companies, and credit institutions (collecting funds through public offer) operating in Armenia; (7) 10% for a single issuer and 50% for all issuers of securities by current (market) value, which were purchased through repo agreements; and (8) 5%, but not more than 100 million Armenian drams, on units of investment funds in fair value, which are registered by the CBA, implement their investment policy in Armenia, and there are not any bidding conditions to sell these units in the future.

No. There are no limits specifically targeted toward investment portfolios held locally.
However, under CBA Resolution No. 311-N of October 2, 2007, on approval of CBA Regulation No. 3/02 concerning prudential standards of insurance companies, there are limits regarding the asset composition of technical reserves. The maximums are (1) 3% on cash holdings; (2) 100% on Armenian government securities, CBA securities, and deposits in the CBA; (3) 5% for a single issuer and 40% for all issuers of state and corporate securities, bank accounts and deposits by issuers rated A+, A1, or A or higher by Standard & Poor’s, Fitch, Moody’s, and A.M. Best and nongovernmental bonds issued by the EBRD, ECB, EIB, and other international organizations (where Armenia has a membership) (CBA Resolution No. 176-N of June 23, 2013); (4) 10% for a single issuer and 40% for all issuers of securities, issued by financial organizations, operating in Armenia, securities from issuers rated A, B, or C by the CBA (CBA Resolution No. 225-N of August 12, 2014); (5) 20% for a single issuer and 100% for all issuers for accounts and deposits in banks operating in and lending to banks operating in Armenia; (6) 5% for a single issuer and 20% for all issuers for loans to insurance companies, investment companies, and credit institutions (collecting funds through public offer) operating in Armenia; (7) 10% for a single issuer and 50% for all issuers of stocks by current (market) value, which were purchased through repo agreements; and (8) 5%, but not more than 100 million Armenian drams, on units of investment funds in fair value, which are registered by the CBA, implement their investment policy in Armenia, and there are not any bidding conditions to sell these units in the future.

Limits on foreign exchange positions conform to CBA Resolution No. 368-N of December 20, 2011, and amendments, and the addition to CBA Regulation No. 3/02 concerning the prudential standards of insurance companies. The limits on open foreign exchange positions include inclusive and exclusive derivatives. A limit of 7% of capital applies on open foreign exchange positions of individual currencies, and a limit of 10% of capital applies on gross foreign exchange positions of all currencies. Derivatives contracts with international organizations (for example, ECB, IMF, World Bank), multilateral development banks, sovereigns, CBs, and foreign financial companies rated at least A+ (A1/A); and currency; and foreign exchange swaps are included in the calculation of open foreign exchange positions, which exclude derivatives. Foreign exchange risk is captured in the calculations of the capital adequacy ratio. Under CBA Resolution No. 151-N of June 29, 2010, on approval of amendments and the addition to CBA Regulation No. 3/02, the insurance companies’ capital adequacy ratio is calculated as the ratio of total capital to the sum of risk-weighted assets and required solvency, with the risk-weighted assets calculated as follows: 0.12 × (credit risk + foreign exchange risk) + operational risk. Under Regulation No. 3/02, an insurance company’s foreign exchange risk is the highest of each day’s end-of-day maximum foreign exchange positions during the reporting month.

Pension funds are regulated according to the Republic of Armenia Law “On Funded Pensions.” According to the Republic of Armenia Law “On Funded Pensions,” the total investments in securities issued or fully guaranteed by a foreign state or its CB may not exceed 40% of the total assets of a mandatory pension fund. The total investment in one issue (tranche) may not exceed 20% of the total assets of the fund. According to CBA Board Resolution No. 161-N of July 15, 2014, on Approving Regulation No. 10/30 “On Quantitative and Foreign Currency Restrictions for Voluntary Pension Funds’ Investments,” the total investments in securities issued or fully guaranteed by a foreign state or its CB may not exceed 40% of the total assets of a voluntary pension fund. The total investment in one issue (tranche) may not exceed 20% of the total assets of the fund.

Though there are no direct limits on investment portfolios held abroad, however, an indirect limit is set by the Republic of Armenia Law “On Funded Pensions” for mandatory pension funds and by CBA Board Resolution No. 161-N of July 15, 2014, on Approving Regulation No. 10/30 “Quantitative and Foreign Currency Restrictions for Voluntary Pension Funds’ Investments” for voluntary pension funds.

The total foreign exchange investments of mandatory pension funds are limited at 40% of the total assets of the fund. For voluntary pension funds, the limit is set at 50%.

The total amount of non-convertible foreign exchange investments of mandatory and voluntary pension funds may not exceed 3% of total assets.

The credit ratings of foreign banks, in which the assets of mandatory pension funds may be invested, may not be lower than Standard & Poor’s “BBB,” Moody’s “Baa3,” or Fitch’s “BBB.”

The credit ratings of foreign banks, in which the assets of voluntary pension fund may be invested, may not be lower than Standard & Poor’s “BBB,” Moody’s “Baa3,” or Fitch’s “BBB.”

The credit ratings of foreign issuers (if guaranteed by any third person, then of that guarantor), in debt securities of which the assets of voluntary pension funds may be invested, may not be lower than Standard & Poor’s “BBB,” Moody’s “Baa3,” or Fitch’s “BBB-.” except for debt securities issued or fully guaranteed by the foreign state or its CB.

According to the Republic of Armenia Law “On Funded pensions,” the total amount of foreign-exchange-denominated investments may not exceed 40% of the total assets of a mandatory pension fund. According to CBA Board Resolution No. 161-N of July 15, 2014, the total amount of foreign-exchange-denominated investments may not exceed 50% of the total assets of a voluntary pension fund.

Investment firms are regulated by the Republic of Armenia Law “On Securities Market.”

Collective investment funds are regulated according to the Republic of Armenia Law “On Investment Funds.”

Changes during 2019 and 2020

Exchange Arrangement
Because the exchange rate has stabilized from August 2019 to March 2020, the de facto exchange arrangement was reclassified to stabilized from crawl-like.

Because the exchange rate has appreciated within a 2% band against the US dollar from mid-February 2019, the de facto exchange arrangement was reclassified to crawl-like from stabilized.

The Governor of the Central Bank of Armenia holds press conferences on the day of interest-rate decision explaining the main factors underlying the decision. The first press conference was held June 30, 2020, where the Governor of the CBA presented monetary policy program of second quarter of 2020, whereas the first press conference on the day of the decision making was held July 28, 2020.

According to the amendment of March 25, 2020, 182-N on Law of the Republic of Armenia on Currency Regulation and Currency Control, the foreign exchange dealer trading is eliminated from the legislation of Armenia. (At the moment of the amendment, notwithstanding the existing legislation, there was no one licensed foreign exchange dealer.)

According to the amendment of July 8, 2020, 359-N on the Law of the Republic of Armenia on Currency Regulation and Currency Control, the interest to be paid on loans and deposits denominated in foreign currency, as well as payments on foreign-currency-denominated bonds (including coupons), repo agreements, foreign-currency-denominated securities and payments associated with foreign currency or interest rate derivatives can also be made in foreign currency.

According to the amendment of March 25, 2020, 182-N on Law of the Republic of Armenia on Currency Regulation and Currency Control, the foreign exchange dealer trading is eliminated from the legislation of Armenia. (At the moment of the amendment, notwithstanding the existing legislation, there was no one licensed foreign exchange dealer.)

The minimum reserve requirement for foreign currency funds is 18%, 16% of which is held in Armenian drams and the other 2% for funds attracted in EUR is held in euros, for funds attracted in US dollar and other foreign currencies is held in US dollar. Previously, the minimum reserve requirement was 18% for foreign currency funds, which is fully held in drams.

Exchange Measures

The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation discussions with the Kingdom of the Netherlands—Aruba states that, as of May 6, 2019, Aruba maintained an unapproved exchange restriction arising from the foreign exchange tax on payments by residents to nonresidents (1.3% of the transaction value). (Country Report No. 19/148)

Exchange Measures imposed for security reasons

- Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices: Yes.
- Exchange measures imposed for security reasons: Yes.
- In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51): No.
- Other security restrictions: Yes.

Aruba maintains a Sanctions State Decree to Combat Terrorism and Terrorist Financing (AB 2010 No. 27), which is based on the Sanctions State Ordinance 2006 (AB 2007 No. 24). The Sanctions State Decree provides for the direct implementation of United Nations Security Council Resolution (UNSCR) 1267 (1999) and for the establishment of a domestic freezing mechanism as required in UNSCR 1373 (2001). The Interim-State Decree on Priority Sanction Regimes effective September 3, 2019 (AB 2019 No. 47), containing the provisions for the implementation of Articles 2 and 2a of the Sanction State Ordinance 2006 (AB 2007 No. 24) requires the freezing of all funds and other assets of persons and organizations mentioned in the annex of the State Decree. This Interim-State Decree was enacted for the purpose of implementing in short term a number of regulations and decisions adopted in the context of the Common Foreign and Security Policy of the EU. Sanctions State Decree Libya (AB 2011 No. 25) provides for the freezing of all funds or other assets in Aruba that belong directly or indirectly to, are owned by, are in possession of, or are under the control of a natural person, legal entity, or other entity mentioned in Annex II of UNSCR 1970 (2011) and UNSCR 1973 (2011). Sanctions State Decree Ukraine (AB 2014 No. 26) implemented Regulation No. 208/2014 (March 5, 2014) adopted by the Council of the EU regarding the freezing of funds and economic resources of persons identified as responsible for the misappropriation of Ukrainian State funds, persons responsible for human rights violations in Ukraine, and natural or legal persons, entities, or bodies associated with them. Sanctions State Decree Sudan (September 25, 2014) (AB 2014 No. 46) provides for the freezing of funds or other assets in Aruba that belong directly or indirectly to, are owned by, are in possession of, or are under the control of a natural person, legal entity, or other entity or body mentioned in Annex I of Regulation No. 747/2014 (July 10, 2014) of Council of the EU. Sanctions State Decree South Sudan (September 25, 2014) (AB 2014 No. 47) provides for the freezing of funds or other assets in Aruba that belong directly or indirectly to, are... owned by, are in possession of, or are under the control of a natural person, legal entity, or other entity or body mentioned in Annex I of Regulation No. 748/2014 (July 10, 2014) of Council of the EU. Sanctions State Decree Syria (AB 2016 No. 2) implemented Regulation No. 36/2012 (January 18, 2012), as well as two subsequent Decisions (Decision No. 2011/782/CFSP and Decision No. 2013/255/CFSP), adopted by the Council of the EU regarding restrictive measures against Syria and certain persons, entities, and bodies from Syria. Sanctions Decree Central African Republic (October 25, 2016) (AB 2016 No. 55) implemented Regulation 224/2014 by the Council of the EU of March 10, 2014, regarding restrictive measures against certain persons, entities and bodies from the Central African Republic; Decision No. 2013/798/CFSP by the Council of the EU of December 23, 2013, also concerning restrictive measures against the Central African Republic. Sanctions State Decree Yemen (March 7, 2017) (AB 2017 No. 10) provides for the freezing of funds or other assets in Aruba that belong directly or indirectly to, are owned by, are in possession of, or are under the control of a natural person, legal entity, or other entity or body mentioned in Annex I of Regulation No. 1352/2014 (December 18, 2014) of the Council of the EU and in the Annex of the Decision No. 2014/932 (December 18, 2014) adopted by the Council of the EU. Sanctions State Decree Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (July 17, 2017) (AB 2017 No. 42) implemented UN Resolution Nos. 1718 (2006), 1874 (2009), 2087 (2013), 2094 (2013), 2270 (2016), 2321 (2016), 2345 (2017), 2356 (2017), annexes to the Regulation No. 329/2007 (March 27, 2007) of the Council of the EU and annexes of the Decision No. 2016/849 adopted by the Council of the EU.

A foreign exchange commission of 1.3% applies to all payments by residents to nonresidents, including those made through local banks and foreign accounts. Certain payments, such as those of certain government-related companies, are exempt.

The Central Bank of Aruba (CBA) determines the daily foreign exchange rate for the officially quoted foreign currencies, which commercial banks must use when calculating foreign currency cross-rates among themselves and for transactions with residents and nonresidents. If there is a large exchange rate fluctuation of a foreign currency against the US dollar for transactions with a counter value of Afl. 100,000 or more, a commercial bank may request a new exchange rate. The spread between the foreign exchange buying and selling rates may not exceed 2%. The foreign exchange commission is not included in the bid-ask spreads but is added afterward.

From April 1, 2015, the State Ordinance on Exchange Rate Margin Compensation Central Bank of Aruba requires commercial banks to pay a fee to the CBA on all sales of foreign currency to the public, both cash and noncash, amounting to 3/8% of the florin equivalent of these sales. The CBA will pay a fee to the commercial banks on all purchases of foreign currency from the public, both cash and noncash, amounting to 1/8% of the florin equivalent of these purchases.

Under the SOSMTC, the CBA may grant foreign exchange bureaus a registration to operate under certain conditions. Only banks and money exchange offices established in Aruba and granted license from the CBA may conduct foreign exchange transactions with the public. In September 2017, the SOSMTC was amended to extend its supervisory scope to money exchange offices. In 2018, the CBA granted licenses to two companies to operate as a money exchange office. In 2019, one foreign exchange bureau was granted a registration to conduct foreign exchange transactions. However, the registration of this foreign exchange bureau was revoked in 2020 on its own request. Money exchange offices may exchange coins or banknotes against other coins or banknotes, or pay out coins or banknotes on presentation of a credit card or payment card or on handing over checks, traveler’s checks, bills of exchange, or postal money orders. They may maintain accounts abroad; however, all resident companies that have a foreign bank account (FBA) or foreign intercompany account (FIA) must notify these to the CBA pursuant to Article 11 of the State Ordinance Foreign Exchange Transactions. Money exchange offices may not make foreign exchange transactions directly with the CB.

Operated by the central bank: Yes.
Foreign exchange standing facility: Yes.

The CBA deals with local commercial banks within margins of 0.002795% on either side of parity. Depending on banks’ B-9 arrangement, which sets a maximum amount of foreign exchange commercial banks may hold (in net foreign assets), they may buy or sell foreign exchange from or to the CBA. The CBA deals directly with the government.

Resident Accounts

| Foreign exchange accounts permitted | Yes. |
| Residents may open accounts denominated in foreign currency with local banks, provided these accounts are funded with foreign currency. In the context of the measures taken resulting from the impact of COVID-19 pandemic on the economy of Aruba, the CBA will not grant any new foreign exchange licenses that relate to outgoing capital transactions, including dividend declarations. The Notice concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2002/K.1 (General Foreign Exchange License) has been suspended for all outgoing capital transactions, effective March 17, 2020, until further notice. Furthermore, the CBA has also revoked the general license issued by Notice concerning Foreign Exchange Transaction 02/K.1 |
for all outgoing capital transactions. This means that the thresholds of Afl. 300,000 a year for resident natural persons and Afl. 750,000 a year for resident legal entities are no longer applicable for outgoing capital transactions. Consequently, no outgoing capital transactions, no matter the amount, are allowed until further notice. Previously, transactions of less than Afl. 300,000 a year or its equivalent in foreign currency for natural persons and Afl. 750,000 a year or its equivalent in foreign currency for legal entities (excluding commercial banks and institutional investors) could be carried out without CBA authorization. These ceilings were applicable to all capital transactions with nonresidents; a special foreign exchange license from the CBA was required for capital transactions exceeding these ceilings.

Effective March 27, 2020, the general foreign exchange license (pursuant to Decree concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2013/K.2) was suspended for all outgoing capital transactions until further notice. Thus, legal entities with such licenses (listed in the CBA’s Quarterly list) may not make any outgoing capital transfers. However, if it regards an incoming transfer, then this is allowed no matter the amount, as long as the resident legal entity is included in the Quarterly list.

Previously, legal entities included in the CBA’s Quarterly list could make transfers to and from their notified FBAs and/or FIAs without a special foreign exchange license, no matter the amount of the transfer.

Approval required No. The local banks should adhere to CBA instructions related to maintaining such accounts at all times.

Held abroad Yes. Accounts of resident companies abroad must be reported to the CBA. Approval is not required, but holders of such accounts must report them to the CBA if they wish to be exempt from the requirement that they collect foreign claims as soon as they fall due and transfer and sell them to a local foreign exchange bank. Absent an exemption, payments in foreign exchange to nonresidents must be made from an authorized bank’s account or an account of a foreign bank in the country of the transaction or to a nonresident’s nostro account with the authorized bank. Effective March 27, 2020, the general foreign exchange license (pursuant to Decree concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2013/K.2) was suspended for all outgoing capital transactions until further notice. Thus, legal entities with such licenses (listed in the CBA’s Quarterly list) may not make any outgoing capital transfers. However, if it regards an incoming transfer, then this is allowed no matter the amount, as long as the resident legal entity is included in the Quarterly list.

Previously, resident companies that had notified the CBA of their foreign accounts and comply with the conditions of the exemption as stipulated in the Decree concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2013-O.1 General Exemption could make transfers freely to and from these accounts, based on the Decree concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2013/K.2 (General Foreign Exchange License). A general exemption from the provisions of SOFET Articles 11 and 12 applied to residents whose previous exemptions (pursuant to SOFET Articles 16 and 17) were revoked and who reported such bank accounts to the CBA again.

Approval required No.

Accounts in domestic currency held abroad No. These accounts are not allowed.

Accounts in domestic currency convertible into foreign currency No.

Effective March 17, 2020, in the context of the measures taken resulting from the impact of COVID-19 pandemic on the economy of Aruba, the CBA will not grant any new foreign exchange licenses that relate to outgoing capital transactions, including dividend payments and profit transfers until further notice. This means that a resident is not allowed to make a dividend payout or a profit transfer to its foreign shareholder, unless that company is already in the possession of a dividend/profit declaration of the CBA for this transfer prior to the date of the Public Announcement of March 17, 2020.

Effective March 27, 2020, the general foreign exchange license (pursuant to Decree concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2013/K.2) was suspended for all outgoing capital transactions until further notice. Thus, legal entities with such licenses (listed in the CBA’s Quarterly list) may not make any outgoing capital transfers. Capital Transactions

Yes.

In the context of the measures taken resulting from the impact of COVID-19 pandemic on the economy of Aruba pursuant to the Public Announcement of the CBA of March 17, 2020, the CBA will not grant any new foreign exchange licenses that relate to outgoing capital transactions, including dividend declarations. Furthermore, the CBA has also revoked the general license issued by Notice concerning Foreign Exchange Transaction 02/K.1 for all outgoing capital transactions. This means that the thresholds of Afl. 300,000 a year for resident natural persons and Afl. 750,000 a year for resident legal entities are no longer applicable for outgoing capital transactions. Consequently, no outgoing capital transactions, no matter the amount, are allowed until further notice. Previously, transactions of less than Afl. 300,000 a year or its equivalent in foreign currency for natural persons and Afl. 750,000 a year or its equivalent in foreign currency for juridical persons (excluding commercial banks and institutional investors) could be carried out without CBA authorization. These ceilings were applicable to all capital transactions with nonresidents; a special foreign exchange license from the CBA was required for capital transactions exceeding these ceilings.

Repatriation requirements
Yes.

The CBA may require the divestment, repatriation, and surrender to the CBA of proceeds from direct investment by residents abroad. Unless exempt, residents are required to surrender proceeds from capital transactions either by selling them to a foreign exchange bank, against florins, within eight working days of receipt or by depositing them into a foreign exchange account with the CBA or a foreign exchange bank in the name of a resident.

Surrender requirements
Yes.

Unless exempt, residents are required to surrender proceeds from capital transactions either by selling them to a foreign exchange bank, against florins, within eight working days of receipt or by depositing them into a foreign exchange account with the CBA or a foreign exchange bank in the name of a resident.

Surrender to the central bank
Yes.

Unless exempt, residents are required to surrender proceeds from capital transactions either by selling them to a foreign exchange bank, against florins, within eight working days of receipt or by depositing them into a foreign exchange account with the CBA or a foreign exchange bank in the name of a resident.

Surrender to authorized dealers
Yes.

Unless exempt, residents are required to surrender proceeds from capital transactions either by selling them to a foreign exchange bank, against florins, within eight working days of receipt or by depositing them into a foreign exchange account with the CBA or a foreign exchange bank in the name of a resident.

Controls on capital and money market instruments
Yes.

On capital market securities
Yes.

Shares or other securities of a participating nature
Yes.

Purchase locally by nonresidents
Yes.

Effective March 17, 2020, the CBA will not grant any new foreign exchange licenses that relate to outgoing capital transactions and revoked the general license issued by Notice concerning Foreign Exchange Transaction 02/K.1 for all outgoing capital transactions. This means that the thresholds of Afl. 300,000 a year for resident natural persons and Afl. 750,000 a year for resident legal entities are no longer applicable for outgoing capital transactions. Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions: Yes.

Borrowing abroad: Yes. Commercial banks are subject to the B-9 arrangement, which sets a maximum amount of foreign exchange the commercial banks are allowed to hold (in net foreign assets). Commercial banks are not allowed to have a net foreign liability position.

Maintenance of accounts abroad: No.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits): Yes. A special foreign exchange license is required for loans granted by commercial banks to nonresidents if they exceed Afl. 1 million a year or its equivalent in foreign currency, as well as for certain transfers or sales of local financial instruments, such as loans, bonds, and notes, to nonresidents.

Lending locally in foreign exchange: No.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange: No.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange: No.

Reserve requirements: No. Resident interbank deposits (in both florins and foreign exchange) and long-term deposits (of residents and nonresidents) are excluded from the calculation of the reserve requirement, which is a monetary instrument.

Effective March 17, 2020, the CBA lowered the reserve requirement on commercial bank deposits from 12 to 11 percent in response to the pandemic shocks.

Effective May 5, 2020, the CBA lowered the reserve requirement on commercial bank deposits from 11 to 7 percent, also in response to the pandemic shock.

Liquid asset requirements: No. In response to the adverse economic and financial developments resulting from COVID-19, the CBA decided to temporarily ease the capital and liquidity requirements applicable for credit institutions. These measures went into effect as of March 17, 2020, and will remain in effect insofar as the CBA considers necessary. The minimum risk-weighted solvency rate was decreased from 16% to 14%, and the loan-to-deposit ratio was increased from 80% to 85%.

Effective March 17, 2020, the requirement for commercial banks to maintain a minimum prudential liquidity ratio (PLR) (defined as liquid assets to total net assets) was decreased from 18% to 15%.
Previously, effective January 1, 2019, the minimum required PLR was increased to 18% from 16%.

Unless it has written permission from the CBA, a credit institution may not hold, acquire, or increase a qualifying holding in another firm or institution or take over all or a substantial part of the assets and liabilities of another firm or institution. A qualifying holding is defined as a direct or indirect stake of more than 10% of the issued share capital of a firm or institution, more than 10% of the direct or indirect voting rights, or a comparable degree of control.

CBA approval is required for any investor to hold or acquire a qualifying holding in a bank.

Banks are not allowed to have a negative foreign exchange position.

Effective March 17, 2020, the CBA will not grant any new foreign exchange licenses that relate to outgoing capital transactions and revoked the general license issued by Notice concerning Foreign Exchange Transaction 02/K.1 for all outgoing capital transactions. Effective March 27, 2020, the general foreign exchange license (pursuant to Decree concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2013/K.2) was suspended for all outgoing capital transactions until further notice.

Previously, according to the 40%–60% investment rule, a progressive scale was used to determine the limit on investment abroad. Institutional investors could not invest abroad more than 60% of their first Afl. 10 million in liabilities, 50% of their second Afl. 10 million in liabilities, and 40% of their remaining liabilities.

Exchange Measures

The Interim-State Decree on Priority Sanction Regimes of September 3, 2019 (AB 2019 No. 47), containing the provisions for the implementation of Articles 2 and 2a of the Sanction State Ordinance 2006 (AB 2007 No. 24) requires the freezing of all funds and other assets of persons and organizations mentioned in the annex of the State Decree. This Interim-State Decree was enacted for the purpose of implementing in short term a number of regulations and decisions adopted in the context of the Common Foreign and Security Policy of the EU.

Resident Accounts

In the context of the measures taken resulting from the impact of COVID-19 pandemic on the economy of Aruba, the Central Bank of Aruba (CBA) will not grant any new foreign exchange licenses that relate to outgoing capital transactions, including dividend declarations. The Notice concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2002/K.1 (General Foreign Exchange License) has been suspended.
for all outgoing capital transactions, until further notice. Furthermore, the CBA has also revoked the general license issued by Notice concerning Foreign Exchange Transaction 02/K.1 for all outgoing capital transactions. This means that the thresholds of Afl. 300,000 a year for resident natural persons and Afl. 750,000 a year for resident legal entities are no longer applicable for outgoing capital transactions. Consequently, no outgoing capital transactions, no matter the amount, are allowed until further notice. Previously, transactions of less than Afl. 300,000 a year or its equivalent in foreign currency for natural persons and Afl. 750,000 a year or its equivalent in foreign currency for legal entities (excluding commercial banks and institutional investors) could be carried out without CBA authorization. These ceilings were applicable to all capital transactions with nonresidents; a special foreign exchange license from the CBA was required for capital transactions exceeding these ceilings.

The general foreign exchange license (pursuant to Decree concerning Foreign Exchange Transactions 2013/K.2) was suspended for all outgoing capital transactions until further notice. Thus, legal entities with such licenses (listed in the Central Bank of Aruba’s (CBA’s) Quarterly list) may not make any outgoing capital transfers. However, if it regards an incoming transfer, then this is allowed no matter the amount, as long as the resident legal entity is included in the Quarterly list. Previously, legal entities included in the CBA’s Quarterly list could make transfers to and from their notified foreign bank accounts and/or intercompany accounts without a special foreign exchange license, no matter the amount of the transfer.

Australia maintains targeted financial sanctions on an autonomous basis under the Autonomous Sanctions Regulations 2011. Australia implements targeted financial sanctions against individuals or entities pursuant to UNSC Resolutions concerning sanctions, including UNSC Resolution No. 1373 (2001). Pursuant to UNSC Resolution No. 1373 (2001) concerning international terrorism, Australia maintains targeted financial sanctions to freeze the assets of, and prohibit assets being made available to, individuals or entities designated by the Minister for Foreign Affairs as associated with the commission of acts involved in terrorism.

Both the de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as free floating. However, the Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) retains discretionary authority to intervene in the foreign exchange market and has done so during periods of significant market disorder and/or gross misalignment of the exchange rate. Given the high level of development of the Australian foreign exchange market, interventions have been rare. The most recent period of intervention was in 2007–08 and was in response to episodes of significant market disorder—that is, instances when market functioning was impaired to such a degree that it was clear that the observed volatility was excessive. The RBA may also vary the way intervention is conducted; it may enter the interbank foreign exchange market directly through voice or electronic brokerage platforms or use an agent bank. As a matter of government policy, most wholesale purchases of foreign currency by government agencies are made through the RBA. The RBA manages the flows from purchases on behalf of the government so as to minimize their market impact—for example, by executing these trades when the market is liquid and, if necessary, breaking up the required purchases into a series of smaller transactions. Monthly purchases and sales of foreign exchange are published on the RBA website. Daily data on foreign exchange market interventions are published on the RBA website annually, following the release of the RBA Annual Report.

There is no official RBA fixing rate for the Australian dollar. World Market/Reuters provide hourly fixing rates for the Australian dollar against the US dollar. The legal and commercial reference rate against the US dollar, which is often used in private contracts, is the World Market/Reuters Australian dollar fixing rate at 10:00 a.m. Australian Eastern Standard Time. For public information, the RBA publishes an Australian dollar–US dollar reference rate based on the 4:00 p.m. Australian Eastern Standard Time World Market/Reuters Australian dollar fixing rate and the trade-weighted index of the Australian dollar based on market rates at 4:00 p.m. The RBA also publishes the Australian dollar cross-rates for all currencies in the trade-weighted index.
The Reserve Bank Act provides for decisions to be reached by a majority of the votes of the members present and voting, with the Chair having a casting vote, if necessary, in addition to a deliberative vote. Votes are not published. The Statement on the Conduct of Monetary Policy (the Statement) has recorded the common understanding of the governor, as Chair of the Reserve Bank Board, and the government on key aspects of Australia’s monetary and central banking policy framework since 1996. The Statement seeks to foster a sound understanding of the nature of the relationship between the Reserve Bank and the government, the objectives of monetary policy, the mechanisms for ensuring transparency and accountability in the way policy is conducted, and the independence of the Reserve Bank. The inflation target is set as part of the agreement on the monetary policy framework and the key features of the target could not be changed by the Bank unilaterally.

Inflation target

- Yes.

Target number

- Yes.

Point target

- Yes.

Target with tolerance band

- Yes.

Band/Range

- Yes. Both the RBA governor and the government agree that a flexible medium-term inflation target is the appropriate framework for achieving medium-term price stability. They agree that an appropriate goal is to keep consumer price inflation between 2% and 3%, on average, over time. This formulation allows for the natural short-run variation in inflation over the economic cycle and the medium-term focus provides the flexibility for the Reserve Bank to set its policy so as best to achieve its broad objectives, including financial stability. The 2%–3% medium-term goal provides a clearly identifiable performance benchmark over time.

Target measure

- Yes.

CPI

- Yes. The target measure is end-year growth in the CPI. The CPI measures the changes in the price of a “basket” of goods and services, which account for a high proportion of expenditure by the CPI population group (that is, metropolitan households).

Core inflation

- Yes. The inflation target is defined as a medium-term average rather than as a rate (or band of rates) that must be held at all times.

Operating target (policy rate)

- Yes.

Policy rate

- Yes. The RBA’s monetary policy involves setting a target for the interest rate on unsecured overnight loans in the money market (“the cash rate”). The RBA’s target for the cash rate was 0.25% as of June 30, 2020.

Target corridor band

- Yes. The RBA’s cash rate target is expressed as a point target. The RBA pays an interest rate on Exchange Settlement balances held in accounts with the RBA that is set at a margin below the cash rate.
target. Banks have an incentive to deposit as little as possible at this rate, and instead prefer to earn the higher cash rate by lending out their balances overnight in the money market. The RBA is also willing to lend Exchange Settlement balances to banks if this is required. The interest rate on these loans is set at a margin above the cash rate target under its standing facilities. Banks have an incentive to borrow as little as possible at this rate, and instead prefer to borrow at the lower cash rate. The deposit and lending rates form the lower and upper bounds of the policy interest rate corridor. They prevail until the package of policy measures is implemented by the RBA in March 2020.

Effective March 20, 2020, the cash rate was lowered to 25 basis points, and the RBA modified the interest rate corridor system, so that balances held in Exchange Settlement Accounts at the RBA earn 10 basis points (previously zero). Previously, the lower and upper bounds of the corridor were set at 25 basis points below and above the target cash rate, respectively. There are no changes to arrangements for the top of the corridor, which remains 25 basis points above the target cash rate.

Accountability

Yes.

Open letter

No.

Parliamentary hearings

Yes. The governor, deputy governor, and a small number of other senior officers of the Reserve Bank usually appear twice-yearly before the House of Representatives Standing Committee on Economics. Between January 1, 2019, and June 30, 2020, the RBA appeared at three public hearings of this committee. Senior staff are also periodically invited to appear at public hearings held as part of inquiries by other committees of both Houses of parliament.

Transparency

Yes.

Publication of votes

No.

Publication of minutes

Yes. Minutes of the monetary policy meetings of the Reserve Bank Board are published two weeks after each meeting. (The Reserve Bank Board normally meets 11 times each year, on the first Tuesday of each month, except January.) Minutes were first published in December 2007, when minutes for meetings from October 2006 were also released.

Publication of inflation forecasts

Yes. Inflation forecasts are published every quarter in the RBA’s Statement of Monetary Policy.

Other monetary framework

Exchange tax

No.

Exchange subsidy

No.

Foreign exchange market

Yes. Licensed dealers of foreign exchange are allowed to freely determine their bid-ask spreads and foreign exchange commissions in transactions with their clients.

Spot exchange market

Yes. The Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) is responsible for licensing of all financial services providers, including foreign exchange dealers that deal in foreign currency contracts, whether exchange traded or over the counter, by its administration of the Australian financial services license (AFSL) regime. As of August 13, 2020, there were 1,120 licensees licensed to deal in foreign exchange products in Australia; 581 of these are licensed to deal with retail investors. Licensed foreign exchange dealers that deal in foreign currency contracts are permitted to maintain accounts abroad and to make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients. The ASIC does not license entities dealing in spot foreign exchange contracts.

Operated by the central bank: No.
Foreign exchange standing facility: No.
Allocation: No.
Auction: No.
Fixing: No.

Interbank market: Yes. The RBA survey of foreign exchange turnover indicates that at least 23 financial institutions participate in the Australian interbank foreign exchange market. The Australian dollar is also widely traded by financial institutions in offshore interbank markets. There are no limits on the bid-ask spread and commission of market participants. Interventions in the Australian foreign exchange market are rare, given the high level of market development. However, if the RBA were to intervene, the intervention could be conducted either directly with market participants at their quoted rates, via market makers, or by placing an interest in an electronic system whereby a market maker would have to accept the quoted price.

Over the counter: Yes. Turnover occurs almost entirely over the counter with licensed dealers. ASIC grants licenses to Australian Derivatives Trade Repositories who report on OTC derivatives transactions.

Brokerage: Yes. Licensed dealers may deal among themselves and with their overseas counterparties at mutually negotiated rates for spot transactions in any currency for trade- and non-trade-related transactions. Trading is conducted through several mediums, including electronic broking platforms.

Market making: Yes. An ASIC license is generally required for foreign exchange dealing (other than spot). An AFSL and authorization to make a market for foreign exchange products and derivatives are required, subject to some exemptions, such as Reg 7.6.02AG.

As of August 13, 2020, there were 216 licensees authorized to make a market in derivatives, 183 authorized to make a market in foreign exchange and 249 authorized to make a market in both derivatives and foreign exchange. Pursuant to Section 766D of the Corporations Act, persons make a market for a financial product if (1) they regularly state the prices at which they propose to acquire or dispose of financial products on their own behalf, (2) others have a reasonable expectation that they will be able to regularly effect transactions at the stated prices, and (3) the persons’ actions do not constitute a financial market under Section 767A.

Forward exchange market: Yes. Active trading takes place in forward and futures contracts. The RBA uses foreign exchange swaps in its domestic liquidity operations and foreign exchange reserves management. Foreign exchange swaps by the RBA for liquidity management are executed with market participants in the market and at market prices. Foreign exchange swaps have been used for many years to augment liquidity operations in domestic securities.

Official cover of forward operations: No.

The Corporations Act 2001 indicates that spot foreign exchange is not covered within the definition of a foreign exchange contract because of the exemption in Section 764A(1)(k)(ii). An AFSL is, however, generally required to deal on behalf of others in nonspot foreign exchange. There are some exemptions from holding an AFSL such as Reg 7.6.02AG.

With respect to the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea (DPRK), it is prohibited to transfer to another person gold (including through gold couriers) that could contribute to the DPRK’s nuclear, ballistic, or weapons-of-mass destruction (WMD) programs or to activities prohibited, or the evasion of measures imposed by UNSC resolutions relating to the DPRK. Australian law also prohibits the procurement of “import sanctions goods” (which includes gold), without a permit from the DPRK, or from a person or entity in the DPRK. A sanctions permit may be granted in very limited circumstances. With respect to Syria, the following are prohibited: (1) the supply, sale, or transfer of gold (to the Government of Syria or their public bodies, corporations, or agencies, including persons, entities, or bodies acting on their behalf or at their direction and entities or bodies owned or controlled by them); (2) the importation, purchase, or transport of gold from the Government of Syria or their public bodies, corporations, or agencies, including persons, entities, or bodies acting on their behalf or at their direction and entities or bodies owned or controlled by them; and (3) the provision of related financial services or financial assistance or technical advice, assistance or training or another service to the Government of Syria, or their public bodies, corporations, or agencies, including persons, entities, or bodies acting on their behalf or at their direction and entities or bodies owned or controlled by them, if it assists with, or is provided in relation to an activity involving the supply, sale, transfer import, purchase, or transport of certain items including gold.

Exports and imports of $A 10,000 in cash or more, or the foreign currency equivalent must be reported to the Australian Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre chief executive officer (CEO), a police officer, or an Australian Border Force officer for transmission to the Australian Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre for anti-money-laundering and counter-terrorism financing purposes.

With respect to Syria, Australian law prohibits the direct or indirect supply, sale, or transfer to Syria, for use in Syria or for the benefit of Syria of “export sanctioned goods,” which include: newly printed or unissued Syrian-denominated banknotes and coinage, without a permit. Australian law also prohibits the provision to any person of technical advice, assistance, or training; financial assistance; a financial service; or another services if it assists with or is provided in relation to either: the direct or indirect supply, sale, or transfer to Syria, for use in Syria or for the benefit of Syria of “export sanctioned goods”; or the manufacture, maintenance, or use of an “export sanctioned good” for Syria, without a sanctions permit.

With respect to the DPRK, Australian law also prohibits the transfer to another person of any financial or other assets or resources (including bulk cash) which could contribute to the nuclear or ballistic missile programs, or other WMD programs, of the DPRK, or activities prohibited, or the evasion of measures imposed, by any relevant UNSC regarding the DPRK.

dangerous goods. Importation of certain organochlorine chemicals is prohibited unless written permission, either from the minister responsible for the Commonwealth Department of Agriculture, Water and the Environment or from an authorized officer, is provided to the Australian Border Force at the time of importation. There is no licensing fee or administrative charge. The Environment Protection and Biodiversity Conservation Act 1999 regulates international trade in Australian native species, live wildlife, and species listed under CITES.

The Biosecurity Act 2015 and its subordinate legislation apply controls to the importation of all plants, parts of plants, and plant products, all animals (including birds, fish, and insects), animal products, soil, and other items of general quarantine concern. The importation of woolpacks is prohibited under the provisions of the Customs Act 1901 and Customs (Prohibited Imports) Regulations 1956 unless the permission of the Commonwealth Minister for Agriculture and Water Resources or an authorized person is granted, or a test certificate issued by a prescribed testing authority certifying that the woolpacks conform to Australian standards is produced. There is no licensing fee or administrative charge.

These controls and prohibitions reflect mainly health and safety requirements; requirements for labeling, packaging, and technical specifications; implementation of the government’s energy-efficiency policy; autonomous sanctions; and obligations of international agreements or UNSC sanctions. The importation of arms or related material is prohibited under the sanctions regimes for the DPRK, Iran, Libya, and Russia. Arms or related material is defined broadly and includes, but is not limited to, weapons, ammunition, military vehicles and equipment, and spare parts for any of those things, as well as paramilitary equipment.

In addition to these restrictions, there are other restrictions on imports which relate to each specific sanctions regime. With respect to Crimea and Sevastopol, Australian law prohibits the import, purchase, or transport of any goods, without a sanctions permit, if the goods originate in, or are exported from, Crimea or Sevastopol (except certain goods, which have been made available to the Ukrainian authorities for examination and for which compliance with conditions conferring entitlement to preferential origin has been verified by Ukrainian officials).

With respect to the DPRK, under the UNSC sanctions, it is also prohibited to procure from the DPRK, or from a person or entity in the DPRK, any of the following “import sanctioned goods”; and a permit cannot be obtained to authorize their import: certain items relevant to nuclear, ballistic missiles, and other WMD-related programs; certain arms-related items listed in Resolution No. 1718 (2016) of the Security Council, subparagraph 8(a)(1) and (2) (such as battle tanks, combat vehicles, and aircraft); gold, titanium ore, vanadium ore, or rare earth minerals; goods mentioned in paragraph 5(1)(c) of the Charter of the UN (Sanctions – Democratic People’s Republic of Korea) Regulations 2008; copper, nickel, silver, or zinc; statues; coal, iron, or iron ore; lead or lead ore; seafood; textiles; or goods covered by Chapters 07, 08, 12, 25, 44, 84, 85, or 89 of the Harmonized Commodity Description and Coding Systems. The following “import sanctioned goods” cannot be procured, received, or transported from the DPRK, or from a person or entity in the DPRK, without a permit, which may be granted in certain circumstances: statues, textiles, coals; and any goods that are not “specified import sanctioned goods” and not food or medicine.

Australian law also prohibits the receipt of “import sanctioned goods” from the DPRK, or a person or entity in the DPRK, if the goods are received for the purposes of repair, servicing, refurbishing, testing, reverse engineering, or marketing by the person or another person if it is not authorized by a sanctions permit.

With respect to Iraq, it is prohibited to hold, use, or deal with a “controlled asset” or allow or facilitate the use of it. A “controlled asset” is an asset: (1) of the government led by Saddam Hussein (including a state body, corporation, or other body or agency) that was located in Australia on May 22, 2003; and (2) that has been removed from Iraq, or acquired, by a person or entity designated for the purposes of the Iraq sanctions regime. It is also prohibited to deal with an item of Iraqi cultural property or of archeological, historical, cultural, rare scientific, or religious importance that has been illegally removed from Iraq on or after August 6, 1990.

With respect to Somalia, under UNSC sanctions, it is prohibited to import charcoal from Somalia or from a person or entity in Somalia.

With respect to Syria, it is prohibited to import crude oil, petroleum, and petrochemical products if they originate in or have been exported from Syria, without a sanctions permit. It is also prohibited to import or purchase gold, precious metals, or diamonds from the Government of Syria or an entity or body owned or controlled by it or acting on its behalf or direction, without a sanctions permit. It is also prohibited to give “illegally removed cultural property” to another person, to trade in it, or to transfer the ownership of it to another person. “Illegally removed cultural property” means an item of Syrian cultural property; or of archeological, historical, cultural, rare scientific, or religious importance that has been illegally removed from Syria on or after March 15, 2011.

The targeted financial sanctions outlined in category II “Exchange Measures” above prohibit providing assets to a proscribed or designated person or entity. This would effectively prohibit imports from any person or entity listed on the Consolidated List maintained by the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade (DFAT).

Open general licenses No.

Licenses with quotas No.

Other nontariff measures No.

Import taxes and/or tariffs Yes. Most agricultural products enter Australia duty free. A maximum tariff of 5% applies to some manufactured goods, including household textile products. Tariffs on many goods have been eliminated. Tariff concessions are available under the Tariff Concession System for most goods subject to a tariff, if no domestic manufacturers produce substitutable goods. Other concessions are available for specific purposes, such as to accommodate split import consignments and for donations and bequests.

Effective February 1, 2020, a temporary concession in relation to COVID-19 is provided for medical and hygiene goods imported between February 1, 2020, and December 31, 2020.

Australia currently has 14 multilateral or bilateral trade agreements in force. The following trade agreements have provided the following reduction in tariff duties, excluding excise-equivalent customs duty on alcohol, fuel, and tobacco, for originating goods under each of the agreements:

(1) Indonesia-Australia Comprehensive Economic Partnership Agreement, effective July 5, 2020 – Australia has eliminated duties on all tariff lines.

(2) Peru-Australia FTA, effective February 11, 2020 – Australia has eliminated duties on 96% of tariff lines on entry into force and 99.8% is to be eliminated by January 1, 2023.

(3) FTA between Australia and Hong Kong, China, effective January 17, 2020 – Australia has eliminated duties on all tariff lines.

(4) Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP), in force since December 30, 2018, among Australia, Canada, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, and Singapore, and, effective January 14, 2019, Vietnam.

(5) Japan-Australia Economic Partnership Agreement has eliminated duties on 99.0% of tariff lines by April 1, 2020 (same as of April 1, 2018), with the remaining tariffs to be eliminated by April 1, 2021.

(6) Korea-Australia FTA has eliminated duties on 99.5% of tariff lines by January 1, 2020 (same as of January 1, 2019), with the remaining tariffs to be eliminated by January 1, 2021.

All tariff lines are eliminated under the Malaysia-Australia FTA, the Australia-Chile FTA, the Singapore-Australia FTA, the China-Australia FTA (effective January 1, 2019), the Thailand-Australia FTA, the Australia-New Zealand Closer Economic Relations Trade Agreement (ANZCERTA), the Australia-United States FTA, and the Agreement Establishing the ASEAN-Australia-New Zealand FTA (effective January 1, 2020).

Tariffs and quantitative import and export restrictions on trade in goods from the FTA are prohibited under the ANZCERTA with New Zealand.

Tariff quotas apply to certain types of cheese and curd that may be imported at a concessional rate of duty of $A 0.096/kg and is restricted to 11,500 tons a year. Imports may be made outside the 11,500 ton quota allocated each year, but a higher rate of duty of $A 1.220/kg applies.

Export prohibitions and restrictions enforce quality control measures, administer UNSC and Australian autonomous sanctions, and meet obligations under international treaties and commitments under international arrangements. Australia’s export control policies reflect the government’s commitment to ensure that exports of defense and dual-use goods are consistent with Australia’s interests, international obligations, and commitments. Prohibitions also maintain adequate measures of control over designated cultural property, resources, flora, and fauna; secure conservation objectives; and respond to specific market distortions abroad. Remaining controls on primary products apply mainly to food and agricultural products and are administered by the Department of Agriculture. Export controls apply to rough diamonds which may be exported only to countries participating in the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme, and each shipment must include a Kimberley Process Certificate issued by the Minister administering the Offshore Minerals Act 1994 (or authorized delegate). Export controls apply to uranium, thorium, and other specified nuclear materials. Export permissions for uranium and related materials are issued by the Minister administering the National Radioactive Waste Management Act 2012 (or authorized delegate). The Australian Safeguards and Non-Proliferation Office requires exporters to hold a permit to possess uranium and issue safeguards clearance for each individual shipment as required. Export permits from the Australian Radiation Protection and Nuclear Safety Agency (ARPANSA) are required for exports of high-activity radioactive sources. Controls administered by the Department of Agriculture require an export license for exports of woodchips and unprocessed wood (for example, whole logs). These controls apply to wood sourced from areas outside Regional Forest Agreement regions and plantation forests within states and territories where Codes of Practice for plantation forestry are not approved by the Australian Government. Export registration and/or licensing procedures apply to agricultural products (meat, dairy products, eggs, live animals and their reproductive material, fish, vegetables, fruit) to ensure that exporters meet other countries’ import conditions. These include sanitary and phytosanitary conditions. In the case of live animals, controls apply to exporters to ensure they meet Australia’s animal welfare standards. Export controls are regulated by the Department of Agriculture and the appropriate industry agencies. Exports of wine and brandy products in both bulk and bottled form require licenses from the Wine Australia Corporation. Only one entity has an export monopoly for selected agricultural products—the Rice Marketing Board for the State of New South Wales. This board appointed Ricegrowers Limited (trading as SunRice) as the sole and exclusive export license holder for exports of rice grown in New South Wales. (Ricegrowers Limited is also an authorized buyer.) There are no statutory restrictions on the exportation of rice in other Australian states.
Effective March 30, 2020, temporary export controls were applied to noncommercial exports of certain goods that contribute to the controlling and preventing the spread of the COVID-19 virus, including personal protective equipment, disinfectant wipes, and hand sanitizers.

DFAT coordinates the implementation, administration, and enforcement of UNSC sanctions and autonomous sanctions, working closely with a wide range of agencies, including the Department of Defence, the Department of Home Affairs, the Australian Transaction Reports and Analysis Centre, and the Australian Federal Police. The export of arms or related material is prohibited, without a permit, under sanctions regimes for the Central African Republic, the DPRK, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Libya, Myanmar, Russia, Somalia, South Sudan, Sudan, Syria, the Taliban, Yemen, and Zimbabwe. Australian law prohibits the export of arms or related material to a designated person or entity for the UNSC sanctions regime in relation to ISIL (Da’esh) and Al-Qaida, and it is not possible to obtain a permit for the export of such items. Arms or related material is defined broadly and includes, but is not limited to, weapons, ammunition, military vehicles and equipment, and spare parts for any of those things, as well as paramilitary equipment. In addition to these restrictions, there are other restrictions on exports which relate to each specific sanctions regime. For example, with respect to the DPRK, food and medicine are the only goods which may be exported, supplied, sold, or transferred to the DPRK without restriction. Likewise, significant restrictions apply to exports bound for Iran, Iraq, Syria, Russia, and Crimea and Sevastopol. The targeted financial sanctions outlined in category II “Exchange Measures” above prohibit dealing with the assets of a proscribed or designated person or entity. This would effectively prohibit exports from any person or entity listed on the Consolidated List maintained by the DFAT.

Certain Autonomous Sanctions apply. With respect to the DPRK, Australian law prohibits, without a sanctions permit, acquiring or extending an interest in, or establishing or participating in a business with, or granting a financial loan or credit to (1) a person or entity (wherever located) that is engaged in an extractive or its related industry or associated infrastructure, in the DPRK (or persons or entities acting on their behalf, direction or control; and (2) a DPRK person or entity, or those acting on their behalf, direction or control, that is engaged in an extractive or related industry outside the DPRK.

With respect to Crimea and Sevastopol, Australian law prohibits, without a sanctions permit: (1) the granting of any financial loan or credit, or the establishment of a joint venture, in relation to the following sectors; and/or (2) the acquisition or extension of an interest in an enterprise that was established in Crimea or Sevastopol and is engaged in the following sectors:

- the creation, acquisition, or development of infrastructure in the transport, telecommunications, or energy sectors; or
- the exploitation of oil or gas, or of mineral resources specified in the Autonomous Sanctions (Russia, Crimea and Sevastopol) Specification 2015.

With respect to Russia, Australian law generally prohibits, without a sanctions permit (with some exceptions): (1) the purchase or sale of, or any other dealing with, bonds, equity, transferable securities, money market instruments, or other similar financial instruments, if the financial instrument is issued by an entity specified by the Minister for Foreign Affairs; and (2) making, or being part of any arrangement to make loans or credit if the loan or credit is made to an entity specified by the Minister for Foreign Affairs.

With respect to Syria, Australian law prohibits, without a sanctions permit, the acquisition or extension of an interest in: (1) the establishment of, or participation in, a joint venture with; and/or (2) the granting of a financial loan or credit to an entity that is engaged in the petrochemical industry or the oil and gas industry, and connected to Syria.

On capital market securities: Yes.

Shares or other securities of a participating nature: Yes.

Purchase locally by nonresidents: Yes.

The acquisition of shares and other securities of a participating nature that may be affected by laws and policies on inward direct investment may require notification to the Australian authorities. Notification may be required under the foreign investment review framework subject to the percentage interest and monetary thresholds prescribed under the Foreign Acquisitions and Takeovers Act 1975, associated regulations, and foreign investment policy. Effective March 29, 2020, the monetary threshold of the notification requirement under the foreign investment review framework was temporarily reduced to zero for agreements entered into after 10:30 p.m. Australian Eastern Daylight Saving Time (AEDT) March 29, 2020. This measure was taken because the significant impact of Coronavirus on the Australian economy has increased the risk of foreign investment in Australia occurring in ways that would be contrary to the national interest. The nil monetary threshold means a greater number of investments by foreign persons are required to be notified to the Treasurer. To ensure sufficient time for screening applications, the Foreign Investment Review Board (FIRB) is working with existing and new applications to extend statutory timeframes for reviewing applications from 30 days to up to six months. Urgent applications that protect and support Australian businesses and Australian jobs are being prioritized.

If a person acquires a substantial holding in a listed entity, or there is a change in their substantial holding, they are also subject to disclosure obligations under Chapter 6C of the Corporations Act. Chapter 6C applies to residents and nonresidents for acquisitions of securities in an entity listed on an Australian financial market. The acquisition of shares and other securities in listed companies or unlisted companies with over 50 shareholders is separately regulated by the takeover rules in Chapters 6 and 6A of the Corporations Act. The requirements in Chapters 6 and 6A apply to both residents and nonresidents but only for acquisitions of securities in companies incorporated in Australia. Disputes regarding control transactions are primarily resolved by the Takeovers Panel. The Panel has published a number of Guidance Notes explaining policy relevant to control transactions.

The policy underlying Chapter 6 is that a bid for an Australian target company should be made on the same terms to all holders: s619(1). However, if a bidder is offering scrip consideration, the securities do not need to be offered to foreign holders (holders with a registered address outside Australia) if the bidder appoints a nominee approved by ASIC to sell the scrip that would have been issued to the foreign holders and distribute the net proceeds of sale to the holders: Section 619(3). This nominee procedure should only be used where the bidder is constrained by foreign laws from offering scrip and the bidder risks a declaration of unacceptable circumstances from the Takeovers Panel if that is not the case: ASIC Regulatory Guide 9 Takeover bids at paragraphs 71–72.

A pro-rata offer of securities may exclude nonresidents (members with a registered address outside of Australia or New Zealand) but only if the company determines that it is unreasonable to extend the offer to nonresidents having regard to the number of holders in the place where the offer would be made, the number and value of securities the holders would be offered, and the cost of legal compliance: s9A(3)(a). If the pro-rata offer is renounceable, the entity must also appoint a nominee to arrange for the sale of entitlements of any excluded nonresident and distribution of the proceeds to them: s9A(3)(c). These requirements are relevant if the company wishes to rely on the disclosure exemption for rights issues in s708AA. Similar requirements are also imposed on all entities listed on the Australian Securities Exchange under Listing Rule 7.7.1 (regardless of whether a disclosure document is provided or not).

If any person, such as a member or underwriter, needs to rely on the takeovers’ exemption for rights issues in item 10 of Section 611, the securities that would otherwise be issued to nonresidents who accept the offer (or the right to acquire those securities) must be transferred to a nominee approved by ASIC to sell and distribute the proceeds of sale to the foreign holders: Section 615. Both of these provisions are intended to facilitate control or capital transactions in circumstances where extending an offer of securities to nonresidents may be constrained by foreign law, or where the cost of compliance with foreign law may be disproportionate to the number of nonresident.
holders in a particular jurisdiction. ASIC’s policy on approval of a nominee for nonresidents is set out in Regulatory Guide – 6 Takeovers: Exceptions to the general prohibition at paragraphs 118–124. Ordinarily ASIC would not approve a nominee for the purposes of s615 if the company was able to make offers to nonresidents. Australian companies which conduct a share buyback must follow the procedure set out in Part 2J.1 of the Act. For an equal-access scheme, all shareholders must be treated equally, including nonresident shareholders. However, ASIC can give individual relief from this legislative requirement to an Australian company to exclude nonresident shareholders from a buyback (which is, in essence, an equal-access scheme) where the company cannot make an offer to some shareholders because of the laws of the country in which they reside, pursuant to Regulatory Guide 110 – Share buybacks at Table 3.

The Treasurer’s approval is required to hold more than 20% of the voting shares of an Australian bank. The Treasurer may grant approval only if the shareholding is in the national interest or for recently established companies that are below a specified asset size threshold.

While the Corporations Act usually requires a prospectus or other disclosure document for an offer of securities that is received in Australia, whether from a local or foreign issuer, ASIC has given conditional relief from the prospectus disclosure requirements where a foreign entity makes certain offers to Australian resident shareholders of the foreign entity. The conditional relief for rights issues by foreign companies, foreign scrip takeovers, and schemes of arrangement is subject to certain conditions, including listing of the foreign securities on an approved foreign market. We also give relief for offers that result in securities being issued to 20 or fewer investors in 12 months to Australian residents.

The provision of financial services, including the offers of financial products including shares in Australia, by residents and nonresidents, is subject to Chapter 7 of the Corporations Act. Chapter 7 imposes a requirement on the provider of the financial services to hold an AFSL, such as dealing and advising, and to meet certain requirements about the operation of the financial services business, for example capital requirements. There are limited exceptions to the AFSL requirement.

In March 2020, ASIC updated its Regulatory Guide 176 – Foreign financial services providers with its new regulatory framework for foreign financial services providers (FFSPs) providing financial services to wholesale clients or professional investors in Australia. The new framework has two key elements: a new foreign Australian financial services (AFS) licensing regime for FFSPs and licensing relief for providers of funds management financial services to certain types of professional investors in Australia.

It replaces ASIC’s previous licensing exemptions for foreign providers. Effective April 1, 2020, new foreign providers may apply to obtain a foreign AFSL to provide financial services in Australia to wholesale clients. To be eligible, the foreign provider must be authorized under an overseas regulatory regime that ASIC has assessed as sufficiently equivalent to the Australian regulatory regime. The list of sufficiently equivalent foreign regulatory regimes currently includes the U.K. Financial Conduct Authority; U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission; U.S. Federal Reserve and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency; the Monetary Authority of Singapore; Hong Kong’s Securities & Futures Commission; the U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Commission; Germany’s Bundesanstalt für Finanzdienstleistungsaufsicht (Federal Financial Supervisory Authority).
Authority); and Luxembourg’s Commission de Surveillance du Secteur Financier. An FFSP holding a foreign AFSL is exempt from certain provisions in Chapter 7 of the Corporations Act, as ASIC acknowledges that similar regulatory supervision and outcomes are achieved by the equivalent overseas requirements. Foreign providers currently relying on preexisting relief have a two-year transition period until March 31, 2022, to make arrangements to continue their operations in Australia, which may include applying for a foreign AFS license.

Funds management licensing relief will commence April 1, 2022. The relief is available to foreign providers inducing certain types of Australian professional investors to use the funds management financial services it provides. Under the relief, a license is not needed for that inducing conduct. Inducing conduct includes attempts to persuade, influence, or encourage a particular person to become a client, for example, mass marketing campaigns. Foreign providers must separately consider if they need to hold a license to actually provide financial services. Previously, the relief could be available broadly when (1) regulation by the FFSP’s overseas regulatory authority was sufficiently equivalent to ASIC regulation (from a market integrity and systemic risk perspective), (2) there were effective cooperation arrangements between the overseas regulatory authority and ASIC, and (3) the financial services provided were restricted to wholesale clients. Generally, relief was available for complying entities regulated by the aforementioned institutions.

The offer of debentures usually requires a prospectus or other disclosure document for an offer that is received in Australia, whether from a local or from a nonresident issuer. This is subject to exemptions in s708 of the Corporations Act, including exemptions for persons who are sophisticated. An offer of debentures that requires a disclosure document is also subject to Chapter 2L of the Corporations Act, which imposes certain obligations on the borrower and requirements as to the appointment of a trustee.

The offer of money market instruments may constitute the offer of debentures and requires a prospectus or other disclosure document for an offer that is received in Australia. The offer of money market instruments may constitute the offer of a deposit-taking facility and require the provider of the facility to be an Authorized Deposit Institution (within the meaning of the Banking Act 1959) in the course of its banking business (within the meaning of that Act), other than an RSA (retirement savings account) (within the meaning of the Retirement Savings Account Act 1997).

The acquisition of a controlling interest in securities issues by a collective investment vehicle may be affected by laws and policies on inward direct investment and therefore may require notification to the Australian authorities. Notification may be required under the foreign investment review framework subject to the percentage interest and monetary thresholds prescribed under Foreign Acquisitions and Takeovers Act 1975, associated regulations, and foreign investment policy. Further, the acquisition of securities in listed collective investment schemes is regulated by the takeover rules in Chapter 6 of the Corporations Act. If Australian issuers have determined that it would not be reasonable to make an offer of securities to nonresidents required or permitted by Chapter 6, nonresidents may receive cash instead of securities. Section 615 of the Act allows for the appointment of a nominee approved by ASIC (holding an AFSL) to sell securities for the benefit of foreign holders and to distribute the proceeds of sale to the holders.

The provision of financial services, including the offers of financial products (including shares) in Australia, by residents and nonresidents, is subject to Chapter 7 of the Corporations Act. Chapter 7 imposes a requirement on the provider of the financial services to hold an AFSL and to meet certain structural requirements. There are limited exceptions to the AFSL requirement. Further, where the financial service is the operation of a registered collective investment scheme (CIS), subject to some limited exceptions, the operator must be an Australian public company, must register the CIS with ASIC, and issue a compliant disclosure document.

In March 2020, ASIC updated its Regulatory Guide 176 – Foreign financial services providers with its new regulatory framework for FFSPs providing financial services to wholesale clients or professional investors in Australia. Generally, relief was available for complying entities regulated by the aforementioned institutions.

If the financial service that the foreign provider is providing deals with the operation of, and issue of interests in, a foreign collective investment scheme (FCIS), ASIC may exempt the FCIS operator from the requirement to hold an AFSL in relation to that operation, to register the FCIS in Australia with ASIC, and to issue a compliant disclosure document. ASIC’s policy in relation to the FCIS is set out in Regulatory Guide 178 – Foreign collective investment schemes. ASIC can grant relief from the legal provisions, if the applicant who applies complies with ASIC requirements in relation to that relief. Broadly, the relief is based on (1) the regulation by the regulatory regime to which the FCIS is subject to is sufficiently equivalent to ASIC regulation (from a market integrity and systemic risk perspective); (2) there are effective cooperation arrangements between the overseas regulatory authority and the ASIC; and (3) adequate rights and remedies are practically available to Australian investors. Effective July 27, 2020, applications for relief should be submitted through the ASIC Regulatory Portal.

Other exemptions from regulatory requirements may apply in respect of FCIUs under frameworks in the Corporations Act. This currently applies to New Zealand schemes under Chapter 8 of the Act and applies to schemes that seek to register as passport funds in a foreign member economy of the Asia Region Funds Passport (currently Japan, New Zealand, Thailand, and the Republic of Korea) and become notified foreign passport funds in Australia (also a member economy) under Chapter 8A of the Act.

Certain Autonomous Sanctions apply. With respect to the DPRK, Australian law prohibits without a sanctions permit, acquiring or extending an interest in, or establishing or participating in a business with, or granting a financial loan or credit to: (1) a person or entity (wherever located) that is engaged in an extractive or related industry, or its associated infrastructure, in the DPRK (or persons or entities acting on their behalf, direction, or control); and (2) a DPRK person or entity, or those acting on their behalf, direction, or control, that is engaged in an extractive or related industry outside the DPRK. With respect to Crimea and Sevastopol, Australian law prohibits, without a sanctions permit: (1) the granting of any financial loan or credit, or the establishment of a joint venture, in relation to the following sectors; and/or (2) the acquisition or extension of an interest in an enterprise that was established in Crimea or Sevastopol and is engaged in the following sectors:

- the creation, acquisition, or development of infrastructure in the transport, telecommunications, or energy sectors; or
- the exploitation of oil or gas, or of mineral resources specified in the Autonomous Sanctions (Russia, Crimea and Sevastopol) Specification 2015.

With respect to Crimea and Sevastopol, Australian law prohibits, without a sanctions permit: (1) the granting of any financial loan or credit, or the establishment of a joint venture, in relation to the following sectors; and/or (2) the acquisition or extension of an interest in an enterprise that was established in Crimea or Sevastopol and is engaged in the following sectors:

the exploitation of oil or gas, or of mineral resources specified in the Autonomous Sanctions (Russia, Crimea and Sevastopol) Specification 2015.

With respect to the DPRK, under the UNSC sanctions regime, Australian law prohibits a financial institution to (1) open a representative office, branch, or subsidiary in the DPRK; (2) establish a joint venture or correspondent banking relationship with, open a bank account with, or acquire, extend, sell, or make available an interest in a financial institution domiciled in the DPRK, a branch or subsidiary, wherever located, of a financial institution domiciled in the DPRK, or a financial institution wherever domiciled that is controlled by an entity or person in the DPRK. It is also prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to establish, maintain, or operate a joint venture or cooperative entity with a DPRK person or entity, an entity controlled by a DPRK person or entity, or a person or entity acting on behalf of or at the direction of a DPRK person or entity. Under Australia’s autonomous sanctions regime, it is prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to acquire or extend an interest in, establish or participate in a business relationship with, or grant a financial loan or credit to (1) a person or entity engaged in an extractive or related industry or associated infrastructure in the DPRK, or those acting on their behalf, or (2) a DPRK person or entity, or those acting on their behalf, engaged in an extractive or related industry outside the DPRK. It is also prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to obtain, use, deal with, or make available any asset that is a tenement or permission in relation to an extractive or related industry or associated infrastructure in the DPRK. It is also prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to obtain any tenement or permission in relation to an extractive or related industry or associated infrastructure in the DPRK from a DPRK person or entity, or those acting on their behalf.

With respect to Iran, in accordance with the UNSC sanctions regime, Australian law prohibits, without a sanctions permit, the sale, or otherwise making an interest available to Iran; an Iranian national; an Iranian entity; or a person or entity acting on their behalf or under their control, in commercial activities involving uranium mining, production, or the use of certain nuclear-related and ballistic missile-related goods.

With respect to Russia, Australian law generally prohibits, without a sanctions permit (with some exceptions): (1) the purchase or sale of, or any other dealing with, bonds, equity, transferable securities, money market instruments, or other similar financial instruments, if the financial instrument is issued by an entity specified in the Autonomous Sanctions (Russia, Crimea and Sevastopol) Specification 2015; and (2) making, or being part of any arrangement to make loans or credit if the loan or credit is made to an entity specified in the Autonomous Sanctions (Russia, Crimea and Sevastopol) Specification 2015.

With respect to Syria: It is prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to acquire or extend an interest in, establish or participate in a joint venture with, and grant a financial loan or credit to an entity that is engaged in the petrochemical industry or the oil and gas industry, and connected to Syria. It is also prohibited, without a sanctions permit, for a financial institution to obtain a representative office, or a branch or subsidiary, in Syria.

Controls apply to interests including: (1) investment in media, telecommunications (including Telstra), the financial sector, transport (including Australian international airlines and shipping), defense and military-related industries, the development, manufacture, or supply of or services relating to encryption and security technologies and communication systems, and the extraction of uranium or plutonium or the operation of nuclear facilities, as well as other critical infrastructure; (2) proposals within the scope of the foreign investment screening regime, which broadly cover the following where the specified thresholds were indexed on an annual basis effective January 1, 2020 (previously indexed effective January 1, 2019): (a) actions for which approval is required to acquire interests in securities, assets, entities (being corporations and unit trusts), and businesses that have a connection to Australia valued at more than $A 275 million; (b) if the foreign investor is from Chile, China, Japan, Republic of Korea, New Zealand, Singapore, the USA, . . . , as well as Peru (effective February 11, 2020), a country (other than Australia) for which the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership is in force (CPTPP) (since December 30, 2018, the CPTPP is in force for Canada, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Singapore and, effective January 14, 2019, Vietnam, and Hong Kong, SAR (effective January 17, 2020), and is acquiring an interest in nonsensitive businesses exceeding $A 1,192 million and in sensitive business valued at more than $A 275 million; (c) actions to acquire an interest in Agribusiness valued above $A 60 million unless the foreign investor is from Chile, New Zealand, and the USA in which case the acquired interest is valued above $A 1,192 million; (d) direct investment by foreign government investors and proposals for new businesses in Australia and acquisition of land regardless of value; (e) direct interest in developed commercial real estate exceeding $A 275 million unless the interest is in low-threshold land above $A 60 million or the direct interest is from a foreign investor from Chile, China, Japan, the Republic of Korea, New Zealand, Singapore, the USA, . . . as well as Peru (effective February 11, 2020), a country (other than Australia) for which the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership, and the Hong Kong, SAR (effective January 17, 2020), and interest acquired exceeds $A 1,192 million; (f) actions to acquire an interest in vacant commercial land regardless of value; (g) approval is required for direct investment in agricultural land exceeding the value of $A 15 million (cumulative) unless acquired by a foreign investor from Thailand and the agricultural land is used wholly and exclusively for a primary production business and the acquisition exceeds $A 50 million, or if the foreign investor is from Chile, New Zealand, and the USA and their cumulative interest exceeds $A 1,192 million. All monetary thresholds referred to in (a)–(g) are indexed annually January 1 each year, except the threshold for agricultural land exceeding $A 15 million (cumulative) and $50 million threshold for investors from Thailand where the agricultural land is used wholly and exclusively for a primary production business; (3) foreign life insurers, who under the Life Insurance Act 1995 may not establish branches in Australia (except for those specified in the Life Insurance Regulations 1995: Chinese, Japanese, Korean, New Zealand, and US insurers); and (4) investment to the extent that constituent states or territories of Australia exercise legislative control over such investment. Controls do not apply to the acquisition of an interest in securities, assets, a trust, Australian land, or a tenement by foreign custodian companies acting at the direction of clients. Effective March 29, 2020, the Australian Government announced temporary changes to the foreign investment review framework. From this date, all proposed foreign investments into Australia subject to the Foreign Acquisitions and Takeovers Act1975 require approval, regardless of value or the nature of the foreign investor — that is, a reduced zero-dollar threshold applies to all investment agreements entered into after 10:30 p.m. AEDT March 29, 2020. To ensure sufficient time for screening applications, the FIRB extended timeframes for reviewing applications from 30 days to up to six months.

June 5, 2020, the Australian Government announced comprehensive reforms to the foreign investment review framework that include a new national security test for foreign investors who will be required to seek approval to start or acquire a direct interest in a sensitive “national security business.” The reform is subject to parliamentary approval.

The temporary measures are to remain in place for the duration of the crisis. The government anticipates a smooth transition from the current temporary arrangements to the new system, though the timing of the temporary measures ultimately depends on coronavirus developments.

With respect to the DPRK, under Australia’s autonomous sanctions regime, it is prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to sell or make available (otherwise than by sale) an interest in a commercial activity in an extractive or related industry in Australia to a DPRK person or entity, or those acting on their behalf. Under the UNSC sanctions regime, it is prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to (1) open a representative office in Australia of, or (2) establish a branch or subsidiary in Australia of, or (3) conclude an agreement related to (1) or (2) for or on behalf of: a financial institution domiciled in the DPRK; a branch or subsidiary, wherever located, of a financial institution domiciled in the DPRK; or a financial institution wherever domiciled that is controlled by an entity or person in the DPRK.

With respect to Syria, under Australia’s autonomous sanctions regime, there are prohibitions, without a sanctions permit, on the sale or making available of an interest in a commercial activity in Australia in the oil and gas industry (in the following sectors: refining of fuels, exploration or production of crude oil and natural gas or liquefaction of natural gas) to the Syrian Government, or any Syrian person or entity, or an entity or person acting on their behalf, at their direction or under their control. It is also prohibited, without a sanctions permit, for a Syrian financial institution (or a financial institution controlled by a Syrian person or entity) to open a representative office, branch, or subsidiary in Australia, and acquire an interest in an Australian financial institution. It is also prohibited, without a sanctions permit, to establish a joint venture or a correspondent banking relationship with a Syrian financial institution.

Controls apply to the acquisition of real estate in Australia, except for acquisitions including (1) direct interest in developed nonresidential commercial real estate valued at less than, effective January 1, 2020, because of annual indexation (previously indexed effective January 1, 2019), $A 275 million or less than $A 60 million for low-threshold land or the direct interest is from a foreign investor from Chile, China, Japan, the Republic of Korea, New Zealand, Singapore, the USA, , as well as Peru (effective February 11, 2020), a country (other than Australia) for which the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership is in force (CPTPP) (since December 30, 2018, the CPTPP is in force for Canada, Japan, Mexico, New Zealand, Singapore and, effective January 14, 2019, Vietnam), and Hong Kong, SAR (effective January 17, 2020), and interest acquired is below $A 1,192 million (thresholds are indexed annually); (2) interest in time-share plans whose foreign interest and that of any associates are less than four weeks a year; (3) residential real estate by approved migrants, special category visa holders, and other foreigners entitled to permanent residence in Australia, including Australian permanent residents and those ordinarily resident in Australia and special category visa holders buying through Australian companies; (4) nonresident Australians, directly or indirectly through Australian companies and trusts; (5) residential real estate by spouses or de facto partners of Australian citizens or Australian permanent residents; (6) offices and residences by foreign government missions for use as official missions or residences for staff, subject to sale to Australians or other eligible purchasers when no longer used for those purposes; (7) minority interests in public companies and trusts whose principal assets are real estate, as permitted by regulations under the Foreign Acquisitions and Takeovers Act 1975; (8) by general insurance companies operating in Australia, if the acquisition is made from the reserves of the companies and conforms to the company’s obligations under the Insurance Act 1973; (9) Australian land by foreign-controlled responsible entities acting on behalf of a managed investment scheme (MIS) registered under Section 601EB of the Corporations Act 2001, when investing primarily for the benefit of members ordinarily resident in Australia; (10) interests in Australian land by foreign custodians acting at the direction of clients; (11) interests acquired by will or devolution of law. Hospitality facilities, such as hotels, motels, hostels, and guesthouses, are considered developed commercial land and are subject to the thresholds specified above at (1). Residential real estate purchased by temporary residents directly or through Australian companies or trusts, which is an established dwelling intended to be the buyer’s place of residence, constitutes single blocks of vacant land, or is a new dwelling that requires notification and approval under the Foreign Acquisitions and Takeovers Act 1975. The Commonwealth Government (1) applies an annual vacancy fee on foreign owners of underutilized residential property where the property is not occupied or is genuinely available on the rental market for at least six months in a 12-month period; (2) capped sales from property developers directly to foreign persons at 50% of dwellings in new residential housing developments under New Dwelling Exemption Certificates; and (3) eliminated the main residence capital gains tax exemption for foreign tax residents. Most states and territories of Australia impose either higher stamp duties on the purchase of real estate by nonresidents or land tax surcharges on the ownership of land by nonresidents or both. These taxes are levied by the state or territory governments, not the Commonwealth Government. Foreign buyers of properties are subject to additional duty (stamp duty) of 7% in the states of Victoria, Queensland, Western Australia (effective January 1, 2019, previously 4%), and South Australia. The surcharge purchaser duty (stamp duty) on residential property imposed on foreign buyers is 8% in New South Wales. Effective April 1, 2020, in Tasmania an 8% stamp duty with a 1.5% surcharge applies to foreign purchasers of primary production property (previously, 3% stamp duty with an additional 0.5% surcharge). New South Wales imposes a land tax surcharge on foreign owners of 2%. In Victoria, the additional land tax surcharge on all land owned by absentee owners is 2%. Queensland has an “absentee” owner surcharge of, effective July 1, 2020, 2% (previously 1.5%) that can apply to absentee individuals, foreign corporations, and trustees of... foreign trusts. The Australian Capital Territory (ACT) imposes a 0.75% surcharge on the unimproved land value of foreign investors.

Under the Banking Act 1959, a body corporate requires an authorization by the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority (APRA) to conduct banking business in Australia. Foreign banks may operate as domestically incorporated subsidiaries or as foreign branches. Foreign branches are subject to less intensive prudential regulation, although they are restricted to wholesale and corporate business.

Authorization for licensees providing financial services in emissions units is a requirement. Some new applicants also request authorization to deal in foreign exchange because emissions units' authorizations also include eligible international emissions units. The financial requirements for licensees that issue OTC derivatives to retail clients, including contracts for difference and margin foreign exchange, were increased beginning January 31, 2013, through Class Order 12/752. These requirements are outlined in Regulatory Guide 166. The increases affected some licensees that have foreign exchange authorizations.

The Autonomous Sanctions Regulations of 2011 prohibit: a financial institution from establishing a joint venture, correspondent banking relationship, or a bank account with a Syrian financial institution, or setting up a representative office, branch, or subsidiary in Syria. Syrian financial institutions are prohibited, without a sanctions permit, from opening a representative office, branch, or subsidiary in Syria.
Australia. They are also prohibited from acquiring interests in Australian financial institutions and establishing a joint venture or correspondent banking relationship with Australian financial institutions. They are also prohibited from the sale of an interest in an Australian financial institution to a Syrian financial institution. They are also prohibited from opening a representative office, branch, or subsidiary in Syria.

With respect to Iran, the Australian Government maintains certain autonomous sanction measures, as the Charter of the UN (Sanctions – Iran) Regulation of 2016 entered into force, giving effect to Resolution 2231, amending and repealing the Charter of the UN (Sanctions – Iran) Regulations of 2008.

The Treasurer’s approval is required to hold more than 20% of the Health Insurance (Prudential Supervision) Act 2015, respectively. The amendments made to the Insurance Act 1973 in 2008 provide for limited exemptions to be made under the Insurance Regulations 2002; these enable general insurance business that cannot be appropriately placed in Australia to be provided by an unauthorized foreign insurer (UFI). The types of insurance business that can be provided by an unauthorized foreign insurer are insurance contracts for atypical risks, high-value insureds, and other risks that cannot reasonably be placed in Australia. There are also exceptions for large businesses and global companies headquartered in Australia. Foreign life insurers must generally operate through Australian-incorporated subsidiaries. The Life Insurance Regulations 1995 provide that only Chinese, Japanese, Korean, New Zealand, and US life insurers may operate through branches in Australia. Insurers are also subject to the licensing, conduct, and disclosure requirements in the Corporations Act 2001 in their dealings with retail clients.

The operation of investment firms is subject to strict legal requirements under the Corporations Act that outline operations, licensing and compliance obligations, including the FFSPs’ regulatory framework.
The operation of retail MIS (collective investment vehicles that issue interests to retail clients) is subject to registration, licensing, conduct, and disclosure provisions under Chapter 5C of the Corporations Act 2001. The Chapter 5C requirements do not apply to wholesale schemes. Where a wholesale scheme is unregistered, it must still meet certain requirements regarding licensing and reporting obligations under the relevant provisions of the Corporations Act. Scheme operators may also be required to obtain licenses under other legislation, depending on the nature of their investments.

For taxation purposes, nonresidents investing through a MIS are treated differently to resident investors. Generally, nonresidents are subject to Australia’s withholding tax rules, with income arising from passive income investments (such as shares, rent, or interest) subject to a form of withholding tax, while capital gains are taxed only in respect of nonportfolio interests in taxable Australian property. Australia only imposes taxing rights on Australian sourced income. Domestic (that is, resident) investors are taxed on all incomes at their marginal tax rate.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents  No.
Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad  No. From a tax perspective, there are restrictions on the extent to which a trust can be “closely held” for the purposes of accessing concessional withholding tax rates. One such example is that a trust must not have one nonresident individual holding 10% or more of the participation interests. This restriction applies to both a registered MIS that is a retail trust and a MIS that is a wholesale trust.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally  No.
Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition  No.

03/29/2020 The monetary threshold of the notification requirement under the foreign investment review framework was temporarily reduced to zero for agreements entered into after 10:30 p.m. Australian Eastern Daylight Time March 29, 2020. This measure was taken because the significant impact of Coronavirus on the Australian economy has increased the risk of foreign investment in Australia occurring in ways that would be contrary to the national interest. The nil monetary threshold means a greater number of investments by foreign persons are required to be notified to the Treasurer. To ensure sufficient time for screening applications, the Foreign Investment Review Board is working with existing and new applications to extend statutory timeframes for reviewing applications from 30 days to up to six months. Urgent applications that protect and support Australian businesses and Australian jobs are being prioritized.

In March 2020, the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) updated its Regulatory Guide 176 – Foreign financial services providers with its new regulatory framework for foreign financial services providers (FFSPs) providing financial services to wholesale clients or professional investors in Australia. The new framework has two key elements: a new foreign Australian financial services (AFS) licensing regime for FFSPs and licensing relief for providers of funds management financial services to certain types of professional investors in Australia. It replaces ASIC’s previous licensing exemptions for foreign providers. From this date, new foreign providers may apply to obtain a foreign AFS license (AFSL) to provide financial services in Australia to wholesale clients. To be eligible, the foreign provider must be authorized under an overseas regulatory regime that ASIC has assessed as sufficiently equivalent to the Australian regulatory regime. In March 2020, the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) updated its Regulatory Guide 176 – Foreign financial services providers with its new regulatory framework for foreign financial services providers (FFSPs) providing financial services to wholesale clients or professional investors in Australia. The new framework has two key elements: a new foreign Australian financial services (AFS) licensing regime for FFSPs and licensing relief for providers of funds management financial services to certain types of professional investors in Australia.

It replaces ASIC’s previous licensing exemptions for foreign providers. From this date, new foreign providers may apply to obtain a foreign AFS license (AFSL) to provide financial services in Australia to wholesale clients. To be eligible, the foreign provider must be authorized under an overseas regulatory regime that ASIC has assessed as sufficiently equivalent to the Australian regulatory regime. The list of sufficiently equivalent foreign regulatory regimes currently includes the U.K. Financial Conduct Authority; U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission; U.S. Federal Reserve, and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency; the Monetary Authority of Singapore; Hong Kong’s Securities & Futures Commission; the U.S. Commodity Futures Trading Commission; Germany’s Bundesanstalt für Finanzdienstleistungsaufsicht (Federal Financial Supervisory Authority); and Luxembourg’s Commission de Surveillance du Secteur Financier. An FFSP holding a foreign AFSL is exempt from certain provisions in Chapter 7 of the Corporations Act, as ASIC acknowledges that similar regulatory supervision and outcomes are achieved by the equivalent overseas requirements. Foreign providers currently relying on preexisting relief have a two-year transition period until March 31, 2022, to make arrangements to continue their operations in Australia, which may include applying for a foreign AFSL.

Funds management licensing relief will commence April 1, 2022. The relief is available to foreign providers inducing certain types of Australian professional investors to use the funds management financial services it provides. Under the relief, a license is not needed for that inducing conduct. Inducing conduct includes attempts to persuade, influence, or encourage a particular person to become a client, for example, mass marketing campaigns. Foreign providers must separately consider if they need to hold a license to actually provide financial services.

Previously, the relief could be available broadly when (1) regulation by the FFSP’s overseas regulatory authority was sufficiently equivalent to ASIC regulation (from a market integrity and systemic risk perspective), (2) there were effective cooperation arrangements between the overseas regulatory authority and ASIC, and (3) the financial services provided were restricted to wholesale clients. Generally, relief was available for complying entities regulated by the aforementioned institutions.

- Yes.

In accordance with EU regulations and, if applicable, relevant UNSC resolutions, certain restrictions are maintained with respect to certain individuals/entities (a consolidated list of EU sanctions is available at www.sanctionsmap.eu/#/). EU sanctions are currently associated with, for example, Belarus, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Burundi, Central African Republic, China, Democratic Republic of the Congo, Egypt, Guinea (Conakry), Guinea-Bissau, Haiti, the Islamic Republic of Iran, the former government of Iraq, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, Lebanon, Libya, Mali, Moldova, Myanmar, Nicaragua (effective October 14, 2019), Russia, Somalia, South Sudan, Sudan, Syria, Tunisia, Turkey, Ukraine, Venezuela, the former Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro), Yemen, and Zimbabwe. Restrictions also apply to transfers with respect to the Taliban (Afghanistan), Al-Qaida, ISIL (Da’esh), and individuals and organizations associated with terrorism. New restrictive measures against the proliferation and use of chemical weapons and against cyberattacks threatening the Union or its member states (effective May 16, 2019) were introduced.

Restrictive measures in view of the situation in the Republic of Maldives were revoked effective June 18, 2019, (Council Decision (CFSP) 2019/993 of June 17, 2019).

Other security restrictions
- Yes.

With regard to EU internal terrorism, these restrictions are established by OeNB (Österreichische Nationalbank, Austrian Central Bank) regulations based either on the Austrian Exchange Control Act (Devisengesetz 2004), as amended, or on the Sanctions Act of 2010 (Sanktionengesetz 2010), as amended.

Floating
Free floating
Yes. The exchange rate arrangement of the euro area is free floating. Austria participates in a currency union (EMU) with 18 other members of the EU and has no separate legal tender. The euro, the common currency, floats freely and independently against other currencies. The ECB publishes information regarding its interventions; it last intervened in March 2011. When it intervenes, the ECB intervenes at the quotes of the market makers.

Official exchange rate
Yes. The ECB publishes a reference rate based on the daily concertation procedure between CBs within and outside the European System of Central Banks, which normally takes place at 2:15 p.m. Central European Time. On July 1, 2016, the ECB changed the publication time of the euro foreign exchange reference rates (ECB reference rates) from around 2:30 p.m. Central European Time to around 4:00 p.m. Central European Time. The reference rate against the euro is the average of the buying and selling rates. The publication regime aims to reinforce the distinction between exchange rate fixings used as benchmarks for transaction purposes and the ECB reference rates that are published for information purposes only.

To maintain price stability is the primary objective of the Eurosystem and of the single monetary policy for which it is responsible. This is stated in the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, Article 127(1). “Without prejudice to the objective of price stability,” the Eurosystem will also “support the general economic policies in the Community with a view to contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Community.” These include a “high level of employment” and “sustainable and non-inflationary growth.” Price stability is defined as an inflation rate below but close to 2% over the

In accordance with EC Regulation No. 1889/2005, cash controls have been implemented based on a mandatory declaration system for amounts of cash entering or leaving the EU with a value of €10,000 or more. Travelers entering or leaving the EU and carrying more than €10,000 are required to make a declaration to the relevant authorities of the member country through which they enter or leave the EU. The authorities must keep a record of such information and report it to their national financial intelligence unit (FIU). The obligation to declare is not fulfilled if the traveler makes no declaration or if the information provided is incorrect or incomplete. To check compliance with the regulation, the national authorities have the right to search natural persons, their baggage, and their means of transportation. In the event of failure to comply with the declaration obligation, cash may be confiscated. The EU regulation requires member countries to impose penalties for failure to comply with the declaration obligation. If there are indications that cash is related to illegal activity, authorities of one member country may exchange information with authorities in other member countries. Under the framework of existing agreements on mutual administrative assistance, information obtained under the EU regulation may also be communicated to a third country in compliance with relevant national and EU provisions on the transfer of personal data to third countries. The EU regulation does not apply to physical cross-border transportation from one EU member country to another (that is, intra-EU transportation). Such transportation is not considered “cross-border” for the purposes of the EU regulation; the EU regulation only harmonizes the system for the EU’s external borders.

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions

Yes. Global standards on bank capital and resolution were incorporated into European law by Regulation (EU) No. 575/2013 (Capital Requirements Regulation), Directive 2013/36/EU (CRD IV) and Directive 2014/59/EU (Bank recovery and resolution directive).

In Member states whose currency is the euro, the Single Supervisory Mechanism (SSM), the Single Resolution Mechanism (SRM), and the Common Deposit Guarantee Scheme (which is not yet in place) form the European Banking Union. Non-euro Member States may participate if close cooperation has been established. The legal basis for the SSM is Council Regulation (EU) No. 1024/2013; for the SRM it is Regulation (EU) No. 806/2014.

Within the SSM, the ECB directly supervises all so-called significant institutions (SI), while less significant institutions (LSI) remain within the remit of the national supervisory authorities under the ECB’s oversight. The Single Resolution Board (SRB) mandate covers SIs and cross-border operating groups. The SRM differs in comparison to the SSM since the decisions of the SRB need to be implemented by national resolution authorities to become legally effective.

The regulatory framework for credit institutions in Austria, the Federal Banking Act (Bankwesengesetz - BWG), and the national regulations based on this act were revised because of the new European framework. According to Article 69 (5) BWG, FMA follows the guidelines and recommendations and other measures passed by the EBA, as well as comply with the warnings and recommendations issued by the ESRB.

According to Article 9 (1) BWG, credit institutions (as defined in Article 4 (1) No. 1 CRR) that are authorized and established in an EU Member state may conduct activities listed in Annex I CRD IV by the establishment of a branch or under the freedom to provide services.

The Federal Act on the Recovery and Resolution of Banks (Bank Recovery and Resolution Act – BaSAG) transposed the BRRD into Austrian law. The BaSAG conveys far-reaching powers to FMA to deal with credit institutions in crisis. To this effect, institutions must submit recovery plans to FMA, while the FMA draws up resolution plans.

Additionally, laws exist concerning specific requirements for special credit institutions (for example, the Federal Act on Savings and Loan Associations).

Regulation (EU) No. 260/2012 establishing technical and business requirements for credit transfers and direct debits in euros is in force, which set up the single euro payments area (SEPA) that replaced national payment services with a common EU-wide payment service.

Lending locally in foreign currency is governed by the FMA’s Minimum Standards for the Risk Management and Granting of Foreign Currency Loans and Loans with Repayment Vehicles (FMA-FXTT-MS). The minimum standards aim to impose strict criteria on new foreign currency loans (FCLs) to unhedged private consumers and to require banks to develop strategies to reduce the current high volume of outstanding FCLs. FMA minimum standards are not regulations in the legal sense, but are the supervisory authority’s recommendations on limiting risk. They are based on the FMA’s mandate to protect the national economic interest and the stability of the financial market (BWG Article 69, Paragraph 1) and are linked to the due diligence requirements of managers as specified in BWG Article 39. The exposure of domestic private households to FCLs had been deemed unsustainable by the Austrian authorities. Accordingly, strict regulatory measures were taken (tough interpretation of the minimum standards that restrict FCLs to hedged households or the most creditworthy households).

Reserve requirements apply to deposits and debt securities up to two years in all currencies. Liabilities from other credit institutions that are already required to hold minimum reserves and liabilities vis-à-vis the ECB are exempt. The current reserve requirement is 1% minus an allowance deduction of €100,000.

Pursuant to the Governing Council decision ECB/2019/31 published October 15, 2019, a part of the excess reserves holdings, up to a multiple of the required reserves, is exempt from the negative remuneration. On the basis of this decision, the interest rate of excess reserves holdings up to six times of the required reserves is 0% effective October 30, 2019.

Liquid asset requirements apply only to deposits held in euros.

Deposit accounts held by nonresidents are not taxed differently.

According to Article 89 para. 3(b) CRR, institutions may not have qualifying holdings exceeding 15% of the eligible capital of the... institution in an enterprise that is a nonbank financial institution, nonancillary company, or noninsurance company. The total amount of such holdings may not exceed 60% of eligible capital of the institution.

In banks by nonresidents
No.
According to BWG Articles 20–20b, any party (resident or nonresident) that decides to hold a qualifying participation in a credit institution directly or indirectly, or to increase a qualifying participation directly or indirectly so that it reaches or exceeds the 20%, 30%, or 50% limits of the voting rights or capital—or in a way that causes the credit institution to become a subsidiary of that party—must notify the FMA in writing and indicate the amount of the participation and the information required under BWG Article 20b (3).

Open foreign exchange position limits
Yes.
According to Article 351 CRR, credit institutions must fulfill at all times the minimum capital requirement to cover foreign exchange risk.

On resident assets and liabilities
Yes.

On nonresident assets and liabilities
Yes.

Provisions specific to institutional investors
Yes.
With the transposition of Solvency II into national law entering into force, the prudent person principle for investments has been introduced (Art. 124 VAG 2016) and requirements as regards eligible assets for funds covering technical provisions and territorial restrictions referring to these assets have been abandoned (cf. Art. 134 of the directive 2009/138/EC). Investments of Austrian insurance companies are regulated in the Versicherungsunternehmen Kapitalanlageverordnung (VU-KAV), subordinated to the Insurance Supervision Act 2016. While under Solvency II the prudent person principle applies to investments, the VU-KAV regulation specifies qualitative requirements for investments (for example, concentration risks, credit risk analysis, derivatives, securities lending, risk management, and specifically prudent requirements for funds covering technical provisions). For small mutual associations and small insurance companies outside the scope of Solvency II restrictions on eligible investments and quantitative limits (Art. 72 and 90 VAG 2016, Art. 3 Small Mutual Associations Investment Regulation – kV-KAV, Art. 3 Small Insurance Undertakings Investment Regulation) continue to be in place.

Yes.
For small mutual associations the following thresholds apply: Individual investments may only be made up to the percentages stated below, based on the carrying amount of the total investment ("individual threshold"): up to 2% each: shares and other variable-yield participations of companies admitted to trading on a regulated market, up to 10% each: (1) debt securities of the same issuer, (2) shares and other variable-yield participations of the same company (eligible participations), (3) units in investment funds of the same fund, (4) loans of the same issuer; up to 30% each: bank balances; up to 35% each: real estate and immovable property rights. The following total investments may only be made up to the percentages stated below, based on the carrying amount of the total investment ("total threshold"): (1) up to 3% in total: cash balances; (2) up to 10% in total: debt securities (corporate bonds not admitted to trading on a regulated market); (3) up to 25% in total: shares and other variable-yield participations (excl. real estate companies) including any shares held indirectly via investment funds; (4) up to 30% in total: (a) real estate and immovable property rights, (b) shares and other variable-yield participations in real estate companies, (c) units in real estate funds, and (d) mortgage loans and immovable property rights; (5) up to 50% each in total: (a) debt securities (corporate bonds) and loans to regional or local authorities of an OECD member state. Similar regulations apply to Small Insurance Undertakings not subject to Solvency II (Art. 4 Small Mutual Associations Investment Regulation – kV-KAV, Art. 4 Small Insurance Undertakings Investment Regulation – kVU-KAV).

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad

Yes.

Controls apply to (1) the acquisition of real estate outside the EU, if the asset in question is to form part of the cover of the prescribed solvency margin for a local branch of a third country insurance company established in Austria with the solvency regime in the third country not considered equivalent by the European Commission (Art. 13 para 4 and Art. 14 para 1 no. 6 VAG 2016); (2) the acquisition of real estate abroad, if the asset in question is to form part of the guarantee funds of a local branch of a third country insurance company established in Austria with the solvency regime in the third country not considered equivalent by the European Commission (Art. 13 para 4 and Art. 14 para 1 no. 6 VAG 2016); (3) loans granted to nonresidents, or for which the designated collateral is located abroad, if the asset in question is to form part of the guarantee funds of a local branch of a third country insurance company established in Austria with the solvency regime in the third country not considered equivalent by the European Commission (Art. 13 para 4 and Art. 14 para 1 no. 6 VAG 2016); and (4) loans to residents outside the EU, or for which the designated collateral is located outside the EU, if the asset in question is to form part of the cover of the prescribed solvency margin for a local branch of a third country insurance company established in Austria with the solvency regime in the third country not considered equivalent by the European Commission (Art. 13 para 4 and Art. 14 para 1 no. 6 VAG 2016).

Pension funds

No.

The management board of the Pensionskasse (pension company) ensures that the investment of the assets allocated to an investment and risk-sharing group is performed by persons who are professionally qualified to do so and who have the relevant professional experience, in particular in the areas of portfolio management and risk management, as well as asset liability management and that appropriate technical resources are available for risk management. The investment of the assets allocated to an investment and risk-sharing group must be effected within prudent person rule and must take account of the other provisions of the current Federal Pensionskassen Act.

Effective January 1, 2019, the Federal Pensionskassen Act was amended within the course of the implementation of the Institutions for Occupational Retirement Provision (IORP II) Directive (EU) 2016/2341. Former quantitative investment limits were removed and requirements for internal investment guidelines were introduced. The Pensionskasse must draw up and implement guidance in writing about the investment of assets allocated to an investment and risk-sharing group, which where applicable must at least cover the following areas: (1) investment objectives taking into account the commitments arising from the Pensionskasse contracts; (2) criteria for the security, quality, liquidity, profitability, and availability of the entire assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group; (3) strategic asset allocation, suitable parameters for deviation from such an allocation, and the respective rules for determining such parameters; (4) definition of the investment universe according to the following investment categories: (a) cash at banks, (b) loans and credits, (c) securities representing money claims (from regional or local authorities, from credit institutions, from other undertakings), (d) shares and other equity securities, (e) real estate, (f) other assets. Investments in unit certificates in investment funds, real estate funds, and alternative investment funds (AIFs) must be split up according to the investment categories; (5) investment procedures with regard to the selection, mixture, and diversification of assets; (6) determination of an appropriate limit system with quantitative investment thresholds with regard to par. 1 no. 7, at least with regard to the investment categories pursuant to no. 4 for both issuers and counterparties; (7) criteria for the computations of investments in unit certificates of investment funds, real estate funds, and AIFs for thresholds for issuers and counterparties pursuant to no. 6 including the general defining of materiality thresholds; (8) conditions for the investment in (a) assets pursuant to par. 1 no. 5, (b) derivative products pursuant to par. 1 no. 6, as well as (c) securities lending and securities repurchasing transactions; (9) description of the escalation processes in the event that the determined thresholds are exceeded; (10) criteria for the canceling of the dedication of securities as hold-to-maturity investments (Article 23 para. 1 no. 3a).

Previously, the assets acquired for the benefit of an investment and risk-sharing group had to be allocated to the following investment categories: (1) cash at bank; (2) loans and credits; (3) securities representing money claims; (4) shares, negotiable securities equivalent to shares, corporate bonds, and other equity securities; (5) real estate; and (6) other assets. Investments in shares, negotiable securities equivalent to shares, corporate bonds, other equity securities, and other assets were jointly limited to 70% of the assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group. Notwithstanding the above, investments with the exception of investment-grade corporate bonds in an investment and risk-sharing group within defined contribution plans that managed commitments with minimum yield guarantees were limited to 50% of the assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group. With the exception of investments in debt securities of the federal government, a federal province, another EEA member country, or a constituent state of another EEA member country, investments in assets of the same issuer were limited to 5% of the assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group; investments in assets of issuers that belonged to one group were limited to 10% of the assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group. Cash at bank at a single banking group was limited to 25% of the assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group. Investments in assets denominated in a currency other than that of the liabilities were limited to 30% of the assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group. If the exchange risk was eliminated by hedging transactions, these investments could be attributed to the euro-denominated investments. Investments in securities representing money claims, shares, and negotiable securities equivalent to shares that were not admitted to trading on a regulated market were jointly limited to 30% of the assets allocated to the investment and risk-sharing group. Derivative products that were not purchased to hedge against risk could be purchased only if they helped lower investment risk or improved the administration of the assets allocated to an investment and risk-sharing group.

The FMA determines by regulation minimum risk management standards.

Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices: No.

Exchange measures imposed for security reasons: Yes.

In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51): No.

Other security restrictions: Yes.

Restrictions have been imposed on financial transactions and accounts held by individuals and organizations associated or suspected of association with terrorism and terrorism financing or money or other property laundering, pursuant to UNSC resolutions and to the list of current organizations associated with terrorism maintained by the US secretary of state and the Central Bank of the Republic of Azerbaijan (CBA), which is in charge of the supervision system over prevention of legalization of criminally obtained funds and other property and financing of terrorism. Moreover, the FIU, established on May 26, 2018, is an independent public legal entity that aims to improve the potential of relevant government agencies which are taking measures against legalization of criminally obtained funds or other property and financing of terrorism, to create a coordination mechanism for effective connection of activities, to increase the efficiency of cooperation and information exchange among them, and to widen international cooperation. The FIU is the authority that implements the powers identified by the legislation on the prevention of legalization of criminally obtained funds and other property and financing of terrorism and participates in policy formulation.

Exchange Arrangement

Currency: Yes. The currency of the Republic of Azerbaijan is manat.

Other legal tender: No.

Exchange rate structure

Unitary: Yes.

Dual

Classification
Azerbaijan’s de jure exchange rate arrangement is free floating. The exchange rate of manat rests on fundamental factors determining the supply and demand ratio in the foreign exchange market. The CBA operates a currency auction mechanism organized on the unilateral basis, in which the CBA provides the auction’s operational platform, and the State Oil Fund of Azerbaijan. This mechanism implies selling currency to the customer offering the higher price at the first place. The amount of the currency to be offered at an auction will be announced in advance. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a stabilized arrangement. The CBA publishes its foreign exchange intervention data quarterly.

The weighted average USD/AZN rate of both the auction transactions and interbank trades executed on Bloomberg is the official exchange rate for the next day. It is calculated on Bloomberg, and the CBA announces it at 5 p.m. each working day. Entities and banks use the official exchange rate as a reference point.

Other monetary framework Yes. Under the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on the CBA, the CBA uses the monetary base and a bilateral exchange rate target to maintain inflation at an acceptable level. The bilateral exchange rate target vis-à-vis the US dollar was implemented in January 2011.

Exchange tax No.

Exchange subsidy No.

Foreign exchange market Yes. Commercial banks freely determine their bid-ask spreads and commissions.

There is no concrete legal framework for foreign exchange regulation. However, a definition of foreign exchange contracts is given in the “Rules on margin trading,” effective October 5, 2019, as follows: a financial instrument that provides the party to the contract to pay the difference between the initial and final prices of the underlying asset determined by the contract.

Spot exchange market Yes. The foreign exchange market consists of the interbank (between commercial banks) and the intrabank (between commercial banks and their clients) markets. All commercial banks (30) may participate in both the interbank and intrabank markets.

Operated by the central bank
- Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility
- No.

The standing facility was eliminated when the CBA started holding foreign currency auctions through the Bloomberg Auction Platform.

Allocation
- No.

Auction
- Yes.

On January 12, 2017, the CBA introduced one-sided, multiple-price, and competitive auction format, where banks can send up to three different bids with no price and amount restriction. Only banks are allowed to participate in the auctions. Banks are notified about the auction at least thirty minutes before the auction, specifying the time, the direction of operation, as well as the amount of offered currency. The auctions are held two times a week. At the end of the auction, the balance on the correspondent account of each bank is checked. A bank with insufficient funds compared to its order is excluded from the auction. The results of the auctions are published on the CBA website, and the amount sold is published on the website of the State Oil Fund of Azerbaijan. Banks are free to decide to make any transaction with the foreign exchange obtained at the auction. The weighted average rate of both the auction transactions and interbank trades executed on Bloomberg is the official exchange rate for the next day.

Fixing
- No.

Interbank market
- Yes.

All commercial banks (30) are allowed to freely execute foreign exchange transactions among themselves in the interbank foreign exchange market. All trades are fulfilled on Bloomberg.

As of December 31, 2019, 26 banks traded in interbank foreign exchange market on Bloomberg.

Over the counter
- Yes.

The interbank foreign exchange market operates over the counter.

Brokerage
- No.

Market making
- No.

Forward exchange market
- Yes.

All commercial banks may execute foreign exchange forward transactions. However, this market is in the initial stages of development.

Official cover of forward operations
- No.

The CBA regulates foreign exchange transactions, conducts foreign currency operations, and administers official gold and convertible currency reserve holdings. The Financial Market Supervisory Authority of Azerbaijan (FIMSA) was liquidated effective November 29, 2019. Previously, it was responsible for issuing licenses to deal in foreign exchange and conducting monitoring to ensure compliance with the law in Azerbaijan Republic. Now, the CBA establishes governing rules for foreign exchange operations and conducting operations with foreign currency accounts, and, effective November 29, 2019, issues rules for opening foreign currency accounts as well. Subjects, operating in financial markets are supervised (persons licensed in the securities market, credit institutions, professional participants of the insurance market, investment funds, and investment fund managers), may open foreign currency accounts outside the Republic of Azerbaijan in the cases and under the terms and conditions set by relevant legislation. The Ministry of Economy regulates foreign trade, whereas the organization and operation of the customs agencies are regulated under the Law on Custom Tariffs. Controls are also administered by authorized banks holding a license to effect foreign exchange transactions as agents of foreign exchange control.

Resident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted
Yes.

Held domestically

Approval required
No.

Held abroad
Yes. Resident may open and use foreign exchange accounts abroad. The opening and use of foreign exchange accounts in foreign banks are regulated by the Law of the Republic of Azerbaijan on Currency Regulation, Tax Code, and Regulations for Opening, Managing, and Closing of Bank Accounts. Pursuant to Parts 6 and 7 of the Regulations on Currency Operations of Residents and Non-residents by the Decision of the Board of the Central Bank of March 15, 2019, effective April 5, 2019, residents may freely open foreign currency denominated accounts beyond the Republic of Azerbaijan. When opening a foreign currency-denominated account beyond the Republic of Azerbaijan for entrepreneurial activities, residents should obtain a certificate-duplicate from tax authorities under Article 16.1.11 of the Tax Code of the Republic of Azerbaijan and submit its notification part to the tax authority by making relevant notes until the date operations are maintained on the account.

Approval required
Yes.

Accounts in domestic currency held
No.
Nonresident Accounts

Foreign exchange in these accounts may be transferred abroad or sold to banks for manat. Nonresidents engaged in commercial activities must present duplicate certificate from tax authorities to open foreign currency accounts. Duplicate certificate is not required for nonresidents not engaged in business activities. The FIMSA was liquidated effective November 29, 2019. Previously, it was responsible for issuing licenses to deal in foreign exchange and conducting monitoring to ensure compliance with the law in Azerbaijan Republic. Now, the CBA establishes governing rules for foreign exchange operations and conducting operations with foreign currency accounts, and, effective November 29, 2019, issues rules for opening foreign currency accounts as well. Administration of control

11/29/2019

The FIMSA was liquidated. Previously, it was responsible for issuing licenses to deal in foreign exchange, and conducting monitoring to ensure compliance with the law in Azerbaijan Republic. Now, the Central Bank of the Republic of Azerbaijan issues rules for opening foreign currency accounts.
Resident Accounts

Pursuant to Parts 6 and 7 of the Regulations on Currency Operations of Residents and Non-residents by the Decision of the Board of the Central Bank of March 15, 2019, residents may freely open foreign currency denominated accounts beyond the Republic of Azerbaijan. When opening a foreign currency-denominated account beyond the Republic of Azerbaijan for entrepreneurial activities, residents should obtain a certificate-duplicate from tax authorities under Article 16.1.11 of the Tax Code of the Republic of Azerbaijan and submit its notification part to the tax authority by making relevant notes until the date operations are maintained on the account.

Nonresident Accounts

The FIMSA was liquidated. Previously, it was responsible for issuing licenses to deal in foreign exchange, and conducting monitoring to ensure compliance with the law in Azerbaijan Republic. Now, the Central Bank of the Republic of Azerbaijan issues rules for opening foreign currency accounts as well.

Imports and Import Payments

If the relevant documents confirming import of goods (supply of services) are not delivered to the bank or the prepaid amount is not refunded at the latest within 2 years (previously, 270 days) after the payment is made and the outstanding amount of goods not imported (services not supplied) or advance payments not refunded exceeds US$10,000 (previously, any amount), the bank must deliver all documents related to advance payments to the Central Bank of the Republic of Azerbaijan within 5 days (previously, 2 days) to impose enforcement measures stipulated in Article 430.4 of the Code of Administrative Offences of the Republic of Azerbaijan.

Capital Transactions

The minimum authorized capital is manat 5 million for non-life insurance companies; manat 10 million for life insurance companies; manat 20 million for reinsurance companies operating exclusively; manat 5 million for reinsurance activity of insurance companies and manat 1 million for co-insurers realizing activity as a manager of agricultural insurance system on behalf of agricultural insurance body. Previously, the minimum authorized capital was manat 1 million for reinsurance companies and manat 0.8 million for insurance companies.

through, effective January 1, 2019, the ADs (previously through the CB). The CB ceased buying from or selling investment currency to the general public. The use of investment currency is prescribed for the purchase of foreign currency securities from nonresidents and direct investments abroad. The current premium bid and offer rates are 5% and 2.5%, respectively. Similarly, a premium of 5% may be charged on approved purchases of securities and foreign real estate. In certain circumstances, the Central Bank of The Bahamas (CBB) may permit residents to retain and use foreign currency from other sources to make outward investments. Certain external investments (including investment in foreign stocks by company-based retirement funds) may take place at the official exchange rate without an investment currency premium.

Classification

No separate legal tender

Currency board

Conventional peg Yes. The exchange rate arrangement is a conventional peg arrangement. The Bahamian dollar is pegged to the US dollar at par. Central Bank Act 2010 Article 9 establishes “that the Minister may, after consultation with the Bank, by order alter the said parity whether in terms of gold or any other standard.” The CB has fixed the Bahamian dollar parity to 1 US dollar since 1972.

Exchange tax  Yes.  A stamp tax of 1.5% is applied to the conversion of Bahamian dollars on all outward remittances. Section 4(b) 51 A of the Stamp (Amendment) Act, 2013, imposes a 5% tax on Bahamian dollar conversion amounts in excess of B$0.5 million a year for funds to be remitted or transferred outside The Bahamas to a related party in respect of dividends or profits and payment for services by third parties.

Exchange subsidy No.

Foreign exchange market Yes. ADs are largely permitted to determine their bid-ask spread on foreign exchange transactions. Commercial bank fees and charges are set solely by the banks themselves.

For transactions with the public, commercial banks are authorized to charge a commission of 0.50% per US dollar on the purchase and 0.75% per US dollar on the sale of US dollars and 0.50% per pound on the purchase or sale of pounds sterling.

Spot exchange market Yes. Along with commercial banks, stand-alone money transfer business operators are also included as participants. These operators are licensed by the CBB and make payments to correspondents abroad on behalf of clients.

As of December 31, 2019, there are 221 licensed banks, 5 nonbank money transmission service providers, and 22 money transmission agents.

Money transmission businesses must obtain Exchange Control approval to deal in foreign currency and operate foreign currency accounts with local commercial banks and abroad. Money transmission businesses do not make foreign exchange transactions directly with the CBB.

Operated by the central bank Yes. Buying and selling rates for pounds sterling are also officially quoted, with the buying rate based on the rate in the New York market; the selling rate is 0.5% above the buying rate. There is also a market in which investment currency may be negotiated among residents through the CBB.

Foreign exchange standing facility Yes. The CBB buys and sells US dollars at the official rate without a commission and deals only with commercial banks and the government. The CBB and commercial banks (when acting under delegated authority) verify the bona fide nature of each transaction before providing foreign exchange. For pound sterling sales, the CBB adds a commission of 0.5% to the midrate. The CBB deals with commercial banks for a range of transactions.

Allocation No. Auction No. Fixing No.

Interbank market Yes. Interbank transactions may be freely negotiated among banks but are not significant because of structural excess bank liquidity and relatively predictable liquidity needs.

The CBB does not intervene directly with market participants at their quoted rates nor does the CBB propose its own quotes to market participants or intervene via market markers. The details (value and negotiated rate) of each transaction are required to be reported to the CBB for statistical purposes and to ensure adherence to open position limits.

As of December 31, 2019, all eight licensed local banks participate in the interbank market.

Over the counter Yes. Interbank transactions are negotiated over the counter.

Brokerage No. Market making No.

Forward exchange market Yes. Commercial banks may provide forward cover for residents who are due to receive or must pay in foreign currency under a contractual commitment. Commercial banks may not, however, sell foreign currency spot to be held on account to cover future requirements without the CBB’s permission. ADs may deal forward in foreign currency with nonresidents without prior approval from the CBB. Commercial banks may execute forward deals among themselves at market rates, but they must ensure when carrying out all forward cover arrangements that their open spot or forward position does not exceed 5% of the respective bank’s Tier 1 capital.

While the CBB does not itself participate in the forward exchange market, it facilitates swap transactions on behalf of the Government of The Bahamas.

Arrangements for Payments and Receipts

Prescription of currency requirements

Yes.

The Exchange Control system of The Bahamas makes no distinction among foreign territories. Settlements with residents of foreign countries may be made in any foreign currency or in Bahamian dollars through an external account. Foreign currency is defined as all currencies other than the Bahamian dollar.

Controls on the use of domestic currency

Yes.

Nonresidents may not access domestic currency for capital purposes; however, they may access domestic currency up to a certain limit for working capital in local businesses they operate.

For current transactions and payments

Yes.

Exchange Control regulations apply. Generally, domestic currency may not be used for outward transactions between residents and nonresidents.

For capital transactions

Yes.

Exchange Control approval is required. Generally, domestic currency may not be used for outward transactions between residents and nonresidents.

Transactions in capital and money market instruments

Yes.

Exchange Control approval is required. Generally, domestic currency may not be used for outward transactions between residents and nonresidents.

Transactions in derivatives and other instruments

Yes.

Exchange Control approval is required. Generally, domestic currency may not be used for outward transactions between residents and nonresidents.

Credit operations

Yes.

Generally, nonresidents may not obtain credit facilities in domestic currency, except for domestic currency overdraft facilities for local businesses owned by nonresidents. Otherwise, local businesses owned by nonresidents are required to obtain credit facilities in proportion to their ownership structure. Temporary residents may receive domestic currency loan facilities on a restricted basis. Resident individuals and wholly Bahamian-owned businesses require Exchange Control approval to obtain foreign currency credit and must demonstrate that efforts have been made, without success, to obtain local financing.

Use of foreign exchange among residents

Yes.

Officially, all settlements between residents must be made in domestic currency. Foreign currency received domestically from nonresidents (for example, tourism related) must be surrendered to ADs, unless approved by the CBB.

Payments arrangements

Yes.

Bilateral payments arrangements

No.

Operative

No.

Inoperative

No.

Regional arrangements

Yes.

The Bahamas is a member of CARICOM, but it does not participate...
Clearing agreements No.

Barter agreements and open accounts No.

Administration of control Yes. Exchange Control is administered by the CBB, which authorizes ADs to approve allocation of foreign exchange for certain current payments, including for imports up to the equivalent of B$1.0 million and cash gift transfers up to the equivalent of B$15,000 a transaction.

Payments arrears No.

Official No.

Private No.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion) Yes. Residents, other than ADs, are not permitted to hold or deal in gold bullion. However, residents who are known users of gold for industrial purposes may, with CBB approval, meet their current industrial requirements. There are no restrictions on residents’ acquisition or retention of gold coins.

On domestic ownership and/or trade Yes. ADs are not required to obtain licenses for bullion or coins, and no import duty is imposed on these items. Commercial imports of gold jewelry do not require a license and are duty free, although they are subject to a 10% stamp tax. A 1.5% stamp tax payable to customs is also assessed on commercial shipments of gold jewelry from any source.

On external trade No.

Controls on exports and imports of banknotes Yes.

On exports Yes.

Domestic currency Yes. Travelers may export banknotes up to a total of B$200. ADs may export Bahamian notes to nonresident banking correspondents against payment in Bahamian dollars from an External Account or any foreign currency, Bahamian currency notes in any quantity, provided the AD concerned is satisfied that they are required for the purpose of providing notes for travelers to The Bahamas.

In other cases, the prior permission of the CBB is required for the export of Bahamian currency notes.

Each application is considered on a case-by-case basis, within defined areas of usage, including, but not limited to, educational, promotional, government sponsor initiatives.

Foreign currency Yes. Bahamian travelers need CBB approval to export foreign banknotes. Providing the requisite documentation, Bahamian travelers may apply to ADs for foreign currency to travel abroad up to a specified amount, beyond which, application must be made to the CB.

On imports Yes.

Domestic currency Yes. Importation is subject to CBB approval. There are no restrictions on the importation of domestic currency banknotes by ADs.

Foreign currency No. There is no restriction on the import of foreign currency notes and coins.

Payments for Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

Controls on these transfers

Yes. There are no restrictions on current payments. However, there are limits on the approval authority delegated to commercial banks by the CBB. ADs may make payments to nonresidents on behalf of residents and individuals deemed “temporary residents” for Exchange Control purposes—that is, non-Bahamians authorized to work in The Bahamas for a specified period, for certain services and other invisible transactions, such as commissions, royalties (excluding franchise fees), and education, within specified limits. CBB approval is required for payments in excess of those limits and for categories of payments not delegated to commercial banks.

Trade-related payments

Yes.

Prior approval

Yes. CBB approval is required for transactions of more than B$25,000 for unloading and storage costs and commissions.

Quantitative limits

Yes. Limits are based on pro forma invoices or other relevant documents proving the existence of a service contract.

Indicative limits/bona fide test

Yes. Approval is based on a bona fide test.

Investment-related payments

Yes.

Prior approval

Yes. For all investments with approved status, permission is given on application for the transfer. In light of the COVID-19 pandemic, the CBB suspended, effective March 4, 2020, all Exchange Control approvals for domestic bank dividends.

Quantitative limits

No.

Indicative limits/bona fide test

No.

Payments for travel

Yes.

Prior approval

Yes. CBB approval is required for travel of more than B$15,000 a person a trip and business travel to facilitate imports.

Quantitative limits

Yes. ADs may provide up to B$15,000 or its equivalent a person a trip for tourism and other personal travel. The limit on travel for education is B$15,000 a person a trip. For business or professional travel, the limit is B$15,000 a trip. The allowance for tourism travel excludes the cost of fares and travel services, which is generally paid in Bahamian dollars to a travel agent in The Bahamas. Foreign exchange obtained for travel and any unused balance must be surrendered within one week of issue or, if the traveler is still abroad, within one week of returning to The Bahamas.

Indicative limits/bona fide test

Yes. Approval is based on a bona fide test.

Personal payments

Yes. There is no limit for medical expenses.

Prior approval

Yes. Except for the medical expenses, CBB approval is required for amounts exceeding this established limit.

Quantitative limits

Yes. ADs may provide up to B$25,000 a transaction or its equivalent for payments to education institutions (B$2,500 a transaction if paid to the student), family maintenance, and alimony payments. CBB approval is required for amounts exceeding this limit. Limits are applied per transaction. An AD can facilitate payments to educational institution based on the full amount noted on the bill, as well as payments due under a court order for the total amount.

Indicative limits/bona fide test

Yes. Approval is based on a bona fide test, including supporting evidence.
Foreign workers' wages: Yes.
Prior approval: No. Prior approval is not required.
Quantitative limits: Yes. The limit is 100% of wages and salaries.
Indicative limits/bona fide test: Yes. If commitments outside The Bahamas are more than 100% of wages and salaries, additional amounts may be remitted. Temporary residents may also repatriate all their accumulated savings resulting from their employment in The Bahamas.
Credit card use abroad: Yes.
Prior approval: Yes. Approval is required for residents to hold an international credit card. Cards may not be used to pay for life insurance premiums and capital items.
Quantitative limits: Yes. Use of credit cards is limited to the amount indicated on the current bill.
Indicative limits/bona fide test: Yes. Credit card transactions are subject to bona fide tests.
Other payments: Yes.
Prior approval: No. CBB approval is not required and AD may facilitate payment for services (that is, professional, subscription, membership fees, royalties, registration of patents, serial rights, and advertising) up to the amount indicated on the bill.
Quantitative limits: Yes. Use of credit cards is limited to the amount indicated on the current bill.
Indicative limits/bona fide test: Yes. AD may facilitate payment for services (that is, professional, subscription, membership fees, royalties, registration of patents, serial rights, and advertising) up to the amount indicated on the bill.

Residents employed by offshore and foreign-based institutions in The Bahamas may invest in employee stock options or share purchase plans through the official exchange market up to the equivalent of B$10,000 a person a year, on a noncumulative basis for contributory plans. Otherwise, residents may not purchase foreign currency securities with official exchange, export proceeds, or other current earnings; payment must be made with investment currency. All purchases, sales, and swaps of foreign currency securities by residents require CBB permission and are normally effected through authorized agents, who are free to act on behalf of nonresidents in relation to such transactions without additional approval from the CBB at a 5% premium. Certificates relating to ownership of all foreign securities purchased by residents must be held by, or to the order of, an AD.

Investment by pension funds of Bahamian dollar assets in securities issued by nonresidents or in an investment portfolio held abroad must receive CBB approval, and approved transactions must be conducted through the ICM. Limits are imposed by the CBB, in concert with primary regulators (for example, the SC), with respect to portfolios held abroad by investment firms and collective investment funds.

Effective May 4, 2020, in relation to the COVID-19 situation, the CBB suspended approvals of applications to purchase foreign currency for transactions via the ICM and the Bahamas Depositary/Depository Receipt programs, suspending access to foreign exchange for international capital market investments by Bahamians.

Sale proceeds from resident-held foreign currency securities that were registered at the CBB before December 31, 1972, or that were acquired through the ICM are eligible for sale in the ICM. Unregistered securities may be offered for sale at the official rate of exchange.

Nonresident buyers of Bahamian-dollar-denominated securities must fund the acquisition of such securities from foreign currency sources. Interest, dividends, and capital payments on these securities may not be remitted outside The Bahamas, unless the holdings have been properly acquired by nonresidents. There is no minimum holding period for such bonds.

Customs Affairs launched the whitelist initiative in 2019 in cooperation with Governmental Regulatory Authorities (OGA), reducing the OGA inspections in boarders, for certain importers and products to enable quicker clearance of shipments. In addition, encouraging inspections at the importer facility instead of the borders.

The Ministry of Health - Department of Environmental Health exempted a list of importers from OGA procedures for importing cosmetics, soups, and cleaning preparations products (June 2019). The Supreme Council for the Environment – Chemicals Section: exempted a list of importers from OGA procedures for importing chemical products, (November 2019). The National Health Regulatory Authority (NHRA) and Bahrain Customs updated the local tariff list by introducing new local HS codes for some medical devices to differentiate between multiple typed of devices (for example, those devices for human uses and those for animal uses, and the device itself and the spare parts).

NHRA restricted product list for medical devices was reduced to include only the required medical devices, and the control is limited to specific items for import (November 2019). The Ministry of Industry, Commerce and Tourism - Department of Inspection and Metrology, exempted a list of importers from OGA procedures for importing cars, electronic devices, electric cables and other products (May 2020).

The Ministry of Health - Smoking and Tobacco Control Group, exempted from OGA procedures imports of personal belongings containing tobacco products, as long as the imported quantities do not exceeds the OGA measures for personal belongings (June 2020). An Authorized Economic Operator (AEO) program was established January 26, 2018. Any company that joins the AEO program becomes an authorized economic operator and it is defined as one of the participating parties in the movement of international trade in a manner that conforms to international customs regulations or to equivalent adopted standards of supply chain security. AEO includes importers, exporters, manufacturers, brokers, transportation companies, ports, airports, ports operators, warehouses, and distributors. It permits the release of goods against financial or written guarantees upon completion of customs declaration procedures and is exempt from examination and physical inspection.

Banks and other financial institutions have been instructed to block all capital transfers and to freeze financial assets of individuals, groups, and organizations associated with terrorism, pursuant to the relevant UNSC resolutions. Banks have been instructed to follow the following provisions in case of international fund transfers.

No account may be opened or operated for a listed individual or entity suspected to be involved in terrorism or activities connected with its financing within the purview of different resolutions of the UNSC. Person or entities listed under various resolutions of the UNSC refer to the listed persons or entities under the resolutions defined under Article 2(g) of Anti-Terrorism Rules, 2013. If any account or transaction of any individual/entity directly or indirectly under their control/association is identified, banks must stop the transaction in that account and inform the Bangladesh Financial Intelligence Unit (BFIU) with detailed information within the next working day.

As soon as any news on the Financing of Terrorism and Financing of Proliferation of Weapons of Mass Destruction is published in the media and if any account of any person or entity related to that activity is maintained with the bank, detailed information must be reported to the BFIU without any delay.

No correspondent banking relationship may be established or maintained with any Shell Bank.

Conduct and review transaction, when necessary, to identify if there is any account or any other relationship, under Resolution No. 1373 (2001) of UNSC, on request of foreign government or foreign FIU or any listed or proscribed individual or entity as per the list sent from the BFIU or as per the listed or proscribed individual/entity by the Bangladesh Government. As soon as any account is identified of any listed or proscribed individual or entity, the bank must stop the transaction in that account and inform the BFIU with detailed information within the next working day. As of February 11, 2016,

- Conventional peg:
- Stabilized arrangement:
- Crawling peg:
- Crawl-like arrangement: Yes. The de jure exchange rate arrangement is classified as floating. The Bangladesh Bank (BB) intervenes in the foreign exchange market to contain undue fluctuations in the exchange rate. The de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a crawl-like arrangement. Apart from the Annual Report, the BB publishes information on its intervention on quarterly and semiannually basis, respectively. Publication lags are: 2–3 months for Bangladesh Bank Quarterly, 3–4 weeks for Monetary Policy Statements, and 5–7 months for Annual Report.

Official exchange rate
Yes. The BB calculates the exchange rates of the taka against major foreign currencies for the purpose of valuation adjustment of foreign exchange reserves, for carrying out transactions related to government’s external loans, grants, and aids (receipt/service) in terms of local currency and for market intervention (sale/purchase, when required). To determine the exchange rate of Bangladesh taka...
(BDT) for a particular date, the latest New York closing exchange rate of major currencies against the US dollar and the US$/BDT exchange rate of the preceding day, which prevailed in the local interbank foreign exchange market, are taken into account. The weighted average US$/BDT exchange rate of the local interbank foreign exchange market is used for the valuation of US$ while cross-rates of other currencies against BDT are used for the valuation of those currencies. The cross-rate is calculated using the US$/BDT exchange rate (low as bid and high as ask) of the local interbank foreign exchange market. The BB publishes exchange rates of the taka against major currencies through its website.

Monetary aggregate target

Yes. The intermediate target of BB's monetary policy is to control monetary aggregate, that is, broad money (M2) in order to achieve its ultimate goal, that is, price stability. BB uses its monetary policy instruments and open market operation tools to maintain the ceiling of M2 growth target by controlling the growth rate of reserve money as an operating target. BB publishes its Monetary Policy Statement on annual basis.

Exchange tax No.

Exchange subsidy No.

Foreign exchange market Yes. ADs are allowed to freely determine their bid-ask spread with bank and nonbank clients.

Spot exchange market Yes. Commercial banks participating in the local foreign exchange market may freely determine the exchange rate for interbank and customer-level transactions based on supply and demand. The BB grants licenses to deal in foreign exchange. There are 1,021 branches of commercial banks (known as AD banks) licensed to deal in foreign exchange with bank and nonbank customers. There are 235 money changers (MCs) and 113 limited MCs granted with licenses to buy foreign currency from tourists and to sell up to US$1,000 a person as a travel allowance to Bangladesh nationals. MCs are not allowed to transact directly with the CB and are not allowed to maintain account abroad. However, MCs can maintain foreign currency account with ADs in Bangladesh.

Operated by the central bank Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility No. Currently, there is no foreign exchange standing facility for commercial banks. To ensure smooth functioning of the interbank market, the BB occasionally buys and sells foreign exchange from/to commercial banks considering the exchange position of the banks concerned, underlying transactions, market demand, and liquidity of the overall market.

Allocation Yes. The BB provides foreign currency support to exporters to bolster export through Export Development Fund. The current limit of the Export Development Fund is US$4.5 billion. The BB has introduced another two foreign exchange funds. Under the financing agreement with the International Development Association (IDA) regarding implementation of the Financial Sector Support Project (FSSP), the BB provides long-term financing in foreign currency (Long-Term Financing Facility – LTFF) to the eligible banks for on-lending/refinancing to mainly small- and medium-scale manufacturing enterprises in the country. This facility is available for purchasing capital machinery and equipment for upgradation, expansion, or for newly setup manufacturing industries, relocating factories to designated industrial zones, etc., with a maturity from 3 to 10 years. Since 2016, the BB has established a revolving fund of US$200 million named the Green Transformation Fund (GTF) to accelerate sustainable growth in export-oriented textile and leather sectors conducive to transformation of green economy in the country. This fund allows the AD banks to lend to their customers for importing capital machineries and accessories in foreign exchange and the BB refines the fund to the AD banks. The BB occasionally engaged itself in the foreign exchange market to ensure stability of exchange rate of taka by absorbing excess liquidity and vice versa when needed. In 2018, the BB sold US$2371 million to commercial banks. The CB usually does not enter into any deals directly with the government and other public entities.

There is an effective interbank foreign exchange market where all 61 commercial banks participate to buy or sell foreign exchange on spot, swap, and forward basis. Since the adoption of the floating exchange rate system May 31, 2003, the exchange rate is determined based on demand and supply of the respective currencies in the market. Swap transactions are also very common and the size of swap transactions is larger than spot transactions. There is no brokerage system currently in the foreign exchange market. To maintain orderly market conditions, the BB remains vigilant over the movements in the foreign exchange market. The BB intervenes occasionally in the market to ensure market liquidity and to smooth the market in the case of unusual volatility.

These deals are made on a bilateral basis, and there is no broker or other market-making arrangement.

ADs may buy and sell foreign currency forward in accordance with international practices. Currency swaps and forward exchange transactions of ADs with nonbank customers must be backed by approved underlying commercial transactions. Although the limits on outstanding swap transactions have been relaxed, counterparty limits on swap transactions between ADs are determined according to the core risk management guidelines prescribed by the BB. Condition to cover forward sale by forward purchase was waived through FE Circular No. 18 of October 1, 2009. The BB buys and sells on a spot basis only in the foreign exchange market and does not participate in the foreign exchange derivatives market.

There is no official cover of forward operations.

Arrangements for Payments and Receipts

Settlements generally take place in convertible currencies and, in some cases, through nonresident taka accounts (NRTA). The board of directors of the ACU allows the use of euros in addition to US dollars for the settlement of transactions among ACU member countries. Settlements with ACU member countries must be effected through the ACU and in units denominated in AMUs (ACU dollars and ACU euros are equivalent in value to US$1 and €1, respectively.) The minimum threshold amount for transactions through ACU member CBs under ACU arrangement was set at 500 ACU dollars or ACU euros. As the payment channel for processing “ACU Euro” transactions had been suspended by some correspondents, ADs were advised to suspend operations in “ACU Euro” temporarily. Accordingly, all eligible current account transactions in “ACU Euro” were permitted to be settled outside the ACU mechanism until further notice. To facilitate transactions under ACU mechanism, along with “ACU Dollar,” ADs are advised to resume transactions in “ACU Euro” to settle current account transactions among ACU member countries. In addition, Japanese yen is also a settlement currency in the ACU mechanism.

Controls on the use of domestic currency Yes. Domestic currency held in the NRTAs of overseas bank branches and correspondents against inward remittance in convertible currencies may be used to settle eligible international transactions.

For current transactions and payments Yes. Payments for imports may be made to any country (with the exception of countries from which imports are prohibited). They may be made in (1) taka for credit in Bangladesh to a nonresident bank account of the country concerned, (2) the currency of the country concerned, or (3) any freely convertible currency. Export proceeds must be received in freely convertible foreign exchange or in taka from a NRTA.

For capital transactions Yes.

Transactions in capital and money market instruments Yes.

Transactions in derivatives and other instruments Yes. ADs may hedge the price risk of commodities (traded on exchanges or OTC) of their customers through standard exchange-traded futures and options and OTC commodity derivatives, subject to the BB approval. The use of commodity derivatives is permitted when customers have genuine underlying commodity-price risk exposure. Speculation through the use of commodity derivative instruments is not permitted by the BB.

Credit operations Yes.

Use of foreign exchange among residents Yes. The use of foreign exchange among residents is generally not allowed.

Payments arrangements Yes.

Bilateral payments arrangements Yes.

Operative Yes. There is a bilateral payments arrangement with Myanmar. Under a MoU signed between Bangladesh and India, there are zones (markets) for border trade between the two countries. Both countries’ exchange regulations are suspended in these zones for trading of goods up to the equivalent of US$100 a day an individual.

Inoperative No.

Regional arrangements Yes. The ACU was established at the initiative of the UN Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific (ESCAP). The Draft Agreement establishing the ACU was finalized in December 1974 after five CBs (India, Iran, Nepal, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka) signed the Agreement. In subsequent years, Bangladesh and Myanmar were the sixth and seventh signatories. Bhutan and Maldives signed the Clearing agreements: Yes.

The CBs of Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Iran, Maldives, Myanmar, Nepal, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka have reached an Agreement to settle current transactions between these countries through the ACU mechanism. ACU is a payment arrangement whereby the participants settle payments for intra-regional transactions among the participating CBs on a net multilateral basis. The main objectives of the clearing union are to facilitate payments among member countries for eligible transactions, thereby economizing on the use of foreign exchange reserves and transfer costs, as well as promoting trade and banking relations among the participating countries.

Barter agreements and open accounts: No.

Administration of control: Yes.

Foreign exchange policy is administered by the BB in accordance with the Foreign Exchange Regulation Act (FERA) (1947). Banks may deal in foreign exchange. The chief controller of imports and exports of the Ministry of Commerce is responsible for registering exporters and importers and for issuing import policy orders (IPOs). Registered importers may operate according to the terms of an IPO. LC authorization forms (LCAFs) are issued by ADs and do not require separate import licenses.

Payments arrears: No.

Official: No.

Private: No.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion): Yes.

On domestic ownership and/or trade: Yes.

There are no restrictions on the internal sale, purchase, or possession of gold or silver ornaments (including coins) and jewelry.

On external trade: Yes.

The importation and exportation of gold and silver require special permission under the FERA, 1947, which was later amended September 9, 2015. However, women may bring in or take out any amount of personal jewelry they are wearing or carrying in their personal luggage, without approval. Exports of gold jewelry and imports of gold and silver for exports of jewelry manufacture are allowed under the Jewelry Export Scheme. Incoming passengers irrespective of their resident status may bring into Bangladesh gold or silver in bullion/ingot up to the prescribed limit in terms of relevant baggage rules in force issued under the Customs Act, 1969. The BB issues authorized gold dealer licenses for importation of gold bar and jewelry to AD banks and interested organizations.

Controls on exports and imports of banknotes: Yes.

On exports: Yes.

Domestic currency: Yes.

Residents and nonresidents may take out up to Tk 10,000 in domestic currency.

Foreign currency: Yes.

Residents may take out foreign currency and traveler’s checks (TCs) up to the amount of their travel allocation and up to the equivalent of, effective February 3, 2020, US$10,000 (previously US$5,000) brought in without declaration when returning from a visit abroad. Nonresidents may take out the foreign currency and TCs they declared on entry or up to the equivalent of, effective February 3, 2020, US$10,000 (previously US$5,000) brought in without declaration. The limit on foreign exchange (cash, TCs, notes, cards, etc.) that may be taken out from private foreign currency accounts, nonresident foreign currency deposit (NFCD) accounts, and resident foreign currency deposit (RFCD) accounts for travel abroad by presenting a ticket and other travel documents is US$5,000. General permission has been granted to reconvert unspent taka (up to US$100 or its equivalent) at the bank booth in the departure lounge of international airports in Bangladesh, even if the foreign currency was converted at a different AD or MC. Licensed MCs, including bank booth at the airports, are allowed to reconvert the unspent taka to foreign currencies up to US$500 or equivalent for tourists, whether it was encashed earlier or not.

On imports

- Domestic currency: Yes.
- Foreign currency: No.

Foreign currency traveler’s checks and notes may be brought in freely up to the equivalent of, effective February 3, 2020, US$10,000 (previously US$5,000); larger amounts must be declared to customs on arrival.

Resident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted

- Yes.

Held domestically

- Yes.

Residents returning from abroad may bring in any amount of foreign currency and deposit it in an RFCD account. However, proceeds of exports of goods and services and commissions arising from business deals in Bangladesh may not be credited to such accounts. Balances in these accounts are freely transferable abroad and may be used for travel in the usual manner. These accounts may be opened in US dollars, euros, pounds sterling, and Japanese yen. Foreign exchange accounts may also be opened (1) by local and joint-venture contracting firms executing projects financed by a foreign donor or international agency; (2) by returning nonresident Bangladeshis (NRBs) with foreign exchange brought in from abroad; (3) in the name of diplomatic missions in Bangladesh and their expatriate personnel, the UN and its agencies, and diplomatic bonded warehouses (duty-free shops); and (4) in the name of resident Bangladeshis working with foreign or international organizations in Bangladesh, if their salaries are paid in foreign currency. ADs may apply interest on the balances of the RFCD accounts at Eurocurrency deposit rates. Exporters of goods and services may deposit a certain percentage of the repatriated export proceeds in exporters’ retention quota (ERQ) accounts. Shipbuilders may open and maintain foreign exchange accounts to receive and hold advance export payments from buyers abroad. Balances in these accounts may be used for importing raw materials and components for ship building. These accounts must be closed within one month of delivery of the ship to the foreign importer. To facilitate foreign exchange transactions for transportation services for imports and exports, general authorization is given to shipping lines/airlines/licensed freight forwarders to open and maintain foreign currency accounts to deposit/make payment of foreign currency on account of freights for f.o.b. imports/exports. Importers may pay freight charges as declared in an LCAF issued for f.o.b. imports to shipping lines/airlines/licensed freight forwarders in foreign currency. Shipping lines/airlines may also accept payments in foreign currency from freight forwarders against handling of f.o.b. exports. Foreign currency deposited in foreign currency accounts of shipping lines/airlines against freight charges on f.o.b. exports from... licensed freight forwarders may be used for outward remittances on account of surplus earnings. Balances held in the foreign currency accounts must first be used for outward remittances before use of local currency funds. AD banks must ensure the encashment of adequate foreign currency by the shipping lines/airlines to meet local expenses in case of shortfall in local currency funds.

To keep minimum involvement of AD’s own funds for settlement of import, ADs maintaining ERQ accounts may transfer funds from ERQ accounts to other ADs of same exporters or their subsidiaries/sister concerns for settlement of import payment. The transferable funds can be used only for the settlement of import payments.

ADs may use balances held in ERQ accounts or funds of unencumbered foreign currency transferred from ERQ accounts maintained with other ADs of the same borrowers on account of repayment of foreign loan. Such remittances may also be effected by nominated ADs out of funds transferred from ERQ accounts of borrowers’ subsidiaries/sister concerns.

Equity from foreign shareholders of “Type A” and “Type B” enterprises and authorized loan received in foreign currency from external sources by Export Processing Zone (EPZ) enterprises are permitted to be credited in their foreign currency accounts. “Type C” enterprises of EPZs are allowed to obtain foreign exchange from ADs to settle obligations for importing capital machinery by the conversion of equivalent equity and/or authorized loan received in local currency and to access short-term foreign currency loans from their subsidiaries/associates operating in the same EPZ/EZ (Economic Zone). “Type B” enterprises are allowed to convert their local equity/authorized loan received in local currency to foreign exchange to settle obligations for importing capital machinery if equity/authorized foreign loan received from abroad falls short of meeting such obligations.

Effective November 17, 2019, ADs may credit legitimate receipts against short weight claims, quality claims, freight charge of sample, insurance claims, reimbursement of expenses for samples from buyers or parents etc. received in foreign currency or local currency accounts of the enterprises operating in specialized economic zones like Export Processing Zones (EPZs), Economic Zones (EZs), and Hi-Tech Parks (HTPs).

Funds from Private Foreign Currency accounts may be used for payment of admissible imports in terms of the IPO in force. The payment for legitimate services is also admitted, subject to compliance with regulations on taxes’ deduction. Balances held in these accounts may also be used for payment in advance against import of legitimate goods and services.

| ADs may open convertible taka accounts in the name of foreign organizations or nationals (that is, diplomatic missions, UN organizations, nonprofit international organizations, foreign contractors, consultants) engaged in projects of the government or | government agencies and their expatriate personnel who are resident in Bangladesh. These accounts may be credited with foreign currency brought in or remitted from abroad or transferred from a foreign exchange account or another convertible taka account. Taka accounts of Type B and Type C industry units of EPZs are allowed to be credited with authorized payment received in taka. These accounts may be debited for (1) local payments in taka, (2) remittances abroad in convertible currency, (3) transfers to foreign exchange accounts or other convertible taka accounts, and (4) credits to nonconvertible taka accounts.

Nonresident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted Yes. Bangladesh nationals residing abroad; foreign nationals, companies, and firms registered or incorporated abroad; banks and other financial institutions, including institutional investors; officers and staff of Bangladesh missions, government institutions, autonomous bodies, and commercial banks posted abroad or transferred to international or regional agencies may open and maintain during their assignment abroad NFCD accounts that earn interest and are denominated in US dollars, euros, pounds sterling, or Japanese yen. These accounts may be credited in initial minimum amounts equivalent to US$1,000 (US$25,000 for foreigners) with remittances in convertible currencies and transfers from existing foreign currency deposit accounts of Bangladeshis. The accounts earn interest if their terms range from one month to one year. The balance, including interest earned, may be transferred in foreign exchange by the account holder to any country or to any foreign currency deposit account maintained by a Bangladeshi abroad. The balances in the accounts, which are freely convertible to taka, must be reported monthly by banks to the BB. These accounts may be maintained as long as the account holder desires. All nonresident accounts are regarded for exchange control purposes as accounts related to the country in which the account holder is a permanent resident. (The accounts of the UN and its agencies are treated as resident accounts.) NRBs may open NFCD accounts with AD banks at home to credit their retirement benefits, periodical pensions, superannuation benefits etc., as per employment agreement with employers while on service abroad. The balances held in the accounts can be used for settlement of legitimate payment abroad. Bank booths operating in airports under license with limited scope from the BB are allowed to take deposits from NRBs in foreign currency brought in by them and credit their foreign currency accounts or NRTAs (by converting foreign currency at the prevailing exchange rate) maintained with concerned AD bank branches. In case the foreign currency brought in by NRBs differs from the account type (that is, US dollar a/c, British pound sterling a/c, etc.) of the account holders, bank booths will convert the currency to the relevant foreign currency at the appropriate cross currency exchange rate to effect the deposits. Effective July 7, 2020, dividend payable to foreign shareholders may be credited to their foreign currency accounts maintained in Bangladesh. Crediting these accounts is recorded as outward remittance, while encashment of balances in these accounts is recorded as inward remittance.

Approval required No.

Domestic currency accounts Yes. Foreign missions and embassies and their expatriate personnel, foreign airlines and shipping companies, and international nonprofit organizations in Bangladesh may open interest-bearing convertible taka accounts, but the interest earned may be disbursed in local currency only. Taka accounts of individuals, firms, or companies residing outside Bangladesh are designated as nonresident accounts. For portfolio investments in Bangladesh through the stock exchange, a nonresident may open a nonresident investor’s taka account (NITA) with any AD with foreign exchange remitted from abroad through normal banking channels or through transfer of funds from a foreign exchange account. The balance in the NITA may be used freely to buy Bangladesh shares and other securities. These balances are also freely transferable to foreign exchange accounts opened in the name of (1) Bangladesh nationals residing abroad and Bangladesh nationals working and earning abroad, including self-employed Bangladesh migrants residing abroad; (2) foreign nationals residing abroad or in Bangladesh; (3) foreign firms registered abroad and operating in Bangladesh or abroad; and (4) foreign missions and their expatriate employees. Balances in these accounts are remittable abroad in equivalent foreign exchange. The list of permissible debits from NRTAs is expanded to include, subject to approval or reporting requirements, outward remittances in foreign currency for (1) subsistence expenses for individual account holders and their family members in their country of residence and (2) permissible procurement of goods and services from abroad for institutional account holders. Temporary NRTA may also be opened by scheduled bank branches, apart from ADs for direct and portfolio investment in Bangladesh by foreign investors.

Convertible into foreign currency  Yes. Funds from NITAs and convertible taka accounts may be converted freely.

Approval required  No.

Blocked accounts  Yes. Funds in NRTAs from unapproved payments may be blocked by the BB.

Imports and Import Payments

Foreign exchange budget  No.

Financing requirements for imports  Yes. For private sector imports on usance terms, the interest rate may be LIBOR plus a markup, according to prevailing market conditions and subject to an overall interest maximum of 6% a year. Importers may also obtain buyer credit for import payments from abroad through ADs for a period not exceeding one year; the overall interest cost may not exceed 6% a year.

To facilitate short-term import finance, ADs, on behalf of industrial importers, may issue repayment bank guarantees without the BB approval favoring International Islamic Trade Finance Corporation extending short-term buyer’s credit up to 180 days for import of industrial raw materials for own use by importers, on sight basis. ADs may open LCs on behalf of industrial units to import necessary spare parts of capital machineries for own industrial use up to 360 days usance basis. For such deferred payment imports, the prices must be internationally competitive and all in cost including usance interest must not exceed 6% p.a.

Exporters are allowed to use the unencumbered balances held in the single pool within 30 days to meet the import payments of exporters’ subsidiaries/sister concerns.

Minimum financing requirements  No. Banks may determine the margin requirement on LCs for imports by themselves on the basis of the bank-customer relationship.

Advance payment requirements

Yes. Advance payments up to the equivalent of, effective November 25, 2019, US$10,000 (previously US$5,000) for imports of any permissible items do not require a repayment guarantee. The limit of advance payment from ERQ accounts is US$25,000 or its equivalent.

Advance import deposits

No. Banks may determine such requirements on the basis of the bank-customer relationship.

Documentation requirements for release of foreign exchange for imports

Yes. ADs must observe the following procedures during importation through land ports: (1) Only one port of entry (land port) may be named in the LC. (2) A copy of the LC and subsequent amendments, if any, including other relevant information, must be sent to the land port authority. (3) Sample signatures of the officials working at the import-export desks of the ADs concerned, along with their contact phone and fax numbers, must be supplied to all land ports. (4) ADs’ agents or representatives must obtain directly from the land port involved a list of goods entering Bangladesh, a certified invoice, and a bill of entry showing entry of the goods for inclusion in a database accessible to all ADs. (5) LCs must not contain any reimbursement or debit authority; rather, they must stipulate the following payment terms: “on receipt of documents complying with credit terms, we must effect payment as per instructions of the negotiating bank or collecting bank.” (6) LCs covering more than US$5,000 or its equivalent must be sent through the Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication (SWIFT) system to the advising bank. Pursuant to Order No. 288/2017/Customs/529 of December 21, 2017, transactions between enterprises operating in Domestic Processing Area of EZs and in Tariff Area of Bangladesh may be settled in taka without observance of regulatory procedures such as EXP Form for export and IMP Form for import. To support the transactions by EZ enterprises, irrespective of their ownership status, their liabilities for imports and other permissible expenses may be settled out of the fund held in their taka accounts.

Domiciliation requirements

No.

Preshipment inspection

No. Preshipment inspection is optional but not mandatory since July 1, 2013, as instructed by the National Board of Revenue.

Letters of credit

Yes. Payment against imports is generally permissible only under irrevocable LCs. However, consignments of perishable food items valued at not more than US$7,500 or its equivalent do not require an LC. Capital machinery and industrial raw materials may also be imported without LCs and without limit on value. Recognized export-oriented units operating under the bonded warehouse system may import up to four months’ supply of their raw and packing materials by establishing import LCs without reference to an export LC. They may also effect such imports by opening back-to-back LCs (either on a sight basis under the Export Development Fund or for up to 180 days on a usage basis) against export LCs received by them. ADs may establish LCs on a c.f.r., c.p.t., or f.o.b. basis without the BB approval. Imports may also be on a delivered at terminal (d.a.t.) or delivered at place (d.a.p.) basis. Importation on a c.i.f. or c.i.p. basis requires the permission of the Ministry of Commerce. Foreign exchange for authorized imports is provided automatically by ADs when payments are due. The maximum import value (through an LC or contract) for a mandatory credit report of foreign suppliers by ADs is US$10,000 if a pro forma invoice is issued directly by the foreign supplier and US$20,000 if orders are issued by the foreign supplier’s local agent.

To facilitate the remittances for import payment against expired LCAF which are restricted without obtaining its revalidation, ADs may effect remittances within 30 months of LCAF issuance against import of capital machinery without obtaining its revalidation. Revalidation of LCAF will not be required for remittances against import out of fund held in foreign currency accounts of importers maintained under general or special authorization from the BB. LCAFs issued for the import of hot-rolled coil, scrap, pig iron, and sponge iron for manufacturing of flat and long steel for use in own factories of steel industries on a 360-day deferred payment basis are valid for remittances for 18 months following the month of issuance. Effective February 5, 2019, LCAFs may also be signed by lawful representative(s) of the importer.

Import licenses used as exchange licenses No. LCAFs are issued by ADs and do not require a separate import license.

Other Yes. ADs are not permitted to open new LCs for importers who have failed to submit the bills of entry of imports or customs-certified invoices as evidence of actual importation of such goods within the stipulated time period.

Import licenses and other nontariff measures Yes. All importers (including all government departments, with the exception of the Ministry of Defence) are required to obtain LCAFs for imports. Under the authority of the IPO issued by the chief controller, importers may effect imports against LCAFs issued for imports under bilateral trade or payments agreements and for imports under tied-aid programs. LCAFs are otherwise valid worldwide, except for imports from Israel and imports transported on Israeli flag vessels, which are prohibited. Goods must be shipped within 30 months of the date of issuance of LCAFs in the case of machinery and spare parts, and 12 months in the case of all other items. ADs may effect import payment within 30 months of issuance of LCAF against import of capital machinery and spare parts. Revaluation of LCAF will not be required for such remittances against import out of fund held in importer’s foreign currency accounts maintained under general or special authorization from the BB. LCAFs issued for import of capital machinery and spares are valid for remittances for 18 months from the month of issuance. Incoming passengers irrespective of their resident status may bring into Bangladesh gold or silver in bullion/ingot up to the prescribed limit in terms of relevant baggage rules in force issued under the Customs Act, 1969.

Positive list No. All the items are importable freely pursuant to the provisions of the IPO 2015–2018 (replacing IPO 2012–2015), except the banned items therein the footnote of the prohibited lists and the list of controlled items subject to fulfillment of certain conditions specified attached concerned page of the IPO 2015–2018 (Annexure-1).

Negative list Yes. The goods are not importable if they are specified in the footnotes of the prohibited lists (Annexure-1).

Open general licenses No. Unless otherwise specified, no import license is required for imports. Importers with a valid Import Registration Certificate (IRC) may import any kind of goods against the ceiling value, except the goods specified in the prohibited lists.

Licenses with quotas Yes. Unless otherwise specified in the IPO 2015–2018, industrial units approved on a regular basis are allowed to import up to 300% of their regular import entitlement of items whose import is banned for commercial purpose and that are importable by industrial consumers only. Industrial units approved on an ad hoc basis are allowed to import up to the maximum value limit, not exceeding 100% of their half-yearly import entitlement.

Other nontariff measures No. As a member of the WTO and regional trade organizations, Bangladesh is liberalizing its trade policies gradually and is maintaining non-discriminating measures. The country is also not applying nontariff measures to restrict imports and exports, except the prohibited and restricted items of goods therein the Annexure-1 in line with the WTO Agreements.

| Import taxes and/or tariffs | Yes. | The tariff bands are 0%, 1%, 5%, 10%, 15%, and 25%. A number of goods are subject to supplementary duties. |

Surrender to the central bank

No.

Surrender to authorized dealers

Yes.  Exporters must sell to ADs at least 85% of the proceeds from exports of ready-made garments (RMGs) and other goods with high import content and 40% of the proceeds from exports of merchandise, computer data entry/data processing, offshore information technology (IT) services, software services, business process outsourcing (BPO) services such as business services, professional/research, advisory services, etc. They may use retained earnings for bona fide business purposes, such as business travel abroad; establishment and maintenance of offices abroad; participation in trade fairs and seminars; and imports of raw materials, spare parts, and capital goods. Fully foreign-owned industries and joint ventures and Bangladesh industries, other than in the garment industry, located in EPZs may retain 100% and 80%, respectively, of their export earnings in a foreign currency deposit account. Joint ventures and Bangladesh industries in EPZs that are part of the RMG sector may retain 75% of their export earnings in a foreign currency deposit account. The BB allows receipt of proceeds from small-value service exports, such as data entry/data processing, offshore IT services, BPO, etc., through online payment service providers up to US$5,000 or equivalent an instance. Service providers receive payments through banks set up to receive online payments from abroad. ADs may handle inward remittances for BPO by residents. The ERQ without prior approval from the BB is 60% for exports of high domestic value-added merchandise and for export of services (for example, computer data entry/data processing, offshore IT services, software services, BPO services such as business services, professional/research, advisory services), and 15% for merchandise exports of high import contents like RMG. To provide immediate access to foreign exchange by exporters, usance export bills related to direct and deemed exportation of Bangladesh products may be discounted in foreign exchange by an exporter’s AD with funds received from foreign banking units and correspondent banks and financial institutions and from international financial organizations. The overall cost may not exceed 6% a year.
Besides industrial units, EPZ developers and different service providing units (water supply/treatment, dust management, cleaning, effluent treatment plant, etc.) are allowed to operate in EPZs to serve the industrial units therein. To facilitate such developers/service providers of EPZs, EPZ developers and different service providing companies of EPZs, exclusively formed and registered to serve a particular EPZ, will be treated as industrial units of EPZs for foreign exchange regulation purposes. Existing foreign exchange regulations applicable for EPZ units (as mentioned in Guidelines for Foreign Exchange Transactions (GFET), FE Circulars, FE Circular Letters, etc.) are applicable for such entities as well. There is no restriction on the particular type of ownership; the EPZ developer and service providing units may be local, foreign, or jointly owned.

To promote Business-to-Consumer export by hosting goods on e-Commerce website accessible through Internet to foreign buyers, ADs may provide acquiring services to eligible exporters for repatriation of export proceeds against sales orders of exportable goods received on e-Commerce website subject to some operational procedures.

Besides bills of lading and airway bills issued by the carriers concerned, negotiation of export bills may also take place against freight forwarders, provided (1) the export LC and the export sale contract specify negotiation of export bills of exchange against the forwarders’ cargo receipt or house airway bill, and, until September 9, 2015, (2) the freight forwarder issuing the forwarders’ cargo receipt or house airway bill has the BB authorization under Section 18A of the FERA, 1947. Section 18A of the FERA, 1947, was deleted September 9, 2015, removing the requirement to obtain permission under this section. The responsibility to repatriate full export proceeds within the period specified by the BB in terms of the FERA lies with the exporters. ADs must give the BB a full explanation only in the event of non-realization/short realization.

If the shipment is made against full payment received in advance through normal banking channel, ADs can allow carrier companies to draw railway receipts, bills of lading, airway bills, and other documents of title for the cargo to the order of importer or other designated parties as per stipulations of export LC/valid sales contract. In this context, the designated AD issues a certificate to the exporter to be produced to the carrier company, enabling them to draw the shipping documents accordingly.

Pursuant to Order No. 288/2017/Customs/529 of December 21, 2017, transactions between enterprises operating in Domestic Processing Area of EZs and in Tariff Area of Bangladesh may be settled in taka without observance of regulatory procedures such as EXP Form for export and IMP Form for import. Effective April 23, 2019, the BB introduced an electronic option for EXP Form submission for exports of goods from Bangladesh.

Payments for Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

Controls on these transfers Yes. Payments for invisible transactions related to authorized trade transactions are generally not restricted.

Trade-related payments Yes. ADs may pay freight charges to foreign shipowners for ships chartered by importers in Bangladesh without the BB approval. Importers may make payments of freight charges for f.o.b. imports as declared in an LCAF to the shipping lines/airlines/licensed freight forwarders in foreign currency. Shipping lines/airlines may also accept payment in foreign currency from freight forwarders for handling of f.o.b. exports. Foreign currency deposited in foreign currency accounts of shipping lines/airlines against freight charges on f.o.b. exports from licensed freight forwarders may be used for outward remittances on account of surplus earnings. Balances in foreign currency accounts must first be used for outward remittances before use of local currency funds. AD banks must ensure the encashment of adequate foreign currency by the shipping lines/airlines to meet local expenses in case of shortfall in local currency funds. In view of wider scope of fund sources in Bangladesh, the legitimate charges (charges of demurrage, detention, handling or equivalent charges) in addition to freight charges are also allowed to be considered for calculation of remittable surplus of foreign shipping lines/their agents working in Bangladesh subject to deduction of taxes and commission.

The list of permissible debits from NRTAs includes, subject to approval or reporting requirements, outward remittances in foreign currency for the purposes of permissible procurement of goods and services from abroad for institutional account holders.

To facilitate smooth operations of branches of foreign banking companies in Bangladesh, ADs are allowed to remit head office expenses without prior approval from the BB subject to observance of some instructions which is allocated by the head office to their branches in accordance with standard practices. Effective July 17, 2019, funds from Personal Foreign Currency accounts may be used for payment of admissible imports in terms of the IPO in force.

Effective March 19, 2020, to facilitate trade transaction in the context of COVID-19, the following were extended: (1) the tenure of realization of export proceeds up to 60 days, (2) the tenure of submission of bill of entry up to 60 days, and (3) the usance period of back-to-back LCs opened under supplier/buyer credit on bank-customer relationship within the admissible rate of interest of up to 180 days.

Prior approval Yes. Up to 5% of export receipts (up to 33.3% in the case of books) may be remitted abroad for commissions without the BB approval.

Quantitative limits No.
| Indicative limits/bona fide test | Yes. | Payment abroad of commissions or discounts and remittances for operating expenses is subject to indicative limits and verification. Purchases by individuals in border markets, from the respective local currency, are limited to the equivalent of US$100. Besides the ERQ, the remittable amount for IT and/or software firms is US$30,000. Within this limit, the amount that can be made through international cards is US$6,000. To facilitate export trade in meeting urgent needs, ADs are allowed to provide remittance facilities to the exporters for bona fide service payments to beneficiary’s bank account abroad up to US$5,000 or equivalent. |
| Investment-related payments | Yes. | ADs may remit dividends to nonresident shareholders without the BB approval on receipt of an application from the company concerned. Applications must be supported by an audited balance sheet; a profit and loss statement; and a board resolution declaring to the head office dividends from profits earned from foreign firms, banks, insurance companies, and other financial institutions operating in Bangladesh. Effective July 21, 2020, the requirement of document submission to BB for ex post verification of remittances on account of dividend was removed. Previously, these remittances were subject to ex post checks by the BB. No approval is required for remittances on loans if a loan agreement has been cleared by the Bangladesh Investment Development Authority (BIDA). Local stock brokerage firms acting in Bangladesh on behalf of foreign stock brokerage firms may repatriate, without the BB approval, a share of commission earnings to the respective foreign firms against services rendered to foreign portfolio investors for investment in Bangladesh. Private sector industrial enterprises approved by BIDA may release foreign exchange on account of royalty, fees for technical knowledge or technical assistance, and franchise fees to foreign persons or institutes in accordance with the prescribed manner as defined by BIDA through AD banks. |

| Payments for travel | Yes. | Effective July 25, 2019, the indicative limit for private travel was increased to US$12,000 or equivalent an adult passenger a calendar year from US$5,000 and US$7,000 for travel to SAARC member countries (South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation region – Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka) and Myanmar, and for travel to other countries, respectively. For minors (below 12 years of age), the applicable quota, as before, is half the amount for adults. The entire unused balance may be released to individuals traveling abroad with a one-way ticket, if it is for valid job or migration purposes. ADs may release foreign exchange without visa to the resident Bangladesh nationals proceeding to the countries/zones with provision of visa on port of entry/arrival basis up to the unused annual travel quota entitlement applicable for the country concerned subject to complying with other relevant instructions. The facility will also be applicable for official visits abroad by the officials of | government/semi-government and autonomous bodies. ADs and Licensed Money Changers may release foreign exchange on account of overseas allowances of the cockpit and cabin crews of Biman Bangladesh Airlines Ltd.

Releasable foreign currency in cash US dollar notes for outgoing Bangladeshi residents is US$5,000 a person a trip from their annual entitlement applicable for personal travel quota/business travel quota/treatment abroad/immigration/higher education or other specially or generally approved purposes. The remainder or full amount of quota may be released in other freely convertible foreign currencies in cash or in international cards. The business travel quota entitlement was revised in 2014. New exporters, importers, and producers for the local market are entitled to foreign exchange for travel abroad of US$400 a day, subject to a limit of US$4,000 a trip and US$10,000 a calendar year. Established exporters may also use balances in their ERQ (15% of exports of goods with high import content, such as RMGs, and 60% of repatriated export proceeds of merchandise and services) for business travel abroad. Senior-level (top two tiers) expatriates in Bangladesh under valid visas and work permits are entitled to the same business travel allowance as Bangladesh nationals, which may be used through international credit/debit cards. Higher amounts require documentation. Effective July 25, 2019, foreign exchange quota for business travel abroad is also applicable for local agents operating in Bangladesh on behalf of foreign principals. Previously, it was limited to licensed local indenting and buying agents.

Personal payments
Yes.

Prior approval
Yes. Foreigners retiring from Bangladesh do not need approval to transfer genuine savings from salaries/benefits, retirement benefits such as provident funds and pensions, and gratuities due under an employment contract approved by the BIDA. Permissible debits from NRTAs include, subject to approval or reporting requirements, outward remittances in foreign currency for subsistence expenses for individual account holders and their family members in their country of residence.

Quantitative limits
Yes. Up to US$10,000 or its equivalent may be obtained for medical expenses without approval. Larger amounts require the BB approval, subject to submission of supporting documents. ADs may remit the registration fee to the bank accounts of the beneficiaries for medical checkup of migrant workers, the fee in case of invoices specifying details of the checkup and deduction of applicable taxes.

Indicative limits/bona fide test
Yes. Foreign exchange for education is available up to the cost of tuition and living expenses, as estimated by the educational institution concerned. Students are allowed to have travel entitlement (entire unused travel quota) against a one-way ticket when proceeding abroad for study. Permission is not required for the remittance of fees for approved undergraduate, postgraduate, diploma, and professional courses.

ADs may release foreign exchange for study of Bangladeshi students in permissible courses abroad in favor of the designated intermediary payment processing entity. Because of the concern that students intending to study abroad are in some cases required to pay a Health Insurance fee as a prerequisite for Visa/Admission, ADs are allowed to release foreign exchange on account of Health Coverage/Health Insurance/Medical Insurance fee, provided such fees are mandatory for Visa/Admission in permissible courses supported by documentary evidence from the concerned educational institution. Foreign exchange is available for the support of dependents abroad.
on presentation of a certificate from the Bangladesh Embassy in the country concerned, up to a reasonable level, which is based on prevailing prices. Applications for foreign exchange for studies abroad and for family maintenance are approved on verification of their validity. Foreign exchange may be remitted for right of landing/permanent residence fees required by foreign immigration authorities for Bangladesh nationals permanently emigrating abroad. ADs may release foreign exchange toward remittance of publication-related fees for publication of articles in reputed international journals written by resident Bangladesh nationals. While effecting remittance, ADs verify the genuineness of the invoices from the publishing companies/publishers abroad and the deduction of applicable taxes.

Foreign workers’ wages: Yes.
Prior approval: No.
Quantitative limits: Yes.
Indicative limits/bona fide test: Yes.

Foreign nationals may remit freely up to 75% of their net salary on a monthly basis in connection with service contracts approved by the government. The entire amount of their earned leave pay and savings may also be freely remitted after the end of their service period in Bangladesh. Besides their country of domicile, such monthly remittances are also allowed to be sent to other countries where their family members live as declared by them in the prescribed application form. Service sector industries within the purview of industrial policy may remit up to 1% of annual sales as declared in their previous year’s income tax return toward costs of training and consulting services. Effective December 5, 2019, to facilitate payment of remuneration, net income of foreign nationals employed in branch offices/liaison offices of foreign companies duly approved by BIDA may be credited to their foreign currency accounts. Effective March 22, 2020, to facilitate the remittance on account of bonus payments, foreign nationals may remit up to 75% of their bonus after deduction and payment of applicable taxes in one transaction. Previously, it had to be spread over the subsequent 12 months.

Credit card use abroad: Yes. Resident and nonresident Bangladesh nationals and foreign nationals may use abroad international credit cards (ICCs), debit cards, and prepaid cards issued by ADs in Bangladesh under different entitlements or different account balances. ICCs may be used for online payment to settle remittances for membership fees of foreign professional and scientific institutions and fees for application, registration, admission, and examination in connection with admission to a foreign educational institution. Individuals who do not have their own ICCs may make such online payments with a “virtual card.” ICCs issued under different entitlements may also be used for online hotel booking by the cardholders when traveling abroad. Visa processing fees may be remitted through online using international cards or virtual cards. The limit of international credit cards for online payment was US$300 or its equivalent for transaction against legitimate purchases of goods and services (downloadable application software, e-books, magazine/newspaper subscription fees, etc.) from reputed and reliable sources abroad. ICC holders may also make online payments for such purchases up to their available unused annual travel allowance plus an additional amount not exceeding US$1,000 annually. ICC holders must fulfill tax/duty payment obligations for such payments. Eligible individual developers/freelancers of mobile applications (apps) and games may... remit foreign exchange for allowable IT expenses through the use of a virtual card, up to US$300 or its equivalent a calendar year. To enhance the scope of business travel abroad by officials of enterprises located in EPZs and EZs, card issuing banks are allowed to issue International Debit/Prepaid card up to three top tier officials of concerned enterprises against balances held in foreign currency accounts. EPZs and EZs enterprises can avail such card facility from one card issuing bank only. Effective April 7, 2019, ADs may issue International Debit/Prepaid/Credit cards in favor of Bangladeshi medical centers accredited by Gulf Health Council (GHC) to pay only the registration fee for medical checkup services of Bangladesh nationals proceeding abroad for employment in member countries of GCC. Effective November 24, 2019, ADs must make necessary arrangements to guard against illegitimate online payments abroad through International Cards from Bangladesh, for example, payments for participation in online casino/gambling, trading in foreign exchange/stock exchanges, purchase of cryptocurrencies/lottery tickets, and purchase of goods/services that originated in Bangladesh. Effective June 16, 2020, ADs may issue international debit cards in favor of eligible persons against their annual travel entitlements subject to observance of several instructions.

Prior approval

No.

General approval has been given for issuance of international credit, debit, and prepaid cards for use abroad by resident Bangladesh nationals issued against (1) balances in ERQs; (2) individual annual personal travel quota entitlements; (3) balances in RFCD accounts; (4) foreign exchange entitlements (established by the government for each person intending to perform Hajj) of approved private Hajj agencies for food and lodging expenses of pilgrims in Saudi Arabia; (5) foreign exchange entitlements established by the MOF or an appropriate authority for official or semiofficial visits abroad by government officials, autonomous and semiautonomous institutions, and so forth; (6) per diem foreign exchange entitlements for private sector participants attending seminars, conferences, and workshops abroad arranged by recognized international organizations; (7) personal entitlements established yearly by the government for pilgrims intending to perform Hajj; (8) against balance in private foreign currency accounts; (9) against annual entitlement for IT/software firms; (10) against membership fees, examination fees, etc; (11) against business travel quota entitlement; (12) against IT expenses; and (13) against visa processing fees. ADs may issue debit cards to NRBs and foreign nationals against the balances held in foreign exchange accounts opened and maintained with them. Effective June 16, 2020, ADs may issue international debit cards in favor of eligible persons against their annual travel entitlements subject to observance of several instructions.

Quantitative limits

Yes.

Indicative limits/bona fide test

Yes.

Transfers may be made up to the amount of the balance in respective foreign exchange accounts and respective entitlements.

Other payments

Yes.

Banks may remit registration fees for attendance at training, seminars, and workshops abroad by officials of government, autonomous/semiautonomous entities, and banks and banking training institutions. Banks may also remit registration fees for officials of the private corporate sector and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) who attend training, seminars, and workshops abroad without the BB permission. Only one-time approval is required from the BB for foreign exchange remittance for maintenance/support fees for proprietary/specialized software service providers, with subsequent remittances validated by AD banks. Permissible debits from NRTAs include, subject to approval and reporting requirements, outward remittances in foreign currency for permissible procurement of goods and services from abroad for institutional account holders. ADs may remit funds for membership/affiliation fees of local business/professional entities to professional/scientific institutions abroad. AD banks may effect remittance toward the cost of advertisement of Bangladeshi products in foreign electronic and online media in dynamic, image, video, interactive, and/or other formats, after verifying the genuineness and bona fide of the requests through agreement and invoices and after deducting all applicable taxes.

Prior approval
Yes.

Quantitative limits
Yes.

The BB permission is not required for the remittance of royalties and technical fees by firms registered with the BIDA as follows: (1) up to 6% of the cost of imported machinery or (2) up to 6% of the previous year’s sales, as declared in tax returns, for ongoing concerns, provided the contract is registered with the BIDA. Resident foreign nationals may remit abroad 75% of their monthly net income from Bangladesh.

Indicative limits/bona fide test
Yes.

Industrial enterprises producing for local markets may remit up to 1% of sales receipts declared in the previous year’s tax return for the purpose of training and consultation. Service sector businesses are also allowed such remittances. ADs may release foreign exchange up to the actual amount of the registration or participation fee for government officials and employees of banks, financial institutions, bank training institutions, and corporations and/or NGOs to attend training, seminars, and workshops abroad. Remittances are also allowed for subscription fees for foreign academic and research journals by universities, medical colleges, and research and training institutions, up to the equivalent of US$3,000 an institution a calendar year.

Proceeds from Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

Repatriation requirements
Yes.

Effective September 11, 2019, ADs were allowed to repatriate remittances against small-value service exports in nonphysical form up to US$10,000 per transaction (previously US$5,000) through Online Payment Gateway Service Providers (OPGSPs).

Surrender requirements
Yes.

Surrender to the central bank
No.

Surrender to authorized dealers
Yes.

Exporters of services must sell to ADs not less than 40% of receipts in foreign exchange and may use retained earnings for valid business purposes. Bangladeshis working abroad may retain their earnings in foreign exchange accounts or in NFCD accounts. Unless they have an exemption from the BB, resident Bangladeshis must sell to an AD any foreign exchange they receive, whether held in Bangladesh or abroad, within one month of receipt. However, returning residents may keep, in foreign exchange accounts in their names, foreign exchange they brought in, provided it does not represent proceeds from exports from Bangladesh or commissions earned from business activities in Bangladesh. Residents must declare inward remittances from abroad, except remittances by Bangladeshis working abroad, using Form C for amounts exceeding US$10,000 or its equivalent. Foreigners residing in Bangladesh for more than six consecutive months must sell within one month of the date of receipt foreign exchange earned from business conducted in Bangladesh or services.
rendered while in Bangladesh. The BB allows receipt of proceeds from small-value service exports, such as data entry/data processing, offshore IT services, BPO, etc., through online payment service providers up to US$5,000 or equivalent an instance. Service providers receive payments through banks set up to receive online payments from abroad. ADs may handle inward remittances for BPO by residents, for which the retention quota is up to 60% of repatriated foreign exchange. ADs may provide facilities to credit inward remittances received in international card number/account against the services provided by individual developers/freelancers. In this context, ADs are allowed to issue to individual developers/freelancers international cards (termed as “Freelancer Card”) having dual currency units with features of being prepaid from abroad.

Restrictions on use of funds  Yes.
Retained foreign exchange may be used for travel abroad or bona fide business purposes.

Capital Transactions

Controls on capital transactions  Yes.

Repatriation requirements  Yes. Residents must repatriate and sell to ADs the foreign exchange proceeds from all approved capital transactions abroad within one month.

Surrender requirements

- Surrender to the central bank  No.
- Surrender to authorized dealers  Yes. Residents must repatriate and sell to ADs the foreign exchange proceeds from all approved capital transactions abroad within one month.

Controls on capital and money market instruments  Yes.

On capital market securities  Yes.

- Shares or other securities of a participating nature

- Purchase locally by nonresidents  Yes. Since March 24, 1994, nonresidents may purchase shares locally without restriction or approval. Nonresidents may buy Bangladesh securities through stock exchanges against payment in freely convertible currency remitted from abroad through banking channels. Purchase of new public issues not yet listed in a stock exchange may be made directly from the company issuing the stock/security. ADs maintain NRTAs in the names of their overseas branches and correspondents against inward remittance in convertible foreign currencies are allowed to issue shares in favor of the nonresidents by debiting the NRTAs. Purchases of shares by a nonresident from another nonresident do not require approval from the BB. However, the fair value of shares determined by Merchant Banker licensed by Bangladesh Securities and Exchange Commission or a Chartered Accountant is required for the sale/transfer of shares exceeding BDT 1 million. There is no approval requirement or quantitative limitations in force. Remittances on account of dividends in favor of nonresident shareholders were simplified. As of July 7, 2020, dividend payable to foreign shareholders may be credited to their foreign currency accounts maintained in Bangladesh. Crediting these accounts is recorded as outward remittance, while encashment of balances in these accounts is recorded as inward remittance. As of July 21, 2020, the requirement of document submission to BB for ex post verification of remittances on account of dividend was removed. Effective June 18, 2020, ADs may effect remittances on account of sales proceeds of shares of nonresidents in private/public limited companies not listed with stock exchanges based on the NAV approach, regardless of the amount. Further, BB’s permission is not required to repatriate sales proceeds of shares up to Tk 10 million or equivalent in foreign currency without a valuation report from independent valuers, or to repatriate between Tk 10 million and Tk 100 million or equivalent in foreign currency on account of sales proceeds based on fair value determined using the valuation methods prescribed in FEID Circular No. 1 of May 6, 2018. Previously, in case of sale/transfer of shares from a nonresident to a resident in public/private limited companies not listed on the stock exchanges, a MoU for share sale/purchase agreement between the buyer and the seller had to be concluded on receipt of approval from the BB regarding the determination of the fair value of the shares. The BB accepted the fair value of the shares determined from the weighted average of the three valuation approaches (that is, NAV approach, market value approach, and discounted cash flow approach), or based on any of these approaches suitable on justified ground depending on the nature of the company.

Purchase locally by nonresidents Yes. These transactions are not allowed.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents Yes. These transactions are not allowed.

Purchase abroad by residents Yes. ADs may acquire hedging instruments abroad against exchange rate risk on underlying trade transactions. ADs may hedge the price risk of commodities (traded on exchanges or OTC) of their customers through standard exchange-traded futures and options and OTC derivatives on commodities, subject to the BB approval. The use of commodity derivatives is permitted when customers have genuine underlying commodity-price risk exposure(s). Speculation through the use of commodity derivative instruments is not permitted.

Sale or issue abroad by residents Yes. These transactions are not allowed.

Commercial credits

By residents to nonresidents Yes. Export payments deferred for more than 120 days require the BB authorization.

To residents from nonresidents Yes. Commercial credits may be used by residents for imports of industrial raw materials (180 days) and capital machinery (up to 360 days) without approval; 6% interest is allowed on such trade financing. Importers may also obtain buyer credit for import payments from abroad through ADs for a period not exceeding one year; the overall interest cost may not exceed 6% a year.

Financial credits

By residents to nonresidents Yes. Except in certain cases, credits are subject to the BB approval.

To residents from nonresidents Yes. ADs may obtain short-term and overdraft loans from overseas branches and correspondents for a period not exceeding seven days at a time. Industrial enterprises may borrow funds or make deferred payments for imports for a period beyond 360 days, with BIDA approval.

Type A industries in EPZs/EZs may access short-term foreign currency loans from parent companies/shareholders abroad and other Type A subsidiaries/associates operating in EPZs/EZs.

Guarantees, sureties, and financial backup facilities

By residents to nonresidents Yes. ADs no longer need the BB approval to issue guarantees in foreign currency up to SRIs 200,000 (SRIs, Saudi Arabian riyals) to official pilgrimage (Umrah) service providers in Saudi Arabia. ADs no longer need the BB approval to hold collateral on behalf of foreign bank branches or correspondents with respect to external borrowing by industrial enterprises approved by the BIDA. ADs may on behalf of residents issue bid bonds/performance bonds/guarantees in foreign currency in favor of local project authorities against goods/services procurement tenders financed by the government, subject to regulations. Approval from the BB is also not required for issuing guarantees by the borrowers such as corporate guarantee, personal guarantee, third party guarantee, etc., as per loan agreement, favoring foreign lenders in case of external borrowing approved by the BIDA. ADs may issue guarantee in taka or equivalent convertible foreign currency.

Controls on direct investment

- Outward direct investment
  - Yes. All outward transfers of capital require approval. For resident-owned capital, approval is granted only in exceptional cases.

- Inward direct investment
  - Yes. Investment, except in the industrial sector, requires approval. The Foreign Private Investment (Promotion and Protection) Act of 1980 provides for the protection and equitable treatment of foreign private investment, indemnification, protection against expropriation and nationalization, and guaranteed repatriation of investments. There is no ceiling on private investment. Tax exemptions are granted for periods of up to nine years, depending on location.

Controls on liquidation of direct investment

- Yes. Liquidation of direct investment through a NITA and transfers of Bangladesh stocks and securities from one nonresident holder to another do not require the BB approval. However, proceeds from disinvestment of nonresidents’ equity investments in unlisted public and private limited companies must be repatriated with the BB approval, because there may not be an established market value for such investments at the time of disinvestment. When a nonresident liquidates an investment through sale to a resident investor, the net asset value, market value, and discounted cash flow of the shares of the company serve as the basis for calculating the repatriation of proceeds.

Remittances on account of dividends in favor of nonresident shareholders were simplified. As of July 7, 2020, dividend payable to foreign shareholders may be credited to their foreign currency accounts maintained in Bangladesh. Crediting these accounts is recorded as outward remittance, while encashment of balances in these accounts is recorded as inward remittance. As of July 21, 2020, the requirement of document submission to BB for ex post verification of remittances on account of dividend was removed.

Controls on real estate transactions

- Yes. Remittance of funds for these purchases is not permitted.

- Purchase abroad by residents
  - Yes. Purchases of real estate by a nonresident with funds from abroad are allowed. ADs were allowed to extend mortgage loans in taka to NRBs working abroad for the purpose of housing in Bangladesh, subject to observance of the existing guidelines of Prudential Regulations for Consumer Financing. The housing finance facility provided to NRBs may not exceed the debt-equity ratio of 75:25.

- Sale locally by nonresidents
  - Yes. Repatriation of sales proceeds is subject to the BB approval, which is not typically granted.

Controls on personal capital transactions

- Yes. Loans

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits) Yes.

Lending to nonresidents is not allowed, except with the BB approval and in specific cases. Foreign-owned/foreign-controlled companies in Bangladesh that engaged in manufacturing or services output activities for three years or longer in Bangladesh may access taka term loans from the domestic market regardless of the local content in their equity, subject to applicable credit norms and prudential parameters, including the single borrower exposure limit, debt-equity ratio, and so forth. Foreign-owned/foreign-controlled industrial enterprises in Bangladesh may access interest-free loans for working capital other than input procurement from parent companies/shareholders abroad for up to one year without prior approval. These loans are available to companies that have not yet obtained working capital financing from the local market. To widen the scope of taka working capital loans for foreign-owned/foreign-controlled companies operating in Bangladesh, resident persons/companies may purchase commercial papers issued by such companies.

ADs were allowed to extend mortgage loans in taka to NRBs working abroad for the purpose of housing in Bangladesh subject to observance of the existing guidelines of Prudential Regulations for Consumer Financing. The housing finance facility provided to NRBs may not exceed the debt-equity ratio of 75:25.

Lending locally in foreign exchange Yes.

Lending is subject to the BB approval. ADs may use up to 50% of NFCD balances (1) for loans to exporters for settlement of back-to-back sight LCs for imports of inputs and (2) to discount usage bills of wholly foreign-owned (Type A) and joint-venture (Type B) EPZ units against imports to exporters. Industrial enterprises may borrow funds or make deferred payments for imports for a period beyond 360 days, with BOI approval. Usance export bills related to direct and deemed exportation of Bangladesh products may be discounted in foreign exchange by an exporter’s AD with funds received from foreign banking units and correspondent banks and financial institutions and from international financial organizations: the overall cost may not exceed 6% a year.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange Yes.

Purchases are subject to the BB approval.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange Yes.

Reserve requirements No.

The cash reserve ratio (CRR) for domestic banking operation is at least 4% (previously 5.5%) on biweekly basis with a daily provision of minimum 3.5% (previously 5%) of average total demand and time liabilities (ATDTL), effective April 15, 2020. Banks are required to maintain the CRR normally in local currency.

Liquid asset requirements No.

The Statutory Liquidity Ratio (SLR) is maintained in easily convertible assets (cash, gold, unencumbered approved securities, etc.). The daily minimum SLR for conventional banks is 13% of ATDTL (including the excess amount of CRR) and 5.5% for Islamic banks (inclusive of CRR). Effective September 1, 2019, SLR has to be maintained for offshore banking operation in addition to reserves for domestic banking operation. The requirements are determined against the ATDTL held by the bank. The SLR may be maintained both in local and foreign currency along with other approved assets. CRR and SLR may be maintained separately.

Interest rate controls Yes.

Banks must maintain interest rates on foreign currency deposits in line with international market rates, while they may freely determine at what interest rate they offer on local currency deposits with no

Credit card use abroad

- 04/07/2019 ADs may issue International Debit/Prepaid/Credit cards in favor of Bangladeshi medical centers accredited by Gulf Health Council to pay only the registration fee for medical checkup services of Bangladesh nationals proceeding abroad for employment in member countries of GCC.
- 11/24/2019 ADs must make necessary arrangements to guard against illegitimate online payments abroad through International Cards from Bangladesh, for example, payments for participation in online casino/gambling, trading in foreign exchange/stock exchanges, purchase of cryptocurrencies/lottery tickets, and purchase of goods/services originated in Bangladesh.

ADs may issue international debit cards in favor of eligible persons against their annual travel entitlements subject to observance of several instructions.

Prior approval

ADs may issue international debit cards in favor of eligible persons against their annual travel entitlements subject to observance of several instructions.

Proceeds from Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

ADs were allowed to repatriate remittances against small-value service exports in nonphysical form up to US$10,000 per transaction (previously US$5,000) through Online Payment Gateway Service Providers

Capital Transactions

Controls on capital transactions

On capital market securities

Shares or other securities of a participating nature

Purchase locally by nonresidents

ADs may effect remittances on account of sales proceeds of shares based on the NAV approach, regardless of the amount. Further, Bangladesh Bank’s permission is not required to repatriate sales proceeds of shares up to Tk 10 million or equivalent in foreign currency without a valuation report from independent valuers, or to repatriate between Tk 10 million and Tk 100 million or equivalent in foreign currency on account of sales proceeds based on fair value determined using the valuation methods prescribed in FEID Circular No. 1 of May 6, 2018. Previously, in case of sale/transfer of shares from a nonresident to a resident in public/private limited companies not listed on the stock exchanges, a MoU for share sale/purchase agreement between the buyer and the seller had to be concluded on receipt of approval from the BB regarding the determination of the fair value of the shares. The BB accepted the fair value of the shares determined from the weighted average of the three valuation approaches (that is, NAV approach, market value approach, and discounted cash flow approach), or based on any of these approaches suitable on justified ground depending on the nature of the company.

Foreign exchange market
Certain businesses are allowed to exchange foreign currency. The exchange rate applied by commercial banks is determined by the CBB; banks, however, may charge processing fees.

Spot exchange market
As of December 31, 2019, eight institutions have been licensed to deal in foreign exchange with the public. There are no foreign exchange bureaus. The eight ADs comprise five commercial banks and three non-bank financial institutions.

Operated by the central bank
The CBB buys and sells US dollars for Barbados dollars on demand from ADs and the government at the official rate. Buying and selling rates for the Canadian dollar, euro, and pound sterling are also officially quoted on the basis of their cross-rate relationships to the US dollar. The quoted rates include commission charges of 0.125% buying and 1.75% selling against the US dollar and 0.1875% buying and 1.8125% selling against the Canadian dollar, euro, and pound sterling.

Allocation
As of December 31, 2019, five banks and three nonbank financial institutions participate in the interbank market. Licenses are granted by the CBB.

Forward exchange market
The CBB periodically obtains forward cover in the international foreign exchange market to cover or hedge its own or the central government’s exchange risk associated with foreign exchange loans not denominated in US dollars. Commercial banks may obtain forward cover in international markets. The CBB and commercial banks enter into swap transactions in US dollars, whereas commercial banks switch freely among nonregional currencies.

| Use of foreign exchange among residents | Yes. | CBB permission is required for retail outlets to issue change in the same foreign currency in which purchases are made. |
| Payments arrangements | Yes. |
| Bilateral payments arrangements | Yes. |
| Operative | Yes. | There is a limited CARICOM regional bilateral payments system. |
| Inoperative | No. | |
| Regional arrangements | Yes. | Barbados is a member of CARICOM. |
| Clearing agreements | Yes. | Under clearing arrangements with regional monetary authorities, the CBB currently sells only two CARICOM country currencies: the Eastern Caribbean dollar, and the Belize dollar. Trinidad and Tobago, Guyana, and Jamaican dollars float against the US dollar, and the CBB sets indicative selling rates based on rates supplied by the monetary authorities of these countries. |
| Barter agreements and open accounts | No. |
| Administration of control | Yes. | Exchange control applies to all countries and is administered by the CBB, which authorizes ADs to approve current payments, including standard import payments. Additional authority is delegated to commercial banks for current account transactions ranging from BDS $7,500 to BDS$250,000. Commercial banks may release up to BDS $250,000 in foreign exchange for advance payments for imports to Barbados. Commercial banks may allow the transfer of funds to CARICOM countries for all current transactions, except those with special limits or restrictions. Trade controls are administered by the Ministry of Commerce, Consumer Affairs, and Business Development. The authority to approve payments to OECS countries is delegated to ADs. |
| Payments arrears | No. |
Resident Accounts

Effective August 1, 2019, all residents are allowed to hold foreign exchange accounts. ADs may credit 100% of the foreign exchange earned related to current account transactions by residents to their foreign exchange accounts without CBB approval. Previously, only residents earning foreign exchange related to current account transactions were permitted to hold foreign exchange accounts. ADs could credit 30% of the foreign exchange surrendered by residents who earn foreign exchange to residents’ foreign exchange accounts without CBB approval. Other credits and debits required individual approval.

Effective August 1, 2019, approval was no longer required to open foreign exchange accounts. Previously, approval was given on the basis of the anticipated frequency of receipts and payments in foreign currency. Payments must be related to the account holder.

Permission of the CBB must be received to open and operate accounts abroad. Balances may be transferred freely to Barbados.

ADs may convert according to the provisions in the CBB circulars; they may freely convert for education outside of Barbados, medical treatment outside of Barbados, gifts, and donations up to BDS $10,000.00 per annum for non-resident beneficiaries, for travel facilities as prescribed in the circulars, for import payments and sundry non-capital payments; relevant supporting documents must be provided. CBB permission is needed to convert for emigration allowances, repatriation of foreign investment by non-residents, proceeds of property sale, disposal of liquid assets from estates and for all capital remittances.

Nonresident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted Yes. ADs may open foreign exchange accounts for non-residents, including Barbadian and Caribbean Single Market and Economy (CSME) nationals permanently residing outside Barbados, without limit. Non-residents may place the full amount of funds brought into Barbados in their foreign exchange accounts. Non-Barbadian nationals employed in the offshore sector are classified as non-residents.

Approval required No. Non-resident foreign exchange account holders are not required to obtain CBB approval to remit abroad funds that are not the proceeds of payment for trade or non-trade transactions.

Domestic currency accounts Yes. These accounts may be credited with the proceeds from the sale of foreign currency, transfers from other external accounts, bank interest, and payments by residents for which the CBB has given general or specific permission. These accounts may be debited without restriction up to the balance in the account for payments to residents of Barbados, for the cost of foreign exchange required for travel or business purposes and for any other payment covered by delegated authority to ADs. Other debits and any overdrafts require individual approval.

Convertible into foreign currency Yes. Balances on external accounts are convertible. External Accounts are accounts held by non-residents but denominated in Barbados dollars.

Approval required Yes. Approval is required for the ADs to open such accounts in joint names with one or more residents. Otherwise, CBB approval is not required.

Blocked accounts Yes. The CBB may require certain payments in favor of non-residents that are ineligible for transfer to be credited to blocked accounts. Balances in blocked accounts may not be withdrawn without approval, other than for the purchase of approved securities.

The Law of the Republic of Belarus No. 165-Z of June 30, 2014, “On Measures to Prevent Money Laundering, Terrorism Financing, and Proliferation Financing” (with amendments dated May 13, 2020, which became effective November 20, 2020) assigns a duty to persons who perform financial transactions to take measures to freeze funds and block financial transactions if a participant in a financial transaction or beneficiary thereof is an organization or individual, including a sole proprietor, who is on the list of persons involved in activities associated with terrorism. This list is prepared by the Committee for State Security, based, among others, on resolutions of the UNSC.

Banks are entitled by the law to:
- suspend or decline a client’s request to perform a financial transaction (with the exception of receipts of funds) if the financial transaction meets the detection criteria and evidence of suspicious financial transactions that may constitute grounds for declining to perform it per the bank’s internal control rules;
- unilaterally decline to connect a client to a remote bank servicing system or suspend services through such system, if financial transactions performed by it meet the criteria for declining connection (terminating, suspending), which may constitute grounds for such actions per the bank’s internal control rules;
- unilaterally decline in writing to execute an agreement to perform financial transactions for a client, if, within a six-month period, there have been 2 or more decisions to decline performing financial transactions for the client, giving mandatory written notice to the latter as provided in banking law;
- decline to perform a financial transaction for a client if there is information that the bank, including a nonresident bank, in which there is an open receiver account, or the recipient of the funds, is involved in unlawful financial transactions or subject to sanctions.

The currency of Belarus is the Belarusian rubel.
Other legal tender  No.

No separate legal tender

Currency board

Conventional peg

Stabilized arrangement

Crawling peg

Crawl-like arrangement

Pegged exchange rate within horizontal bands

Other managed arrangement

Floating  Yes.

The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as floating. The National Bank carries out a flexible exchange rate policy that provides for using currency interventions to reduce the daily volatility of the exchange rate, and not for regulating its level. In accordance with the Republic of Belarus Monetary Policy Guidelines for 2020, with a sustained excess supply of foreign currency in the domestic exchange market, the National Bank purchases foreign currency to replenish international reserves. The NBRB does not publish data on its interventions.

Free floating

Official exchange rate  Yes.

The NBRB sets official exchange rates daily against 26 currencies. The official exchange rates on a given date correspond to the rates from the BCSE observed on the preceding business day. Official exchange rates of US dollars, euros, and Russian rubles are set on the basis of BCSE trading sessions. Official exchange rates with the other currencies are based on US dollar cross-rates against these currencies. The official exchange rate is used to determine the rubel value of assets and liabilities denominated in foreign exchange. The official exchange rates of an additional 52 currencies are set monthly. These rates are calculated on the basis of the US dollar–rubel exchange rate in the last foreign exchange trading session of the month in the BCSE and the cross-rates of the currencies against the US dollar in the international foreign exchange markets on the last day of the month. The official rates are valid until the new rates are published for the following month. The official rate is used for transactions with the official sector (customs charges and duties, other foreign-exchange-linked payments payable in local currency) and transactions in which sellers do not specify an alternative exchange rate.

Monetary policy framework

Exchange rate anchor
The NBRB has a monetary-targeting framework that uses growth in average broad money as an intermediate target in monetary policy. The operating target in monetary policy is the one-day interbank interest rate in the domestic currency. The goals and parameters of monetary policy are defined annually in the Monetary Policy Guidelines for the Republic of Belarus, approved by the president of the Republic of Belarus. According to this document for 2020, the inflation target, measured by the consumer price index, is set at a level of no more than 5% (December 2020 to December 2019). Growth in the average broad money supply is forecast at 8%–11% (December 2020 to December 2019).
The foreign exchange market consists of: (1) the BCSE; (2) the interbank foreign exchange market; and (3) operations involving the purchase and sale of foreign currency between a bank/nonbank lending and financial institutions and its customers, including cash foreign exchange operations.

Purchases and sales of foreign currency for rubels and conversion of foreign currency take place in the foreign exchange market through NBRB-licensed banks and nonbank lending and financial institutions.

The NBRB does not impose limits on exchange rates.

No commission is charged for the purchase and sale of foreign exchange in the OTC market. A bank may charge a commission only for the purchase and sale of currency in the BCSE, and the amount is based on the rates set by banks.

As of June 30, 2020, there were 24 banks and the Republic of Belarus Development Bank Open Joint-Stock Company, and 3 banks were undergoing bankruptcy or liquidation procedures.

Most transactions in the foreign exchange market are spot transactions. Purchases and sales of cash foreign currency for rubels and conversion of foreign currency take place only through banks and nonbank lending and financial institutions licensed by the NBRB for foreign exchange operations with individuals.

Individuals are free to buy and sell foreign currency. Purchases and sales of foreign currency between Belarusian banks, between a Belarusian bank and a nonresident bank, and between banks and their corporate clients are performed in the OTC exchange market without restriction.

Businesses have the right to perform the purchase/sale of foreign currency in the OTC exchange market, and also through banks in BCSE, including continuous two-way auctions. There are no restrictions on the amounts for the foreign exchange purchase and sale transactions by business entities.

No restrictions have been established on the purchase and sale of foreign currency in the currency exchange (BCSE).

Resident legal entities and individual entrepreneurs may buy foreign exchange for any current or capital transaction based on a request (or a payment order for transfer with purchase, if appropriate) submitted to any local bank. No supporting documentation (for example, contracts, NBRB approvals, etc.) is required for the purchase of foreign exchange. The purchased foreign exchange is credited to the resident’s foreign exchange current account with the local bank and may be kept there for an unlimited period of time until the foreign exchange is used. Also, a resident is free to use the purchased foreign exchange for a purpose other than that indicated in the request submitted to the bank, and no additional notification of the bank is required.

Operated by the central bank Yes. The BCSE organizes a trading session through which the NBRB may intervene as necessary.

Foreign exchange standing facility No.

Allocation No.

Auction Yes. An electronic trading system operates in the BCSE based on the continuous two-way auction principle and negotiated deals. Trading on the BCSE is performed each business day. A two-way auction operates for three currencies (US dollar, euro, and Russian ruble), while negotiated deals are used for transactions in other currencies. In a continuous two-way auction system, potential buyers submit their bids for the purchase of foreign exchange, and potential sellers simultaneously submit their offers for the sale of foreign exchange to the system. Trades are performed on a real-time basis when the parameters of a buyer’s bid satisfy the parameters of a seller’s offer. Under continuous two-way auction exchange trading, the purchase and sale of foreign exchange can be performed by the National Bank, the Republic of Belarus Development Bank Open Joint-Stock Company, banks, and nonbank lending and financial institutions, as well as by business entities through banks. There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads or commissions of market participants, as well as there are no limits on bids in terms of amounts. A participant pays a fine to the BCSE for failure to fulfill or improper fulfillment of net obligations equal to a percentage of the unfulfilled net obligations as specified in an agreement with the BCSE for each day of delay. Information about the results of foreign currency trading is published on the BCSE website and is also disseminated by the BCSE on the basis of agreements on information services concluded with legal entities and individuals.

Fixing No.

Interbank market Yes. As of June 30, 2020, there were 24 banks, and 3 banks were undergoing bankruptcy or liquidation procedures. Banks licensed by the NBRB and the Republic of Belarus Development Bank Open Joint-Stock Company may trade foreign exchange among themselves within the open foreign exchange position limit set by the NBRB.

There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads or commissions of market participants. The NBRB does not intervene in the interbank market. The mentioned financial institutions may perform foreign exchange transactions both on the BCSE and in the OTC market.

Over the counter Yes. The interbank market operates over the counter.

Brokerage No. There is no brokerage system.

Market making No. There is no market-making agreement.
Forward exchange market

Yes. The forward exchange market is regulated by the same provisions as the spot market. The NBRB does not participate in the forward exchange instruments market.

Official cover of forward operations

Nonresident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted

Yes.

Nonresidents may open accounts with banks and nonbank lending and financial institutions of the Republic of Belarus in any currency for which the NBRB establishes an official exchange rate against the Belarusian rubel, following the procedure determined by the NBRB.

Funds on accounts of nonresident individuals and legal entities received by such nonresidents from current international transactions may be transferred freely abroad.

Transactions on current (settlement) accounts in foreign exchange of nonresident legal entities may be freely performed regardless of the type of transaction (including foreign exchange transactions associated with the purchase and sale of foreign exchange). The source of the funds may be receipts from abroad; proceeds from the sale of goods and services in Belarus, including sales to residents; debt service payments; interest on the accounts; funds from other foreign exchange accounts of nonresidents in Belarus; and earnings from investments and other operations with residents and
These accounts may be debited for purchases of goods and services, investments, and payments to residents and nonresidents. Funds from these accounts may, through authorized banks, be freely repatriated or exchanged for Belarusian rubles at the exchange rate set by the bank applicable to the operation, provided the Belarusian rubles are deposited with a Belarusian bank. Crediting and withdrawing cash to/from foreign currency accounts of nonresident legal entities is not allowed, with the exception of diplomatic and other official missions, consular offices of foreign states, as well as international organizations, including their representative offices.

Nonresident individuals may maintain foreign exchange accounts at authorized Belarusian banks and perform transactions on them following the procedure established for resident individuals: (1) placement and withdrawal of foreign exchange cash (in a deposit account, for example); (2) transfers among the holder’s own accounts, including to those outside the Republic of Belarus; (3) performance of settlements under foreign exchange transactions with residents and nonresidents in cases permitted by law (settlements at duty-free shops, settlements with banks on banking operations, settlements on National Bank and MOF bonds, etc.).

Funds on accounts of nonresident individuals and legal entities received by such nonresidents from current international transactions may be transferred freely abroad.

Effective March 1, 2019, the use of funds on accounts of nonresident legal entities does not require NBRB approval. Previously, the use of nonresident legal entities’ type S account funds required the NBRB approval.

Nonresident legal entities may open in Belarusian rubels (1) effective March 1, 2019, current (settlement) accounts of any type, (2) accounts to record deposits, and (3) other accounts at authorized banks of Belarus. (Previously, nonresident legal entities could open type T (settlement) and type S (investment in government securities) accounts. T account transactions were free of restriction, regardless of the type of transaction (including transactions involving the purchase and sale of foreign exchange). Funds in S accounts were used for investment in securities, payment of expenditures associated with securities investments, payment of taxes and fees, and currency exchange transactions. In all other instances, use of type S account funds required the NBRB permission.)

<td>Import taxes and/or tariffs</td>
<td>Yes. There is a single procedure for customs regulation within the EAEU in accordance with the provisions of the EAEU Treaty, the Customs Code of the EAEU, international agreements governing legal relations in the customs sphere, and acts constituting the law of the EAEU. The Common Customs Tariff of the Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU CCT) is a set of import customs duties for goods imported into the common customs territory of the Union from third countries, classified under the common nomenclature for foreign economic activities of the Union (EAEU TNVED). The EAEU CCT applies the following types of duties: ad valorem, calculated as a percentage of the customs value of taxable goods; specific, calculated per unit of taxable goods; and combined, mixing both these types. For better regulation of imports into the common customs territory of the EAEU, seasonal customs duties may be applied instead of regular import customs duties, for a period of no more than six months a year. EAEU CCT import duty rates apply, depending on the country of origin of imported goods and the conditions of their importation, in accordance with the laws of members of the EAEU, unless otherwise indicated in the EAEU Treaty. Goods originating in and imported from CIS countries that have an ST-1 certificate are exempt from import customs duties. With the aim of promoting the economic development of developing and least developed countries, in accordance with the EAEU Treaty, the Union may grant tariff preferences for goods from developing and/or least developed economies using the Union’s common system of tariff preferences. For preferential goods imported into the Union’s customs territory from developing economies using the Union’s common system of tariff preferences, the import customs duty rates are equal to 75% of...</td>

the rates under the Union’s common customs tariff. For preferential goods imported into the Union’s customs territory from least developed economies using the Union’s common system of tariff preferences, the import customs duty rates are equal to 0% of the rates provided for under the Union’s common customs tariff. Decision No. 130 of the Customs Union Commission of November 27, 2009, on the Common Customs Tariff Regulation of the EAEU provides for a number of tariff concessions with respect to imported goods, as well as exemptions from import customs duties with respect to technological equipment and spare parts for such equipment; raw materials and supplies imported as part of an investment project in a priority area of activity; motor vehicles manufactured by business entities of member states applying the “industrial assembly” concept; equipment, including machinery, mechanisms, and materials that are part of the standard items provided with said equipment, and components (with the exception of those subject to excise taxes) imported at the expense of credits provided by foreign states and international financial institutions in accordance with international agreements by member states, and a number of other concessions. The collection of indirect taxes and the mechanism for monitoring their payment when goods are imported in mutual trade between member countries of the Union are carried out in accordance with the procedure defined in the Protocol on the Procedure for the Collection of Indirect Taxes (Annex 18 to the EAEU Treaty). In trade relations with all countries, Belarus collects indirect taxes on a country-of-destination basis at the rate established by law.

Capital Transactions

Controls on capital transactions

Yes. Resident individuals are obliged to have the NBRB approval for certain transactions associated with capital movements (hereinafter –... capital transactions). Resident banks (banks) may conduct capital transactions as follows: (1) based on the special NBRB permits (licenses) for carrying out banking activity; (2) through notification; and (3) freely (no NBRB permission is required).

Effective March 1, 2019, capital transactions of resident legal entities other than banks (herein after – resident legal entities) are carried out as follows: (1) through registration; (2) through notification; (3) freely (no NBRB permission is required).

The registration requirement was established for capital transactions of resident legal entities that previously were subject to the NBRB approval. (Previously, resident legal entities carried out capital transactions as follows: (1) with NBRB permission; (2) through notification; (3) freely (no NBRB permission was required).)

For the most part, resident legal entities perform transactions involving capital outflow through the registration procedure. For the most part, resident legal entities perform transactions involving capital inflows through the notification procedure or freely.

Registration and notification procedures are similar and used for monitoring purposes. The registration procedure implies that the foreign economic agreement is assigned the registration number of the transaction, while the notification procedure does not imply this. To register a transaction, a resident legal entity submits a request for registration and the international business contract to one of the banks in which an account is open. When performing a capital transaction for which a notification procedure is established, the resident legal entity completes and submits a notice of capital transaction to the bank using the proper form.

Banks should notice the NBRB about their own capital transactions in the framework of the ordinary monthly reporting.

Effective March 1, 2019, resident legal entities are required to register a transaction with a bank if it involves the acquisition of securities issued by nonresidents and that are recognized as such in accordance with the legislation of foreign states. (Previously, such transactions were subject to the NBRB approval.) Carrying out of capital transactions by nonresidents does not require application to the NBRB.

There is no requirement to repatriate and/or surrender proceeds from capital transactions.

Surrender to the central bank: No.
Surrender to authorized dealers: No.

The placement of stocks and bonds of foreign issuers within Belarus in accordance with procedures established by law, and of stocks and bonds of Belarusian issuers abroad, is permitted.

The procedure for issuing securities pursuant to the Republic of Belarus Law on the Securities Market, and for their circulation and redemption is determined by (1) the NBRB, with the approval of the MOF, for NBRB securities, bearer bank savings books, checks, certificates of deposit, and savings certificates, and (2) the Council of Ministers for other securities.

Registration of issues of issue-grade securities is handled by the MOF main offices serving the provinces (administrative-territorial units) depending on the issuer’s location (with the exception of issuers located in the city of Minsk and Minsk Province), and by the MOF Securities Department, with the exception of government securities, NBRB securities, and legal entities’ exchange-traded bonds.

Government securities and NBRB securities are not subject to state registration.

In accordance with the Republic of Belarus Law on the Securities Market, exchange-traded bonds are bonds denominated in Belarusian rubels and issued in nondocumentary form, of which the placement and circulation are performed only in the trading system of the stock exchange. Exchange-traded bonds are issued by legal entities in accordance with the conditions established by Decree No. 277 of the President of the Republic of Belarus of April 28, 2006, on Certain Issues in the Regulation of the Securities Market (Paragraph 1.10 of the Decree). Exchange-traded bonds are registered by the BCSE OJSC following the procedure determined by the Republic of Belarus Council of Ministers (Paragraph 15.20 of the Uniform List of Administrative Procedures Performed by Government Authorities and Other Organizations with Respect to Legal Entities and Individual Entrepreneurs, approved by Resolution No. 156 of the Republic of Belarus Council of Ministers of February 17, 2012).

On capital market securities

Yes.

Shares or other securities of a participating nature

Yes.

Purchase locally by nonresidents

Yes.

The purchase of shares of Belarusian issuers by nonresidents does not require a license from the NBRB or a license or other permission from the MOF (Securities Department), except that the maximum participation of foreign capital in the banking system of Belarus is 50%. The NBRB terminates state registration of banks whose founders (shareholders) are foreign investors once the maximum has been reached. Foreign exchange legislation does not restrict these transactions; however, NBRB approval is required for transfer of bank shares by residents to nonresidents.

Insurance institutions, including those with foreign investments, must be registered with the MOF. Certain activities require special approval (a license). When establishing an insurance organization with foreign investment, the proportion of a foreign investor’s share is not restricted. However, foreign investors’ share in the authorized capital of all insurance organizations may not exceed 30%. If that figure is exceeded, the MOF terminates the registration of insurance organizations with the participation of foreign investors and/or issues special permits (licenses) to such organizations to perform insurance activities.

Permission from the MOF is required to transfer shares of Belarusian issuers to a depot loro correspondent account of a nonresident depository that has established a correspondent relationship with the Republic Central Securities Depository.

Article 18 of the Republic of Belarus Law on the Securities Market of January 5, 2015, states that in the placement of securities, it is prohibited to establish in the issuer’s charter documents and/or in a decision regarding an issue (additional issue) of issue-grade securities a preferential right to acquire securities for certain investors over other investors or another investor, including the establishment of restrictions on the acquisition of issue-grade securities by nonresidents.

Nonresidents are not required to have NBRB permission or a certificate of registration for the placement of securities from the Securities Department of the MOF. Effective March 1, 2019, only resident individuals are required to have NBRB approval to purchase such securities from nonresidents. (Previously, such approval was required for all residents.)

According to Article 27 of the Republic of Belarus Law on the Securities Market of January 5, 2015, a procedure was put in place for the placement and circulation of securities issued by nonresidents within the Belarus, which, in accordance with Republic of Belarus MOF Resolution No. 42 of June 13, 2016, includes (1) in the case of the placement of the securities of nonresident issuers: (a) registration by the republic government authority exercising the state regulation of the securities market of the issue prospectus for such securities prepared in one of the state languages of the Republic of Belarus and meeting the requirements established by that authority; (b) the transfer of the issue (or parts of the issue) of issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers for centralized storage in the depository system; (c) assignment to the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers of an international securities (securities issue) identification code (ISIN code), and international classification of financial instruments code (CFI code); and (d) existence of an agreement defining the procedures for interaction between the republic government authority exercising government regulation of the securities market and the authority (entity) regulating the securities market in the state in which the nonresident issuer was established; and (2) in the case of the circulation of the securities of nonresident issuers: (a) assignment to the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers of an ISIN code and CFI code and (b) qualification of the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers as securities in the Republic of Belarus in accordance with procedures established by the Republic of Belarus Council of Ministers.

The procedures for admission of the securities of nonresident issuers are determined by the MOF. Pursuant to Article 8 of the Law on the Securities Market, the Council of Ministers of the Republic of Belarus specifies the procedures for the qualification of the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers as securities in Belarus. Pursuant to Article 6 of the Law, placement and circulation of securities of nonresident issuers may only be made on the organized market.

Effective March 1, 2019, only resident individuals are required to have NBRB approval. (Previously, such approval was required for all residents.) Resident legal entities are required to register transactions related to the acquisition of nonresident securities, while banks are required to notify such transactions.

In accordance with the Republic of Belarus Law No. 52-Z on Investment Funds of July 17, 2017, the amount of funds used for the acquisition of financial instruments issued by nonresidents of the Republic of Belarus must not exceed 30% of the value of the assets of a joint-stock investment fund intended for investment, or the assets of a mutual fund.

Foreign placement of shares of domestic issuers does not require permission from the securities market regulator or the NBRB; however, shares of domestic issuers placed abroad must be registered in the Republic of Belarus pursuant to Article 18 of the Republic of Belarus Law on the Securities Market (a requirement related to the exercise of control functions over emission procedures and the correct formation of authorized funds, as well as for statistical purposes).

Open joint-stock companies of the Republic of Belarus (with the exception of banks, nonbank lending and financial institutions, as well as legal entities that are part of a bank holding company, and legal entities that hold 5% or more of a bank’s shares) have the right to issue and sell shares using foreign depository receipts for the purposes of attracting foreign investments.

Bonds or other debt securities
Yes.

Purchase locally by nonresidents
No. Purchases of bonds of Belarusian issuers by nonresidents do not require an NBRB license or permission from the MOF (Securities Department). Effective February 19, 2019, the requirement to obtain a permission from the Securities Department of the MOF to transfer bonds of Belarusian issuers to a depot loro correspondent account of a nonresident depository that had established a correspondent relationship with the Republic Central Securities Depository, was abolished.

Article 18 of the Republic of Belarus Law on the Securities Market of January 5, 2015, states that in the placement of securities an issuer has the right to establish in its charter documents and/or decision regarding an issue (additional issue) of issue-grade securities a restriction on the acquisition of securities by nonresidents.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents
No. Nonresidents are not required to have NBRB permission or a certificate of registration for the placement of securities from the Securities Department of the MOF. Effective March 1, 2019, only resident individuals are required to have NBRB approval to purchase such securities from nonresidents. (Previously, such approval was required for all residents.)

According to Article 27 of the Republic of Belarus Law of January 5, 2015, on the Securities Market, a procedure was put in place for the placement and circulation of securities issued by nonresidents within the Belarus, which, in accordance with Republic of Belarus MOF Resolution No. 42 of June 13, 2016, includes (1) in the case of the placement of the securities of nonresident issuers: (a) registration by the republic government authority exercising the state regulation of the securities market of the issue prospectus for such securities prepared in a Republic of Belarus state language and meeting the requirements established by that authority; (b) the transfer of the issue (or parts of the issue) of issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers for centralized storage in the depository system; (c) assignment to the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers of an international securities (securities issue) identification code (ISIN code), and international classification of financial instruments code (CFI code); and (d) existence of an agreement defining the procedures for interaction between the republic government authority exercising government regulation of the securities market and the authority (entity) regulating the securities market in the state in which the nonresident issuer was established; and (2) in the case of the circulation of the securities of nonresident issuers: (a) assignment to the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers of an ISIN code and CFI code and (b) qualification of the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers as securities in the Republic of Belarus in accordance with procedures established by the Republic of Belarus.
Council of Ministers. The procedures for admission of the securities of nonresident issuers are determined by the MOF. Pursuant to Article 8 of the Law on the Securities Market, the Council of Ministers of the Republic of Belarus specifies the procedures for the qualification of the issue-grade securities of nonresident issuers as securities in Belarus. Pursuant to Article 6 of the Law, the placement and circulation of securities of nonresident issuers are allowed only in the organized market.

_Purchase abroad by residents_ Yes. Effective March 1, 2019, only resident individuals are required to have NBRB approval. (Previously, such approval was required for all residents.) Previously, resident legal entities and individuals were required to have the NBRB approval for loans (credit) if one of the following conditions was present: (1) The interest rate was higher than 14% for loans in US dollars or euros or exceeded by more than 5% the CB refinancing rate for other currencies. (2) The loan was to be used to pay the monetary obligations of a resident borrower, bypassing the resident’s account. (3) Repayment was made from a source other than the resident borrower’s account. (4) The loan was from a resident of an offshore zone. (5) The interest rate on the loan and the total amount of penalties and/or fines exceeded 3.65% a year. (6) The credit agreement with a nonresident nonbank lender established an obligation to make additional payments (other than those under Point (5) above). For other loans and credits, NBRB notification was required.

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions

Yes. Banks and nonbank financial and lending institutions with an appropriate banking license may purchase and sell foreign exchange. Banks may perform these transactions without restriction within the limits of their open foreign exchange position. A banking license is required to engage in banking operations.

Borrowing abroad

No. Borrowing abroad by banks and nonbank financial and lending institutions is not subject to the NBRB approval, registration, or notification procedure.

Maintenance of accounts abroad

No. Effective March 1, 2019, the NBRB approval is not required. (Previously, the NBRB approval was required to open accounts for the maintenance of representative offices and branches of banks.) Maintenance of accounts abroad by banks and nonbank financial and lending institutions is also not subject to notification or registration procedure.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits)

No. Lending to nonresidents by banks and nonbank financial and lending institutions is not subject to the NBRB approval, registration, or notification procedure.

Lending locally in foreign exchange

Yes. Banks are not allowed to lend in foreign currency to individuals. The requirement with regard to lending to individuals in Belarusian rubles only is established in the Instruction on the Procedure for Providing Funds in the Form of Credit and their Return (Repayment), approved by NBRB Executive Board Resolution No. 149 of March 29, 2018, and also in Article 150 of the Banking Code of the Republic of Belarus. There are no restrictions on making loans in foreign currency to legal entities and individual entrepreneurs.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange

No. There are no restrictions on the purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign currency. Under the legislation of the Republic of Belarus, certain types of securities (for example, bonds) may be denominated in foreign exchange. It is possible to purchase bonds denominated in foreign currency.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts held by nonresidents

Yes. Reserve requirements for funds attracted in foreign exchange are 17%, while for funds attracted in domestic currency the ratio is 4%.

Reserve requirements

Yes. As a requirement to ensure secure functioning, the LCR and NSFR have been introduced, as provided for by the Basel III system standards. The value of each ratio is at least 100%.

For the OAO Development Bank of the Republic of Belarus, only NSFR of 100% is established.

Liquid asset requirements

No. The OAO Development Bank of the Republic of Belarus is not subject to liquid asset requirements.

Interest rate controls

No. Banks set interest rates on deposits in domestic and foreign currencies. The NBRB may make recommendations to banks about interest rate levels, regardless of the banks’ residency status.

Credit controls

No. The OAO Development Bank of the Republic of Belarus is not subject to credit controls.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts held by nonresidents

Yes. Funds raised from nonresident banks and loans and funds received from nonresident clients in foreign exchange are not subject to reserve requirements.

Reserve requirements

Yes. Liquid asset requirements are the same for deposit accounts of nonresidents and residents. There are no differences with regard to the inclusion of residents’ assets and nonresidents’ assets as part of highly liquid assets for the

There are no legislative restrictions for banks’ establishing the size of interest rates for bank loans (deposits) of legal entities and individuals depending on whether they are Belarus residents or nonresidents.

NBRB permission is required for a bank’s participation in the authorized capital of another legal entity in the following cases: (1) for the acquisition of shares when they are distributed among a company’s founders, as well as an interest in the authorized capital or stakes in the property of nonresidents; (2) for a bank’s stake in the authorized capital of another legal entity in the event that it is being acquired by the bank for the purpose of long-term financial investments in a unitary enterprise as a property complex and/or shares (an interest) in another legal entity and/or its contribution of funds for increasing the nominal value of shares (actual value of interest) in such a legal entity, if after such acquisition and/or such an increase in the par (actual) value of its stake in the given legal entity’s authorized capital is equal to 5% or more (including if previously that stake was 5% or more), except in cases of acquisition of shares (interest) and/or an increase in the nominal value of shares (actual value of interest) unrelated to the need for its contribution of additional funds as a result of disposal by other shareholders (partners) and/or redistribution of internal sources of the legal entity; (3) establishment by resident banks of subsidiaries and branches outside the Republic of Belarus and the participation by resident banks in the authorized capital of foreign banks; and (4) transfers to nonresidents based on commitments involving a resident’s purchase of real estate abroad.

These are prudential regulation requirements (except for item (4)). In keeping with memoranda of understanding (agreements) on banking supervision between the NBRB and the banking supervisors of individual countries, the parties may provide information regarding a potential investor, report on the issuing of licenses to open subsidiary banks and permits to participate in authorized capital of banks, and share other information.

The maximum participation of foreign capital in the banking system of Belarus is 50%. The NBRB terminates the state registration of banks whose founders (shareholders) are foreign investors once the maximum has been reached.

Foreign exchange legislation does not restrict these transactions; however, NBRB permission is required in the following cases: (1) acquisition of ownership, administrative control, operational management, or receipt in trust of 5% or more of shares in the authorized capital of a bank as a result of one or more transactions by one legal entity or individual, including a shareholder of the bank, by a group of individuals and/or legal entities connected by an agreement, or by a group of subsidiary or dependent legal entities, as well as all subsequent acquisitions of bank shares by said persons and (2) an increase in the authorized capital of a bank as a result of funds provided by nonresidents and/or the transfer of bank shares by a resident shareholder to a nonresident.

In accordance with the Decree No. 84 of the President of the Republic of Belarus dated March 3, 2016, “Regarding the Issue and...
Circulation of Shares Using Foreign Depositary Receipts,” it is prohibited to issue shares of an additional issue placed using foreign depositary receipts, sale using foreign depositary receipts of shares of banks, nonbank lending and financial organizations registered in the Republic of Belarus, as well as legal entities that are part of a bank holding company, and legal entities that own five or more percent of the bank’s shares.

Open foreign exchange position limits

Yes. The following limits are set for open foreign exchange positions: (1) the overall open position for all foreign currencies and precious metals in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins may not exceed 10% of the bank’s regulatory capital; (2) the net open position for each foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins may not exceed 10% of a bank’s regulatory capital; (3) the net open position for forward transactions for each foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins individually may not exceed 10% of a bank’s regulatory capital. The forward part of swap transactions is not considered in the calculation of this restriction. Limits are calculated generally by type of foreign currency or precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins, regardless of whether assets or liabilities apply to a resident or nonresident.

On resident assets and liabilities

Yes. The following limits are set for open foreign exchange positions: (1) the overall open position for all foreign currencies and precious metals in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins may not exceed 10% of the bank’s regulatory capital; (2) the net open position for each foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins may not exceed 10% of a bank’s regulatory capital; (3) the net open position for forward transactions for each foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins individually may not exceed 10% of a bank’s regulatory capital. The forward part of swap transactions is not considered in the calculation of this restriction. Limits are calculated generally by the type of foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins, regardless of whether assets or liabilities apply to a resident or nonresident.

On nonresident assets and liabilities

Yes. The following limits are set for open foreign exchange positions: (1) the overall open position for all foreign currencies and precious metals in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins may not exceed 10% of the bank’s regulatory capital; (2) the net open position for each foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins may not exceed 10% of a bank’s regulatory capital; (3) the net open position for forward transactions for each foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins individually may not exceed 10% of a bank’s regulatory capital. The forward part of swap transactions is not considered in the calculation of this restriction. Limits are calculated generally by the type of foreign currency and precious metal in the form of bank bullion, revalued mint bullion, and revalued coins, regardless of whether assets or liabilities apply to a resident or nonresident.

Provisions specific to institutional investors

Yes. Limits may be established by the Council of Ministers and the NBRB.

Insurance companies

Yes. Insurance companies must obtain permission from the MOF to increase their authorized capital using funds from foreign investors.
and/or insurance organizations that are subsidiaries of those foreign investors, and to transfer shares (interest in the authorized capital) to foreign investors and/or insurance organizations that are subsidiaries of those foreign investors. The share of foreign investors in the authorized capital of all insurance organizations must not exceed 30%.

If that maximum is exceeded, the MOF terminates the registration of insurance organizations with the participation of foreign investors and/or issues these organizations special permits (licenses) to perform insurance activities.

Insurance laws do not establish any quantitative limits on the purchase by Belarusian insurance companies of securities issued by nonresidents. But insurance laws establish the following restrictions and requirements:

1. Belarusian state-owned insurance organizations and insurance organizations in which the state holds a stake in the authorized capital equal to more than 50% may not purchase securities issued by nonresidents (either at the expense of insurance reserves or at the expense of their own funds), except for participation in the establishment of insurance organizations and (or) insurance brokers outside Belarus and/or the acquisition of interests (shares) in the authorized capital of such organizations (these should be carried out with the permission of the MOF);

2. Belarusian private insurance organizations may purchase securities issued by nonresidents at the expense of their own funds that are unencumbered and not subject to legislative requirements (for example, minimum authorized capital funds are placed in accounts at Republic of Belarus banks), in compliance with the principle of diversification.

There are no quantitative restrictions on the portfolio of investments abroad. However, the establishment by insurance companies or insurance brokers of separate subdivisions outside Belarus, participation in the establishment of insurance companies and/or insurance brokers outside Belarus, or the acquisition of an interest (shares) in the authorized capital of such organizations requires MOF permission.

Belarusian state-owned insurance organizations and insurance organizations in which the state holds a stake in the authorized capital equal to more than 50% may not purchase securities issued by nonresidents (either at the expense of insurance reserves or at the expense of their own funds), if they are not related to the participation in the establishment of insurance organizations and (or) insurance brokers outside Belarus and/or the acquisition of interests (shares) in the authorized capital of such organizations (these should be carried out with the permission of the MOF).

Belarusian private insurance organizations may purchase securities issued by nonresidents at the expense of their own funds that are unencumbered and not subject to legislative requirements (for example, minimum authorized capital funds are placed in accounts at Republic of Belarus banks), in compliance with the principle of diversification.

There are no pension funds acting as institutional investors in Belarus. This circumstance is because of the distributive pension system in the Republic of Belarus, which does not provide for an accumulative tier in the form of pension funds. In the event of a reform of the pension system and the creation of pension funds becomes possible, their creation and functioning will be carried out in accordance with the Law on Investment Funds of July 17, 2017, taking into consideration potential specific features established for such funds by legislative acts.

The activities of brokers, dealers, depositories, trustees, clearinghouses, and organizers of securities trading are overseen by the MOF (Securities Department).

Under a banking license, banks may provide services related to the trust management of money (individual investments) and trust management of bank management funds (collective investments).

Republic of Belarus Law No. 52-Z on Investment Funds of July 17, 2017, provides for the possibility of creating two types of investment funds: joint-stock investment funds and mutual funds. The organization managing the assets of an investment fund may be a commercial company that has been created in accordance with the legislation of the Republic of Belarus and has gone through the state accreditation process. A specialized depository is a commercial company or unitary enterprise that has been created in accordance with the legislation of the Republic of Belarus and has gone through the state accreditation process.

The Republic of Belarus Council of Ministers establishes the procedure for the registration of rules governing mutual funds; it establishes the procedure for the state accreditation process, as well as the procedure and grounds for the suspension, renewal, and termination of state accreditation for operating as a management company and state accreditation for operating as a specialized depository; it establishes the procedure for the state registration of investment shares; and it exercises other authority related to the state regulation of relations involving investment funds.

State accreditation for operating as an investment fund management company is performed by the Republic of Belarus MOF following the procedure defined under item 15.27 of the Uniform List of Administrative Procedures Performed by Government Authorities and Other Organizations with respect to Legal Entities and Individual Entrepreneurs, approved by Republic of Belarus Council of Ministers Resolution No. 156 of February 17, 2012.

The Regulation on the Financing of Commercial Organizations against a Concession of Rights (Claims) at the Expense of Funds Attracted through a Bond Issue, or with a Subsequent Bond Issue, approved by Decree No. 154 of the President of the Republic of Belarus of May 11, 2017, introduced the concept of a special financial institution (SFI). An SFI is a joint-stock company created for the performance of securitization operations. An SFI is prohibited from performing any entrepreneurial activity other than securitization operations and transactions involving the acquisition of financial assets during the period that bonds are in circulation (at the expense of temporarily available funds that are part of the assets that have been allocated), as well as transactions involving the conveyance of said financial assets.

A SFI has the right to attract borrowed funds, including credits, for the acquisition of rights (claims) and for the payment of expenses related to a subsequent bond issue, for a term up to the day on which the bond placement ends, in an amount that does not exceed the cost of the rights (claims) acquired and the expenses related to the subsequent bond issue.

Resident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted
Held abroad

Approval required

03/01/2019

Resident individuals and banks may open accounts at nonresident banks without the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval. Previously, the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval was required for (1) opening by banks of accounts with nonresident banks for the maintenance of representative offices or other structural subdivisions and for (2) resident individuals other than those residing abroad.

03/01/2019

The National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval is no longer required for resident legal entities (other than banks) to open accounts of their representative offices with nonresident banks in any country in any currency. Previously, the accounts of representative offices in banks of the Eurasian Economic Union countries in the domestic currency of the Eurasian Economic Union country were opened under notification regime, while opening of accounts of representative offices in other countries required the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval.

Accounts in domestic currency held abroad

03/01/2019

Resident individuals and banks are not required to have the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval to open accounts in the domestic currency at nonresident banks. Previously, they could open such accounts with the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval, which determined the procedures/conditions for use of an account.

Nonresident Accounts

Domestic currency accounts

03/01/2019

Nonresident legal entities may open in Belarusian rubels current (settlement) accounts of any type. Previously, nonresident legal entities could open type T (settlement) and type S (investment in government securities) accounts. T account transactions were free of restriction, regardless of the type of transaction (including transactions involving the purchase and sale of foreign exchange). Funds in S accounts were used for investment in securities, payment of expenditures associated with securities investments, payment of taxes and fees, and currency exchange transactions. In all other instances, use of type S account funds required the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus permission.

Approval required

03/01/2019

The use of funds on accounts of nonresident legal entities does not require the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval. Previously, the use of nonresident legal entities’ type S account funds required the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus permission in all instances other than for investment in securities, payment of expenditures associated with securities investments, payment of taxes and fees, and currency exchange transactions.

Imports and Import Payments

Import licenses and other nontariff measures

02/13/2020

In accordance with the Council of Ministers Resolution No. 67 of February 3, 2020, “On Licensing Imports of Portland Cement,” the following measure was temporarily introduced (through August 16, 2020): imports of Portland Cement to the Republic of Belarus from outside the customs territory of the Eurasian Economic Union, on being placed under the customs procedures for release for domestic use.
consumption and free customs zone, were performed under one-time licenses issued by the Ministry of Antimonopoly Regulation and Trade in coordination with the Ministry of Architecture and Construction.

Capital Transactions

Resident legal entities are required to register a transaction with a bank if it involves the acquisition of securities issued by nonresidents and that are recognized as such in accordance with the legislation of foreign states. Previously, such transactions were subject to the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval.

Capital transactions of resident legal entities other than banks are carried out as follows: (1) through registration; (2) through notification; (3) freely (no NBRB permission is required).

The registration requirement was established for capital transactions of resident legal entities that previously were subject to the National Bank of the Republic of Belarus approval. Previously, resident legal entities carried out capital transactions as follows: (1) with National Bank of the Republic of Belarus permission; (2) through notification; (3) freely (no National Bank of the Republic of Belarus permission was required).

For the most part, resident legal entities perform transactions involving capital outflow through the registration procedure. For the most part, resident legal entities perform transactions involving capital inflows through the notification procedure or freely.

©International Monetary Fund. Not for Redistribution
The exchange rate arrangement of the euro area is free floating. Belgium participates in a currency union (EMU) with 18 other members of the EU and has no separate legal tender. The euro, the common currency, floats freely and independently against other currencies. The ECB publishes information regarding its interventions; it last intervened in March 2011. When it intervenes, the ECB intervenes at the quotes of the market makers.

The ECB publishes reference rates based on the daily concertation procedure between CBs within and outside the European System of Central Banks, which normally takes place at 2:15 p.m. Central European Time. On July 1, 2016, the ECB changed the publication time of the euro foreign exchange reference rates (ECB reference rates) from around 2:30 p.m. Central European Time to around 4:00 p.m. Central European Time. The reference rates against the euro are the average of the buying and selling rates. The publication regime aims to reinforce the distinction between exchange rate fixings used as benchmarks for transaction purposes and the ECB reference rates that are published for information purposes only.

Target setting body
To maintain price stability is the primary objective of the Eurosystem and of the single monetary policy for which it is responsible. This is stated in the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, Article 127(1). “Without prejudice to the objective of price stability,” the Eurosystem will also “support the general economic policies in the Community with a view to contributing to the achievement of the objectives of the Community.” These include a “high level of employment” and “sustainable and non-inflationary growth.” Price stability is defined as an inflation rate below but close to 2% over the

Arrangements for Payments and Receipts

Prescription of currency requirements  No.
Controls on the use of domestic currency  No.  For anti-money-laundering reasons, real estate may be paid for only with a bank transfer or check. Regardless of the total amount, no payment or donation may be made or received in cash for an amount above €3,000 of its equivalent in another currency, as part of one or several transactions that seem to be related. Except in case of public auction under the supervision of a bailiff, a person who is not a consumer may not pay any amount in cash when buying old metal, copper cables, or goods containing precious materials from another person, unless these precious materials are only present in small quantities and only because of their necessary physical properties. By way of derogation from subparagraph 2, a person who is not a
The consumer may only pay an amount of up to €500 in cash when buying old metals or goods containing precious materials from a person who is a consumer, unless these precious materials are only present in small quantities and only because of their necessary physical properties. In this case, these persons must identify and register the person who presents himself or herself with metals or goods containing precious materials.

The provision laid down in the first subparagraph does not apply to:
(1) the sale of real property, referred to in Article 66;
(2) transactions between consumers;
(3) the obliged entities referred to in Article 5, § 1, 1, 3, 4, 6, 7, 10, and 16, as well as other natural persons when they carry out transactions with these entities.

When the submitted accounting documents, including bank statements, do not enable to determine how payments or donations have been made or received, these are presumed to have been carried out or received in cash.

Subject to evidence to the contrary, any payment or donation in cash is presumed to be made on Belgian territory, and therefore subject to the provisions of this article when at least one of the parties resides or conducts an activity in Belgium.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion)  No.
On domestic ownership and/or trade  No.
On external trade  No.
Controls on exports and imports of  No.  In accordance with Regulation (EU) No. 2018/1672, cash controls banknotes have been implemented based on a mandatory declaration system for amounts of cash entering or leaving the EU with a value of €10,000 or more. Travelers entering or leaving the EU and carrying more than €10,000 are required to make a declaration to the relevant authorities of the member country through which they enter or leave the EU. The authorities must keep a record of such information and report it to their national financial intelligence unit. The obligation to declare is not fulfilled if the traveler makes no declaration or if the information provided is incorrect or incomplete. To check compliance with the regulation, the national authorities have the right to search natural persons, their baggage, and their means of transportation. In the event of failure to comply with the declaration obligation or suspicions of money laundering/terrorism financing, cash may be confiscated or retained administratively for a period of time between 30 and 90 days. The EC regulation requires member countries to impose effective, dissuasive, and proportionate penalties for failure to comply with the declaration obligation. If there are indications that cash is related to illegal activity, authorities of one member country may exchange information with authorities in other member countries. Under the framework of existing agreements on mutual administrative assistance, information obtained under the EC regulation may also be communicated to a third country in compliance with relevant national and EU provisions on the transfer of personal data to third countries. A similar mandatory declaration system exists when cash with a value of €10,000 or more is entering or leaving the EU non-accompanied. The EC regulation does not apply to physical cross-border transportation from one EU member country to another (that is, intra-EU transportation). Such transportation is not considered “cross-border” for the purposes of the EC regulation; the EC regulation only harmonizes the system for the EU’s external borders. However, the Royal Decree of January 26, 2014, implemented an obligation to declare physical cross-border transportation of cash from one EU member country to another at the request of an appropriate authority (mainly the Customs and Excise Administration).

Controls apply to deposits held with financial institutions not supervised by the authorities of an EU country if these deposits are to form part of the cover of the technical reserves of an insurance company or of the assets representative of the liabilities of a private pension fund. Movable assets outside the EEA are also acceptable, provided the National Bank of Belgium or a credit institution or investment firm governed by the law of a member country and authorized as a depository attests that it holds these covering assets for the account of the insurance company or private pension fund, through an establishment within the EEA, at a credit institution or investment firm outside the EEA whose authorization the FSMA deems equivalent to its own.

Investment in assets of countries outside the EEA and covering insurance (not reinsurance) risks situated inside this Area are subject to some conditions (Article 197 of Law of March 13, 2016) to ensure the effectiveness of the recovery and resolution measures against companies in difficulties (the limit of the power to dispose of assets). The legislation for Belgian IORP contains no quantitative restrictions in this respect.

In this context, the limit of the power to dispose of assets is important for the recovery and resolution measures against companies in difficulties.

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions

- Borrowing abroad: No.
- Maintenance of accounts abroad: No.
- Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits): No.
- Lending locally in foreign exchange: No.
- Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange: No.
- Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange
  - Reserve requirements: No.
  - Liquid asset requirements: No.
  - Interest rate controls: No.
  - Credit controls: No.
- Differential treatment of deposit accounts held by nonresidents
  - Reserve requirements: No.
  - Liquid asset requirements: No.
  - Interest rate controls: No.
  - Credit controls: No.
- Investment regulations: No.
- Abroad by banks: No.
- In banks by nonresidents: No.

Open foreign exchange position limits

- Yes. There are no explicit binding limits on open foreign exchange positions. However, there are provisions for foreign exchange positions in the form of prudential capital requirements (Article 351 of the CRR (Regulation (EU) No. 575/2013).

On resident assets and liabilities

- Yes.

On nonresident assets and liabilities

- Yes.

Provisions specific to institutional investors

- Insurance companies: Yes.
  - Insurance or reinsurance companies must invest all their assets in accordance with the “prudent person” principle as described in the law (Article 190).

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents

- Yes. Insurance or reinsurance companies governed by the Belgian law: There is no limit anymore because of the application of the prudent person principle. Insurance or reinsurance companies must invest all their assets in accordance with the “prudent person” principle as described in the law (Article 190). According to Article 191 of the Law of March 13, 2016, on the legal status and supervision of insurance or reinsurance companies: “With respect to the whole portfolio of assets, insurance or reinsurance companies must only invest in assets and instruments the risks of which the company concerned can properly identify, measure, monitor, manage, control and report, and appropriately take into account in the assessment of its overall solvency needs in accordance with Article 91, § 1, second paragraph, 1. All assets, in particular those covering the minimum capital requirement and the solvency capital requirement, must be invested in such a manner as to ensure the security, quality, liquidity, and profitability of the portfolio as a whole. In addition, the localization of those assets must be such as to ensure their availability. Assets held to cover the technical provisions must also be invested in a manner appropriate to the nature and duration of the insurance and reinsurance obligations. Those assets must be invested in the best interest of all policyholders and beneficiaries taking into account any disclosed policy objective.

In the case of a conflict of interest, insurance companies, or the entity which manages their asset portfolio, must ensure that the investment is made in the best interest of policyholders and beneficiaries.”

This law will not be applicable to insurance or reinsurance companies governed by the law of another member state, which will be supervised by the home country.

Insurance or reinsurance companies governed by the law of a third country: The same rules as for companies governed by the Belgian law are applicable (prudent person principle).

Royal Decree of February 22, 1991, on General Regulation of the Supervision of Insurance Companies details rules governing investments by insurance companies for the assets that cover their technical provisions. It includes the principles on investment activity, details on the location of the assets, categories of permissible assets, quantitative limits, and valuation rules.

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad: Yes.

For insurance or reinsurance companies governed by the Belgian law, the assets of the insurance and reinsurance companies can be localized in any country (in or outside the EEA). Nevertheless, investment in assets of countries outside the EEA and covering insurance (not reinsurance) risks situated inside this Area are subject to some conditions (Article 197 of Law of March 13, 2016) to ensure the effectiveness of the recovery and resolution measures against companies in difficulties (the limit of the power to dispose of assets).

This law will not apply to insurance or reinsurance companies governed by the law of another member state, which will be supervised by the home country.

For insurance or reinsurance companies governed by the law of a third country (provisions of the Law of March 13, 2016, are applicable at the Belgian branch), assets covering the technical provisions of insurance liabilities must be, in principle, localized inside the EEA. These assets can be localized outside the EEA if the law applicable to the winding-up procedures gives a similar protection to the policyholders as the Belgian law.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally: No.

There are no minimum or maximum investment limits. Insurance or reinsurance companies must invest all their assets in accordance with the “prudent person” principle.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition: No.

There is no limit because of the application of the “prudent person” principle. Insurance or reinsurance companies must invest all their assets in accordance with the “prudent person” principle as described...
The technical provisions of pension funds must be covered at all times by sufficient and appropriate assets belonging to the IORP (hereafter “representative values”) and allocated in a way that guarantees fulfillment of the obligations of the pension schemes they manage and application of the relevant legal and regulatory provisions for each fund.

The actual legislation for Belgian IORP contains no quantitative restrictions in this respect. Representative values must be invested according to the principle of prudence and the following rules (control a posteriori):

1. The assets must be invested in the best interest of members and beneficiaries. If there is potential conflict of interest, the institution, or its portfolio manager, must ensure that the investment is made in the sole interest of members and beneficiaries.

IORP can take into account the potential long-term impact of investment decisions on environmental, social, and governance factors.

2. The assets must be invested in such a manner as to ensure the security, quality, liquidity, and profitability of the portfolio as a whole.

3. The assets must be invested predominantly in regulated markets. Assets not traded in a regulated financial market must be kept to a prudent level.

4. Investments in derivative instruments are permitted insofar as they reduce investment risk or facilitate efficient portfolio management. They must be valued prudently, taking into account the underlying asset, and included in the valuation of the institution’s assets. The institution must avoid excessive risk exposure to a single counterparty and to other derivative operations.

5. The assets must be diversified in such a way as to avoid excessive reliance on any particular asset, issuer, or group of companies and accumulation of risk in the portfolio as a whole. Investments issued by the same issuer or by issuers of the same group must not expose the institution to excessive risk concentration.

6. Investments, as well as loans granted to, and claims on the sponsoring company may not exceed 5% of the entire portfolio, and, if the sponsoring company belongs to a group, investment in, as well as loans granted to, and claims on companies of the same group as the sponsoring company may not exceed 10% of the portfolio. If the institution is sponsored by more than one company, investment in, as well as loans granted to, and claims on these companies must be made prudently, taking into account proper diversification.

Derivative instruments that imply delivery are authorized only if at least one of the following conditions is met:

1. The institution for occupational retirement provision holds the underlying assets as covering assets.

2. The risks inherent in the highly liquid underlying assets are adequately covered by other liquid assets, provided the latter can be allocated to acquisition of underlying assets to be delivered, and provided the additional risk of this type of operation is adequately measured and managed.

3. A clearing institution is involved that offers an adequate guarantee of the success of the operation, the derivative positions are evaluated daily at market value, and margin calls are issued at least once a day.

To apply the first paragraph, second point (of Article 28 of the Royal Decree of January 12, 2007), a hedging instrument is considered liquid if, during a period of at least seven bank working days, it can be converted to cash at a price very close to the actual valuation of the instrument. The amount in cash must be at the disposal of the IORP at maturity or at the exercise date of the derivative. Financial instruments that are not traded in a regulated market may not serve as cover unless they are realizable within a reasonable time. This condition (of Article 29 of the Royal Decree of January 12, 2007) may be waived for credit institutions, insurance companies, and investment firms whose registered office is in an EU Member State—with FSMA approval.

Pension fund representative values must be located within the EEA. By way of derogation from the first paragraph, movable cover assets outside the EEA are also accepted, provided the National Bank of Belgium or a credit institution or investment firm governed by the laws of an EU member and authorized to carry out the activity of depository attests that it holds these assets for the IORP’s account, through an EEA establishment at a credit institution or investment firm outside the EEA whose authorization the FSMA deems equivalent to its own.

Representative values of a pension fund may be denominated in (1) euros or currencies convertible to euros without restriction or (2) the currency of the liabilities, up to the amount of those liabilities.

For pension savings funds in the form of public open-end collective investment funds, up to 20% of the assets of such funds may be denominated in a currency other than euros. However, effective May 31, 2019, the assets denominated in a currency other than euros may be fully or partially hedged with financial derivatives for the currency risk, so that the hedged part is not taken into account for the determination of the maximum of 20%.

Use of foreign exchange among residents
- No.

Act No. 6 of the 2010 Amendment to the CBB Act repealed the provision authorizing residents who earn foreign exchange to pay their taxes, utility bills, and other expenses in US dollars, thereby restoring a single currency system in Belize. Act No. 16 of the 2010 Amendment to the Export Processing Zone Act removed the requirement for EPZs to conduct business in US dollars. Section 21 of the CBB Act 2011 states that to be valid in Belize, all monetary contracts, obligations, or transactions in Belize, whether imposed or authorized by a law or otherwise, are deemed to be expressed and recorded and must be settled or discharged in Belize dollars unless specifically provided otherwise.

Payments arrangements
- Yes.

Bilateral payments arrangements
- Yes.

A bilateral arrangement aims to eliminate the need to use US dollars or other non-regional currencies for regional transactions. Settlement under the arrangement is done monthly between CBs based on the net amount outstanding.

Operative
- Yes.

There is a bilateral clearing arrangement in effect. Caribbean countries with bilateral clearing arrangements with Belize are Antigua and Barbuda, Barbados, Dominica, Grenada, Guyana, Jamaica, St. Kitts and Nevis, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and the Grenadines, and Trinidad and Tobago. Settlement under the bilateral clearing arrangement is done on a monthly basis between CBs based on the net amount outstanding.

Resident Accounts

| Foreign exchange accounts permitted | Yes. |
| Held domestically | Yes. Domestic commercial banks may open foreign exchange accounts for residents. The CBB reserves the right to prohibit specific accounts. These accounts are demand accounts utilized solely for the purpose of meeting external obligations, and the Exchange Control Regulations apply to these accounts. Residents are not allowed to maintain foreign exchange accounts in international banks. Amendments in the International Banking Act provide for such exceptions, namely companies that operate in the Commercial Free Zone/Designated Processing Areas and government-owned entities. (See IBA amendment 2017.) |
| Approval required | Yes. |

Imports and Import Payments

Foreign exchange budget  No.

Financing requirements for imports  No.

Minimum financing requirements  No.

Advance payment requirements  No.

Advance import deposits  No.

Documentation requirements for release of foreign exchange for imports  Yes.  Prepayment for imports requires CBB authorization.

Domiciliation requirements  No.

Preshipment inspection  No.

Letters of credit  Yes.

Import licenses used as exchange licenses  No.

Other  Yes.  Valid invoices and customs documents are required for approval of foreign exchange for imports. As stated in Exchange Control Direction No. 18/2014, all domestic banks must offer foreign currency for sale to a designated importer to cover payments for fuel in an orderly and timely manner. The amount of foreign currency that each bank must provide is the proportion of the fuel bill equivalent to the bank’s share of foreign assets within the banking system. The CB provides each domestic bank with a notice specifying the minimum amount of foreign currency it must offer for sale to the designated importer to cover monthly fuel payments.

Import licenses and other nontariff measures  Yes.

Positive list  No.

Negative list  Yes.  For reasons of health, standardization, and protection of domestic industries, import licenses are required for a number of goods, mostly food and agricultural products and certain household and construction products; such licenses are granted liberally. Licenses are also required for pharmaceuticals and prescription medications from the chief pharmacist and director of health services before importation. Ministry of Agriculture, Belize Agricultural Health Authority (BAHA) sets regulations to protect Belize’s agriculture industry from foreign pests that may be transported through the products.

A regional framework to fight money laundering (AML) and the financing of terrorism (AFT) was created through two WAEMU Directives in 2002 (AML) and 2007 (AFT) which were incorporated into Benin’s legal corpus in 2006 and 2012, respectively. This comprehensive framework facilitates the implementation of UNSC resolutions based on a list of persons and entities prepared by the Committee. It was updated at the regional level through a new WAEMU Directive in 2015 which was incorporated into Benin’s legal corpus in July 2018.

The exchange rate arrangement of the WAEMU is a conventional peg. Benin participates in a currency union with seven other members of the WAEMU and has no separate legal tender. The Monetary Cooperation Agreement between the WAEMU member countries and France was concluded December 4, 1973. It was maintained after the French franc was replaced by the euro by the Council of the European Union decision of November 23, 1998. The Monetary Cooperation Agreement is based on three pillars: (1) a common issuing institution, (2) fixed parity with the euro, and (3) a guarantee of unlimited convertibility. In exchange for the unlimited convertibility of the CFA franc to euros, the WAEMU members are required to deposit 50% of their reserve holdings to the Operations Account with the French Treasury in accordance with the Amendment to the Operations Account Convention signed by France and the BCEAO September 20, 2005.

Official exchange rate

Yes. The CFA franc is officially pegged to the euro, the intervention currency, at the fixed rate of CFAF 655.957 per euro. Exchange rates for other currencies are derived from the rates for the currency concerned in the Paris foreign exchange market vis-à-vis the euro. The official rate is used for accounting and valuation purposes. The Conference of Heads of State and Government may decide to amend the Monetary Cooperation Agreement between the WAMU member countries and France.

Monetary policy framework

Exchange rate anchor

U.S. dollar

Euro

Yes. The monetary policy framework is an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis the euro. The operational target of price stability is defined as an annual inflation rate in the WAEMU that falls within a band of ±1% around a central rate of 2%. The Harmonized CPI is the benchmark rate to measure inflation.

Exchange tax  Yes. The commission rate charged by registered intermediaries on transfers outside the WAEMU that are authorized by their clientele is 0.6%. This commission is reversed in full to the National Treasury and is a portion of its tax revenue.

Exchange subsidy  No.

Foreign exchange market  Yes. Authorized intermediaries (licensed intermediary banks and licensed exchange dealers) freely set the buying and selling rates for foreign currencies, with the exception of the euro, which must be traded at the official fixed parity of CFAF 655.957 per euro. The commission on foreign exchange transactions may not exceed 2% for the euro. Instruction No. 013-11-2015 of November 10, 2015, on the terms and conditions for conducting rapid money transfers as a subagent within the WAEMU went into force.

Spot exchange market  Yes. The entities authorized to conduct nonelectronic foreign currency transactions are authorized intermediary banks and individuals and... companies authorized to conduct nonelectronic transactions with the public by decision of the minister of finance. Authorized intermediaries must comply with the provisions in effect on the financial conditions for executing OTC foreign exchange transactions that involve foreign currencies and issue a transaction slip for all transactions with a client. Moreover, to provide satisfactory information to clients, they are required to permanently post at their windows the rates actually charged for the different currencies and post notification that a transaction slip must be issued for all foreign exchange transactions on presentation of the requestor’s identity document. Exchange bureaus may conduct transactions in foreign currencies (except the euro) with the BCEAO. Entities authorized to perform OTC operations may not make transfers or payments in foreign currency with other countries or maintain accounts abroad.

As of December 31, 2019, 93 authorized OTC dealers conducted business in Benin.

Arrangements for Payments and Receipts

Prescription of currency requirements Yes. Benin is linked to the French Treasury via the BCEAO through an operations account, through which settlements with France, Monaco, the Comoros, and the CEMAC member countries are made, mainly in euros. Payments with countries outside the WAEMU are made in foreign currencies. Trade with other WAEMU countries is settled in CFA francs.

Controls on the use of domestic currency Yes. CFA francs may not be used for settlement of international transactions outside the WAEMU.

For current transactions and payments Yes. CFA francs may not be used for settlement of international transactions outside the WAEMU. However, the CFA franc is guaranteed unlimited convertibility through an open operating account with the French Treasury.

For capital transactions Yes. The CFA franc may not be used for capital transactions with countries outside the WAEMU. Investments by residents of the WAEMU zone outside the WAEMU are subject to prior authorization by the minister of finance, and at least 75% of the investment must be financed through foreign borrowing.

Transactions in capital and money market instruments Yes. The CFA franc may not be used for capital transactions with countries outside the WAEMU. Foreign investment by residents of the WAEMU zone is subject to authorization by the MOF. At least 75% of the investment must be financed through foreign borrowing. The interested party must request authorization through a letter designating the authorized intermediary to settle the payment. Purchases of foreign negotiable securities authorized by the regional capital markets authority to be issued or sold in WAEMU members do not require Minister of Economy and Finance (MEF) authorization.

Transactions in derivatives and other instruments Yes. Residents of WAEMU member countries may engage in the following operations on derivatives and other instruments with accredited banks established in the WAEMU or foreign banks: (1) forward contract, foreign exchange swaps, and options. Operations on derivatives with foreign banks outside the WAEMU can only relate to the purchase or sale, by a resident, of foreign exchange other than the euro or another currency from the Franc Zone.

Credit operations Yes. Loans of any kind, CFA franc overdrafts, and, in general, any advances granted by authorized intermediaries to nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are subject to prior authorization by the Directorate of External Financial Relations of the MOF, after BCEAO approval.

Use of foreign exchange among residents Yes. The CFA franc is the only legal tender, and residents of the WAEMU zone may not use foreign exchange for domestic transactions.

Foreign currency

Yes.

The reexportation of foreign banknotes by nonresident travelers is permitted up to the equivalent of CFAF 500,000; the reexportation of foreign banknotes above this ceiling requires documentation demonstrating either the importation of the foreign banknotes or their purchase against other means of payment registered in the name of the traveler or through the use of nonresident deposits in local banks.

Residents of the WAEMU zone traveling to countries that are not WAEMU members are required to declare foreign currency on their person in excess the equivalent of CFAF 5 million. They are allowed to carry up to the equivalent of CFAF 2 million a person in banknotes not issued by the BCEAO. Larger amounts may be exported in the form of traveler’s checks, prepaid debit and payment cards, conventional debit and payment cards, and other means of payment.

Foreign exchange allowances issued by authorized intermediaries in the form of traveler’s checks or prepaid debit and payment cards must be based on the need to cover customary, personal travel expenses, if they exceed the equivalent of CFAF 2 million a person.

The issuance of foreign currency to resident travelers is subject to the presentation of travel documents and a valid passport or national identification card.

On imports

Yes.

Domestic currency

Yes.

Resident and nonresident travelers may freely import domestic currency (CFA Franc XOF). However, resident individuals and legal entities other than the BCEAO and its banking and commercial correspondents outside the WAEMU are prohibited from sending and receiving banknotes in domestic currency (CFA Franc XOF).

Foreign currency

No.

Residents of the WAEMU zone and nonresidents of the WAEMU zone may freely import CFA area banknotes denominated in foreign currencies. Such means of payment in excess of or equal to the equivalent of CFAF 5 million must be declared to customs. Nonresident travelers must declare to customs foreign currency exceeding the equivalent of CFAF 1 million on entry and exit.

Resident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted

Yes.

Held domestically

Yes.

Approval required

Yes.

Foreign exchange accounts in currencies other than the Euro may be opened domestically with MOF authorization after non-objection from the BCEAO. The authorization specifies the operations that may be credited or debited on each such an account. These accounts are valid for a renewable term of up to one year. They cannot be credited with deposits of CFA banknotes or by debiting a CFA franc account. On expiration of the term set in the authorization, accounts are closed unless a new authorization is obtained.

Held abroad

Import taxes and/or tariffs

Yes. The ECOWAS CET entered into force in Benin on January 1, 2015. The CET, amended in accordance with Supplementary Law No. A/SA.1/06/09 of June 22, 2009, to include the additional tariff bracket of 35% called “Category 4: specific goods for economic development,” has five tariff brackets (0%, 5%, 10%, 20%, and 35%). Two additional taxes are planned to protect the budding ECOWAS industrial sector and the other strategic sectors: (1) a temporary adjustment tax on imports for five years intended to offset the reduced tariff protection for community products as a result of CET implementation; and (2) a temporary supplementary protection tax for up to two years applicable to products imported from third countries in direct competition with similar products manufactured by an ECOWAS member country. In accordance with the spirit of Resolution No. A/DEC.17/01/06 of January 12, 2006, the adoption of the CET, as amended by Supplementary Law No. A/SA.1/06/09 of June 22, 2009, the previous WAEMU and ECOWAS community levies continue to be imposed for a temporary period of five years. Consequently, for five years, imports from ECOWAS nonmember countries will be subject to a 0.8% community levy, in addition to an ad valorem ECOWAS community levy of 0.5%.

Exports and Export Proceeds

Repatriation requirements

Yes. Resident economic operators must collect and repatriate within 30 days of the payment due date the entire proceeds of sales of goods abroad in the country of origin with the bank with which the transaction is domiciled. The payment due date is specified in the trade agreement and normally falls within a period of 120 days after the goods are dispatched.

Surrender requirements

Yes.
Export proceeds must be surrendered by ADs to the BCEAO within 30 days of the payment due date, which may not exceed 120 days after shipment of the goods. To cover its current foreign exchange needs, the domiciling bank may hold up to 20% of its export proceeds as own foreign exchange resources. However, it must ensure that its total foreign exchange resources to cover its requirements do not exceed 5% of total customer demand deposits; otherwise, the surplus must be surrendered to the BCEAO.

Proceeds must be surrendered to authorized banks within 30 days of the payment due date. Export revenue may be surrendered to intermediaries other than banks with which the transaction is domiciled if authorized by the BCEAO, provided they furnish the domiciling bank with the documents required for the domiciliation file to be closed.

Export transactions require a customs declaration.

Export transactions of more than CFAF 10 million, except those between WAEMU countries, must be domiciled with an authorized intermediary bank.

Export title, exchange declaration, and export contract are required, and may be electronic and used to complete the pre-clearance formalities at the Foreign Trade Operations One-Stop Shop (GUOCE-BENIN).

Exports are permitted on the basis of a simple authorization from the Directorate of Foreign Trade, which issues a certificate of origin as needed. Exports of diamonds, gold, and all other precious metals, however, require MEF authorization, with the exception of articles with minimal gold content, traveler's personal effects weighing less than 500 grams, and coins (fewer than 10 pieces, regardless of their face value and denomination).

Exports of teakwood and other varieties of unprocessed wood and charcoal are prohibited.

Proceeds from Invisible Transactions and Current Transfers

Repatriation requirements Yes. Proceeds from invisible transactions with non-WAEMU countries must be repatriated. Residents of the WAEMU zone are required to surrender to an authorized intermediary all revenues and income in foreign currency collected abroad or received from a nonresident within no more than one month after the payment due date.

Surrender requirements Yes.

Surrender to the central bank Yes. Holdings exceeding the current needs of the credit institution must be surrendered to the BCEAO immediately. Credit institutions may hold net claims in foreign exchange with their banking correspondents outside the WAEMU to cover their current foreign exchange requirements in connection with customer transactions. In addition, ADs must surrender to the BCEAO, at its request, all BCEAO-issued currency and all or part of their assets in euros and in other foreign currencies.

Surrender to authorized dealers Yes. All proceeds from invisible transactions with non-WAEMU countries must be surrendered to an AD within one month. Resident travelers must surrender to an authorized intermediary, within eight days of their arrival in Benin, foreign banknotes and other means of payment denominated in foreign currency worth more than the equivalent of CFAF 500,000.

Restrictions on use of funds No.

Capital Transactions

Controls on capital transactions Yes. Capital transactions between WAEMU countries are unrestricted. Outward capital transfers require MEF authorization, except (1) amortization of debts and repayment of short-term loans to finance industrial and commercial operations, (2) payments required on foreign exchange derivatives transactions or raw material or commodity derivatives transactions, and (3) transfers of the proceeds of liquidated investments or the sale of foreign securities by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone. Capital receipts from non-WAEMU countries are generally permitted.

Repatriation requirements Yes. Proceeds from the sale or liquidation of residents of the WAEMU zone’s investments abroad must be repatriated within one month through a registered intermediary, if the resident does not have a reinvestment authorization.
Surrender requirements

Yes.

Surrender to the central bank

Yes. Holdings exceeding the current needs of the credit institution must be surrendered to the BCEAO immediately. Credit institutions may hold net claims in foreign exchange with their banking correspondents outside the WAEMU to cover their current foreign exchange requirements in connection with customer transactions. In addition, ADs must surrender to the BCEAO, at its request, all BCEAO-issued currency and all or part of their assets in euros and in other foreign currencies.

Surrender to authorized dealers

Yes. Proceeds from the sale or liquidation of WAEMU residents' investments abroad must be repatriated and surrendered within one month to an AD, if the resident does not have a reinvestment authorization. The surrender requirement applies to proceeds from all capital transactions.

Controls on capital and money market instruments

Yes. RCPSFM (Regional Council on Public Savings and Financial Markets) authorization is required for the following operations: (1) issuance or marketing of securities and real assets of foreign entities, (2) canvassing, and (3) publicity or advertising for investment abroad. Securities and mutual funds issued outside the WAEMU by a private or public entity that is not a resident of a member country may not be listed on a regional securities exchange. Soliciting the public of the WAEMU by nonresident entities is subject to authorization by the BCEAO in its capacity as the authority responsible for regulating the external financial relations of WAEMU countries. The CIMA Code requires insurance companies of each CIMA member country to invest domestically a minimum of 50% of resources collected locally, with the remainder to be invested only in other CIMA member countries.

On capital market securities

Yes. The CIMA Code requires insurance companies of each CIMA member country to invest domestically a minimum of 50% of resources collected locally, with the remainder to be invested only in other CIMA member countries.

Shares or other securities of a participating nature

Yes.

Purchase locally by nonresidents

No. Purchases in the country by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are unrestricted. However, purchases by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are subject to declaration to the minister of finance and the BCEAO for statistical purposes.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents

Yes. The issuance of securities and the sale of corporate or foreign securities by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are subject to authorization from RCPSFM, with the prior authorization of the BCEAO acting in its capacity as the authority in charge of regulating external financial relations. There are no controls on the sale of securities resulting from divestiture of an investment in the form of a transfer between a nonresident and a resident, but such sales are subject to the regulations governing the financial settlement of the operation. Settlement of securities transactions by transfer abroad or by credit to a nonresident account requires submission of an exchange authorization to the MEF for approval, accompanied by supporting documentation.

Purchase abroad by residents

Yes. The purchase of foreign securities by residents of the WAEMU zone and the transfer abroad of funds for this purpose are subject to MEF authorization. Authorization is not required for purchases of foreign securities whose issuance or offering for sale in WAEMU countries has been authorized by the RCPSFM. The CIMA Code requires insurance companies of each CIMA member country to invest domestically a minimum of 50% of resources collected locally, with the remainder to be invested only in other CIMA member countries.
Purchases of foreign securities by residents of the WAEMU zone must be at least 75% financed with foreign borrowing.

Sale or issue abroad by residents
No. Residents of the WAEMU may sell local corporate securities abroad. If these operations result in foreign control of resident entities, foreign investors are required to make a prior declaration to the MEF. The sale of securities for liquidation of an investment abroad must be declared to the MOF and the BCEAO for statistical purposes. Issuance of securities abroad by residents of the WAEMU zone must be made through an authorized bank.

Bonds or other debt securities
Yes. The regulations governing shares or other securities of a participating nature apply.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents
Yes. The issuance of securities and the sale of corporate or foreign securities by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are subject to authorization from RCPSFM, with the prior authorization of the BCEAO. There are no controls on the sale of securities resulting from divestiture of an investment in the form of a transfer between a nonresident and a resident, but such sales are subject to the regulations governing the financial settlement of the operation. There is no minimum holding period.

Sale or issue locally by residents
Yes. The purchase of foreign securities by residents of the WAEMU zone and the transfer abroad of funds for this purpose are subject to MEF authorization and must be at least 75% financed with foreign borrowing. Authorization is not required for purchases of foreign securities whose issuance or offering for sale in WAEMU countries is authorized by the RCPSFM. The CIMA Code requires insurance companies of each CIMA member country to invest domestically a minimum of 50% of resources collected locally, with the remainder to be invested only in other CIMA member countries.

Sale or issue abroad by residents
No. Residents of the WAEMU zone may sell local corporate securities abroad. The sale of securities for liquidation of an investment abroad must be declared to the MEF and the BCEAO for statistical purposes. Issuance of securities abroad by residents of the WAEMU zone must be made through an authorized bank.

On money market instruments
Yes. The regulations governing shares or other securities of a participating nature apply.

Purchase locally by nonresidents
No. Purchases by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are unrestricted. However, a declaration for statistical purposes must be filed for such purchases.

Sale or issue locally by nonresidents
Yes. The issuance and sale of money market instruments by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are subject to authorization from RCPSFM, with the prior authorization of the BCEAO acting in its capacity as the authority in charge of regulating external financial relations. There are no controls on the sale of money market instruments resulting from divestiture of an investment in the form of a transfer between a nonresident and a resident, but such sales are subject to the regulations governing the financial settlement of the operation. Settlement of money market instrument transactions by transfer abroad or by credit to a nonresident account requires submission of an exchange authorization to the MEF for approval, accompanied by supporting documentation.

Foreign exchange derivatives can only relate to the purchase or sale, by a resident, of foreign exchange other than the euro or another currency from the Franc Zone.

Purchase abroad by residents Yes. These instruments are subject to general regulations that apply to securities and investments. Residents of the WAEMU zone may freely purchase abroad or from nonresidents of the WAEMU zone call or put options on primary commodities or securities transactions. Residents of the WAEMU zone may not purchase commodities or securities in foreign markets to be delivered in complying with a put option contract. Put options must be placed on assets that can be acquired locally by the resident seller for delivery abroad in execution of the contract. Residents of the WAEMU zone are permitted to purchase foreign currency purchase options on the foreign exchange derivatives market from an authorized intermediary bank established in the WAMU or from a foreign credit institution.

Sale or issue abroad by residents Yes. Residents of the WAEMU zone are permitted to purchase foreign currency sell options on the foreign exchange derivatives market from an authorized intermediary bank established in the WAMU or from a foreign (that is, nonresident of WAEMU) credit institution.

Controls on credit operations Yes. Borrowing by residents of the WAEMU zone from nonresidents of the WAEMU zone must be conducted through authorized intermediaries (whenever borrowed funds are made available for use in the country), unless otherwise indicated by the minister of finance.

Commercial credits Yes.

- By residents to nonresidents Yes. There are no controls on credits related to exports of goods. The date on which payment falls due is agreed to in the contract (in principle no later than 120 days after the date of shipment).

- To residents from nonresidents No. There are no controls, and repayments of commercial credits are generally conducted without prior authorization, subject to the presentation of documents attesting to the validity of the commercial operation or of the services rendered, as well as the payment due date, to the licensed intermediary bank responsible for handling the repayment.

Financial credits Yes.

- By residents to nonresidents Yes. These credits require MEF approval. Outward transfers to service such facilities require an exchange authorization, subject to the approval of the minister of finance and substantiated by documentation.

- To residents from nonresidents No. There are no controls on these credits, but they must be reported for statistical purposes to the MOF and the BCEAO when granted and when repaid, except for the following credits: (1) mail overdrafts: CFA franc overdrafts for durations not to exceed the normal mail delivery times; (2) LCs available by acceptance, issued to exporters at the request of the authorized intermediaries’ foreign correspondent banks; and (3) credit provided pursuant to a financial agreement between a WAEMU member country and a foreign government or pursuant to an interbank arrangement approved by the Directorate of External Finance. The necessary funds must be transferred from abroad through an authorized agent. There are no controls on... repayment of loans, provided the authorized agent handling the settlement is furnished with documentation attesting to the validity of the transaction. Borrowing abroad is unrestricted.

The granting of guarantees and sureties is subject to minister of finance approval. Transfers abroad of funds to service these facilities require an exchange authorization, subject to minister of finance approval and submission of supporting documents.

These facilities may be granted freely, although the funds required for servicing them must be transferred abroad by an authorized bank. If, however, these transactions take place between a resident direct investment company and its parent company located abroad, they are considered to be direct investments and therefore require declaration to the MEF and the BCEAO for statistical purposes.

Direct investment implies control of a company or enterprise. Mere participation is not considered direct investment, unless it exceeds 10% of the capital of a company. All investment outside of WAEMU by residents of the WAEMU, including investment through foreign companies under the direct or indirect control of WAEMU residents and investment by foreign branches or subsidiaries of companies established in a WAEMU member country, requires MEF authorization.

All investment abroad by residents of the WAEMU zone is subject to MEF authorization. At least 75% of such investment must be financed by foreign loans. Authorization is not required for purchases of foreign securities whose issuance or offering for sale in WAEMU countries has been authorized by the RCPFSM.

FDIs, including by resident companies that are directly or indirectly under foreign control and by branches or subsidiaries of foreign companies, must be reported to the MEF for statistical purposes. A share is not considered a direct investment, unless it exceeds 10% of the capital of a company.

The liquidation of investments abroad must be reported to the MEF and the CB for statistical purposes. Reinvestment of the proceeds of liquidation is subject to MEF authorization. If reinvestment is not authorized, the liquidation proceeds must be repatriated within one month through an authorized intermediary. The sale of foreign investments by nonresidents of the WAEMU zone is unrestricted, but must be reported to the MEF and the CB for statistical purposes.

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

- Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions: The Uniform Law on the Treatment of Dormant Accounts on the Books of Financial Agencies of the Member States of the WAMU by the Council of Ministers of the Union took effect through Decision No. CM/UMOA/023/2012 of September 28, 2012. This decision was incorporated into Benin’s legislation in July 2016.
- Borrowing abroad: Foreign borrowing is unrestricted. For statistical purposes, these transactions must be declared to the MEF and the BCEAO when granted and when repaid.
- Maintenance of accounts abroad: Banks and financial institutions are authorized to open accounts with their correspondent banks for settling transactions for their own account or the accounts of their customers. However, banks are not authorized to hold in these accounts amounts that exceed their current requirements. In accordance with Regulation No. 09/2010/CM/UEMOA on the External Financial Relations of the WAEMU Member States, to cover their foreign currency requirements, banks are authorized to hold in banking institutions located in non-WAEMU countries (1) demand deposits not exceeding the total amount of import payments domiciled by clients in their books, payable within a period of eight days, and (2) demand deposits not exceeding the balance on their open foreign accounts denominated in foreign currencies other than euros and their open resident accounts denominated in foreign currency. The total amount of these assets may not exceed 5% of the clients’ outstanding demand deposits. Assets in excess of foreign currency requirements must be surrendered to the BCEAO.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits) | Yes. | Commercial lending is allowed. Financial credits are subject to MEF authorization following BCEAO approval.

Lending locally in foreign exchange | Yes. | There are no explicit regulations regarding these transactions, but MEF authorization is required with BCEAO approval.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange | Yes. | These purchases require MEF authorization if their issuance was not approved by the RCPSFM.

Differential treatment of deposit accounts in foreign exchange | Yes. | A reserve requirement of 3% (previously 5%) applies to WAEMU banks. Demand deposits, other deposit accounts, and loan accounts are included in the base for the calculation of the required reserves. The base for the calculation of the required reserves to be held with the CB includes customer foreign currency deposits.

Reserve requirements | No. | According to the prudential framework applicable to WAEMU banks and financial institutions that perform banking operations, the minimum standard liquid asset requirement is 75%.

Liquid asset requirements | No. | Loans of any kind, CFA franc overdrafts, and, in general, any advances granted to nonresidents of the WAEMU zone are subject to MEF authorization, after BCEAO approval. These claims are included in the external position of banks and financial institutions, which is subject to special monitoring.

Interest rate controls | No. | Banking regulations make no distinction among resident deposit accounts, nonresident deposit accounts, and foreign deposit accounts.

Credit controls | Yes. | Any overdraft or advance granted to a nonresident requires MEF authorization with BCEAO approval.

Investment regulations | Yes. | The regulations governing direct investment apply.

Abroad by banks | Yes. | All investment abroad by residents of the WAEMU zone is subject to MOF authorization. At least 75% of such investment must be financed by foreign loans. Authorization is not required for the purchase of foreign securities whose issuance or offering for sale in the WAEMU countries has been authorized by the RCPSFM.

In banks by nonresidents | Yes. | These transactions may, depending on their volume, be subject to authorization by the minister of finance. The banking law stipulates that investment by any person in a bank that would have the effect of changing the minority and/or majority voting rights requires authorization by the minister of finance.

Open foreign exchange position limits | Yes. | No prudential ratios apply. Because of the surrender requirement, banks are not allowed to maintain open foreign exchange positions. However, the BCEAO grants individual dispensations that allow banks to keep working balances in their correspondent accounts for the smooth completion of international payments, up to the equivalent of 5% of total customer demand deposits. To cover their foreign currency requirements, banks are authorized to hold in banking institutions located in non-WAEMU countries (1) demand deposits not exceeding the total amount of import payments domiciled by clients in their books, payable within a period of eight days, and (2) demand deposits not exceeding the balance on their open foreign accounts denominated in foreign currencies other than euros and their open resident accounts denominated in foreign currency.

On resident assets and liabilities

No prudential ratios apply. Because of the surrender requirement, banks are not allowed to maintain open foreign exchange positions. However, the BCEAO grants individual dispensations that allow banks to keep working balances in their correspondent accounts for the smooth completion of international payments. To cover their foreign currency requirements, banks are authorized to hold in banking institutions located in non-WAEMU countries (1) demand deposits not exceeding the total amount of import payments domiciled by clients in their books, payable within a period of eight days, and (2) demand deposits not exceeding the balance on their open foreign accounts denominated in foreign currencies other than euros and their open resident accounts denominated in foreign currency.

Date of membership: September 28, 1981.

Article VIII: Yes.

Article XIV: Yes.

Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices: Yes.

The IMF staff report for the 2018 Article IV Consultation with Bhutan states that, as of August 7, 2018, Bhutan continues to avail itself of transitional arrangements under Article XIV, Section 2, pursuant to which it maintains exchange restrictions in connection with: (1) the availability of foreign exchange for travel, except for medical travel abroad by Bhutanese citizens, invisibles, and private transfers; (2) foreign exchange balancing requirement on remittances of income in convertible currencies or other foreign currencies from FDI; and (3) on the availability of foreign exchange for importers who have not provided evidence that goods for which payments have been made were actually imported. Bhutan also maintains exchange restrictions subject to IMF approval under Article VIII, Section 2(a), in connection with: (1) the foreign exchange balancing requirements for imports of capital goods (for projects involving FDI) and primary raw materials (for certain industrial projects); (2) banning residents who do not comply with the requirement to repatriate export proceeds from accessing foreign exchange for unrelated imports; (3) requiring foreign direct investment companies to pay for their establishment and operational expenses from their own convertible currency resources; (4) requiring Bhutanese companies to pay the interest on and amortization of external loans from their own convertible currency resources; (5) restricting the availability of Indian rupees for making payments and transfers to India for certain current international transactions and banning the access to Indian rupees for unrelated current international transactions for those who contravene Royal Monetary Authority’s (RMA) 2012 guidelines on Indian rupee transactions. (Country Report No. 18/300)

Exchange measures imposed for security reasons: Yes.

In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51)

Banking institutions have been instructed to freeze all capital transfers and financial assets of individuals, groups, and organizations associated with terrorism, pursuant to the relevant UNSC resolutions. In addition, financial institutions are required to report to the RMA any financial transactions linked to terrorist groups. The RMA has the power to share information and cooperate in any way necessary with domestic and foreign supervisors to combat money laundering and the financing of terrorism.

Other security restrictions: Yes.

Exchange Arrangement

©International Monetary Fund. Not for Redistribution
The currency of Bhutan is the Bhutanese ngultrum.

Indian rupee banknotes circulate freely in Bhutan, but there is no legal/official provision establishing them as legal tender in Bhutan. Since January 2015, Indian rupee (INR) denominations above Rs 500 (specifically currency notes in denominations of Rs 500 and Rs 1,000) started to circulate, and individuals from India are allowed to carry to Bhutan INR in denominations of Rs 500 and/or Rs 1,000 subject to a limit of Rs 25,000. The RMA opened an exchange counter at the RMA (Thimphu and Phuntsholing branch office) for facilitating the exchange of ngultrum notes for INR notes, beginning with the facility for Bhutanese proceeding on pilgrimage to India. Any Bhutanese may avail INR from the RMA exchange counters in Thimphu and the RMA branch Office in Phuntsholing up to a limit of Rs 50,000 a person on production of personal context identity (CID, Citizenship Identity Card) to the exchange counter tellers. All current international transactions denominated in rupees have been streamlined to reflect the legal status of the rupee as a foreign currency.

Since the demonetization of high denomination Indian Rupee note in India from November 2016, INR denominations of 500 and 1000 were not allowed to be used in Bhutan and only INR denominations of 100 and below are allowed to be used in Bhutan. The new series of INR denominations up to 500 were re-permitted in Bhutan since June 2018. Further, the RMA opened up exchange counters at the Airport and Phuntsholing to facilitate exchange of Indian rupees to ngultrum and vice versa.

Exchange rate structure

- Unitary Yes.
- Dual
- Multiple

Classification

- No separate legal tender
- Currency board
- Conventional peg Yes.

The exchange rate arrangement is a conventional peg vis-à-vis the Indian rupee. No current legal documents establish a fixed exchange rate arrangement; the ngultrum has been pegged at par to the Indian rupee since the introduction of the ngultrum in 1974. Under the RMA Act of Bhutan 2010 (Provisions 88 and 89), the Bhutanese government, on recommendation of the RMA, may declare the external value of the ngultrum, and the RMA will determine the appropriate external value. The RMA does not publish the intervention data.

Official exchange rate

Yes. The ngultrum is officially pegged to the Indian rupee at par. Under the RMA Act of Bhutan 2010 (Provisions 88 and 89), the government may at any time, on recommendation of the RMA, declare the external value of the ngultrum vis-à-vis currencies for which the RMA determines a fixed exchange rate or the width of the exchange rate band against that of foreign currencies whose rate or width it considers compatible with the primary monetary policy objective. The rates for currencies other than the Indian rupee are determined on the basis of the prevailing rupee exchange rates (average rate) against the currencies concerned. The official exchange rate is used for all foreign exchange transactions in Bhutan. The method as mentioned above is prevailing rupee exchange rates (average rate) against the currencies concerned plus fixed margin as decided by the RMA.

Foreign exchange market Yes. Banks may charge customers a spread of 0.2% above or below the dealing rate used by the RMA. Hotels licensed under restricted authorized money changers (AMCs) may charge a commission of 0.5% on cash only. ADs (banks and AMCs) use exchange rates that are determined by the RMA on a daily basis.

Spot exchange market Yes. In addition to the five depository institutions operating in Bhutan, there are 65 AMCs licensed by the RMA. These AMCs may purchase but not sell foreign currency. Commercial banks may only make foreign exchange transactions with the CB. These banks may maintain accounts abroad, conduct operations for the purchase and sale of banknotes, and make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients. As of December 2019, there were 65 AMCs licensed by the RMA. As stipulated in Chapter IIIC of the Foreign Exchange Regulations 2020, any person other than authorized bank may apply for a license from the RMA to carry out money changing business in Bhutan. Accordingly, these licensed AMC operations are limited to (1) buying from individual’s banknotes and traveler’s checks denominated in convertible currencies against the ngultrum or (2) selling to an authorized bank, holdings of banknotes and traveler’s checks denominated in convertible currencies against the ngultrum. They are not allowed to operate like authorized banks, viz. maintain accounts abroad or transfer on behalf of their clients. The RMA allows commercial banks to hold convertible currency up to the maximum limit of US$15 million, beyond which the commercial banks are required to sell it to the RMA.

Operated by the central bank Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility Yes. The RMA stands ready to buy and sell ngultrum at the official exchange rate without any commission and buys and sells on demand. The RMA rates for the US dollar, euro, Swiss franc, Singapore dollar, Hong Kong dollar, Swedish krona, and other major traded currencies are based on the previous day’s closing rates in international markets, as determined by the RMA. Only banks are eligible to deal with the RMA. Since 2016, the RMA opened an exchange counter at the RMA (Thimphu and Phuntsholing branch office) for facilitating the exchange of ngultrum notes for INR notes, beginning with the facility for Bhutanese proceeding on pilgrimage to India and Indian merchants in the border town. Any Bhutanese citizen going on pilgrimage may, in person, avail INR from the RMA exchange counters in Thimphu and RMA branch Office in Phuntsholing up to a limit of Rs 50,000 a person on production of personal Citizenship Identity Card to the exchange counter tellers. Indian merchants were permitted to deposit their sale proceeds in ngultrum with any of the commercial banks and were allowed to repatriate the equivalent in INR the next day through banking channel (demand draft, telegraphic transfer, and real-time gross settlement).

Transactions in capital and money market instruments Yes.

Transactions in derivatives and other instruments Yes.

Credit operations Yes.

Use of foreign exchange among residents Yes.
All payments in Bhutan must be made in local currency. Handicraft shops must obtain an AMC license from the RMA to operate as a authorized money changer.

Payments arrangements Yes.

Bilateral payments arrangements Yes.
Bilateral payments arrangements

Operative Yes. The Agreement on Trade and Commerce with India requires that all transactions between Bhutan and India be made in ngultrum or Indian rupees.

Inoperative No.

Regional arrangements No.

Clearing agreements Yes. Bhutan is a member of the ACU.

Barter agreements and open accounts No.

Administration of control

Yes. The RMA may regulate foreign exchange dealers by adopting regulations to establish licensing and regulation systems consistent with relevant sections of the Financial Services Act. The RMA delegates to authorized commercial banks the authority to process and release foreign exchange for payments for current transactions and implement the surrender requirements for proceeds from merchandise exports. Commercial banks are subject to periodic inspection and RMA monthly reporting requirements. Payments and transfers by residents to nonresidents other than in cash and traveler’s checks must be channeled through authorized banks in Bhutan.

Payments arrears No.

Official No.

Private No.

Controls on trade in gold (coins and/or bullion)

Yes. The RMA has authorized commercial banks to import and sell gold and silver bullion within Bhutan. Imports of gold and silver by Bhutanese citizens require authorization from the RMA.

On domestic ownership and/or trade No.

On external trade Yes. The importation and exportation of cash and securities above a certain limit are subject to a declaration of value at the customs point of entry into and departure from Bhutan.

Controls on exports and imports of banknotes

Yes. The RMA has authorized commercial banks to import and sell gold and silver bullion within Bhutan. Imports of gold and silver by Bhutanese citizens require authorization from the RMA.

On exports Yes. Exports exceeding Nu 5,000 must be declared to customs.

Domestic currency No.

Foreign currency Yes. Convertible foreign exchange that has been obtained from authorized banks and such additional amounts as may reasonably be in the possession of a person may be taken out of Bhutan. However, if the total value of foreign currency taken out of Bhutan exceeds US $10,000 or its equivalent, the individual must declare the total value and sources of such foreign currency to customs at the time of departure.

On imports No.

Domestic currency No. Imports exceeding Nu 5,000 must be declared to customs.

Foreign currency No. There is no limit on the amount of convertible foreign exchange that may be brought into Bhutan. However, under Section 6 of the Foreign Exchange Regulations 2020 anyone who brings in more than US$10,000 or its equivalent must declare it at the customs point of entry.

All capital transactions must be approved by the Bhutanese government.
Residents may not acquire capital or engage in capital transactions abroad. Other than the FDI activities permitted under the 2010 FDI Policy (amended July 18, 2014), adopted by the Ministry of Economic Affairs on May 21, 2010, all types of capital investments are currently prohibited. Outward investment/capital transactions are governed by the Regulations relating to the Possession of Assets and Properties Outside Bhutan by Bhutanese Citizens of July 1993 of the MOF, and External Commercial Borrowing Guidelines issued by the MOF which does not permit outward investment unless approved by the RMA or MOF.

On September 1, 2014, the RMA reintroduced housing and vehicle loans (after temporary suspension of access to Indian rupees to finance imports of personal vehicles and housing construction materials in March 2012). New housing, vehicle, and consumer loan guidelines were issued to guide financial institutions in prudent management and monitoring of credit to these sectors to mitigate systemic risk.

The de jure exchange rate arrangement of the Plurinational State of Bolivia is a crawling peg to the US dollar (also called a “sliding” rate) and is characterized by small exchange rate movements that are not announced in advance. The CBB determines the floor price for the daily competitive foreign exchange auction (“bolsín”) in which both the financial private sector and the nonfinancial private sector participate. The CBB ensures that the exchange rate is consistent with moderate inflation, thus mitigating external and internal inflationary pressures, because the exchange rate is still used as a benchmark for the prices of nontradable goods, albeit to a decreasing extent because of bolivianization (dedollarization) in real and financial transactions. The exchange rates used in most exchange transactions fluctuate... daily within a band of 12 centavos (1.7%), defined by the official buying and selling exchange rates (Bs. 6.86 and Bs. 6.96, respectively) plus a margin of one centavo at each end. Because the boliviano stabilized against the US dollar since November 2011, the de facto exchange rate arrangement is classified as a stabilized arrangement. The authorities consider that the de facto stabilized arrangement does not fully reflect the exchange arrangement managed by the CBB because the official policy of a crawling peg has not changed. The CBB’s crawling peg mechanism allows the sliding rate to be set at zero without changing the arrangement if the underlying economic fundamentals warrant it.

The CBB publishes information on its exchange market interventions and on its foreign exchange purchases and sales in the “Weekly Statistics” section and in other publications such as the Monthly Statistical Bulletin, all of which are available on its website.

Official exchange rate

The official selling exchange rate is the minimum auction price resulting from the bolsín. The official exchange rate is used for official transactions, and the buying rate (Bs 0.10 less than the official rate) is used for valuation and accounting purposes. The CBB uses the official selling exchange rate of the day for same-day sales of US dollars to the general public and to financial institutions, by debiting the accounts in domestic currency and crediting the accounts in US dollars held with financial institutions (Board Resolution No. 63/2013). The CBB can sell US dollars to financial institutions and to the general public on the same day at the official selling exchange rate in effect (Board Resolution No. 63/2013). The majority of foreign exchange operations transacted by financial institutions and exchange bureaus are carried out at an exchange rate within the band defined by the buying and selling exchange rates, plus a margin of Bs 0.01 at each end. The CBB does not sell US dollars directly to the general public (ventas en ventanillas) and/or through financial intermediation entities with majority participation of the government. However, it sells through the other two arrangements (bolsín and direct same-day sales). Similarly, foreign currency can be acquired from any Financial Intermediation Entity.

Exchange tax

Yes. Law No. 713 of July 1, 2015, extended the Financial Transactions Tax (Impuesto a las Transacciones Financieras—ITF) to December 2020.
This tax is levied on transactions performed in foreign currency and in domestic currency indexed to any foreign currency. The rate was 0.15% in 2015, increased to 0.20% in 2016, increased to 0.25% in 2017, and increased to 0.30% in 2018, of the gross amount of the transaction and applies to taxpayers who are individuals or legal entities and who hold current or savings accounts. To that same end, Law No. 1135, of December 20, 2018, amends Law No. 713, extending the effective date of the ITF until December 31, 2023, maintaining a rate of 0.30% while in force. The following are exempt from this tax: (1) credits to and debits from the savings accounts of individuals in foreign currency and in indexed domestic currency, up to US$2,000 or its equivalent in other foreign currencies; (2) on the condition of reciprocity and enforceability of agreements and treaties, credits to and debits from bank accounts corresponding to diplomatic and consular missions and diplomatic personnel; (3) credits to or debits from accounts belonging to the judicial branch, the legislative branch, the central government, the CBB, and departmental and municipal autonomous governments, except publicly owned enterprises; (4) credits to and debits from accounts held by entities governed by the Securities Market Law in the financial system or with the CBB, corresponding to investment accounts belonging to third parties; (5) credits to current or savings accounts through remittances from abroad; and (6) redemption and earnings of shares in investment funds with balances (in domestic or foreign currency) less than or equal to US$2,000.

Exchange subsidy

No.

Foreign exchange market

Yes. The bid-ask spread of the official exchange rate of the boliviano against the US dollar is set by the CBB Board at Bs 0.10 (Point 7 of CBB Board Act 008/2008 of July 3, 2006). This differential is a benchmark for the parallel market, which determines its own differentials and the fees charged to its customers within the limits established for consumer protection. The Financial System Supervisory Authority (Autoridad de Supervisión del Sistema Financiero—ASFI) is responsible for verifying that financial institutions sell US dollars to their customers and users at an exchange rate no higher than Bs 0.01 above the CBB’s official exchange rate and buy US dollars from their customers and users at a rate no lower than Bs 0.01 below the CBB’s official rate. The majority of foreign exchange operations are conducted within this band. The CBB uses the official selling exchange rate of the day for same-day sales of US dollars to the general public and to financial institutions, by debiting the accounts in domestic currency and crediting the accounts in US dollars held with financial institutions (Article 19, Board Resolution No. 63/2013).

Spot exchange market

Yes. The fee (or service charge) for outward fund transfers by the financial system through the CBB is 1% and the fee for funds transfers received by the financial system through the CBB is 0.6% (Board Resolution No. 175/2015). The exceptions are as follows: (1) transfers from exporters through the CBB and remittances equivalent to US$1,000 or less; and (2) transactions carried out through the financial system by the diplomatic corps, cooperation agencies, and international bodies. The temporary financial transactions tax, mentioned in III.F above, is separate from the service charge mentioned in this paragraph.

The commissions on transfers from the financial system through the CBB are 1.6% for transfers abroad and from 0.0% for transfers from... abroad (Board Resolution No. 18/2016). Included are transactions through the CBB for exports and remittances, and transactions through the financial system for the diplomatic corps, cooperation agencies, and international bodies, and remittances less than or equal to US$1,000.

The fee for transfers of funds sent by the financial system through the CBB is 2% (Board Resolution No. 39/2017).

Charges on transfers for 2019 remain at 2% for transfers going abroad and 0% for transfers from abroad RD 177/2018.

Effective January 1, 2020, the commission for transfers abroad decreased from 2% to 0.1% for the payment of capital and interest for financing from multilateral organizations for the private sector. For the financial system, they remain at 2% for transfers abroad and 0% for transfers from abroad (Board Resolution 152/2019).

Exchange transactions may be freely executed and require no special authorization. Commercial banks, exchange bureaus, individuals, legal entities, and nonfinancial private sectors are authorized to deal in foreign exchange. The foreign exchange bought in official public sales by the CBB is freely available for use by the buyer. Foreign exchange sold at auction may be bought only by institutions holding accounts with the CBB, whether for themselves or on behalf of their clients.

The CBB does not sell US dollars directly to the general public (ventas en ventanillas) and/or through financial intermediation entities with majority participation of the government. However, it sells through the other two arrangements (bolsin and direct same-day sales).

Exchange bureaus also trade in foreign currency and are subject to supervision and regulation by the ASFI, pursuant to ASFI Resolution No. 486/2011 of June 16, 2011.

The Regulation governing Exchange Bureaus, issued September 14, 2011, establishes guidelines for the creation of exchange bureaus and for the process of conforming to those in operation. The services that exchange bureaus with legal status can engage in were also defined, such as buying and selling currency, exchanging traveler’s checks, sending and receiving domestic transfers, exchanging and paying remittances from abroad in the capacity of payment agent and, for single-person exchange bureaus only, the buying and selling of currency.

As of August 27, 2020, 170 exchange bureaus and 7 money transfer and remittance companies were registered under the ASFI operating license.

Operated by the central bank: Yes.

The CBB buys foreign currency from the financial system at the buying exchange rate of the day, without any restriction as to the amount. In turn, the CBB sells foreign currency to the financial and nonfinancial private sector through the various mechanisms specified in the previous section.

Foreign exchange standing facility: Yes.

Exchange market participants may buy foreign currency at the CBB, and the CBB in turn sells foreign currency to the financial and nonfinancial private sector and to the public sector.

Allocation: No.

Auction: Yes.

Exchange Regulation No. 063/2013, in its Articles 8 to 18, regulates foreign currency sales through the bolsín. There are no specific auction regulations as such. The CBB sells foreign currency at a bolsín-denominated daily auction. The Monetary and Exchange Policy Committee (Comité de Política Monetaria y Cambiaria—CPMC) determines the amounts to be auctioned. The information on the supply of foreign currency is published each day on the CBB website. The floor price is set by the CBB president, who directs the allocation of foreign currencies in descending price.
order, provided it is higher than the floor price, until the bid is exhausted. Financial institutions may participate in these auctions on their own account or on behalf of their clients with a minimum bid of US$100,000; the nonfinancial private sector may also participate. In the applications to participate in the bolsín, the banks only specify if the foreign currencies to be acquired at the auction are for the banks themselves or for their clients. Once these are awarded they can be withdrawn through the CBB vaults for domestic use or transferred abroad; in the latter case, the bank must fill out a form where they are asked the reason for the transfer, which is usually for trade (imports) or for the bank’s own operations. Auction results are published on the CBB website daily. Bidders pay their offered price. Bids without the necessary resources are rejected and the bidder is barred from bolsín participation for five business days. If the US dollar amount offered is not sufficient to meet all the bids submitted at a particular exchange rate, the dollars are awarded on a prorated basis. The total offer of US$150 million is distributed as follows: the CBB’s daily offer of dollars through the bolsín is US$100 million, and direct sales amount to US$50 million. Monetary and Exchange Policy Committee (CPMC) Act 024/2014 of December 23, 2014. The CBB purchases foreign currency from the financial system at the buying rate of the day, without any restriction as to the amount.

Interbank market Yes. Financial intermediaries are free to carry out transactions at the exchange rate they set among themselves, within the limits of Bs 0.01 below and above the CBB buying and selling rates, respectively. As of June 30, 2020, there are 59 financial intermediaries, of which 12 are full-service banks, 2 are banks serving small and medium enterprises (SMEs), 2 are public banks (BDP S.A.M. and Banco Unión), 3 are Housing Finance Institutions (Entidades Financieras de Vivienda—EFV), 31 are savings and loan cooperatives, and 9 are Development Finance Institutions (DFI), which became subject to regulation in November 2016. Within the framework of the legislation in force (Law No. 393, the Financial Services Law, Articles 19 and 150), an operating license was granted by the Financial System Supervisory Authority to the financial intermediaries.

Purchases and sales of gold are regulated by the National Service for the Registration and Control of Minerals and Metals Trading (Servicio Nacional de Registro y Control de la Comercialización de Minerales y Metales—SENARECOM), in exercise of the powers conferred on it by S.D. No. 29165 of June 13, 2007, to ensure the correct payment of the mining royalty (Regalía Minera—RM). Thus, trading in unprocessed, amalgamated, preconcentrated, concentrated, and precipitated gold, and gold in the form of cast bars and refined ingots is taxed at 7% for official quotes greater than US$700, between 4% and 7% for official quotes between US$400 and US$700, and 4% for official quotes of less than US$400. A rate of 60% applies to trading on the domestic market.

On the other hand, through Law No. 175 of October 11, 2011, which was regulated by S.D. Nos. 1167 and 1327 of March 14 and August 15, 2012, the CBB is authorized to buy gold in bars from state...

Other nontariff measures

| Yes. | Health and Plant Health Permits (animals, food, plants, seeds, medications, leather, wood, wool, cotton, and fine animal fur) prior to the shipment of goods in the country of origin, which are required for the customs clearance certificate, within the framework of Decision No. 515 and Resolutions No.1153 and 1475 of the Andean Community. |

Import taxes and/or tariffs

| Yes. | Tariff Schedule
To contribute to transformation of the means of production with a view to prioritizing strategic sectors that add value and diversification, while leveraging and focusing on domestic market potential and supply, without ignoring external demand, a schedule of tariffs for merchandise imports was established comprising seven tariff rates, with rates of 0% and 5% to encourage imports of capital goods and inputs as well as change in the productive matrix, medium rates of 10%, 15%, and 20% so as not to affect imports of goods included in the household basket; and high rates (30% and 40%) to discourage merchandise imports that compete with national production, primarily manufactured goods.

Furthermore, imports are subject to the VAT and, in the case of certain goods, they are subject to the Specific Consumption Tax and the Special Tax on Hydrocarbons and their Derivatives.

Effective December 12, 2019, the 0% tariff on diesel imports (subheading Nomenclatura Común de los Países Miembros de la Comunidad Andina (NANDINA) 2710.19.21.00) was temporarily extended through S.D. No. 4115, for another year, through December 31, 2020.

Tax and Customs Treatment Applicable to Specific Products

The Plurinational State of Bolivia has established tariff deferrals for certain goods to promote the productive sector, and has also given priority to the import of medical inputs and medication to combat the COVID-19 pandemic.

S.D. No. 4192, effective March 16, 2020, temporarily deferring the TR for the import of medical supplies and equipment to 0% until December 31, 2020.

S.D. No. 4211, effective April 8, 2020, temporarily deferring the TR for wheat imports to 0% for a 2-year period.

S.D. No. 4227, effective April 28, 2020, deferring the TR for the import of inputs and medicines for the treatment of COVID-19 and other basic diseases to 0%.

S.D. No. 4272, effective June 23, 2020, temporarily deferring the TR for the import of fabrics for the manufacture of biosafety clothing and paper for the printing of newspapers to 0% until December 31, 2021.

S.D. No. 4298, effective July 24, 2020, temporarily deferring the TR for imports of machinery and equipment to 0% until December 31, 2020. |
2021.
The rates of finished goods or those that generate some negative externality were modified, to protect the industry and the population in general.

Commercial Agreements
The Plurinational State of Bolivia grants preferential treatment to imports from countries with which it has preferential agreements within the framework of ALADI.

The tariff preferences granted in the framework of all the agreements amount to 100% of the tariff universe except for the agreement with Mexico and with Chile.

Similarly, with the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela, there is a tariff preference equal to 100% of the tariff universe. Outside the ALADI framework, there is a tariff preference with the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela.

Donation of Goods
Law No. 617 of December 17, 2014, determined that imports of goods donated to public entities directly from abroad or acquired by them with resources derived from nonreimbursable financial cooperation or from donations will be exempt from the full payment of customs duties.

In addition, S.D. No. 2308 of March 25, 2015, regulating Law No. 617, establishes the procedure and the requirements for processing exemption from import duties on in-kind donations of goods or on goods acquired with resources derived from donations or nonreimbursable cooperation.

Without quotas Yes.

The Government of the Plurinational State of Bolivia established a socioeconomic policy that puts the country’s food security and food sovereignty first. Thus, export permits are granted without quota restrictions when this activity does not jeopardize the supply of basic products.

With quotas Yes.

The Government of the Plurinational State of Bolivia established a socioeconomic policy that puts the country’s food security and food sovereignty first. The policy aims to prevent usury, speculation, and/or price increases of certain basic foodstuffs. Steps have been taken to authorize exports of certain products only after verification of adequate fairly priced domestic supplies.

S.D. No. No. 3456 of January 10, 2018: (1) amended and incorporated provisions into S.D. No. 1554 regulating Law No. 307 on the sugarcane production complex to promote exports and (2) established oversight and monitoring mechanisms for ensuring conditions for adequate fairly priced domestic supplies, taking market conditions into account.

Effective June 5, 2019, S.D. No. 3920 of May 29, 2019, authorized soybean exports equal to 60% of the national production of the previous fiscal year according to official National Statistics Institute (INE) data after verification of sufficiency and supply in the domestic market at a fair price.

Effective January 22, 2020, S.D. No. 4139, facilitates the export process, because it revokes the Certificate of Internal Supply and Fair Price issued by the National Customs Office and eliminates the following products from the list of those that may be subject to temporary suspension of exports: beef and live cattle, corn and its by-products, sorghum, oil, and sugar.

Controls on capital and money market instruments

Yes. In accordance with Law No. 1834 of March 18, 1998, securities traded on the Bolivian securities market must be authorized and registered in the ASFI Securities Market Registry. Securities authorized for trading on the Bolivian securities market are: fixed-term deposits, promissory notes, bonds, National General Treasury Bonds, CBB bonds, share certificates of closed-end investment funds, CBB and National General Treasury bills, securitized assets, and shares.

The only instruments that may be publicly offered on the Bolivian securities market are those listed on certain foreign securities exchanges identified as such by the Directorate of Securities Supervision and Holding Companies (DSVSC) of the ASFI, provided they comply with the registration and disclosure requirements set out in the law. Only securities authorized by the ASFI may be traded on the OTC market. Article 471 of the Financial Services Law (LSF) stipulates that the ASFI will regulate the maximum limits on investment abroad by financial intermediaries.

Purchase abroad by residents

Yes. Article 471 of Law No. 393 on Financial Services stipulates that the ASFI will regulate the maximum limits on investment abroad by financial intermediaries, that is, entities that accept deposits and grant loans.

In accordance with ASFI Resolution No. 429/2016 of June 17, 2016, the limits on investing in shares of multilateral financing organizations may not exceed 40% of the bank’s regulatory capital.
Investments in shares of auxiliary financial service companies, in enterprises in the securities, insurance, and pension sectors, and in development banks may not exceed the amount of their regulatory capital, insofar as it is a requirement for obtaining credit lines. Effective March 27, 2019, ASFI through Resolution No. 247/2019 modified the Regulation of Investments in Fixed Assets and Operations with Foreign Entities and lowered the foreign investment limit of banks from 25% to 15% of regulatory capital. To compute this limit, investments in time deposits and securities abroad are considered, in addition to the account of banks and corresponding entities abroad.

Additionally, through Resolution No. 246/2019, ASFI approved reducing limits on investment abroad for new open and closed investment funds, from 25% to 5%, effective March 27, 2019. This new limit will not apply to investment funds that are currently in operation. However, it is established that the limit that these will have will be the level of investments registered as of March 27, 2019.

In accordance with Law No. 65 of December 10, 2010, investments abroad by pension fund managers may not exceed 50% of each managed fund.

Administrative Resolution APS/DJ/UI/N°464/2017 states that the National General Treasury of Bolivia may also directly or indirectly invest the resources of SIP Funds (Fondos del Sistema Integral de Pensiones; Integrated Pension System’s Funds) in foreign debt securities up to the limit of 10% of the total amount of each issue through the intermediaries contracted by the Ministry of the Economy and Public Finance of the Plurinational State of Bolivia. In accordance with S.D. No. 25201, each year the CBB sets the maximum limit for investments abroad by insurance companies. Since January 1, 2015, the maximum limit for investments abroad by insurance companies is 10% of their investment resources; this limit remained unchanged in CBB Board Resolution No. 6/2018 of January 9, 2018.

Effective January 8, 2019, through CBB Board Resolution No. 6/2019 of January 8, 2019, the CBB lowered the maximum limit for foreign investments with insurance company resources from 10% to 7%. The APS (Autoridad de Fiscalizacion y Control De Pensiones y Seguros; Pensions and Insurance Supervision and Oversight Authority) stipulated that insurance companies adapt their investments in securities of issuers incorporated abroad to the percentage set until June 30, 2019.

On January 7, 2020, through CBB Board Resolution No. 007/2020, it is established that in Fiscal Year 2020, the maximum limit for foreign investments with insurance companies remains at 7% of their investment resources.

options presented by the local market; (4) Authorization on the part of the APS, which does not imply liability of any sort with respect to management of the investment portfolio of the SIP Funds; and (5) the amounts must be denominated in US dollars. The administrative resolution also stipulates that the National General Treasury of Bolivia may directly or indirectly invest the resources of SIP Funds in foreign debt securities up to the limit of 10% of the total amount of each issue through the intermediaries contracted by the Ministry of the Economy and Public Finance of the Plurinational State of

Provisions Specific to the Financial Sector

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions

Yes. The purpose of the Financial Services Law (Law No. 393) is to regulate financial intermediation activities, the provision of complementary financial services, as well as the organization and operation of financial intermediaries and complementary financial services companies, financial consumer protection, and the government’s involvement as the governing body of the financial system, ensuring universal financial services and guiding operational activities in support of the country’s economic and social development policies. It includes aspects focused on financial consumer protection and the development of the housing and productive sectors by establishing a system to control interest rates and minimum portfolio levels (S.D. No. 1842 and S.D. No. 2055). It also strengthens the prudential and solvency measures applicable to financial institutions, in addition to establishing deposit insurance for low-income savers, who account for more than 90% of the total...
In accordance with Chapter VIII of Title II of Book 2 of the Compilation of Standards for Financial Services, revised April 27, 2018, short-term foreign liabilities are subject to reserve requirements, with the exception of liabilities incurred solely in connection with foreign trade operations in which the assets and liabilities of each transaction are exactly matched.

In accordance with the ASFI Circular of December 16, 2010, as amended by ASFI Resolution No. 13/2014, the specific provisions for loans denominated in foreign currency or in indexed domestic currency (MNV) as a function of the category and type of credit are as follows:

Category A:
1. For Business, Microcredit, SMEs 2.25% and 1% for direct and contingent, respectively;
2. For housing (direct and contingent) Residential mortgage credit, social residential mortgage credit, and social residential credit with no mortgage guarantee, 2.5%;
3. For housing (direct and contingent) Residential credit without mortgage guarantee and duly secured home loans without mortgage guarantee, 7%;
4. For consumption (direct and contingent), 7%.

Category B:
1. For Business, Microcredit, SMEs 5% for both direct and contingent;
2. For housing (direct and contingent) Residential mortgage credit, social residential mortgage credit, and social residential credit with no mortgage guarantee, 5%;
3. For housing (direct and contingent) Residential credit without mortgage guarantee and duly secured home loans without mortgage guarantee, 12%;
4. For consumption (direct and contingent), 12%.

Category C: 20% for all types of loans;
Category D: 50% for all types of loans;
Category E: 80% for all types of loans;
Category F: 100% for all types of loans.

The reserve requirement regime varies by currency. Effective April 9, 2019, via CBB Board Resolution No. 35/2019, the reserve requirement for deposits in foreign currency and MVDOL (unit of account indexed to the exchange rate vis-à-vis the US dollar) for demand deposits, savings account deposits, and fixed-term deposits (DPFs) up to 360 days is 31.5% (previously 46.5%), 18% for DPFs between 360 and 720 days (previously 33%), and 10% for DPFs greater than 720 days (previously 25%). With the release of these resources, the Fund for Loans to the Productive Sector and Social Interest Housing III (CPVIS III Fund) was created. In addition, it allows the CBB or one or more foreign institutions to act as delegated administrators in the administration of the RAL-ME Fund.

For domestic currency and domestic currency indexed to the Housing Development Unit MNUFV, it is 11% for demand deposits, savings account deposits, and fixed-term deposits (Depósitos a Plazo Fijo—DPF) of 30–360 days, 5% in securities and 6% in cash. Deposits in MN and UFV greater than 360 days are exempt from reserve requirements. For funds in escrow, which is the percentage of cash reserves that financial intermediaries hold in foreign currency and MVDOL in their vaults, the reserve requirement is 40%, and for domestic currency, it is up to 50% for MNUFV.

Board Resolution No. 044/2020, effective March 24, 2020, adds the single transitory provision to the Reserve Requirements, specifically referring to the Extraordinary Reserve Requirement associated with the Exceptional Funds. The exceptional funds received by Financial Intermediation Entities must be used in the construction of new portfolios between April 1, 2020, and July 31, 2020. If this increase is less than the amount established in the schedule, the Financial Intermediation Entities must constitute an extraordinary legal reserve in cash for 100% of the difference.

Board Resolution No. 055/2020, effective May 15, 2020, modified the Single Transitional Provision so that the exceptional funds also reach Development Financial Institutions and Credit Unions when calculating new portfolio creation.

Effective June 29, 2020, via Board Resolution No. 060/2020, the reserve requirements were reduced as follows: (1) In domestic currency and MNUFV (cash) from 6% to 5.5%; (2) In domestic currency and MNUFV (securities) from 5% to 4.5%; (3) In foreign currency and MVDOL (cash) from 13.5% to 10%; (4) In foreign currency and MVDOL (securities) from 18% to 11%; except for time deposits of 720 days or more, for which 10% is maintained. Financial Intermediation Entities may maintain up to 60% of their cash reserve requirement in domestic currency and MNUFV in Funds in Custody in any location; previously, the percentage was 50%.

The released resources (from the reductions in the reserve requirements) should be kept at the Fondo para Créditos para la Adquisición de Productos Nacionales y el Pago de Servicios de Origen Nacional (CAPROSEN).

Abroad by banks

Yes.

Article 471 of Law No. 393 on Financial Services stipulates that the ASFI will regulate the maximum limits on investment abroad by financial intermediaries, that is, entities that accept deposits and grant loans.

In accordance with ASFI Resolution No. 429/2016 of June 17, 2016, the maximum limits for investments abroad by banks are the following:

- financial intermediaries, entities that take deposits and place portfolio investments may invest up to 40% of their regulatory capital in the establishment of fixed branches or offices abroad and/or in shares of multilateral financing organizations abroad. Investments in shares of auxiliary financial service companies, in enterprises in the securities, insurance, and pension sectors, and in development banks may not exceed the amount of their regulatory capital insofar as it is a requirement for obtaining credit lines.

Effective March 27, 2019, ASFI through Resolution No. 247/2019 modified the Regulation of Investments in Fixed Assets and Operations with Foreign Entities and lowered the foreign investment limit of banks from 25% to 15% of regulatory capital. To compute this limit, investments in time deposits and securities abroad are considered, in addition to the account of banks and corresponding entities abroad. The new formula to calculate the limit takes the monthly average of the daily balance of the sub-accounts with the cutoff date on the last day of the month. The deadline to adequate to this limit is June 28, 2019. ASFI Circular 627/2020 and ASFI Resolution 081/2020, effective January 28, 2020 approved and put into effect the Regulation that provides for the responsibility of Financial Intermediation Entities to control the financing received or granted. It provides for the obligation of the Internal Audit Unit of the Financial Intermediation Entity to incorporate, within its Annual Work Plan, the verification of the financing contracted by the entity. It determines that the supervised entities must have policies and procedures to achieve an optimal management of the financing, allowing for the expansion of credit coverage to the productive sector. It specifies that Financial Intermediation Entities must consider preventive measures for the control of financing to monitor that it does not exceed the legal limits. It also stipulates that the supervised entity that grants financing must have policies and procedures for assessing and mitigating the risk inherent in the financing. Credit coverage for the productive sector in rural areas must take into account the classification of urban and rural municipalities.

In banks by nonresidents

No.

Open foreign exchange position limits Yes. The net open foreign exchange position limits are the same for resident and nonresident assets and liabilities.

On resident assets and liabilities Yes. For financial intermediaries, the long position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies is 60% and the short position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies (excess of liabilities over assets in those denominations), is 40% of equity. In the case of MNUFV, the long position limit (excess of assets over liabilities in that denomination) is 10%.

Effective January 24, 2019, CBB Resolution No. 11/2019 changed for financial institutions the long position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies from 60% to 50% and the short position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies (excess of liabilities over assets in those denominations), was increased to 50% from 40% of equity.

On nonresident assets and liabilities Yes. For financial intermediaries, the long position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies is 60% and the short position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies (excess of liabilities over assets in those denominations), 40% of equity. In the case of MNUFV, the long position limit (excess of assets over liabilities in that denomination) is 10%.

Effective January 24, 2019, CBB Resolution 011/2019 changed for financial institutions the long position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies from 60% to 50% and the short position limit in foreign currency, MVDOL, and other foreign currencies (excess of liabilities over assets in those denominations),

The exchange rate arrangement is a currency board. The CB covers base money with its foreign reserves, including currency in circulation and commercial bank deposits. The Law on the Central Bank, adopted by the parliamentary assembly of Bosnia and Herzegovina, guarantees convertibility of the currency of Bosnia and Herzegovina. There are no restrictions on the purchase and sale of foreign exchange. The Central Bank of Bosnia and Herzegovina publishes data on its sales and purchases.
The convertible mark is pegged to the euro at the rate of KM 1 per €0.51129. This rate applies to CB transactions as well as accounting and valuation. The exchange rate is fixed by the Law on the CBBH, and it can be changed only through parliamentary approval. The official exchange rate is used for foreign exchange transactions between the CB, commercial banks, and government and for valuation of import and export transactions.

The monetary policy framework is an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis the euro.
Foreign exchange market: Yes. Commercial banks and other financial institutions may buy and sell convertible mark for euros and other foreign currency without restriction at the official exchange rate indicated in Article 32 of the CBBH law. Banks and exchange bureaus may charge a commission up to 1% in their foreign exchange transactions pursuant to the Law on the Central Bank, Article 33.

Spot exchange market: Yes. Supervisory authorities issue licenses to commercial banks, which are authorized to conduct foreign exchange operations. As of December 31, 2019, 26 banks had licenses (17 banks licensed by the Banking Agency of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and 9 licensed by the Banking Agency of Republika Srpska). Foreign exchange bureaus may also deal in foreign exchange on behalf of banks (if they have a contract with a bank) and are subject to licensing by the relevant ministry. Exchange bureaus may engage in cash retail transactions only. There were 173 registered exchange bureaus as of December 31, 2019. They may buy traveler’s checks and buy and sell foreign currency banknotes. Their customers are individuals only. Although they may sell foreign currency to residents, their main function is currency banknote exchange services for nonresidents. They cannot make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients. Exchange bureaus operate under contracts with banks. The exchange rates and their commissions are specified in their contract with the bank, except the exchange rate of the euro. Exchange bureaus’ operations are supervised by the...
Banking Agency of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Banking Agency of Republika Srpska, and the Foreign Exchange Inspectorate of Republika Srpska.

- Currency board
- Conventional peg
- Stabilized arrangement
- Crawling peg: Yes. The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as a crawling peg. The official exchange rate of the pula is determined according to a weighted basket of currencies comprising the SDR and the South African rand. The crawl rate is set as the difference between the Bank of Botswana’s (BOB’s) inflation objective and the average inflation forecast in major trading partner countries. The crawl rate is thus determined using a forward-looking approach and is revised regularly. In this approach, the authorities periodically determine the crawl rate for the subsequent period, such as the next 6 or 12 months. The weights of the basket are 45% for the South African rand and 55% for the SDR. Effective January 1, 2019, an upward rate of crawl of 0.3% (previously a downward rate of crawl of 0.3%) an annum was adopted, while the weights of the pula basket remained unchanged. Effective January 1, 2020, a downward rate of crawl of 1.51% per annum was adopted. However, to accommodate the impact of COVID-19 pandemic on the economy, on May 1, 2020, the downward rate of crawl was changed to 2.87%, while the weights of the pula basket remained unchanged. Decisions relating to this framework are made by the president of Botswana on the recommendation of the minister of finance and Economic Development after consultation with the BOB.

The monetary policy framework is primarily an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis a basket of currencies comprising the SDR and rand. Within this framework, the crawl rate is determined using a forward-looking approach, which is based on the difference between the average inflation forecast in major trading partner countries and the BOB’s medium-term inflation objective within a 3%–6% range, to achieve price stability, the overarching goal of the BOB.
ADs are allowed to freely determine their bid-ask spreads and foreign exchange commissions in transactions with their clients. Nine commercial banks and sixty foreign exchange bureaus were licensed to deal in foreign exchange with the public, as at end of 2019. Foreign exchange bureaus are allowed to operate and are licensed by the BOB. Foreign exchange bureaus may not enter into foreign exchange transactions directly with the BOB; they may maintain accounts abroad, and a separate permission is required for foreign exchange payments and transfers on behalf of their clients.

Operated by the central bank: Yes.

Foreign exchange standing facility: Yes. Foreign exchange equal to or above $1 million is available from the BOB on demand by commercial banks at the official bid-ask rates. The spread between the buying and selling rates of the pula is 0.125% above or below the central parity. Commercial banks trade among themselves for amounts below $1 million. The BOB does not deal directly with the government and other public entities. The BOB deals directly with 9 commercial banks.

Allocation: No. There is no foreign exchange allocation by the BOB.

Auction: No. There is no foreign exchange auction by the BOB.

Fixing: No. There is no foreign exchange fixing by the BOB.

Interbank market: Yes. As of December 31, 2019, 9 commercial banks in Botswana participated in the interbank foreign exchange market. The BOB issues the licenses. The bid-ask spread is limited to 0.125% above or below the central parity; there are no limits on commissions. Commercial banks may buy foreign exchange from the BOB for amounts equal to or above $1 million; below this amount, commercial banks trade among themselves.

Over the counter: No.

Brokerage: No.

Market making: Yes. The foreign exchange market operates under a market-making agreement.

Forward exchange market: Yes. Forward exchange cover is offered by commercial banks, and the maturity dates of forward exchange contracts and transactions are not restricted. The BOB does not participate in the foreign exchange derivatives market. It has agreements with correspondent banks stating the terms and conditions for foreign accounts. The BOB does not trade forwards and swaps.

Official cover of forward operations: Yes.

Exchange Measures

Restrictions and/or multiple currency practices
Yes. The IMF staff report for the 2019 Article IV Consultation with Brazil states that, as of June 26, 2019, the tax on financial transactions (Imposto sobre Operações Financeiras, IOF) of 6.38% on exchange transactions carried out by credit card, debit card, and traveler's checks (including cash withdrawals) companies in order to fulfill their payment obligations for purchases of goods and services abroad by their customers gives rise to a multiple currency practice (MCP) subject to IMF jurisdiction under Article VIII, Sections 2(a) and 3. In January 2008, the IOF for these exchange transactions was raised to 2.38% and then further increased to 6.38% in March 2011. The scope of operations was expanded to other foreign exchange transactions than with credit cards in December 2013. (Country Report No. 19/242)

Exchange measures imposed for security reasons
Yes. In accordance with IMF Executive Board Decision No. 144-(52/51)

Other security restrictions
Yes. Restrictions apply according to UNSC resolutions and Brazilian legislation on Countering the Financing of Terrorism.

Stabilized arrangement
The de jure and de facto exchange rate arrangements are classified as floating. There is no official exchange rate for Brazil as the exchange rate of the real is defined by supply and demand in the foreign exchange market. The BCB intervenes to smooth out excessive volatility and/or provide liquidity and hedge in response to a thin market, with the ultimate objective of assuring a functioning foreign exchange market. Intervention data in the interbank market are available in the BCB’s weekly publication on currency flows on the BCB website with a lag ranging from 7 to 12 days, considering execution dates. However, the Deputy Governor for Monetary Policy may choose to publish intervention volumes on the same day of each auction. Data on interventions in the derivatives market are published on the same day of each auction.

There is no official exchange rate for the real determined by the BCB. The BCB publishes a reference rate, known as the PTAX rate, which is the average of four polls conducted by the BCB with the group formed by its primary dealers (up to 14 institutions in the domestic US dollar interbank market). The polls start at a random time in the 10 minutes following 10:00, 11:00, 12:00, and 13:00, and the dealers have two minutes to report their bid and ask quotes for the US dollar–Brazilian real (USD–BRL) at the beginning of the poll. The BCB cannot buy or sell at the quotes provided by the dealers, but dealers who consistently provide out-of-market quotes may lose their dealer status. At each poll, the two highest and two lowest bid and ask quotes are trimmed, and the consistency of the final results is tested against market parameters obtained from the BCB’s information systems and data feeders. The PTAX rate is published right after the last poll results. The BCB does not require that government agencies use the PTAX rate as a benchmark for conversion. However, government agencies and financial institutions generally use the PTAX as it is a reliable reference. According to the foreign exchange regulation, the exchange rate is freely agreed between the parties, including if the government is the client.

Brazil implemented a formal inflation-targeting framework for monetary policy in 1999.
A one-year inflation target and its tolerance interval are fixed 30 months in advance by the National Monetary Council (CMN), which is composed of the Minister of Economy (chair), the Ministry of Economy (ME)’s Special Secretary of Finance and the Governor of Banco Central do Brasil.

Inflation target

- Yes.

Target number

- Yes.

Point target

- Yes.

Target with tolerance band

- Yes. The inflation target for 2020 is 4% with a tolerance interval of ±1.5%.
- The inflation target for 2021 is 3.75% with a tolerance interval of ±1.5%.
- The inflation target for 2022 is 3.5% with a tolerance interval of ±1.5%.
- The inflation target for 2023 is 3.25% with a tolerance interval of ±1.5%.

Band/Range

Target measure

- Yes.

CPI

- Yes. National Consumer Price Index Extended, measured by the Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics. The definition is given by the Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistics. National Consumer Price Index Extended measures inflation rate for a group of products and services from retail trade, relative to household expenditure. The income range between 1 and 40 minimum wages was created to guarantee a 90% coverage of families living in urban areas.

Core inflation

Target horizon

- Yes. A one-year inflation target and its tolerance interval are fixed 30 months in advance by the CMN, and the BCB must pursue this target. The inflation-targeting framework in Brazil is flexible. The horizon that the BCB sees as appropriate for the return of inflation to the target depends on both the nature of the shocks that affect the economy and their persistence.

Operating target (policy rate)

- Yes.

Policy rate

- Yes. The BCB’s Monetary Policy Committee (COPO) was created on June 20, 1996, and was assigned the responsibility of setting the stance of monetary policy and the short-term interest rate. The aim of creating the COPO was to enhance the monetary policy transparency and confer adequate regularity to the monetary policy decision-making process.

The Selic rate is the primary instrument of the monetary policy. It is the average interest rate charged on the daily interbank loans – with a maturity of one day (overnight) backed by federal government securities – registered in the Special System of Clearance and Custody (Selic). In sum, the Selic rate balances the market for the bank reserves.

Exchange tax
Yes.
Foreign exchange transactions are subject to the IOF general tax rate of 0.38%, which is levied and collected on the settlement date of the foreign exchange operation. An IOF of 6.38% is applied to foreign exchange transactions related to the purchase of prepaid cards and traveler’s checks. It is also applied to foreign exchange transactions carried out by credit card companies for the payment of obligations because of operations abroad carried out by their clients in connection with expenditures and automated teller machine (ATM) withdrawals abroad using credit and debit cards. External loans with maturity less than 180 days are subject to the 6% IOF. External loans with an initial term of more than 180 days will still be subject to the 6% IOF rate if the loan is repaid within the 180-day period. There are some exceptions, as described by Decree No. 6.306 of December 14, 2007: The IOF is zero on trades involving overseas depositary receipts (DRs) issued by Brazilian companies. The IOF rate is also zero on (1) inflows of export proceeds; (2) interbank transactions between institutions that make up the national financial system and that are authorized to operate in the foreign exchange market, and between these institutions and institutions abroad; (3) investments by investment funds in the international market, according to the limits and conditions established by the Brazilian Securities and Exchange Commission (Comissão de Valores Mobiliários of Brazil, CVM); (4) outflows related to local revenues of international air transportation companies domiciled abroad; (5) inflows of foreign currency to cover expenses from the use of credit cards issued abroad; (6) inflows of cash donations received by financial institutions controlled by the Brazilian government and destined for the prevention, monitoring, and combating of deforestation and the promotion of the conservation and sustainable use of Brazilian forests, as provided by specific legislation; (7) inflows and outflows of funds obtained as external loans and financing, except external loans with maturity of less than 180 days; (8) remittances of interest.
on owner’s equity and dividends; (9) transactions of foreign investors, including through simultaneous operations, for investment in the financial and capital markets; (10) purchases of foreign exchange by institutions authorized to operate in the foreign exchange market, executed simultaneously with a sale transaction, when required by law; (11) nonresidents’ investments in fixed-income securities and derivative margin deposits; (12) settlements of foreign exchange inflow transactions, including through simultaneously contracted foreign exchange transactions after December 1, 2011, related to inflows stemming from cancellation of DRs invested in stocks in the stock market; (13) use of credit and debit cards by the public sector for acquisition of goods and services abroad; and (14) settlements of foreign exchange operations derived from a foreign investor regime switch from direct investment to investment in stocks traded on a securities exchange according to regulation issued by the CMN. Some cross-border operations have been exempt from the IOF (set in the Law, not amendable by Presidential Decree), most notably operations carried out for payment of imported goods, foreign exchange operations by diplomatic missions, and credit to housing programs or for project purposes, including infrastructure facilities and Itaipu Binacional.

Banks and other institutions authorized to operate in the foreign exchange market may freely set their exchange rates and foreign exchange commissions in transactions with their clients. There are 180 institutions authorized by the BCB to operate in the foreign exchange market buying and selling foreign currency (101 banks and 79 nonbank financial institutions). (www.bcb.gov.br/estabilidadefinanceira/instituicoesoperacambio). Only banks may maintain accounts abroad for the purpose of performing international payments and transfers on behalf of their clients. Any institution authorized by the BCB to operate in the foreign exchange market can qualify to be a primary foreign exchange dealer, which is eligible to operate directly with the BCB. (In practice, however, because of the weight given to transacted amounts in the qualifying process, only banks have been selected as dealers so far.) Currently, there are 14 primary foreign exchange dealers, which are the only institutions authorized to buy/sell currencies in the BCB’s foreign currency auctions. (www.bcb.gov.br/estabilidadefinanceira/dealerscambio).

Any of the 180 foreign exchange-authorized institutions, however, can perform operations with the BCB in which they cash their deposits in foreign currencies or vice versa. Nonbanks have a limit of effective May 5, 2020, US$300,000 (previously US$100,000) an operation with clients (not applicable to operations in the interbank market). Banks and nonbanks may contract with companies, which act as foreign exchange bureaus to perform foreign exchange operations up to US$3,000 related to unilateral transfers and cash transactions, typically related to international travel. There are 4,300 such contractor companies.

Depending on market circumstances, the BCB may execute foreign exchange auctions and direct operations for intervention purposes. The types of auctions performed by the BCB in the interbank market are spot, forward, and credit lines (equivalent to foreign exchange swaps). Only foreign exchange dealers authorized by the BCB are eligible to participate in these auctions. Currently, there are 14 institutions authorized as primary dealers. The dealers are selected every 12 months based on the volume traded in the foreign exchange market and their past performance as dealers. The BCB may also intervene in the derivatives market using specific listed contracts at B3, former BM&FBOVESPA, the foreign exchange swaps (formally called US Dollar Swap with Reset Referencing One-Day Repurchase Agreements) which function as synthetic futures contracts. In this kind of auction, any preregistered market participant may take part. In credit lines and foreign exchange swaps auctions, the amounts to be auctioned are preannounced. There is a minimum amount for bids for auctions in the interbank market. In the auctions with preannounced amounts, that is also the maximum bid. The frequency of the auctions is only known if they are part of an intervention program. All BCB auction operations are delivery versus payment (DVP); if an institution’s payment fails, that institution will lose its dealer status. Results are disclosed in Communiqués. During acute crisis, the BCB may use foreign currency loans and earmarked spot auctions in which the amounts must be used to finance export trades and in which all institutions authorized to operate in the foreign exchange market can participate.

Fixing  No.

Interbank market  Yes. One hundred and eighty institutions are authorized by the BCB to operate in the interbank foreign exchange market (101 banks and 79 nonbank financial institutions – securities intermediaries, foreign exchange brokerage firms). Nonbanks can only operate on a spot basis, while banks can also perform future or forward operations. There are no limits on the bid-ask spreads and commissions of market participants. The Brazilian currency leg of all foreign exchange interbank transactions must be settled through the BCB-operated real-time gross settlement (RTGS) system. In July 2020, 38.9% of those operations were settled through a clearinghouse, which acts as a central counterparty (B3 Foreign Exchange Clearinghouse). The BCB intervenes in the foreign exchange interbank market mainly with auctions via its primary foreign exchange dealers.

Over the counter  Yes.

Brokerage  Yes.

Market making  Yes.

Forward exchange market  Yes. Only banks are allowed to trade foreign exchange on a forward basis. Most of such transactions must be settled within 360 days. The term limit is higher for interbank transactions (1,500 days), export transactions (1,500 days), and transactions with the National Treasury (1,500 days). Forward foreign exchange auctions are one of the instruments available for the BCB for intervention in the foreign exchange market.

Official cover of forward operations  No.

The CMN sets the overall foreign exchange policy. Foreign trade policy is set by the Chamber of Foreign Trade (CAMEX), which consists of the minister of development, industry and foreign trade (who heads the chamber); presidential chief of staff; minister of economy; minister of foreign affairs; and minister of agriculture and supply. The ME implements trade policy through the Foreign Trade and International Affairs Special Secretariat (SECINT), specifically the Secretariat of Foreign Trade (SECEX).

There are three separate markets for gold transactions: financial, foreign exchange, and commercial. Transactions with gold in any grade of purity (crude or refined) by institutions of the national financial system in the financial market, following the extraction of gold or to implement exchange rate policy, are regulated by the CMN. These transactions are subject to the IOF. Rules regarding gold transactions for industrial purposes are defined separately by the federal states, which also establish different rates for the commercial tax levied thereon. The Electronic Declaration of International Physical Movement of Valuables (e-DMOV) must be submitted to the customs office of the Secretariat of the RFB for imports and exports of gold as a financial or foreign exchange instrument in amounts exceeding R$10,000 or its equivalent.

Nonresident Accounts

Foreign exchange accounts permitted

Yes. Foreign exchange accounts may be held by embassies, foreign delegations, international organizations, foreign transportation companies, foreign citizens in transit in the country, Brazilians living abroad, reinsurance companies (if authorized to operate in Brazil), and other persons authorized by the CMN. The balances in these accounts may be transferred abroad freely. Foreign exchange accounts of nonresident clients must be held in banks authorized by the BCB to conduct foreign exchange operations. These accounts’ deposits and withdrawals are not subject to tax (IOF), unless a foreign exchange operation is involved, in which case a rate of 0.38% is applied. Some foreign exchange transactions are exempt from the IOF, such as those of diplomatic missions and consular offices and of their foreign officials.

The payment of import financing operations with a maturity of more than 360 days cannot be transferred prior to the arrival of the good or to the rendering of the service.

External financing of imports for periods of more than 360 days must be registered with the BCB strictly for statistical purposes.

Importers must be included in the SECEX Importer and Exporter Register; registration automatically occurs with the first transaction. Imports must be registered in the import subsystem of the Integrated Foreign Trade System (SISCOMEX/IMPORT), which allows importers, carriers, banks, and brokers to register the various stages of an import process directly through the interlinked computers of the SECEX and RFB.

Commercial imports must be registered in Brazil’s Integrated Foreign Trade System (SISCOMEX, Sistema Integrado de Comércio Exterior), while importers must register in the Registry of Exporters and Importers (REI) maintained by the SECEX at the SECINT, ME. Inscription in the REI is free of charge and is done automatically at the time of the first transaction in the SISCOMEX. Although it may not be revoked, the inscription may be suspended for up to two years as a sanction for import-related fraud.

The granting of nonautomatic licenses for imports of used machinery and equipment is conditional on proof that such items are not produced in Brazil and that no substitute item is currently produced in Brazil. Nonautomatic licensing is also used for administration of duty and tax concessions; to benefit, imports must undergo a “similarity examination” to ascertain that there is no equivalent domestic product.

Imports are grouped into the following three categories: (1) those that do not require licenses (most common), (2) those subject to automatic import licenses, and (3) those subject to nonautomatic licenses. In general, imports are exempt from approval requirements. However, some require approval (that is, an import license) from the SECEX or another government agency, and it is promptly given to importers that fulfill licensing requirements. As a rule, licenses are valid for 90 days and may be extended if the delay is justified by the importer. Import licenses for certain imports may be obtained after the goods have arrived but before customs clearance.

Products subject to automatic licensing are listed in the Administrative Treatment of SISCOMEX and on the Ministry Web page. Products under the special customs regime of drawback are also subject to automatic licensing. Products subject to nonautomatic licensing are listed in the Administrative Treatment of SISCOMEX and on the Ministry Web page. They are mostly products that may damage human, plant, or animal health or cause environmental... damage; products classified as weapons or made for warlike purposes; products subject to nontariff quotas as established in the agreements of the Uruguay Round; products subject to tariff quotas; and products subject to trade remedy measures established in accordance with the WTO agreements.

The Brazilian normative framework related to similarity examination and import licensing procedures is based on the following legislation: (1) Decree-Law No. 37 of November 18, 1966; (2) Decree No. 6,759 of February 5, 2009; and (3) SECEX Ordinance No. 23 of July 14, 2011. Any person, enterprise, or institution may request import licensing. The only requirement is SISCOMEX registration. Import licenses are obtained through the SISCOMEX. Such an administrative procedure – that integrates the registration activities and monitors imports and exports – is based on the sole flow of computerized information so as to make the process efficient and fast. Importers may request import licensing directly from their institution if it is registered with the SISCOMEX.

Imports of used consumer goods are prohibited for environmental, safety, and consumer rights reasons. Used consumer goods may be imported only by the government or education and scientific institutions. Imports of used nonconsumer goods (except aeronautic goods and packaging materials in temporary admission or reimportation) are subject to nonautomatic licensing.

Imports of agrochemical products not authorized under Brazilian regulations are prohibited, as are imports of weapons and military equipment (from Eritrea, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, and Libya) and of certain drugs, for reasons of security, health, morals, or UNSC resolutions. It is forbidden to import, export, or store dichlorodiphenyltrichloroethane (DDT) and to import and export rough diamonds from countries not participating in the Kimberley Process Certification Scheme.

In addition to imports covered by the LAIA agreement, goods imported through the Manaus and Tabatinga free trade zones are subject to an annual quota. Foreign goods worth up to the equivalent of US$2,000 imported into the Manaus Free Trade Zone may be transferred to other parts of Brazil (as a passenger’s baggage) free of import duties.

Sanitary and phytosanitary measures and technical regulations, conformity assessment, and standards must be observed.

The MERCOSUR agreement established a customs union with a CET. Ad valorem tariffs range from 0% to 20%. Exceptional cases are subject to higher rates. MERCOSUR members are allowed temporary national tariff exceptions. Accordingly, Brazil may maintain an exception list for information technology and capital goods under the “ex tarifários” program established by Ordinance ME SECINT No. 309 of June 24, 2019. For general items, up to 100 tariff codes may be included on the list of CET exceptions through December 31, 2021. MERCOSUR countries adopted a program aimed at consolidation of the customs union, which includes revision of the CET, free trade zones, special common import regimes, a common automotive policy, a national exception to CET lists, harmonization of drawback customs programs, elimination of the double-levy CET, and distribution of customs income. MERCOSUR countries could also increase the import tax for extra-zone imports up to WTO consolidated tariffs for 200 MERCOSUR Common Nomenclature positions until December 31, 2021. This was a temporary and strategic mechanism that allowed MERCOSUR countries to cope with the international crisis. However, Brazil has never used this capacity.

Yes. Documentation includes invoices, international shipment notification, and export registration.

Export licenses

Yes. Exporters are automatically registered with the SECEX’s REI on their first export operation. New export operations should use the Single Export Declaration (Declaração Única de Exportação – DUE). The DUE is based on the electronic receipt and comprises information of a commercial, administrative, customs, tax and logistics nature that characterizes the export operation of the merchandise contained therein. It is basic document for the customs clearance and should therefore cover all the goods contained in an export consignment subject to this procedure. By now with the implementation of the Licensing, Permits, Certificates and Other Export Documents (LPCO-Exportation) module of the Single Window, it is also possible to request to the government bodies the legal document necessary to the export through a single point on the Internet. The responsible agency will analyze the request within 30 days (Law No. 9.784, of 1999, Article 49).

As of August 10, 2020, the inward process is now regulated by Ordinance SECEX No. 44 (2020) which updated the rules of the regime to simplify the procedures and provide greater predictability and legal certainty to foreign trade operators.

As for financed exports, similarly as to the previous system, it is necessary to present the Operations Summary Form (Ficha de Resumo de Operações – FRO) directly to the BNDES so that the financing operation can be started. The LPCO will be created by the BNDES itself to ensure consistency between the FRO and the LPCO so as to mitigate a large reason for requesting rectification of the credit records.

A number of products are subject to special export procedures, including exports subject export taxes, export licenses, or country-specific tariff quotas in certain markets under Brazil’s international agreements.

The Annex of Ordinance SECEX No. 52 lists the export procedures of goods under quotas, which are described on the Annex XVII of Ordinance SECEX No. 23. These include (1) certain types of beef to the EU under the “Hilton quota”; (2) poultry and poultry preparations to the EU subject to country-specific tariff quotas; (3) sugar and confectionery products to the EU subject to export licenses; (4) milk to Colombia under the MERCOSUR quota; (5) cigarettes; (6) precious stones, which may be sold for foreign currency to nonresidents; (7) arms and ammunition subject to export tax and other restrictions; and (8) effective May 8, 2020, cars to Argentina, under the Economic Complementation Agreement – ACE No. 14. The exports procedures of cars to Colombia, under MERCOSUR/Colombia Economic Complementation Agreement – ACE No. 72, are described in the Ordinance SECEX No. 49. In accordance with UNSC resolutions, Brazil prohibits exports of weapons and military equipment to the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Iraq, the Democratic People’s Republic of Korea, Libya, Sierra Leone, Somalia, and Sudan and of materials and technology that could lead to the development of nuclear weapons. Exports of some products are prohibited for reasons of environmental protection and compliance with international agreements (for example, Montreal Protocol) and UNSC resolutions. Some export operations are subject to control by government agencies, including the SECEX. Most operations that the SECEX examines have automatic approval through the SISCOMEX, under parameters of analysis in the system. Exports of certain goods require authorization from government agencies mainly for reasons of safety and environmental protection and compliance with international agreements. Since September 13, 2018, skins and hides are no longer subject to the export tax and therefore no longer subject to special export procedures.

| Without quotas | Yes.
| With quotas | Yes.

Some products listed in Annex XVII of SECEX Ordinance No. 23 of July 14, 2011, are subject to tariff quotas/licenses when exported to certain markets. There are export quotas for Europe (poultry, beef–Hilton quota – and sugar), Colombia (milk and cars), and effective June 3, 2020, Argentina (cars). There are also some export quotas for goods in MERCOSUR/Colombia and MERCOSUR/Israel Agreements (SACME – MERCOSUR Quota Management System). In the case of beef and poultry, the producers must be accredited by the Ministry of Agriculture, Livestock and Food Supply (Ministério da Agricultura, Pecuária e Abastecimento, MAPA) and accepted by the EU as safe exporters to obtain a quota. Exports of milk (HS 0402) to Colombia must obtain a MERCOSUR quota authorization from the Subsecretariat of Foreign Trade Operations (SUEXT) to benefit from the access conditions under the Economic Complementation Agreement.

Export taxes

| Yes.

In general, exports are not subject to export tax. However, exports may be subject to taxation by executive action.

Export duties apply to the following: (1) cigarettes to the Caribbean, Central America, and South America, 150%; and (2) weapons and ammunition to the Caribbean, Central America, and South America (except Argentina, Chile, and Ecuador), 150%. Some allowable weapons and ammunition are exempt.

Provisions specific to commercial banks and other credit institutions

Foreign exchange transactions are subject to the IOF general tax rate of 0.38%, which is levied and collected on the settlement date of the foreign exchange operation. An IOF of 6.38% is applied to foreign exchange transactions related to the purchase of prepaid cards and traveler’s checks. It is also applied to foreign exchange transactions carried out by credit card companies for the payment of obligations because of operations abroad carried out by their clients in connection with expenditures and ATM withdrawals abroad using credit and debit cards. External loans with maturity less than 180 days are subject to the 6% IOF. External loans with an initial term of more than 180 days would still be subject to the 6% IOF rate if the loan is repaid within the 180-day period.

Borrowing abroad

Yes. The maximum maturity of external loans subject to 6% IOF is 180 days. Residents borrowing abroad must register the operation with the BCB strictly for statistical purposes.

Maintenance of accounts abroad

No.

Lending to nonresidents (financial or commercial credits)

Yes. Financial institutions are forbidden to remit abroad (apply or promote the placement, including lending—except for some official programs) funds pooled in Brazil. However, it is possible for banks to invest in: Brazilian government bonds issued abroad, foreign government bonds, securities issued by financial institutions, and time deposits in financial institutions. Banks may also use funds raised abroad to provide credit to Brazilian companies abroad, its branches or foreign companies with majority of Brazilian capital. Residents may not use export proceeds kept abroad for lending to nonresidents.

Lending locally in foreign exchange

Yes. All payments stipulated in or pegged to gold or a foreign currency are null and void. Exceptions apply: for example, contracts and titles relating to imports and exports; financing or guarantee contracts related to export of goods and services; contracts for the purchase and sale of foreign exchange; loans and other obligations whose creditor or debtor is a resident and domiciled abroad, except for leases of real estate located in the Brazilian territory; contracts for assignment, transfer, delegation, assumption, or modification of the obligations referred to in the previous item.

Purchase of locally issued securities denominated in foreign exchange

Yes. All payments stipulated in or pegged to gold or a foreign currency are null and void (exceptions apply: for example, contracts and titles relating to imports and exports; financing or guarantee contracts related to export of goods and services; contracts for the purchase and sale of foreign exchange; loans and other obligations whose creditor or debtor is a resident and domiciled abroad, except for leases of real estate located in the Brazilian territory; contracts for assignment, transfer, delegation, assumption, or modification of the obligations referred to in the previous item.); locally issued securities may not be denominated in foreign currencies.

Provisions specific to institutional investors

Insurance companies

Yes.

Resolution CMN No. 4.444 of November 13, 2015, provides rules governing the investment of technical reserves, provisions and funds of insurance companies, capitalization companies, open private pension entities and local reinsurers, on the application of the resources required in the country to guarantee the obligations of admitted reinsurers and the portfolio of Individual Programmed Retirement Funds. Resolution CNSP No. 321 (2015) provides rules governing investments that exceed technical provisions.

Limits (max.) on securities issued by nonresidents

Yes.

The only type financial assets issued by nonresidents for insurers whose investment is permitted are: securities issued by central governments of foreign jurisdictions and their central banks, provided the external risk rating of the issue, conferred by a credit risk rating agency registered or recognized in Brazil by CVM, is equal to or higher than AA- or equivalent rating; and fixed-term deposits and certificates of deposit issued or unconditionally guaranteed by financial institutions, and BDRs. Application limits depend on the type of provisions being guaranteed by such assets.

Limits (max.) on investment portfolio held abroad

Yes.

Insurance companies may invest their technical provisions in accordance with the legislation, as follows: (1) securities issued by central governments of foreign jurisdictions and their central banks, provided the external risk rating of the issue, conferred by a credit risk rating agency registered or recognized in Brazil by CVM, is equal to or higher than AA- or equivalent rating; (2) in Brazilian sovereign bonds issued abroad (Eurobonds, Global Bonds, A-bonds); (3) corporate bonds of Brazilian companies issued abroad; (4) in certificates of deposit issued or unconditionally guaranteed by financial institutions; and (5) in BDRs. Application limits depend on the type of provisions being guaranteed.

Limits (min.) on investment portfolio held locally

No.

These apply only to technical provision liabilities. Investment limits for assets subject to foreign exchange exposure are looser for technical provisions on foreign currencies.

Currency-matching regulations on assets/liabilities composition

Yes.

Pension funds

Yes.

Investments abroad may not exceed 10%, including BDRs. The only type of financial assets issued by nonresidents for open-end private pension funds whose investment is permitted are fixed-term deposits and certificates of deposit issued or unconditionally guaranteed by financial institutions, and BDRs. Application limits depend on the type of provisions being guaranteed by such assets. Investments in Brazil are subject to some limits under the law, which establishes the maximum technical provisions that may be invested in federal bonds, stocks (per type), and so forth. Assets that exceed the technical provisions are subject to a liquidity requirement (at least 20% of the risk capital in highly liquid assets); derivatives may be used only for hedging purposes.

Investments abroad may not exceed 10%, including BDRs. Open-end private pension funds may invest their technical provisions in accordance with the legislation, as follows: (1) in Brazilian sovereign bonds issued abroad (Eurobonds, Global Bonds, A-bonds); (2) corporate bonds of Brazilian companies issued abroad; (3) in certificates of deposit issued or unconditionally guaranteed by financial institutions; and (4) in BDRs. Application limits depend on the type of provisions being guaranteed.

The minimum portfolio investment held locally is 90%.

Pursuant to CVM Instruction No. 555/14 of December 17, 2014, investment funds may invest up to 20% of their net worth in offshore financial assets. There is no such limit for funds (1) classified as “fixed Income–foreign debt”; (2) targeted at “professional investors,” provided they are designated as an “offshore investment”; and (3) targeted at “qualified investors,” provided, among other requirements, the bylaws of the funds established that at least 67% of the net worth is to be composed of offshore financial assets and have detailed information about the assets the fund intends to acquire. For the other funds targeted at “qualified investors” not referred to above, the limit on offshore investments is 40%. “Professional investors” are those owning financial investments greater than R$10 million. “Qualified investors” are those owning financial investments greater than R$1 million. Level II and III BDRs are considered investment in Brazil, and Level I BDR is considered investment abroad. Brazilian Private Equity Funds, as per CVM Instruction No. 578/16, are allowed to invest abroad up to 20% of their net worth. If the fund is targeted at professional investors (more than R$10.000.000 in financial assets), no limits apply.

Currency board
Yes. The exchange rate arrangement is a currency board. The Autoriti Monetari Brunei Darussalam (AMBD) issues Brunei dollars and manages the Currency Fund, which is used to back up the currency in circulation. Under the Currency Interchangeability Agreement (CIA), signed in 1967, which remains in effect between the AMBD and the Monetary Authority of Singapore, the monetary authorities agree to the mutual exchange of their currency at par without charge. The monetary authorities and banks must accept each other’s currency at par, and the currencies are customary tender in both countries.
Excess currency is repatriated regularly, with the cost borne by the currency-issuing authority. The AMBD must ensure that reserves in the Currency Fund cover at least 100% of the currency in circulation as required under the Currency Order, 2004, as amended by the Currency and Monetary (Amendment) Order, 2010. The AMBD publishes data on the reserves used to cover the currency in circulation in its annual report.

Official exchange rate Yes. The Brunei dollar exchange rate is pegged at S$1 per Brunei dollar. This rate applies to CB transactions and is used for accounting and valuation purposes. Given the peg to the Singapore dollar, the Brunei dollar exchange rate in relation to other currency follows closely that of the Singapore dollar. The AMBD administers the CIA between Brunei Darussalam and Singapore on behalf of the Brunei government.

Monetary policy framework

Exchange rate anchor Yes.

U.S. dollar
Euro
Composite

Other Yes. The monetary policy framework is a currency board agreement with an exchange rate anchor vis-à-vis the Singapore dollar, which is at par with the Brunei dollar under the CIA.
The Brunei Association of Banks provides indicative daily buying and selling rates to its members for transfers/remittances in 15 other currencies on the basis of the interbank quotes for these foreign currencies against Singapore dollars. Customers are encouraged to liaise with their respective banks for competitive rates should they want to deal in this foreign exchange as rates fluctuate from time to time.

As of December 31, 2019, there were 7 banks (6 conventional and 1 Islamic), 18 remittance companies, and 20 money changers that were authorized to conduct foreign exchange transactions (including three hotels with conditional license).

Money-changing businesses:
do not conduct foreign exchange transactions directly with the CB;
do not maintain accounts abroad;
are limited to the purchase and sale of banknotes; and are not allowed to make foreign currency payments and transfers on behalf of their clients.

As for remittance businesses, foreign exchange transactions are not conducted directly with the CB. Remittance business can maintain accounts abroad. Remittance business operations are mainly focused on transmitting funds abroad. The purchase and sale of banknotes are not part of their operations.

Operated by the central bank Yes.
The AMBD does not control or direct any foreign exchange activity with banks, except for the Singapore dollar activity.

Foreign exchange standing facility Yes.
The AMBD stands ready to buy and sell Singapore dollars for Brunei dollars at the official rate without a bid-ask spread or commission. The AMBD deals only in Singapore dollars and does not quote rates for other currency.

Allocation No.

Auction No.

Fixing No.

Interbank market Yes.
The foreign exchange market is an interbank market between the licensed banks operating in Brunei Darussalam. All licensed banks are foreign exchange ADs by virtue of their banking license. The AMBD does not intervene directly in interbank foreign exchange operations; however, it monitors banks’ foreign exchange positions. Banks have their own internal policies on foreign currencies’ exposure.

Over the counter Yes.

Brokerage No.

Market making No.

Forward exchange market No.
There is no forward market for foreign exchange in Brunei Darussalam. However, as a result of the CIA, foreign exchange risk may be hedged in Singapore dollars through the use of facilities available in Singapore, including (1) foreign currency futures and options traded on the Singapore International Monetary Exchange, (2) OTC forward transactions arranged by banks in Singapore, and (3) transactions on the short-term foreign exchange swap market of banks in the Singapore money market.

Official cover of forward operations No.
